0 2007 0517770 3
California State Library

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2014

https://archive.org/details/town78sanf

1641
112801
CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY.

TOWN TALK

PACIFIC · LITERATURE · SOCIETY · MUSIC · STAGE · POLITICS

This Paper not to be taken from the Library.

San Francisco, July 1, 1899 Vol. 7—No. 357 Price, 10 Cents

Town Talk

Publishes Exclusive
SOCIAL, POLITICAL and CLUB GOSSIP

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teacher { Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS: 3:30 TO 4:30

You should ride a

STEARNS

Cushion Frame Bicycle

Safe Deposit Vaults

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

N. W. corner of Bush and Sansome Streets.

STORES Trunks for one dollar a month.

RENTS Safes for $5 a year, furnishing the most perfect security for valuables of all descriptions.

Office hours, 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS
AT HOME

Call and see
The Thermal Bath Cabinet

Baldwin Pharmacy
119-121 Ellis Street

CALIFORNIA NORTHWESTERN R'Y CO.
LESSEE OF THE SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC R'Y CO.

The Picturesque Route of California.

Special Rates
—FOR THE—
4th of July
—ON—
Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 2, 3 AND 4

Round Trip Tickets will be sold from San Francisco to all points North of San Rafael at the rate of

One Single Fare

—AS FOLLOWS—

PETALUMA	$1 00	GEYSERVILLE	$2 55
SANTA ROSA	1 50	CLOVERDALE	3 00
SEBASTOPOL	1 80	HOPLAND	3 80
GUERNEVILLE	2 50	UKIAH	4 50
WINDSOR	1 95	SONOMA	1 00
HEALDSBURG	2 25	GLEN ELLEN	1 20
LYTTON	2 40

Return Limit, Wednesday, July 5, 1899

On Friday, June 30th, and Saturday, July 1st,

Round Trip Tickets will be sold from San Francisco to all points North of San Rafael at the following reduced rates:

PETALUMA	$1 50	GEYSERVILLE	$3 85
SANTA ROSA	2 25	CLOVERDALE	4 50
SEBASTOPOL	2 70	SONOMA	1 50
GUERNEVILLE	3 75	GLEN ELLEN	1 80
WINDSOR	2 95	HOPLAND	5 00
HEALDSBURG	3 40	UKIAH	5 00
LYTTON	3 60

Return Limit, Wednesday July 5, 1899

For further information apply at Ticket Office,
650 MARKET ST., Chronicle Building, or Tiburon Ferry, foot of Market St.
General Office, MUTUAL LIFE BUILDING, 222 Sansome St.

H. C. WHITING, General Manager. R. X. RYAN, Gen'l Pass'gr Agt.

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY.

USE

Adams' TUTTI-FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,162,146.40
Capital actually paid up in cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits December 31, 1898	27,289,195.73

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, January 1, 1899,	$24,074,796
Paid Up Capital,	1,000,000
Reserve Fund.	199,265
Contingent Fund,	469,668

E. B POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President

LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER ROBERT WATT THOMAS MAGEE DANIEL E. MARTIN GEORGE C. BOARDMAN W. C. B. DE FREMERY ALBERT MILLER GEO. TASHEIRA E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

DO YOU KNOW

A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT

Send for Sample Copy of the

OAKLAND TRIBUNE

and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco

Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

OCEANIC Steamship Company

The S. S. Australia

Sails for Honolulu Monday, July 3, at 2 p.m.

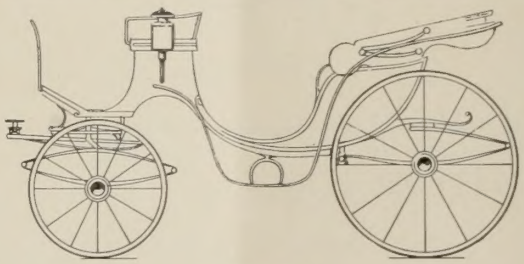
The S. S. MARIPOSA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, July 12, at 10 p.m.

Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.

FREIGHT OFFICE—327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855.

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A N Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S. Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart, H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.

You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, July 1, 1899

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington. D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

NOTHING gives the Washington correspondent greater pleasure than to state something which he will be able to follow up with a denial. His favorite method is to send out a piece of news on the authority of "a well known statesman whose identity for obvious reasons is not revealed," and then discuss the subject in all its phases in a series of dispatches. After an editorial controversy has been precipitated all over the country the circumstance of the original report's being a fake leaks out and the ready newspaper liar of Washington, D. C., puts the usual contradiction on the wire with plausible explanations concerning the foundation of the story. Lately the journalistic liar has devoted nearly all his attention to one theme—the resignation of the secretary of war. He has pictured General Alger in the act of making his exit from the cabinet a half-dozen times since the close of the Cuban campaign, but Alger is still drawing his salary in the same old job. Alger never had any intention of resigning from the cabinet. As secretary of the war department he is in a position where it is easy for him to punish his political enemies or force them, as he did with General Merritt, to bend the pregnant hinges of the knee; and the revengeful old rogue has yet a few more scores to settle.

DISSENSIONS DIRE and complications galore have been playing havoc with the local republican party. The bosses are distrustful of one another and they can see nothing ahead but factional strife. Some time ago a nice little compact was entered into by which it was agreed that Colonel Burns should manipulate state politics and leave the local machine to Kelly and Crimmins to handle. But the compact has been broken, for Kelly and Crimmins have caught the colonel trespassing on their political preserves, and their confidence in the senatorial candidate has been shaken. They have characterized him in the vernacular of their profession as a gold brick man and have warned people to beware of him. And now they are endeavoring to organize for the campaign according to their own ideas and as though D. M. Burns was no longer doing business at the old stand. But they are in trouble. It is the same trouble that confronted them a year ago when they wanted a man to oppose J. D. Phelan in the mayoralty fight. They are on the qui vive for a name to conjure with and a sack to enthuse with. The mere name will no longer suffice; it must have a sack attached. At this writing it does not seem likely that any man can be found who would undertake the leading of such a forlorn hope even though somebody else supplied the sack, as was the case last year. But the old proverb about the birth of a sucker every minute receives verification in the field of politics as elsewhere, and the bosses are not entirely discouraged. Knowing that Irving M. Scott is anxious to become United States Senator they are trying to entice him into the fold by appealing to his political sagacity. He has been told that if he becomes mayor he will have so much patronage at his disposal that he will gain great power and be able to control the San Francisco delegation to the next legislature. The question of the hour is: "Will the big fish take the bait?"

Nine-tenths of the men who come before me tell me the truth and nine-tenths of the women are liars. They can't tell the truth if they try.—Magistrate Crane of New York city.

Magistrate Crane is a plagiarist. His assertion regarding feminine partiality to falsehood is a bald steal from the court philosophy of our own Judge Coffey of the probate department. Judge Coffey had the temerity to stigmatize women as natural born liars just before a campaign in which he figured as a candidate for re-election. Many women who have confidence in their own veracity were highly offended at what they regarded as a slander upon their sex and on election day they undertook to defeat Judge Coffey by visiting the polling places and urging their fathers, husbands and brothers to resent the aspersion with their ballots. The ladies made the question of their veracity an issue of the day and the vote was overwhelmingly against them. And now comes Magistrate Crane of New York with his reiteration of the charge against the sex. But the women who appear in his court are not of the character of those that swear to all sorts of things in Judge Coffey's department. Magistrate Crane deals with the denizens of the slums and the side-streets who are arrested for crime. Judge Coffey meets widows genuine and widows fictitious and he administers oaths to fair damsels of the smart set who inherit large estates. He has been able to test the credibility of women in all stations of life, and although he does not say that "they can't tell the truth," his experience on the bench has led him to believe that they have not the capacity to appreciate the solemnity of an oath and, being reluctant to reveal the facts when concealment is advantageous, they are prone to perjury. Some women do not take Judge Coffey seriously and they content themselves with the retort that he is a woman-hater, a theory that receives color from the circumstance of his being a bachelor. This he denies however, while he firmly adheres to the conviction that when it is to a woman's interest to prevaricate she finds the truth repugnant.

ONE JOHN MATTHEWS of England is hard at work finding crests, coats of arms and armorial bearings for such members of our American aristocracy as are willing to pay him for providing them with a descent and pedigree. One volume of his American Armory and Blue Book has already been issued. In this volume the Smiths, Thompsons and Jenkinses are set forth as entitled to lions and leopards and griffins as rampant as those of any duke or earl. Munsey's says in commenting upon this subject: "To manufacture an ancestry, to select a crest from a jeweler's book of samples, and to choose a motto from the 'Beginner's Latin Book' will continue to satisfy the aristocratic cravings of many worthy Americans. And here, as Mr. Matthews was probably aware when he compiled his Armory, there is no Earl Marshal to prohibit the use of spurious arms and to limit any social aspirant in the number of coronets upon her carriage door." It is told of a quick-witted native of the Green Isle, one of whose ancestors had paid the penalty of being prominent in a losing cause, that being in the company of a number of snobs who sought to humiliate him, they expatiated at length upon their armorial bearings, and then turning to him asked for a description of the coat of arms of his family. Quick as thought the Irishman responded: "Two sticks standant and one crossant, a rope pendant and a man hanged on it." The fathers of the republic made a great mistake in not establishing an order of nobility, but their grandsons are doing their best to provide for the delinquency. The Chicago Inter-Ocean has a department devoted to Genealogy, in which are published inquiries for information concerning missing links and long-lost ancestry; and one of Stockton's absurdities made mention of an art factory where family portraits are turned out by the hundred—old ladies with Bibles and spectacles in their laps, colonial dames and sons of revolutionary sires, all complete except the faces, which were to be painted in to order, so as to give a sufficient resemblance to their newly acquired descendants. What with modern antiques in furniture and china, and great grandmothers' initials on last year's spoons, it will be a poor family indeed which cannot boast something in the way of ancestry, with some show of evidence to back up its pretentions.

Clara Foltz Attorney-at-Law. Offices Crocker Building, San Francisco . . . . . .

MR. ALFRED AUSTIN, the poet laureate of England who keeps inspirations in stock ready to be placed on the bargain counter at a moment's notice, desires to correct what he believes to be the popular impression regarding the incompatibility of poetic genius and common sense. At a recent meeting of the Dante society of London, of which he is vice president, he endeavored to demonstrate that a man may have poetic fire and at the same time be capable of conducting business affairs. He vehemently denied that poetic genius was but a rudimentary condition of insanity, and he declared that the greatest poets of the world were men like himself, men of perfect, unaffected respectability who in addition to having the ability to write verses could also handle successfully, financial enterprises of great moment. He cited the case of Chaucer who was secretary to Elizabeth's deputy in Ireland, and he declared that Wordsworth and Tennyson were men who also combined poetic genius with sound judgment. Mr. Austin's conceit serves to weaken his argument, for he is surely no living example of the compatibility of poetic genius and common sense. If he would content himself with writing bad verse, it might be conceded that he at least had sense enough to go in when it rains, but when he compares himself with the greatest poets of the world we begin to realize the utter hopelessness of his case. The man that writes bad verse and knows it is certainly a villain, but the alaustin who has no conception of the enormity of his offense is indeed a pitiful wretch. What a sad commentary on the degeneracy of British letters that such a man as the present poet laureate is permitted to wear the crown of Tennyson!

CERTAIN MEMBERS of the democratic county committee, better known as the Committee of One Hundred, are again arrogating to themselves the right to challenge the democracy of all men who desire to become active in support of the organization. These are the men who were in a measure responsible for the defeat of the party at the last election. They supplied ammunition to the traitors who systematically knifed the ticket. They encouraged treachery by compelling the isolation of men who were not awed by their arrogance. They organized a political aristocracy and regarded with a contemptuous air of superiority all men whose names were not in the democratic blue book. And now they appear to be engaged in fostering a repetition of history. Fortunately the democrats who revenged themselves on the junta last year and who expected to profit by their treachery were sorely disappointed, and are now contrite and eager to testify to their allegiance. It will be difficult to force them out of the party again, and moreover the committee of One Hundred is no longer absolutely under the control of the breeders of dissension. It is to be earnestly hoped that they will gradually be relegated to obscurity. They have no influence in the party beyond that derived from their connection with the county committee and when that is reorganized they will once more be found in their proper sphere. If it were not for these promoters of discord the impudence of Buckley in seeking to intrench himself once more would excite nothing but derision.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION has announced its intention of rigorously enforcing the rule which requires a (female) teacher to resign her position if she enters into matrimony. Apart from the purely legal question as to whether the law will uphold any regulation in restraint of marriage, or whether a precept based solely on a consideration of sex can be enforced, there is another side to the question. The rule is based theoretically upon the idea that a married woman has or ought to have home duties enough to occupy her time. In fact it is an open secret that the design is to make vacancies for the directors to fill. Now, observe, there is no objection raised against the married women who were already holding positions, nor is there aught against the appointment of married women, and so when Miss Mary Ellen Smith, teacher and spinster, possessed of a strong enough "pull," elects to become Mrs. John Jones, she duly tenders her resignation, sets her "infloonce" to work and enjoys a short vacation. At the end of a few weeks, Mrs. Jones is appointed to a position in the school department and who but the initiated are to so much as suspect that here is another instance of the return of the feline? The regulation should be made to include all married women, or else be abolished entirely. The Los Angeles school board, having a similar regulation, proposes to investigate into the circumstances of married teachers to determine whether they are in need of the additional income. Pray, are the schools maintained for the benefit of teachers or pupils? How would it do to determine whether these married teachers are performing such astonishing feats in the way of training children or imparting knowledge that the schools cannot dispense with their services?

AGAIN THERE IS a movement set on foot to liberate Mrs. Maybrick from her English prison. Mrs. Maybrick, it will be remembered, is the "beautiful" young American woman who married an elderly and wealthy Englishman and according to the findings of a jury helped him on his journey to the better land by administering doses of arsenic. The evidence was circumstantial, but means and motive were both shown to exist. No one else had any interest in Mr. Maybrick's death and no one else had the opportunities of his wife. No new evidence has been discovered and there is no reason in either law or equity why Mrs. Maybrick should not pay in full the penalty of her crime. English courts are still so far behind our own that they do not recognize the right of a woman to a divorce, a breaking up of a home and scattering of children for causes that would hardly be sufficient to gain a spanking for a schoolboy. They are slow to adopt the American idea that a woman may dispose of an objectionable husband by compassing his death, and insanity, accepted as a defense for crime, carries with it the penalty of incarceration in an asylum for the criminal insane with the certainty of a trial and punishment on conviction so positive that prisoners are in no haste to declare their restoration to reason. This ten-minute insanity for the purpose of committing murder is not recognized in the realm of Her Gracious Majesty and beautiful young American women—they are always beautiful and young—who have an ambition to pose as interesting widows, should induce their elderly incumbrances to accompany them to this land of the free, where killing is no murder, provided the victim is "only a husband."

MR. WHITELAW REID, editor of the New York Tribune, and son-in-law to D. O. Mills, has contributed an article to Lady Randolph Churchill's magazine, the Anglo-Saxon, in which he endeavors to correct the impression that his friend President McKinley blundered egregiously in paying twenty million dollars for the Philippines. He explains that the money was not paid as the purchase price of territory already acquired but "solely in recognition of the principle that debts attaching to a territory and incurred for its benefit should be transferred with its sovereignty." This is the first that we have heard of Uncle Sam's recognition of the Philippine debt. It has always been supposed that after taking the islands he decided to give an international object lesson in generosity, and thereupon fixed the purchase price of the islands at twenty million dollars. Nobody ever suggested that we should recompense Spain in the amount expended by that nation in its futile efforts to subdue the Filipinos Moreover it must be regarded as somewhat singular that the principle set forth in Mr. Reid's magazine article was not invoked in the case of the transfer of Cuba and Porto Rico. We were asked to pay the debts of the captured territory in those islands and refused to do so. Come again, Mr. Reid. If you are the mouthpiece of the administration you are still in order. You can take the head of the class as soon as you answer the question: "Why did we pay twenty million dollars for the Philippines?"

THE NATION'S HOLIDAY

ALL THE WORLD that pines for country air will go out of town for the Fourth. The excursions on the California Northwestern railway company, whose special rates are given on TOWN TALK'S front page, will attract the largest crowds, because of the liberal rates offered and the fact that this is the picturesque route of California. On Sunday, Monday and Tuesday round trip tickets will be sold from San Francisco to all points north of San Rafael at the rate of one single fare. Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Sebastopol, Guerneville, Windsor, Healdsburg, Lytton, Geyserville, Cloverdale, Sonoma, Glen Ellen, Hopland and Ukiah are included in this reduced rate excursion. The return limit is fixed at Wednesday, July fifth. Further information may be obtained at the ticket office, 650 Market street or at Tiburon ferry, foot of Market street.

ON A WHEEL

THE VISITOR to the country who wishes to extract the most enjoyment from his sojourn finds he cannot get along without a wheel. A bicycle is not a luxury but a necessity where roads are long and resting places few and far between. The best wheel is, of course, the Stearns Cushion Frame Bicycle, a splendid roadster, light, easy and comfortable. Experienced wheelmen choose the Stearns above all others.

AT BONANZA SPRINGS.

Arrivals at Bonanza Springs last week were Mr. and Mrs. Seth Rickabaugh, Misses Madge, Ruth and Hester Rickabaugh, Wilda and Seth Waile, of Kelseyville; J. B., M., Jacob, Budd and Claude Baker of Woodland; Mr. C. Orengo, Miss C. Orengo, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Duncan and Floyd Duncan of Capay.

Art

THOU BREATHEST on the cold insensate stone,
And lo! it throbs with immortality;
The canvas, with thy conjuring pigments strown,
Glows with a beauty that will never die;
The deepest fountains of the heart run dry,
When o'er the trembling strings thy hand is thrown;
And when we hear thy tongue's rich sorcery,
We know not why we laugh, or weep, or moan.

We know not why, nor do we care to know
Where rise the waters of that mystic stream,
Whose current bears us onward in its flow,
Till far away upon emotion's sea,
The captive senses float as in a dream,
Waifs on the golden tide of ecstasy.

LOUIS A. ROBERTSON.

The Saunterer

THE HABIT of becoming a temporary suburbanite is growing in this community. It is a cheap way of convincing your selfthat you are enjoying a summer vacation. If you cannot afford to withdraw from the madding crowd into the recesses of the Yosemite or to enjoy an aristocratic outing at Castle Crag or the seaside you can give an imitation of the swells that will vary the monotony of existence in the summer months by hying yourself to Ross valley or some other cheap resort of easy access from this city. It is cheaper to live at Ross valley than at your home in the city. Moreover you get plenty of good exercise sprinting for the boat and the train and you acquire speed in dressing yourself in the morning. And on Sunday you have every facility for enacting the role of the man of leisure. Marin county is now thronged with summer visitors, some of whom are living in arks, others in tents and a large number in hotels and cottages and with an easy conscience they affect the air of the "real thing" in suburban society.

One of the resorts in Ross valley is Mira Monte, which was formerly the property of the McAllisters. It is now a very nice boarding house. Among the swells stopping at that place are two young married women whose husbands "come over" every night. One of the ladies before her marriage was a very accomplished typewriter and earned good wages. Both move in about the same circle in San Francisco and they are friends. Since taking up their temporary abode at Mira Monte they have become so exclusive that they shudder until their silk skirts rustle audibly every time they are brought in contact with any of the other guests. The Vere de Vere repose of the erstwhile typewriter is of a quality that would make the leading lady in a society drama green with envy. But it has a different effect on the guests at the Miramonte. At first they admired the two distinguished looking exclusives and wondered what particular aristocracy they belonged to. They afterwards learned that one was formerly an artist in typewriting and then they turned up their noses with one accord. The snobs have been systematically snubbed ever since and all Ross valley is watching for developments.

The genuine swells of Marin county are housed at the Hotel Rafael. There the golf players and tennis players abound. A short time ago some of the smart girls at that hotel began to cultivate a thirst for plebeian steam beer but they have not taken the world into their confidence. They start out ostensibly to journey to the golf links but they stop at a brewery not far distant where there are several picturesque rustic houses for the accommodation of patrons who like steam beer when it is fresh from the tap-room. Several days ago a couple of very swell society girls of this city visited this resort and imbibed steam beer enough to float a gasoline launch. Steam beer is rapidly becoming the fashionable beverage in San Rafael.

Mr. Golf: Does Miss Millionaire's mother disapprove of the match?
Mr. Tennis: Yes She says the love is all on one side.

One of the fastest young men in town these days is Percy Hicks, a step-son of the late John S. Hager. He is what is known in the parlance of the tenderloin as a high-roller. He has been cutting a wide swath in this city and also in San Rafael for some months. Judging from the way he spends money for hack hire one might fancy him to be a Crœsus. I never heard of his inheriting any part of Judge Hager's fortune but he pays his bills and consequently nobody need worry about the source from whence the simoleons flow. Suffice it to know that he has the cash and is putting it in circulation. His hobby is baseball and he has been anxious to get into the business. He has been negotiating for the purchase of both the Santa Cruz and Sacramento teams.

Rumor says that the reason the second sister in the trio of heiresses will travel on the continent this year instead of flitting about as usual from one summer resort to another is that she is stalking big game. Another reason advanced for her absence is that she shares the objections of her late maternal parent against

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco

JOHN CAFFREY. Pacific Coast Representative

the man who has adored her eldest sister ever since the latter made her debut in society. And I am told that this match may come off as soon as the sisters' period of mourning is over. But it is fancied that the second sister does not intend to be present at the marriage.

I do not imagine that it will ever become the mode in San Francisco for society women to attend prize fights. Yet that is the latest freak of the up to date damsel in the New York four hundred. The grand empechement to the local smart woman's following in the footsteps of her metropolitan sisters is the fact that this city is too small. There would be too much talk created and though there are plenty of young girls and matrons in San Francisco, Oakland and vicinity who like well enough to be talked about there are right and wrong ways of effecting this eminence. We have not yet arrived at that proud position when we are so sure of ourselves that we can pursue any course, satisfied that the king can do no wrong. But in New York the smart woman feels herself a princess and if she is young, rich and pretty beside being of swell parentage she cares nothing for the good opinion of the common herd. Thus it was that a golden-haired matron of the metropolitan swim attended the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons contest at Coney island and her example was imitated by others of her set who had learned of her intention beforehand. The women were disguised—but not effectually so, for several reporters discovered their sex —in masculine attire, wearing slouch hats pulled down over their faces. It is likely we may hear of some such frolic in our midst soon, for to follow New York in its most advanced follies is the aim of most of our gilded youth of both sexes.

A good thing in "Theophilus Trent," the only novel from the pen of the late Benjamin F. Taylor, is: "Many a thing is charged to total depravity, when it is only a foul stomach and a bolus of blue mass, followed up sharp with a big dose of castor oil, might be a good preparation sometimes for the sanctuary. Pills first, preaching afterwards."

There is a fair member of the local swim who owns to the possession of a grudge against the Russian river, an overpowering dislike which she finds it impossible to banish. She has been visiting some friends who have a home on the banks of the Russian river and she was having a charming time until a most untoward occurrence disturbed the even tenor of her peace of mind. The young woman is very fond of bathing and not a day passed during her stay that she did not don her bath suit and enjoy a swim in the river. Her friends have only lately built their cabin in the redwoods and as yet they have no bath-house. Therefore one afternoon, when the oppressiveness of the atmosphere moved the young woman to a cooling dip in the river, she was compelled to discard her attire in the bushes, as usual. When she had almost divested herself of her clothes, she heard the splash of oars in the water and knew that a boat was coming. She hastily ducked down into the bushes and stayed there till she was sure that the boat was far out of sight. Then she grabbed her bathing suit and stood up. But what was her horror to find herself in full view of another boat's crew—and this one a party of club men who had a camp a short distance from her friends' house! The next day she returned to San Francisco, but she still blushes desperately when anybody speaks of "the altogether."

This reminds me of another adventure of this same young woman, who seems fated to find herself in unpleasant dramatic situations. She was taking a walk with a girl friend over in San Rafael one day when she found that her petticoat had burst loose from its moorings and would shortly be making a voyage of discovery that could not fail to embarrass its wearer.

"What shall I do?" she asked her friend.

"That's easy enough," said the other, "we can drop into this cottage and you can ask the owner for a pin. She will let you go inside and fix it."

So the two went up to the door of the cottage and rang the bell. However, it was not a woman who answered their ring, but a man, And it so happened that it was a man they both knew!

Mrs. Carroll's younger daughter will have a formidable rival at Del Monte this season in Miss Ethel Keeney, who has elected to spend another summer at Monterey. Miss Keeney is one of the most dashing girls in the swim and possesses a gift at repartee that is Gyp-like in its brilliancy. While Miss Gertrude Carroll is clever—she could not fail to be with her mixture of Spanish and Celtic blood—she lacks the snap and chic of her rival of this season. She is a very popular girl and inherits the winning manner of her mother. Mrs. Whittier is more like her father and it is a thousand pities that poor Dick Carroll could not have lived to have seen his two lovely daughters. I can imagine the delight he would have taken in the elder one, especially, for she possesses so many of his own tastes.

The mother of two marriageable daughters, who worked without reward during the entire social season just closed, has taken her family to a quiet resort in Lake county for the summer. She should be able to recuperate for the winter at very little expense and perhaps, incidentally, provide the two girls with husbands during the summer campaign. It is so easy to make it pleasant for a man in the summer, so easy and so cheap. For all he desires is plenty of iced drinks, a bath always ready for him, a hammock, the daily newspapers and a pretty girl near by to flirt with when he feels like enjoying a whiff of romance. I really believe we may hear of more than one engagement in the swim this year, particularly as it is told on fairly good authority that the Sausalito bachelor has succumbed at last. He was considered to be absolutely Cupid-proof.

Speaking of Sausalito, I often wonder whether the benedict of two seasons back ever thinks of the two women who worshiped at his shrine and who were all broken up by his marriage to the beautiful heiress, the eldest of a large family of sisters and brothers? He seems to be happy and probably no thought of those two women ever disturbs his night's rest. They were both grass widows, both strikingly handsome, and one at least had good reason to believe she might some day be chosen queen of his picturesque house on the hill. But the owner of the house thought otherwise and when he married chose a society girl not only without a past but of quite different complexion from the two women who had previously been favored with his fancy.

There are lots of 'A. A.' brands of whisky, but only one Jesse Moore 'A A.'

Engraved . . . ✷
Wedding Announcements and Invitations . . . ✷

ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

I happened to be in a downtown store the other day when my attention was attracted by a very fresh-faced, attractive young girl who accompanied a decrepit old man. He was not only aged in appearance but his whole attire breathed the fact that he was neglectful of personal cleanliness. His gray beard was matted and his straggling locks were uncombed. He was evidently purchasing a bridal outfit for the girl by his side and he was desirous of getting good bargains. He would not buy anything until it was marked down several degrees below its appraised value but he spent fully a hundred dollars on cambric underwear and other appurtenances of feminine apparel. I was told that the old fellow was the wealthy widower, Walker, from across the bay and that the young woman with him was the Oakland girl who had captured his hand and heart. But I do not think, from what I saw, that she holds the key to his strong-box.

When May fair is wedding December
It might be as well to remember
That though age may dote upon beauty
It is not the most pleasing duty
To fling out the dough.
Therefore, to keep 'live love's last ember
May must go quite slow,
And keep her bills low;
'Tis a pity—but so.

To be properly in the swim at Coronado this year you must have a golf suit, a cycling suit and a swimming suit. Golf is going to be the chief form of amusement at Coronado but the bike will also receive its share of attention and of course the surf will not be neglected. Among those who have already gathered at this resort are Mrs. John D. Spreckels, her sister Mrs. Walter Gibson, Mrs. Sands Forman, Miss Gertrude Forman and the five O'Connor girls. Arthur P. Brander will also spend some time there.

The strange anomaly comes from Oakland of Marshall Law being arrayed against the sentiments of a Valentine.

The press dispatches several days ago told of the divorce granted to Harrison J. Wolfe-Williams, an actor, from Bettina Girard, the degenerate daughter of the late General Albert Ordway. About a year ago this depraved young woman, who was once noted for her beauty, was sent to a sanitarium on account of her excessive use of alcohol and it was supposed at the time that she had but a short time to live, but she is still one of the attractions of the New York tenderloin. Her first husband was Arthur Padelford who obtained a divorce from her in Austria about ten years ago. She has by him a daughter ten years of age. Padelford married again and died in 1896. I have learned that it was recently determined that his daughter by Bettina Girard should share in his estate which is estimated at close to a million dollars.

First Playwright: Would you like to know a sure road to fortune?
Second Playwright: Cert. How?
First P.: When Alfred Dreyfus is acquitted, have a play ready for him to star in the leading role.

There appears to be a mistaken impression in the east that people all over the United States are deeply absorbed in the preparations for the marriage of Julia Grant to a nobleman whose pedigree is vouched for in the Russian stud-book. The general opinion in this neck of the woods is that the old soldier has been particularly unfortunate in his descendants. The spectacle of his namesake trying to buy a seat in the United States senate is one that will not soon be forgotten in California. And the story has reached us that when Colonel Fred Grant had his attention called to the quality and conditions of the rations provided for the soldiers, his command was to "serve it to them any way." It is only a few years since we were regaled with accounts of the wonder and surprise with which the Sartoris children listened to stories of American history, their education having been strictly English and the land in which their mother grew up and in which their grandfather held the highest office in the gift of his countrymen, terra incognita to them. In all probability they regarded the rank of their papa as an English gentleman, much superior to that of their grandfather, who was only president of a republic Presumably the future little Russian aristocrats will have their geographies carefully censored lest they should become aware of such a land of savages.

Chief Clerk of the Grand Hotel: Five rooms in the hotel were burglarized last night.
Chief of Police: Whom do you suspect?
Chief Clerk: Well, it may be only a coincidence, but the Fourth of July committee has its headquarters in the hotel.

The recent influx of Pacific coast visitors is truly remarkable, writes my Chicago correspondent. We have had more Californians among us this summer than during the last winter when there were so many drawing attractions. Why they prefer to visit us during the hot spell when old man humidity does his best to drive Chicago's fashionables to cooler northern resorts is certainly a mystery. The thermometer has been hovering around the ninety mark for some time and we are existing on salads, cold cereals, berries, ice cream and chilled drinks. I have seen so many familiar faces in our streets lately that unless the names are jotted down as they pass they are soon forgotten. Last week I noticed Mrs. Henry E. Highton looking at the fine cut glass exhibit in Burley's and later on brushed past Mrs. George E. Morse as I was strolling through Marshall Field's big establishment. Her husband, I understand, is also in the city. Herman Franklin appeared to be much interested in a fashionable haberdasher's latest stock of madras goods and lingered some time in front of the splendidly dressed window. Some of the season's colors are dashingly stunning and worth a long, lingering look. Carlton C. Crane, the handsome Montgomery street representative of an eastern road, is here; his stay with us will be brief. George H. and Adolph Roos have been here gathering in all the latest ideas from the large clothing houses.

In the corridor of the Auditorium I met A. E. Brooke Ridley and E.E. Ewing. I learn that George L. Withey and W. L. Ducey are also stopping there. In State street, passing the old Palmer house, I saw M. F. Mayer and his wife, while in Madison street I ran into A. W. Bradbury. Mrs. J. C. Eaton of Oakland and William M. Weil of San Francisco are to remain with us a short while. Following in the theatrical footsteps of Mabel Love, Maude Berry Fisher, Etta Butler, Alice Neilsen, Truly Shattuck, Joaquin Miller and Denis O'Sullivan—who have all appeared on the stage here during the past three months—comes clever Freda Gallick, who is appearing with Downing at the Chicago opera house. Little May Cook is also at the same house and her artistic singing and good work on the cornet have made quite a distinct hit.

Bloomer's International Cryptograph, Telegraph Code and Holocryptic Cipher price reduced to....$5.00

For sale by JOHN PARTRIDGE, 306 California St., San Francisco.

Nekafor Ptetson, another San Franciscan, is appearing with the Castle Square opera company. They will soon give their one hundredth performance in this city. Mrs. Margaret J. Wood has returned from Boston, where she spent the spring months with her daughter. We shall no longer see Octave Alpiser's handsome face and figure. He has deserted us and his permanent residence will be St. Louis. George Stratton has recovered from his recent illness and is again doing special work on the road for Robert Dickson's company.

Nat C. Goodwin has successfully produced "An American Citizen" at the Duke of York's theatre in London and I am told by recent arrivals from England that Madeleine Lucette Ryley's comedy might easily run a year in the British metropolis if Goodwin so desired. But I doubt if the genial Nat would consent—even if his American engagements would permit his doing so —to stay abroad so long. Nat is an American citizen and his heart, when it is not in Chicago, is wrapped up in New York. He is fond of London where he has a host of friends but he loves the Lambs, he loves Broadway and he loves the breezes that blow off Larchmont in the summer. Therefore I do not believe anything could induce Mr. Goodwin to make a stay of twelve successive months on the wrong side of the Atlantic. And, apropos of the Titian-haired comedian, I am told by a student who is spending his vacation in this city that Nat has a namesake who is a student at Yale college. When Goodwin played an engagement last season in New Haven, this student gave a dinner in honor of the comedian and his wife, beautiful Maxine Elliott. Though before this neither Goodwin was acquainted with the other Nat C , the student says that they became great friends during the actor's visit in Connecticut. They found out, too, that neither was in any degree related by blood to the other.

The Cosmopolitan gives a whole page with illustrations to this "poem" by Charlotte Perkins Stetson:

The people people work with best are often very queer;
The people people own by birth quite shock your first idea;
The people people choose for friends your common sense appall
But the people people marry are the queerest folks of all.

One can imagine Mr. Charlotte Perkins Stetson saying a devout amen to that last line. The only way in which to do justice to Professor Peck's article, "The Women of Today and Tomorrow," would be to quote it entire. Professor Peck is of the opinion that when man wakes to the consciousness that he has enough of this down-trodden-women nonsense he will put his foot down and command a halt once for all. Speed the day! The great trouble with the majority of women in this day and generation is not too much work but too much leisure. Except in the smart set, where it is considered the correct thing to have a large family of children, babies are no longer fashionable and should one accidentally make its appearance in a household it is hustled out of sight as quickly as possible and handed over to a nurse with a bottle of some patented food. Later on the kindergarten absorbs it and then the school. Clothing is all found ready-made in the shops and the wash goes to the Chinaman, while mamma goes to the woman's congress or for a ride on her bike. The nearest bakery supplies bread and pastry and if any one of the family becomes seriously ill a trained nurse is called upon. The duties that once absorbed all of a woman's time are now shifted upon other shoulders and instead of being kept too busy to have time for discontent, the woman has a too abundant leisure, which she uses not to the best advantage.

The writer of the "people-people" poem quoted in the preceding paragraph is herself an admirable example of the advanced modern woman. Mrs. Stetson has ideas which are far ahead of those bothering the brains of "The Yellow Aster" and "Heavenly Twins" heroines, or "The Woman Who Did." It will be remembered that Mrs. Stetson permitted her husband to obtain a divorce from her that he might marry her friend, whom he loved better than he loved his own Charlotte. This was of course nothing more than a Meissonier-Ruskin copy but it was considered quite an unusual happening in the lives of three prosaic American people.

Jones: You critics are mighty lucky in these hot days, you can sit all day in your office where it is cool and comfortable.

Smith: Yes, but it's mighty warm when the paper comes out next morning.

An uncommonly clever minstrel show was given on Tuesday evening by sixteen young ladies of St. Peter's church. They were all young and pretty girls but they concealed their comeliness under coats of burnt cork. Their costumes were uniform, scarlet hose being the distinguishing feature. The ends and interlocutor gave utterance to many brilliancies of wit and the songs and dances were of a professional brightness. The pretty minstrels deserve uncommon credit for the perfection of the manner in which their original idea was carried out.

Maurice Barrymore, who is now in Europe, will originate the role of Rawdon Crawley in "Becky Sharp," the new adaptation for the stage of "Vanity Fair," upon his return to New York. If anybody can enact this role with entire success it should be Barrymore, who is the prince of bohemians and the proper interpreter of the character as sketched by Thackeray, the big, bluff, honest and handsome Captain Crawley. The play should prove a welcome change from the succession of modern problems phrased in dramatic dialogue to which we have been treated during the past twelvemonth. And I can imagine, if it ever comes to San Francisco, with what pleasure it will be received. We have so many Rawdon Crawleys in our midst, people who live upon the interest of their debts as it were, and the Becky Sharps of the social swim are by no means an unknown quantity. There is one society dame, for instance, who lives on the fat of the land in a comfortable home, entertains liberally and is envied by the smaller fry who occupy a less important social station. What would these think if they knew that it costs the lady in question absolutely nothing to live, that she has the art of housekeeping down to so fine a point that her bills are her mode of subsistence—and these she never pays.

Much favorable comment is being expressed at the elegant and improved appearance of the show windows of J. J. O'Brien & Co., the old reliable dry goods house which from its pioneer days has continued to lead in the uptown trade of the city. Its display of ladies' underwear, ribbons and boys and children's clothing during the past week has attracted wide attention.

California Theatre

* * *

One Week Only. Beginning Sunday, July 2nd
Matinees 4th of July and Saturday

The only Comedy in town.

Everybody's favorite, L. R. STOCKWELL, in Hoyt's Best Work,

"A MIDNIGHT BELL"

Supported by a competent company.

Reserved Seats, 75, 50, 35, 25 and 15 cents.

Miss Annie Galloway Lyle has not greatly changed since her Stanford days. She is as beautiful in her tall, slender, blonde way as ever. Miss Lyle is taking the medical course at the Johns Hopkins university in Baltimore, but returned on Saturday to spend her vacation with her mother in this city. I can imagine that the atmosphere of the Johns Hopkins would be very agreeable to Miss Lyle, for it is quiet, refined and ultra-exclusive. The students at the university and the probationary nurses at the hospital all keep themselves far apart from the common herd and, though they have good times as good times go, they are not like the merry Vassar girls or the co-eds of some other colleges. When Miss Lyle was a student at Stanford she did not occupy a room in the girls' dormitory but lived in a little cottage near the college grounds, and she had a maid to wait upon her and attend her when she took her daily walks abroad. The beautiful blonde was regarded as a great swell by the students who accepted the rooming accommodations provided by the college authorities. She wore expensive tailor suits and the fact that she had a maid and a house all to herself seemed to prove that she was remarkably well fixed financially. Miss Lyle was noted, when she attended the Girls' High school in this city, for her literary, especially poetical talent. She is also gifted musically and was the flutist of the original Saturday Morning orchestra.

Said Ouida: "How expensively one may live upon nothing if one just gets the knack, and of how far a fashionable reputation, like a cake of chocolate, will go to support life when nothing more substantial is obtainable."

Though the Martin brothers have not decided where they will make their most extended stay this summer, San Rafael will not be without its attractive masculine contingent, for the Folgers will be at the Hotel Rafael. These two prominent residents of Oakland would not miss a Fourth at the Rafael for anything, I am told, and they have laid some heavy wagers on the Hardys. When Sam Hardy declared his intention last year of giving up tennis, a unanimous wail was heard throughout Oakland, and there was general rejoicing when upon reflection he decided not to desert the field in which his star shines so brightly. Apropos of San Rafael one of the season's brides is to make her home there this summer, Mrs. E. S. Heller (Clara Heyman), and it is expected she will be very popular among the younger set. The ordinary bride of the day is well up in the later twenties, if she has not already crept into the thirties, therefore such a youthful matron as Mrs. Heller is a rarety.

Mrs. Will Jones was one of the advance guards of summer visitors to Santa Cruz this year. Mrs. Jones has been at the Ocean house for several weeks and she has been having a very gay time. She is a woman of exceedingly lively spirits, as the people of Santa Cruz can testify. Mr. Will Jones has visited his wife occasionally since she has been domiciled in the seaside burg but Mrs. Will Jones is not the woman to suffer from ennui during the absence of her liege lord. She was formerly Miss Maggie Cousins, the daughter of Captain Cousins of dry dock fame. During his life time Captain Cousins enjoyed the reputation of being a wealthy man but his children inherited only a paltry forty thousand. The captain had a way of spending his money that nobody dreamed of until after he was gone when it appeared that there were more Cousins in the world than his immediate family had any record of.

Mrs S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, has a beautiful new line of summer dress hats.

General Antonia Luna of the Philippine army, who it is reported has been assassinated, is a humorist in his way. He is of somewhat mixed descent, counting among his ancestors Spanish, Filipino, Tagalo and Chinese. He says: "It is an unpleasant mixture in some respects. The Spanish in me wants to kill the Filipinos; the Igorrote has the same feeling to the Spanish; the Tagalo hates them both and the Chinaman takes no interest whatever in the other three."

On the Links:

He: I should call it a dangerous hazard—Mrs. Silly's flirtation with young Cad.

She: To me it looks more like a spoon shot.

Mrs. F. E. Willson has come up from Arizona and will spend the next three months with her mother, Mrs. Philip Heuer, at 2117 Taylor street. Mrs. William Giselman, Miss Grace Giselman and Marshall Giselman will shortly leave for an extended trip abroad. Miss Marion Smith left on Monday for Russian river and will not return until after the Fourth. Miss Eliza D. Keith is at Camp Douglas, Boulder Creek, for her vacation.

The Tuesday Night club held its sixth and final reception for this season in Cotillon hall last week. It was if possible a more charming affair than its predecessors. The ball-room was handsomely decorated and a smart company was present. An exceedingly pretty figure of the german was led by Miss B. Freund and R. L. Garnier assisted by Miss M. Vincent and C. T. Lampe.

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison Oak and all Skin Diseases. It has been used successfully for the last twenty years and thousands will testify to its curative quality. It is a specific for Poison Oak. AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Dr. Pierre Bernard Hamati's Pupil

SECOND SUPREME INSTRUCTOR of the TANTRIK ORDER IN AMERICA . . .

HYPNOTISM as it applies to Medicine, Surgery and Business.

INSTRUCTIONS

Treatments—All diseases of the mind and nervous system ...

Hotel Marechal Niel
404 Ellis Street

Utica Cleansing Compound AND Utica Compound Paste.....

TRADE MARK TIACU

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society, 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

This compound is made of pure and unadulterated drugs
Used for Baths and Shampoo it will make the skin soft and white.

For Swollen and Painful Feet it is unrivaled.

For Poison Oak and Prickly Heat it is a sure remedy.

Suitable for cleansing anything.

SAMUEL SEYMOUR,

21 SPEAR ST., S. F. Pacific Coast Agent.

If Miss Goelet marries the crowned head of Europe with whom the papers are uniting her, no one need be envious of her position. She would only be a morganatic wife, for royalty cannot legally wed a commoner with or without dispensation from a holy source. When such a consummation as a marriage between a prince or princess and a private citizen does occur, it is of no benefit to the latter. That is, there may be lots of love in it but if there are children they forfeit the rights and privileges of legitimate heirs and heiresses. A wife of the left hand, as the morganatic bride is termed, is in reality nothing but a legalized mistress. Her children may bear titles but they will always lack social prestige. Prince Henry of Battenberg, for instance, to whom Queen Victoria's youngest daughter, Beatrice, gave her hand and heart was the offspring of a morganatic union, and his wife, in spite of her being a princess of the blood royal of England, had to suffer the mortification of seeing lesser lights of nobility take precedence of her in formal functions given during her visits to Germany. Therefore Miss Goelet will stop and think twice before she places herself in the anomalous position of a wife of the left hand. A royal husband might continue to love her but state reasons might award him another bride—and then where would the fair American find herself?

Ernest Wiltsee is going to take a party of friends to Catalina this year on his yacht and I understand that John D. Spreckels will also have a yacht party with Coronado as its destination. It is a fine thing to own a yacht and every society girl who knows a yacht owner is sure to smile sweetly upon him in the spring that she may get an invitation to sail on his boat in the summer. I am surprised that Walter Martin has not invested in a yacht, a palatial boat such as George Gould or Willie Hearst sails about in the waters off New York. Then there is Peter Martin; why does he not invest some of that lately discovered gold in a swell centre-boarder? We have many rich youths who waste their wealth on trifles when they could easily surround themselves with blooded horses, well bred canines or ocean grayhounds. And in the purchase of yachts, for instance, they give pleasure not only to themselves but to hosts of their friends.

"Before my husband won my hand," said Mrs. Pacific Heights, "he used to swear he would never love another."
"And now?"
"Oh, it is now a different matter with both of us."

The advent of the company of Japanese actors and the manner in which the audiences received their performance reminds me of a story told by M. G. Okada, a highly educated Japanese gentleman, and the editor of one of the local papers published in that language. Mr. Okada says the Japanese are regular patrons of the American theatres, which they attend with a view to perfecting themselves in our tongue. One evening as the audience was passing out of Morosco's Grand opera house a young native son who had acquired a few words of the oriental language without the shadow of an idea of their meaning, but with the evident intention of impressing his companions, approached an educated Japanese gentleman and addressed a remark which he in all probability assumed to be a mere complimentary greeting or an ordinary salutation. In reality the brilliant young linguist had asked the gentleman to give him a cup of tea—a request which, considering time, place and circumstances was hardly to be complied with, even if one takes no note of the impudent ill-breeding of the affair. In all probability young America is blissfully ignorant to this day of the fact that he made a fool of himself. If one cannot understand what he is talking about it is much better not to dally with foreign languages. Many children pick up vulgar expressions from the Chinese servants employed by their parents, without a knowledge of their meaning. But conceive their horror if they should ever attempt to use these phrases in polite conversation in exclusive oriental society.

In the Suburbs:
"Mrs. Jones says her house is full now."
"A full hand, eh?"
"Quite so. The only one that isn't full is the cat."

Tod Sloan has not grown snobbish with his accession to fame as the foremost jockey of two continents. Tod does not forget his old friends and is as easy to approach as in the days when he was poor and humility was the paramount feature of his attitude. The noted jockey's foster-parents live in a small town in Indiana. I am told that Tod is very liberal in his gifts to the people who picked him up on a door-step and took the place of parents to the neglected infant.

Jack Reis, bohemian, bon vivant and bonhomme, distinguished in club circles and on the Rialto, has returned from St. Louis loaded with honors. He attended the Grand Lodge of Elks at St. Louis as a representative of San Francisco lodge and although he had no intention of becoming a candidate for office he was elected Grand Esteemed Loyal Knight. This chair is third in rank to the highest in the gift of the

Mrs S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, very latest styles in dressy outing and sailor hats.

SHOES MADE TO ORDER
Hand Sewed, $5.50 Repairing Done Nicely
Machine Sewed, $3.50
Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold Cheap.
Telephone Polk 18 T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

If you can afford it
DRINK
Jesse Moore Whisky

GERMEA
THE
KING
OF BREAKFAST
FOODS

order. The bestowal of such a high honor upon Mr. Reis is regarded as a splendid compliment to the local lodge, the character of whose personnel gives it a standing in the order throughout the country not enjoyed by the local branch of any other fraternal organization. The Elks of San Francisco are much enthused over the election of Mr. Reis and they gave him a reception in their sumptuous lodge room last night.

Through its corresponding secretary, Alice G. Demorest, the Sorosis club of New York recently sent a request that amounted to a command to all the metropolitan dailies excluding their reporters from the meetings of the organization. This request was regarded by the newspapers receiving the polite notes from the secretary as being not so much a shrinking from publicity in the fair members of the club, but as a slap at the well known propensity of the reporters to satirize the meetings and their minutes. Sorosis is the smart woman's club of New York and it is upon its actions that most of the other women's clubs in the United States model their own doings. I am wondering, therefore, whether our local Sorosis, Forum, Laurel Hall and California clubs will copy after the action of their older sister. None of these clubs has ever courted privacy with regard to its meetings but the officers may consider it necessary to do so now that the New York club has practically pronounced publicity bad form. The Century is the only local club that has always kept severely to itself and been chary about admitting reporters to its sittings.

Miss Fiancée: I am getting on first rate with the gloves.
Her friend: What started you to take up boxing?
Miss Fiancée: Oh, I want to be able to knock my husband out if he doesn't treat me well.

I am told by a gentleman who has seen the real thing in Japan that the geisha dances of Madame Yacco in the play "Bojoji" at the California last week give but a faint idea of the genuine article. He says that the opera singer who cavorts in the first act of "Carmen" as the cigarette girl gives no more the simon pure Spanish dance than does Madame Yacco's pas seul approach the real geisha dance. Yacco is graceful; the genuine geisha is voluptuous. The actress introduces refinement into her movements, while the geisha girl of Yeddo shows little if any conception of delicacy. Indeed the proper ending to the geisha solos, as I have heard from more than one reliable witness, is for the dancer to shed her clothes piece by piece in the dance until the finale is reached and she stands a nude statue in pale bronze before the spectators. But of course we would not expect a legitimate actress to treat us to such an exhibition—especially after "The Turtle."

I am glad to see that Frank Mathieu is getting on in his profession. I was one of the first to predict his success when he decided to go on the stage as a professional and it is always pleasant to have one's predictions fulfilled. The seceder from the ranks of San Francisco's commercial army went east with the Frawleys and was, as is usually the case with our Californian boys and girls who choose the dramatic profession, coaxed to secede to the Daly and Frohman ranks. The persuasions come from the management of both companies, I understand, but Mr. Mathieu said he would stand by the Frawleys if Timothy Daniel so ordered. Frank is coming home, I hear, via Milwaukee and Los Angeles—long leagues apart but his company's route—and will probably be in town to spend a few weeks with his wife and children before returning east.

A serious illness is often averted by the prompt use of a pure and wholesome stimulant. The famous old Jesse Moore Whisky is the best.

It is said that Mr. Frawley will not be so generous in the matter of débutantes during his forthcoming season. The immaculate T. D., you may remember, has never been niggardly with his public in this respect but has always launched each season several novices into stage life and rarely with indifferent success. But Mr. Frawley has found that the average young woman seeking fame from the footlights' glare is not a maiden looking for a career but a wife who finds married life too tame and seeks diversion in enacting minor roles in comedies while nursing her ambition for something higher. About nine out of ten dramatic aspirants are married women and it is the introduction of these that Mr. Frawley has decided to prohibit from his company. Asked the reason of his prohibition, he said:

"Married débutantes are not reliable. They begin all right and have about ten times the snap and dash of their unmarried sisters, but they don't always keep it up. Their ambition fluctuates and they mingle dreams of shining on the stage with visions of becoming oracles in society. And then there are the inevitable consequences of married life."

It is these "inevitable consequences' above all other reasons that have decided Mr. Frawley against numbering young matrons among his rank and file. He has right on his side, too. I can point to a late instance where a very talented young women decided to go upon the stage She was a leader of the social push in Los Angeles and her husband, though he had serious objections against his wife's embracing a public life thought the only way out of the difficulty was to give her her head. They had been married about a year but dull domestic duties palled upon l'esprit gaulois of the young matron. She had distinguished herself in amateur theatricals and her friends persuaded her that she was another Sarah Bernhardt. Therefore she took the drama seriously, made all preparations for a début as Juliet—and retired into private life almost upon the eve of her premier as a professional. I heard the other day that the young couple were rejoicing over the birth of a son and heir.

The Laxative Liver Lozenge ✷

PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable.

PRICE 25 CENTS
CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, - 139 Powell St.
W. W. STOCKER.

The Best Dressed Men Are Club Members

Club Members patronize

S. DAMNER,
Merchant Tailor

Because he makes clothes fit;
gives you the best of material
and workmanship . . .

206 O'Farrell St.

AT BEDROCK PRICES.

About as breezy a bit of writing as Frank Norris has ever done was his reply in the Sunday Examiner to J. F. Rose-Soley who the previous week had used three columns of the same paper to expose in the Rose-Soley opinion "What Frank Norris does not know about the sea," and incidentally what Frank Norris does not know about San Francisco or the art of novel writing. En passant, one would like to inquire: Who are these Rose-Soleys—there are at least two of them—who have suddenly dropped down from Mars or the moon to set up their standard of measurement for us? J. F. of the hyphenated afterpart is evidently one of that class of critics who believe it their duty to read a book by the aid of a microscope and set about acquiring a reputation for literary acumen by dint of picayunish fault-finding. He knows something about yachting under certain conditions and he can imagine no other circumstances. As the old preacher said long ago, "If the facts do not conform to the theory, so much the worse for the facts." "Little localized powers and little, narrow streaks of specialized knowledge are things men are very apt to be conceited about," remarked O. W. Holmes. One does not read a romance for lessons in seamanship and "Moran of the Lady Letty" loses nothing in interest whether one knows a main brace from a marlin-spike or a keel from a capstan. "It is impossible to conceive Stevenson making such a blunder," says the Rose-Soley, the aforesaid blunder being the exclusive property of Rose-Soley. Stevenson was a good man, a good writer, though by no means the phenomenon that the Rose-Soleys seem to imagine. He must have been a model step-father, but he was not God. Norris is holding his own in spite of this Donnybrook Fair style of criticism —"whenever you see a head, hit it"—to which he has been treated since he attracted the attention of eastern publishers. No other book which has been before the public for the same length of time as "McTeague" was referred to so often in the literary magazines of the past month. One critic says: "The reader may hate it, but he cannot belittle it and he will not put it down." Another calls it a compelling book, whether it compels one favorably or not.

The evil that men do lives after them;
The good is oft interred with their bones.

I have no desire to perpetuate the memory of any of the peccadilloes, political or other kind, that marked the career of Senator Tim McCarthy, but I wish merely to call attention to the lavish praise bestowed upon him by the dailies. The good will surely not be interred with his bones. It will live in the obituary notices of the newspaper reporters who probably have no recollection of the days when Tim served his constituents at Sacramento. Tim McCarthy was a good old soul, as practical politicians go, but I never knew that he was the incarnation of all the virtues or that his death would be regarded as a great calamity. He was one of "de gang" in the legislature of 1878 which made itself famous by cleaning out the treasury of this city by numerous acts of special legislation. The new constitution was adopted in the following year and its adoption was regarded as a protest against the acts of the members of the previous legislature.

In the eighties McCarthy was sent back to the legislature but he failed to gain distinction except as an associate of the members of the lobby. I remember that during that session whenever McCarthy voted he would rush out to join the lobby and ascertain its opinion of the position that he had taken. He was a strict organization man and was versed in all the dips, spurs and angles of practical politics. In early days he was an associate of Mannix & Brady, the bosses of the period, and later on he was a worshiper at the throne of Buckley. Some years ago he went to New York and was banqueted by the Tammany braves. The affair was written up as a burlesque by the Sun. Upon his return he stopped at Sacramento to exhibit to his friends a huge pin which was presented to him by Tammany. He attended a banquet at the capitol and was called upon to respond to the toast "Me Tammany Pin." I believe he did the subject justice in his quaint way.

Cad: I always knew that Miss Swell, when she went on the stage, would end badly.

Jones: There you're mistaken. I assure you her ankles have a very decent taper.

Dr. R. Beverly Cole, that gallant old chap whose admiration of feminine charms is said to increase with his years, has a new summer home somewhere in the vicinity of Napa. A story is told of a recent housewarming there, on which occasion the doctor invited suggestions as to the name that should be given his country house. His guests responded with a variety of familiar names borrowed from fiction and foreign countries but none satisfied him. Presently a vivacious and precocious bud declared that there could be nothing more appropriate than "The Rake's Retreat."

San Rafael will miss the Hagers this summer. I understand that Emilie and Ethel will spend the season at Del Monte, while Alice will remain abroad.

That professional patriot with the long reach—Colonel T. P. Robinson—has once more been called upon to explain. The colonel's career is made up of one long chapter of explanations and consequently he is not feazed in the slightest degree by the latest demand upon him growing out of his connection with the Fourth of July fireworks' committee. Although the colonel is a patriot by instinct nobody is so green as to believe that he gives his services to the Fourth of July committee through pure patriotic zeal. A few weeks ago I called attention to the fact that the colonel was again acting the part of the Fourth of July impresario and I suggested that the grand jury should investigate the affairs of the committee of a year ago but I did not expect the new committee to develop a scandal so soon. I now submit that something should be done to restrain the noxious cupidity of the rogues that make the Independence day celebration the means of facilitating the indulgence of their penchant for plunder. If the grand jury cares to do its duty in the premises I respectfully refer it to Mr. Jake Rauer who admitted to me that he could prove the guilt of a certain individual who pocketed a portion of the funds of last year's committee.

Just the thing to take camping, a bottle of Chapin and Gore's old Reserve Bourbon.

There was a young lawyer named Chertien,
Who thought 'twas by no means a breach in
The law of the land,
To stretch out his hand
For the dough; his forte is long reachin'.

The Church of the Advent of Oakland is in a bad way and all because of a difference between the rector, Reverend V. Marshall Law, and John J. Valentine, a wealthy member of the congregation. I know nothing of the merits of the controversy but I have been watching the course of Mr. Valentine of late and have been somewhat curious to know what motive impels him to keep himself before the public eye by means of newspaper essays and pulpit speeches. My curiosity is probably due to the circumstance of his being the president of Wells, Fargo & Co., a corporation that evaded payment of the tax imposed by the government for war revenue purposes. Mr. Valentine has lately been posing as a public-spirited citizen and, while I do not like to doubt his sincerity of purpose, I cannot altogether suppress a feeling of skepticism. I believe Mr. Valentine received his training as a financier under that distinguished citizen, Mr. Lloyd Tevis, whom Mr. Authur McEwen used to refer to as one of the predatory rich. The spectacle of Mr. Tevis' successor addressing a church congregation from a pulpit could not fail to be impressive. But it appears that Mr. Tevis and Mr. Valentine are totally dissimilar in their natures as well as their manners and customs. Mr. Tevis never wasted any time in trying to persuade people to believe that he was a public-spirited citizen or that he lay awake at nights trying to devise plans for the amelioration of suffering humanity. Mr. Tevis is today a very old man and when you see him in the street he impresses you with the notion that he has a conscience and that it is exceedingly active.

A young society man of San Diego, writes my correspondent, had a rather shocking experience lately. He claims to be a "sensitive," as the spiritualists would say, and is guided by the "impressions" he receives. The other day he met a young couple on the train and, as the feminine portion of the couple was exceedingly attractive, his impression compelled him to make their acquaintance. When the train reached San Diego the trio were very good friends and the impressionable young man promised to introduce his newly made acquaintances to the delights that San Diego offers. The next day he drove them about the city and was planning further regalement for them when the shock came. He was piloting a San Francisco acquaintance through San Diego's gilded quarters when, among the bevy of besmudged angels who scintillate there he recognized—oh horror! his fair companion of the railroad journey. He has been thanking heaven ever since that the dénouement came early enough to save his reputation and thinks, forgetful of San Diego's all-seeing and all-hearing gossips, that his slip has passed unnoticed.

The Carey W. Thompsons, who for the past ten years have been prominent in San Diego, will hereafter reside in New York. Mrs. Thompson is at present in the Yosemite. A pretty San Diego wedding of last week was that of Miss Ruth Dantee, niece of Milton Dantee, and William Butler Allyn. Mrs. C B. Richards' progressive euchre party was the important function of last week. Miss Minnie Lane, daughter of the late Judge Lane of Canada, is visiting in Los Angeles. The J. W. Seftons are at Alpine for the summer. Many functions are being given in honor of Miss Lida O'Brien, who leaves soon for Europe. Miss Crocker, the talented artist who has lived at Coronado for some time, will start shortly for New York.

Mrs. Edward Abramson is slowly convalescing from a serious illness that for some days threatened her life but which is now happily banished to the past. Mrs. Abramson is probably better known to the musical and social world of San Francisco as Pearl Noble and her marriage to the president of the Abramson-Heunisch company was a quite recent event though I understand the engagement was one of about two years' standing. As a solo cornetist, Pearl Noble's name is known throughout the United States and it is with considerable regret that music lovers will accept the fact that in marrying Mr. Abramson his young wife has decided to renounce a public career. The bridegroom has furnished a luxurious home for his bride and the latter, when her health is entirely restored, will doubtless entertain in the informally hospitable fashion for which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Burr Noble, are so noted. Later on a trip abroad will be enjoyed, including a visit to Mr. Abramson's parents who reside in Germany.

Two Noted Resorts both under one management, noted for its efficiency. Representing the mountain interior and seaside of Central California.

THE CELEBRATED Hotel del Monte, MONTEREY, CAL

"The queen of American watering places" Only 3½ hours from San Francisco by express trains of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY OPEN ALL THE YEAR

RATES MODERATE.

The Tavern of Castle Crag and Soda Springs

320 miles from San Francisco, on the famous SHASTA ROUTE within sight of MOUNT SHASTA and the wonderful CASTLE CRAGS at titude 2,100 feet.

Rates: by the day, $2 $2.50 $3
By the week, $14 to $17.50.
Bath rooms extra.

Season, June to September

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION ADDRESS GEO. SCHONEWALD, MANAGER
Hotel del Monte, Monterey, Cal, or Tavern of Castle Crag, Castle Crag, Cal.

A quiet but pretty wedding of last week, celebrated at the home of the bride's mother in Broderick street, was that of Miss Maymie Brown and Otis L. Swett, a prominent downtown merchant. Both bride and bridegroom are popular among a large circle of friends. Mrs. Swett's father died a few years ago, leaving his family a very comfortable fortune. Beside real estate in this city they own a country home near Sunol.

"You are looking very sad," said Jones to his friend Brown. "Business is dull, I suppose?"

"Business isn't bothering me," was the reply, "I suffered a severe disappointment last evening"

"What was it?"

"I surprised my wife in what the lawyers call a compromising attitude and thought I had a cinch for a divorce suit, but I found out that she was merely rehearsing a love scene with the leading man of the Pacific Heights' Benevolent Amateur Dramatic club."

"It must have been a realistic scene."

"Yes, my wife says it s no trick to make love to a handsome man."

The marriage of Irving M. Scott's daughter, Alice, to Reginald K. Smith, assistant surgeon U. S. N., was solemnized on Wednesday in New York at the Church of the Transfiguration. It seems only a short time ago that the papers were describing the nuptials of Miss Alice Scott and James Nash Brown and the fact that his widow so soon decided to shed her weeds and again enact the role of a bride speaks well for the disposition of the late Mr. Brown. A famous philosopher said that the highest compliment that a man can pay his first wife is, when the first one dies, to choose another with as much speed as is considered commensurate with the requirements of good form in mourning. This saying is naturally as applicable to a widow as to a widower. This second marriage of Mr. Scott's daughter appears to be tinged with the romantic and was the outcome of a meeting of the widow, Mrs. Brown, and Dr. Smith in the Hawaiian islands where she was sojourning for the benefit of her health, her nerves having been sadly shattered by her husband's death.

From Brown to Smith's not far to go
  Jones might well be the next;
A sermon could be preached, you know,
  With all this as a text.
Brown, Smith, Jones, Robinson and Green
The moral of it may be seen:
  Change of name and not of letter
  Is change for worse and not for better;
  But change of name and not of tone
  Is better far than living alone.

Once a newspaper reporter and now chief pedagogue of the normal school—such was the metamorphosis of Fred Burke. I remember when Burke came over from Oakland, where he had been associated with Frank Moffitt in the publication of a newspaper, to engage in metropolitan journalism. That was nearly fifteen years ago. He became a reporter on the Examiner staff and he was soon as thorough a bohemian as any man in the business and those were the days when bohemian and journalist were synonymous. Will Hearst was then in college and Clarence Greathouse, who afterward became minister to Corea and later on prime minister to the monarch of that country, was managing editor of the Examiner. Burke was a capable reporter but he appeared to lack ambition. Nobody ever suspected that he had energy enough to apply himself to study with a view of taking half a dozen degrees to certify to his proficiency in the classics. When he accepted a position as teacher of a class in a preparatory school at Berkeley his friends felt that that was just the sort of a soft berth to suit his phlegmatic nature and nobody expected him to develop higher aspirations. But he has been gradually going to the front and in view of the fact that he has become principal of the normal school at the age of thirty-five years it must be acknowledged that he made very good progress.

Several times in the annals of the play-going world have works been produced by San Francisco writers. Curtain-raisers have oftentimes been the modes chosen by the aspirants to fame as playwrights to test the power of their pens on the public. Mrs. Dominic Verdenal, Miss Louise Veiller and others have been successful in this field and now comes Miss Charlotte Thompson with her lever-de-rideau, "Only the Master Shall Blame," which will be given at the Alcazar next week. Miss Thompson is a San Francisco girl and is a teacher in the public school department. She is a graduate of the Denman grammar and the Girls' high school, having distinguished herself in both of these institutions of learning as a clever student.

A. T. Deckelman has returned from an extended eastern tour. Mr. and Mrs. George D. Graham have returned from Cazadero and have gone to Highland springs, Lake county, to spend several weeks.

OVERHEARD AT SANTA CRUZ

Dolly (from a fresh water state, donning her first bathing costume): Oh dear, I never can wear this thing.

Molly (a native daughter): Oh, yes, you can. Go ahead and put it on.

Dolly: But it'll look awful.

Molly: No it won't. Everybody wears them. Don't be silly.

Dolly: Oh, I can't go out in it.

Molly: But you must.

Dolly: But how can I?

Molly: Oh come ahead.

Dolly: But I look perfectly dreadful. I'll die if anybody sees me in this thing

Molly: Oh pshaw! Nobody'll notice you.

Dolly: Oh, I can't go out in it.

Molly: Come along. Are you ready?

Dolly (giggling): I–I guess so. I don't believe I'll go in after all Don't I look perfectly dreadful?

Molly: Oh for goodness sake, come along.

[They reach the water and enter.]

Dolly: Ow! its cold. Oo-o-o-o! Its dreadfully cold. Its salt! I got some in my mouth. Oh! isn't this splendid! I'm just wild over bathing. I intend to learn how to swim. I'm going in every day. Wouldn't it be fun to be photographed in my suit!

THE OBSERVER.

HO FOR THE DOGS

The sport at Union coursing park for the Independence day holidays will be provided by two stakes—one of sixty-four dogs, to be run on Saturday and Sunday, and a reserve stake with forty-eight entries for Tuesday, the Fourth. The stake for Tuesday will be drawn at the park on Saturday afternoon. It is limited to forty-eight dogs and is already filled to overflowing. It is limited to dogs which have run three times since January first, and have not won as good as third prize in an open or reserve stake. This lets in many excellent performers who have been unfortunate in being drawn against the fast dogs.

Why do so many

When the best hairdressing known is done for 25 cents, it's foolish to pay more.

When you can get switches and front pieces at half what other stores charge, is it any wonder that this place is so extensively patronized.

Ladies go to Lederer's?

World of Law

KNIGHTS OF rueful countenance are to be seen sliding over the polished floors of the county clerk's office. A settled gloom hangs like a pall over the place and from dark corners and secretive alcoves come murmurings of troubled spirits. Small knots of human beings gather themselves unto each other from time to time and there is much shaking of heads and profane language.

Now, all this commotion has been caused by the Supreme court. The tribunal of last resort created havoc in the county clerk's office by its decision of the other day. It may be law, no doubt is; the fault lies with the stupids who framed the laws in the legislature, not with the poor Supreme court that can but construe the laws according to law. It is, however, preposterous to expect the county clerk to run his office with the force which the decision, if it be not hereafter modified, leaves him. Besides, Deane is not deserving of this treatment. Curry was the man against whom Mayor Phelan was contending when he brought the suit finally decided in his favor last week. Curry openly said he would employ as many men as he pleased and that pledges might go to the devil. He was an extravagant county clerk. Can the same be said of Deane? I think not. From the day when the genial Billy took office every mother's son has had to earn his salary by the sweat of his hand and brain. There have been no loafers. Whereas, in the days of the Curry regime, men came and went as they pleased, and the race track daily received half the deputies. Deane established a rule to the effect that, with the exception of the regular time allowed for luncheon, no man shall absent himself from his post between the hours of nine and five without leave. And this rule has been rigidly adhered to.

Consequently, when everything was running so smoothly, and Deane was successfully battling with the legacy of unfinished work bequeathed him by his predecessor, it is hard lines that he should be peremptorily ordered to discharge fifty of the seventy-seven employees in his office, because of the unconstitutionality of the law under which they are employed.

It is hard on Deane, it is harder on the lawyers, it is hardest on the judges. The latter met the other day but decided to do nothing pending a petition for a re-hearing of the case. A re-hearing, however, usually amounts to so little that it looks as though the judges might decide at once whether to take the law into their own hands and appoint clerks for those departments deprived by the recent Supreme court decision, giving for the value of their services a peremptory order on the treasury, or to abide by the decision and put up with registry clerks to fill the vacancies. It is likely, from hints let fall by one or two of the judges, that the power of appointment will be exercised and, if need be, tested.

Balm to the wounded soul is furnished in a very emphatic declaration by ex-Judge Slack. It was Judge Slack who with Garret McEnerney was hired to represent the deputy county clerks in their struggle for existence. His Honor now says that, in his opinion, a rehearing of the case ought to be granted by the Supreme court. As he is a very careful, conservative man, that is a great deal for him to say. Judge Slack says that the court missed the entire drifts of the arguments delivered by counsel who defended Auditor Broderick's action in passing warrants for the extra clerks. The court held that Curry had no right to employ extra help because the laws under which he did so, to wit, the acts of 1880 and 1891, were unconstitutional. Judge Slack says he never argued that these laws were ever anything else than unconstitutional. He claimed, however, that the extra clerks, or, rather, the authority to employ them, was provided by the County Government Act.

The latter act provided for the employment of necessary extra help upon terms stated in the acts of 1880 and 1891. Now, it has been decided more than once in this state that the legislature may refer to an unconstitutional act for a particular purpose and yet its new act does not thereby become unconstitutional. Consequently, it does not matter whether the acts of 1880 and 1891 are constitutional or not; they can be used by the County Government Act for the purpose of designating the circumstances under which extra clerks can be employed. On these grounds, the point having been raised in the decision, Judge Slack thinks the Supreme court should and will grant a rehearing.

Billy Deane, with his head shaved like a convict's, is back at his post, recalled post haste from Tuscan springs, his well-earned vacation nipped in the bud by the dictum of an august tribunal. He vaguely says he won't make up his mind what to do, just yet. Joe Goddard, his able assistant, calls upon the last resources of the dictionary to explain to all comers the extreme gravity of the situation. "The diametrical influences that may be expected to adduce from the meretricious doctrines enunciated by our Supreme court no one can yet foresee," says Joe, with a wise shake of the head. "That which our consciences dictate to us as being the wisest course to pursue we shall expound to our attorneys at no distant date."

Ben I. Solomon, the talented clerk of Department 6, is walking about in a straw hat that he bought last year. While his respected sire wages Teutonic warfare with refractory witnesses in Department 11 the young hopeful tries to impress himself and others with the fact that he is enjoying his vacation, Judge Dunne having hidden himself somewhere for a month. How Ben did look forward to that vacation, and how he wonders will the next one be an enforced one.

Charlie Morris is wondering whether, should all trades fail, he can get something out of the Ingleside coursing. That is the hobby of the clerk of No. 7, coursing; he was one of the promoters of the Ingleside venture and has been prominent in most of its legal troubles.

Dick Welch laughs good humoredly, as usual, when he discusses the situation. He reflects with good sense that there is always the Potrero left. His is one of those happy natures that loom up bright under adverse circumstances. He will not meet trouble half way.

Ambrose Watson thinks of a cottage on a grassy bank near Glen Ellen, of a suit of overalls and a fishing rod. How many times, and oft have Judge Hunt, Dr. Belden and Ambrose Watson, all of Department 5, held court where the shyster troubleth not and the echo of the jury lawyer talking for his fee is lost in the melodious hum of the mosquito.

—o—

Bob Fitzgerald is of the knowing order. He knows enough, too, for he has been in politics for many long years. Bob says: "Well, if so be, so be; if not, well, all right. That's the way to play the game. Eh, old chappie?"

—o—

Oscar A. Tolle has lost the power of articulation I grieve to say this; but it is a fact. Such a pity, too, when he was getting along so nicely with his lessons in elocution during Judge Carroll Cook's absence. He takes an interpreter around with him wherever he goes. His consolation is a letter which he received from Judge Cook the other day, containing a tribute to Tolle's excellence as a clerk with many proffers of advice and assurances of friendship.

—o—

This is a good time of the year to get constitutional questions settled, for there is mighty little doing at the city hall. Court after court is adjourning; even Judge Coffey is off the bench. No one knows whither he has gone; but that is just what the probate judge likes.

—o—

Judge Hunt has rushed away for a month. He is located at Boca, on the Truckee river, nine miles from Truckee. There is a river there, there are mountains in the vicinity and there is a good hotel. Judge Hunt's companion is his son, whom he is bringing up in his own way, to become a sportsman and a lover of outdoor exercise. None of the worthy judge's old-time acquaintances can travel with him now. He has worn them all down, one after another, and the lean, gaunt man of fifty-seven years can today go through more hardships than most men of half his years. "Address us as 'Dombey & Son,' Boca," was Judge Hunt's parting word. "That'll find us. We're 'Dombey & Son, now, my boy and I."

—o—

Several prominent lawyers are showing signs of wear and tear. Brain work without proper rest will break any man down in time. Judge Slack is looking pale and overworked. Garret McInerney has had to lay off awhile. W. S. Goodfellow has broken down completely and is a very sick man. There ought to be here, as in England, a long vacation every year; there the courts adjourn from June to October and no lawyer in any good practice need stay in town.

THE COURT REPORTER.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

SEASONABLE AND RELIABLE

UNDER the locust trees,
Swayed by the zephyr's breeze,
In rocking hammock's ease—
Danger lurks yonder.

Hist! See the infant boy
With the taut guy-ropes toy;
Ah, with what fiendish joy
Parts them asunder.

Down to the cold, hard ground
(Thankful no one's around!)
With such a deadly pound—
Swears she, I wonder?

Infant boy yells with glee
Such a rare sight to see;
But joys short-lived to be—
'Twas his worst blunder.

Shingle and squirming kid
Mingle as never did.
Shrieks of dismay unhid—
Lightning and thunder!

THE SUMMER BOARDER.

Dramatic World

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "The Adventures of the Lady Ursula"—Clever and in Anthony Hope's best vein.
GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "The Lily of Killarney"—Shows that Thomas Persse has a neat Irish accent.
ALCAZAR. "Frederick the Great"—A fine production.
CALIFORNIA. "The Brownies"—Charming.
TIVOLI. "Shamus O'Brien"—With the O'Sullivan in his original role.
ORPHEUM. Vaudeville—Specialties galore and all good.
PANORAMA BUILDING. "Battle of Manila"—Realistic and worth seeing.
GLEN PARK. Great circus today and tomorrow.

WHEN THE CURTAIN rises at the Columbia and introduces us into the snug, homelike living room at Lord Hassenden's where Mrs. Fenton, a kindly but proud old matron, discusses with her pretty niece the pranks of the Lady Ursula, one settles himself comfortably in his chair and follows with interest the dialogue After all, the eighteenth century girls seem to have but slightly differed from those of the present day and when Anthony Hope makes us acquainted with Lady Ursula and Dorothy Fenton, two happy, liberty-loving damsels, there seem to arise from the mist of the past entirely familiar friends for whom we feel particular interest. And when we follow the scheming secretiveness and almost audacious freedom of these chums, we applaud their innocent pranks and are glad of their happiness. Curiosity was one of the fascinating shortcomings of the fair sex in the last century just as it is today and curiosity entangled our fair friends in a disagreeable affair from which they must extract themselves. It is an unusual predicament; an unusual person concocted the plan; an unusual remedy is necessary to free the fair adventuress from the meshes of her own knitting. And thus in the pretty little head of Lady Ursula the idea is born to don her brother's garments, force herself into the presence of the one she thought to outwit and settle the affair to the satisfaction of all parties. There may perhaps be something else but the amicable settlement of an unforeseen calamity back of this risky adventure. Lady Ursula, deep in the secret shrines of her affectionate heart, is perhaps just a little interested in Sir George Sylvester and has made up her mind to woo him. Who can tell? She decides to don man's attire, to create the impression that she is one of the stronger sex. Why should she not ad pt at the same time a man's strategy? Oh, one does not wish to assert that Lady Ursula is immodest. No, no. But simply that her brother's danger is not the sole impulse that dominates her to present herself to Sylvester, but that just a little selfishness is hidden beneath it all. Does she not discard several costumes because their color does not suit her complexion? Ah! she desires to look pretty. And on her way to Sir Sylvester her plans certainly become more adapted to her own personality than to that of her brother. Lady Ursula is an unusual character and must needs adopt unusual methods to further her interests. Therefore Anthony Hope does not step out of the field of reality in his play. There may have lived a Lady Ursula in the eighteenth century and a Lady Ursula could not hesitate at anything when her mind is set to accomplish a certain enterprise. And we are all amused at the young girl's courage. We delight in her dare-deviltry, we smile at her embarassment, and become as interested in her adventure as though we had actually been taken into the plot. But then Miss Anglin creates such a lovable Lady Ursula that one cannot but be fascinated with this entrancing personage. How realistically she shrinks into a corner, how unaffected are her little frightened shrieks and how heartily she laughs. There is, after all, nothing so admirable as an actress who can laugh heartily, honestly and without any signs of restraint. A laugh that comes from the heart is contagious. Well, Lady Ursula, after considerable obstacles, finally closes her adventure. It proves highly successful. Her brother is freed from a heavy obligation and she has conquered the man who pledged never to look upon a woman's face again. Was it worth while to don male attire? Ask Lady Ursula and she will certainly answer you happily in the affirmative. Ask the audiences that went to the Columbia and they will assure you that it is worth a good deal to enjoy to your heart's content the enchanting escapade of Lady Ursula. It was wise of the management to retain the play for another week. Lord and Lady Algy will follow this play.

Scott Seaton, with "A Midnight Bell" Company at the California

Orpheum

AND NOW grand opera has also found its way into the Orpheum. One certainly cannot deny that the management of the Orpheum is up-to-date. Opera seems to be the battle-cry nowadays and Mr. Morrissey thinks rightly if everybody presents opera why the Orpheum can do so too, and he is perfectly correct. The prison scene of Faust as presented by Signor and Signora Pasquali assisted by Signor Abramoff, is executed in a decidedly artistic and polished manner. Signora Pasquali's soprano is one of those rarely dramatic organs that transmits emotion and translates human passion and sentiment into golden melodies. Her execution is worthy of imitation and her enunciation shows the thorough training she has undergone Her stage presence is delightful. Signor Pasquali's lyric tenor seems to be particularly adapted for a role like Faust; it is graceful, liquid and true. He sings easily without any bombast and without any desire to thrust his personality upon his audience, a virtue which should be imitated by all soloists. Abramoff, as we all know, has a basso of considerable compass and he sings with force and emphasis. In the trio he adapts the baritone key and thereby makes the finale particularly effective. He sings schmetternd. From the balance of the program, Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne's sketch Grasping an Opportunity, may easily be selected as worthy of mention. It is original, contains some solid wit and has entertaining situations. Miss Dayne is clever and chic. She is a bright artist and succeeds in securing all the fine points from a play. The new people at the Orpheum next week will include Hayes and Litton in a comedy skit, J. Morie, the tourist juggler, and the Gardner brothers in musical comedy. A special matinee is announced for Tuesday, July fourth and regular matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

California

TOMORROW NIGHT Hoyt's A Midnight Bell will make its appearance with the Stockwell company. Of course everyone knows the reputation that Mr. Stockwell enjoys but there are two members of the company that deserve to be especially noticed. One is Pearl Landers, the versatile little actress who captured the critics between here and Chicago, not only because of the fine development of her histrionic accomplishments, but because of her beauty, which is of that agreeable genuine type that repels all affectation. As Dot in A Midnight Bell she evidently found the role that fits her exactly and there will be a treat in store for those who visit the California next week. The other member of the company who has just arisen in the dramatic firmament is Scott Seaton, a clever young man who has adopted the stage as his profession but recently and has succeeded in working himself up from a talented amateur to a professional who has gained many admirers wherever the company has appeared. Surely A Midnight Bell ought to have a successful run for it is deserving of large patronage.

Grand Opera House

OF ALL THE diplomatic business strokes that have emanated from the active brain of Walter Morosco the acquiring of the Southwell opera company for permanent comic opera at the Grand was perhaps the greatest This supremely efficient organization has demonstrated in a large degree that it is worthy of the patronage of our theatre-going public and having considered it a pleasant duty to pay weekly visits to the opera house in honor of this finely equipped company, the people can but feel grateful toward Mr. Morosco for giving them a chance to hear all modern operatic works in a finished style and backed by perfect stage management. That this last venture of Mr. Morosco will be successful cannot be questioned. Julius Benedict's Lily of Killarney is being produced this week. While the music, especially the ensemble, is of the best, the action of the play is tedious and dragging In fact the plot seems only represented in its astral form. The most effective part of the play is the drowning scene, not so much because of its melodramatic character but because of the stage setting and the music. This scene is certainly one of Mr Jones' masterpieces, and he may well be proud of it. Mr. Persse develops considerable dramatic ability and a splendid dialect. Next week The Beggar Student will be given. It will be worth a good deal to hear that great chorus sing the sparkling waltzes and marches of Milloecker's dashing operetta.

Alcazar

LEWIS MORRISON essays the part of Frederick the Great with as much success as others which preceded it. Virginia Drew made her debut in this historical drama on the professional stage and it was a very creditable first appearance. Miss Drew, although portraying a character that is rather inferior, has amply demonstrated that she possesses admirable artistic facility and she will find that her rare physical charms, combined with her clear intelligence, will easily pave her a way into public favor. Frederick the Great will be withdrawn after tomorrow night to make room for a double bill consisting of a curtain-raiser by Charlotte Thompson, a capable local writer, entitled Only the Master Shall Blame, and Don Cæsar de Bazan. Morrison is said to be particularly effective in this latter play and he has devoted much time to a thorough study of the character of Don Cæsar, in which the young Salvini shone so brightly. Miss Roberts will again have an opportunity to display her brilliant versatility in the role of the gypsy. Mr. Whittlesley will have the part of King Charles II and the remainder of the capable stock company will be properly cast. Miss Thompson's curtain-raiser is derived from Kipling's L' Envoie. It is said to be of remarkable interest. The action is based upon the unjust accusation of a handsome and virtuous young lady at the eleventh hour of her marriage to a prominent and esteemed young man. She is accused of leading a life not in conformity with the reputation she enjoys, which results in the discontinuance of her engagement. Of course vindication and reconciliation finish the sketch.

RECEPTION INVITATIONS

For the engraving of invitations for weddings and receptions Messrs Cooper & Co. have unexcelled facilities. The best engravers are employed and styles which are thoroughly up to date

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Beginning next Monday. 2nd and last week.
Special Holiday Matinee Tuesday.

Charles Frohman presents
—MR. HENRY MILLER and SPECIAL COMPANY—
In a Superb Production of Anthony Hope's romantic comedy
"THE ADVENTURES OF THE LADY URSULA"

Next production, the great Empire Theatre success,
"LORD AND LADY ALGY"
For the first time in this country outside of New York City.

Grand Opera House

Morosco Amusement Co., Inc Lessees.

This week, last performances of
"THE LILY OF KILLARNEY"

Week of Monday, July 3rd, Millocker's best opera,
"THE BEGGAR STUDENT"

Our New Prices—Orchestra, 35 and 50 cts; Entire Dress Circle (Reserved). 25 cts; Entire Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

Matinee Saturday. Extra Matinee, July 4th. At the Matinee the best reserved seat in the theatre may be bought for 25 cts.; Family Circle 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

☞ Branch Box Office Emporium.

Alcazar

FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor
MARK THALL, Manager

'Phone Main 254

Week Commencing July 31. Stupendous Double Bill
"ONLY THE MASTER SHALL BLAME"
AND
"DON CAESAR DE BAZAN"

LEWIS MORRISON, FLORENCE ROBERTS and the ALCAZAR COMPANY supporting.
New Settings and Wardrobe to the period.
Our never deviating prices prevailing - 15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street between Stockton and Powell

Week Commencing Sunday, July 2nd.
HAYES & LYTTON in "A Wise Guy."
J MORIE, the Tourist Juggler.
GARDNER BROTHERS, Musical Comedians.
THE PASQUALIS in Scene from Faust.
THE FARRELLS, CRESSY & DAYNE, FOUR O'LEARY'S, MELVILLE & STETSON.

Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c
SPECIAL MATINEE TUESDAY, JULY 4th.
Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday

Battle of Manila Bay

This Grand Historical Panorama is now on exhibition . . .

Lectures every half hour by the eminent orator, PROF. W. G. ROLLINS

Admission, 50 Cents
Children, 25 Cents.

Summer Idleness

UMBOWERED in a locust's shade
Full many an hour I lie
And marvel how its golden green
Is latticed on the sky.

From some far height the sound of bells
Floats down on airy wings,
And somewhere in the maze of boughs
A bird is glad and sings.

IRENE CONNELL.

Music World

THE CLEVER YOUNG musical manager, Charles L. Young, whose energy and ambition have landed him in the front rank of his profession, has finally issued announcements for the coming season. I feel particularly interested in the work of Mr. Young, inasmuch as he has become so popular on this coast that one might well count him among local "talent." His list contains, besides artists of world-renowned reputation, young musicians making their appearance on the horizon of art. Another feature worth mentioning is the fact that the list contains mostly American talent. Because of these two revolutions Mr. Young is entitled to considerable praise. As the larger portion of these artists will visit this coast, it is of interest to publish this complete list: Sopranos, Caroline Gardener Clarke, Mrs Elizabeth Northrup, Mademoiselle Helene Noldi, Natalie Dunn; mezzo-soprano, Marguerite Hall; contraltos, Madame Rosa Linda, Lilian Carlsmith, Katherine McLeod Austin; tenors, Charles Abercrombie Charles A. Kaiser, Louis J. Mintz; baritones, Signor Alberti, Professor Zellman, George H. C. Ensworth; bassos, Geo. F. Chandler, Percy R. Stephens; pianists, Thuel Burnham, Aime Lachaume, Agnes Miles, Hilda Newman, Celia Schiller; violinists, Geraldine Morgan, Martina Johnstone, Dora Valesca Becker, Marie Storie, Ovide Musin, Rossi Gisch. Anna E. Otten; harpist, Josephine Sullivan; 'cellists, Flavie Van Dan Hende, Paul Morgan; the Morgan string quartet; the New York Ladies trio.

¶ ¶

Of particular interest to this coast is the fact that Miss Hilda Newman of Oakland is included in this list. This is good news. It is an endorsement of the assertion that encouragement is offered young, aspirant artists who may appear upon their merit without being compelled to buy themselves into public favor. I am truly glad that Miss Newman has an opportunity to assert her efficiency. She is a refined pianist of great merit and I am sure that throughout her engagement she will find numerous admirers who will be but too glad to bestow upon her that approval which she so honestly deserves.

¶ ¶

It seems that the coming season is to be particularly brilliant. The advance announcements from the various managers simply dazzle from the brilliancy of illustrious names, Ignace Paderewski heading the list and the Grau opera company immediately following. By the way speaking of the Grau company reminds me that Emil Paur has been appointed to conduct the German opera and will be here with the orchestra. This is indeed gratifying information. It is questionable whether Jean de Reszke and Marcella Sembrich will form features of the cast as the former seems to be reluctant to appear next season and the latter is reported to be about to elope to the concert stage. However there are rumors that Madame Gadski will form one of the Wagnerian stars, which should cause much rejoicing here.

¶ ¶

Among those constellations that are to be sent out here by the enterprising Victor Thrane are Petchenikoff, the famous violinist; Saville, the beautiful and well known prima donna—a former San Franciscan, by the way; Sieveking the brilliant pianist and Hamburg, who recently created quite a sensation because of his fine technical equipment as a piano virtuoso. Miss Jackson will be the lady violinist of the season and her reputation as a finished player will no doubt attract the attention of our patrons of music. So as may be seen there is ample work for the writers and it would be no harm to buy a special supply of nice soft pencils

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street. Exclusive styles in fine millinery.

Sir Henry Heyman left for Alaska last Sunday on the steamship St. Paul as the guest of Leon Sloss, president of the Alaska commercial company. He will return in August. Miss Leontine Pirrie, a talented violinist, will leave soon for Leipsic in order to complete her studies. Harry Samuels—one of Heyman's ex-pupils—who has been studying with Joachim and Cæsar Thompson with gratifying success, will arrive here within a few days on a visit to his relatives.

¶ ¶

The Pacific Grove summer school of music was opened under auspicious circumstances on June twenty-first, a large audience being present to applaud the good work of the participants. The program of the first concert was: Polonaise in C sharp minor, Chopin, and Murmuring Zephyrs, Jensen-Niemann, James Hamilton Howe; It is not Always May, Gounod, Milton L. Lawrence; Recitative and Aria (from "In a Persian Garden) Mrs. Mary Weaver McCauley; Ballade in G-Minor, Chopin, Miss Ada May Churchill; Aria, Oh Rest in the Lord (from Elijah) Mendelssohn, Mrs. Frances Moeller; Gondoliera and Tarantelle, Liszt, Mr. Howe; 'Twas April, Nevin, A Question, Lynnes, Ecstacy, Beach, Sweetheart Sigh No More, Lynnes, Mrs. Mary Weaver McCauley; Recessional (text by Kipling) Milton L. Lawrence; The Worker, Gonuod, Mrs. Moeller; Duet, The Unfortunate, Saint Saens, Mrs. McCauley, Miss Churchill.

¶ ¶

Irwin Eveleth Hassell, the gifted young piano student, will leave for New York tomorrow accompanied by his mother and two sisters. On July thirteenth they will leave for Berlin where Hassell will complete his studies. He had no idea of going abroad this year, but owing to the advice of Rosenthal and Sauer he hastened his journey. From his several public recitals it has become evident that there is a brilliant future in store for the young man if he will but continue to work zealously along the lines upon which he started. And as he is endowed with sufficient poetical sentiment and possesses in a large measure acute powers of discrimination, there can hardly be any doubt as to his fitness to become a finished artist. Perseverance is another virtue which young Hassell seems to be fortunate enough to possess and which will be of invaluable assistance to him in his future studies. His friends certainly wish him all possible success and bon voyage.

¶ ¶

Mrs. Mary Weaver McCauley has opened a class of vocal students in Santa Cruz and her efforts appear to be crowned with much success. I am really glad that Mrs. McCauley decided to benefit the Santa Cruz vocalists by her presence and

Dr. A. C. Moore

A regular graduate of the original A. T. Still American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo.

Founded the Pacific Coast School at Los Angeles three years ago . .

Chronic Diseases and Deformities Successfully Treated . . . .

Address, 204 SUTTER STREET, S F.

TELEPHONE MAIN 100

DANCING

I GUARANTEE TO TEACH

THE WALTZ

A Private Class every Monday evening for personal instruction and practice WALTZING and REVERSING Classes for latest Ball Room Dancing Tuesday and Thursday Evenings Private lessons at any hour.

Prof. Foster's School of Dancing
1358 Market St.

hope she will find it worth her while to continue her class. The Sentinel had the following to say of her recent recital: "Mrs. McCauley sang several selections in a way that charmed her listeners. She possesses a voice of rare sweetness and cultivation. Mrs. McCauley has been a member of first-class operatic and concert organizations in the east and has always received the highest praise from the critics, therefore it was no wonder that those who heard her enjoyed a rare treat. Each selection, whether a difficult ballad or a coon song, was given with that charm of manner and voice that only a finished artist can give. Mrs. McCauley has received much encouragement while here, and has the promise of a large class in vocal instruction, for lovers of music recognize the fact that she is a teacher of ability and experience."

¶ ¶

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bauer of Portland, Oregon, are paying San Francisco a visit. Mr. Bauer is a brother of Miss Emilie Frances Bauer, formerly representative of the Musical Courier on this coast and now working for the same paper in Boston. Mrs. Bauer is better known to the musical world under the name of Rose Block. She received her musical education in Vienna and possesses a magnificent, ringing soprano which she understands well how to use. The young couple were married recently in Portland where Mr. Bauer occupies a lucrative position.

¶ ¶

The engagement is announced of Miss Lily E. Cramphorn formerly of Rochester, England, and now of San Jose, and James Hamilton Howe, Mus. B., formerly of Boston, now of San Francisco. Both are staying at Pacific Grove for the summer, where Mr. Howe is directing the Pacific Grove summer school of music, and Miss Cramphorn is officiating as secretary.

¶ ¶

Miss Marion Baer, the pianist and teacher, accompanied by her mother, will leave for San Rafael this week to spend the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Xavier Rölker are spending the summer at San Rafael. Mr. Rölker is an efficient vocal instructor and owing to the duties connected with a conscientiously conducted studio, he really needs recreation. But he nevertheless continues his class here.

¶ ¶

Bertine Weill, the handsome young baritone, has returned from a camping trip to the Santa Cruz mountains. He is well loaded—with stories, of course—and seems to have escaped happily many adventures. There seems to be something fascinating in the Santa Cruz mountains, for Mr Weill will return there today to continue his vacation.

¶ ¶

One of the first concerts of next season will be that of Harry W. Brown, the baritone, who has just arrived from the east with an idea of settling here. He is now organist for one of the churches here and his efficiency seems to give general

LASH'S KIDNEY AND LIVER BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . .

Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.

Specialist in the Development of the Voice

* * *

HOME STUDIO:

RECEPTION HOURS. 12 TO 2

912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .

Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu-El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,

Studio for Voice Culture Operatic Repertoire,
Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method

Engagements accepted for Concerts
Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.

Terms Moderate

Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

MR. PERCY A. R. DOW . .

PUPIL OF { VANNINI, FLORENCE
HENSCHEL, LONDON

Special Classes
for Study of the Voice

During June, July and August

Studio: 1654 Pacific Street

RECEPTION HOURS:
2 to 3, Monday and Thursday

NEAR VAN NESS AVE.

MR. FRANCIS STUART

. . . Teacher of Singing

1615 Jackson St., near Polk

DR H. J. STEWART....

Organist of Trinity Church, and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .

has removed his
MUSIC STUDIO
to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine

Singing, Piano, Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music

E. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street

Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.

A thorough course for teaching. Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Under direction of Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck

For Voice Culture Piano and Organ

COMPLETE CONSERVATORY COURSES, including instruction in Harmony, Theory, Chorus and Sight Singing, Ensemble Playing, Languages and Physical Culture. Special Preparation for Church Choir Work (weekly rehearsals with the choir of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.) Lectures on Musical Topics

* *

Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy
Coaching for Lighter and Grand Opera by Mrs. Henri Fairweather
Send for Illustrated Catalogue giving full particulars 831 Fulton St, S. F

Reception Hours, 12 to 2 daily. Telephone West 223

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use

BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE

It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.

PRICE $3.00

At music stores or by mail. Descriptive circulars sent upon application.

HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

satisfaction. Dr. W. R. Linscott, one of Santa Cruz's foremost enthusiasts of music and much sought in social circles, was up last week attending the convention of dentists.

¶ ¶

Max Hirschfeld's new song, Because You Love Me, which I spoke of some time ago has now been published by Sherman-Clay. It is written both for soprano or tenor and alto or baritone. Unlike many modern composition it is totally devoid of all the cheapness and trashiness of so called popular music. It breathes sympathy and the music is in harmonious accord with the text. The text, too, is very poetical and no doubt assisted Mr. Hirschfeld a good deal in composing a meritorious melody to it. We have then in this song good music, melodious strains and a poetic text, three characteristics that must make this song a desirable one for all vocalists. Frank Coffin scored a great success while singing it lately.

¶ ¶

John Marquardt and his orchestra gave another Strauss evening at the Louvre last Tuesday and duplicated the artistic character of the program. There is no denying that as a concert master Mr. Marquardt has but few equals and he can manage a program more successfully than most of his colleagues.

¶ ¶

There is a rumor that Hermann Geuss the director, critic and pianist who recently arrived from Berlin will be the next conductor of the symphony concerts in this city.

¶ ¶

Fairy Flutterers, a neat composition by Louis von der Mehden Jr., is played at the Louvre by John Marquardt's able orchestra. It is a clever conceit and deserving of the greatest success.

ALFRED METZGER.

¶ ¶

Miss Ida Belle Diserens, the pianist, has gone to the Diserens' fruit ranch, in the Saratoga foot-hills of Santa Clara county, to spend her summer vacation. She was accompanied by Mrs. Frederick Diserens, Mrs. Mary L. Belding, a Poco camera, the duplicate whist rules and "Beauty" Diserens, the family cat.

¶ ¶

Miss Caroline Shindler has moved her studio from Sutter street to 341 B San Jose avenue.

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Miss Marion Bear, Concert Pianist, 927 Sutter St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, vocalist, 1109 Post street.
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist Oroville, Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

SOHMER PIANOS BYRON MAUZY
Agent 308--314 Post Street, San Francisco
Sheet Music, Books, etc. Tel. Main 5261

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd
TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral Voice Culture and the Art of Singing First-class Engagements only accepted. Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave. Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Residence, 1622 Fell Street, near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE
SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakland, Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL
SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing." Begs to announce that she has returned from Europe and resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento street. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL
POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire. 130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS
CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches. Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE
TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER
TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY
TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St. Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH
PUPILS of Madame de la Grange. Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

ANTON SCHOTT
WAGNERIAN TENOR. Vocal Instructor. Old Italian School. Studio: 2433 Buchanan St.

J. W. McKENZIE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX
PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A. Building Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30. Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL
VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue. Studio, 717 Sutter Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON
SINGING and Piano. Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK
PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 575. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH
PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory, Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M. 1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA
TEACHER OF PIANO. 2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER
TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays. 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony. 2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE
TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club. Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a. m to 1:30 p. m. Thursday excepted. Telephone Hyde 1491 825 Sutter Street, S.F.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE
PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street. Telephone Larkin 782.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano.
MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.
ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F.

H. BRETHERICK
TEACHER of Organ, Piano and Harmony. Organist of the First Unitarian Church and Beth Israel Synagogue. Residence: 2527 California St., San Francisco

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.
PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies. Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m. Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON
CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher. Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA
TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. GERTRUDE JUDD
WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN
TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.
TEACHER OF ZITHER. Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street. Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.
VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn. Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR
MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5. Will accept engagements for concerts.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

Town vs. Country

God made the country, and man made the town.
What wonder, then, that health and virtue, gifts
That can alone make sweet the bitter draught
That life holds out to all, should most abound
And least be threatened in the fields and groves?
Possess ye, therefore, ye who, borne about
In chariots and sedans, know no fatigue
But that of idleness, and taste no scenes
But such as art contrives, possess ye still
Your element; there only can ye shine,
There only minds like yours can do no harm,
Our groves were planted to console at noon
The pensive wand'rer in their shades. At eve
The moonbeam, sliding softly in between
The sleeping leaves, is all the light they wish
Birds warbling all the music. We can spare
The splendour of your lamps, they but eclipse
Our softer satellite. Your songs confound
Our more harmonious notes. The thrush departs
Scared, and th' offended nightingale is mute.

—Cowper.

The Reason Why

SOME PEOPLE SAID it was disgusting when they read in the papers that pretty Kate Little was going to be married to old Mr. Jones. They said that when a young girl weds a septuagenarian it is nothing more or less than legalized prostitution. But that is a hard term to apply to it and quite wrong in this instance.

Kate Little, at eighteen, when she graduated from the high school, was a good representative of the best type of Californian middle class girlhood. She was pretty, graceful and fairly well educated. Nobody ever considered her born to set the bay on fire, yet everybody knew she was not silly. She was not a new woman; she had no desire to have an independent career. When her teacher asked her what occupation she intended to take up when she graduated, Kate answered:

"I am not going to do anything. I shall marry as soon as I can."

You see Kate already had her man picked out. He was a nice young fellow, an insurance clerk, and they had been "keeping company"—as they called it in their set—ever since Kate was sixteen and Spencer eighteen. Every Sunday Spencer called at the Little residence, dined with the family, took a walk with Kate and did escort duty to church in the evening. They expected to be married some time—at least Kate did. I do not think Spencer ever made any definite matrimonial plans. His salary was only sixty-five dollars a month and he had never saved anything.

Old Mr. Jones was a widower of five months' standing. He owned a comfortable house in the same block as the Little home and, though he had often seen Kate walking to and from school, it had never come across him what an attractive young woman she had grown to be until, the week after her graduation, he saw her in the garden one day cutting roses.

He looked at her and thought:

"I wish I had a pretty young creature like that in my house."

As the thought passed through his mind Kate looked up. She had known old Mr. Jones by sight for a long time and, as she caught his glance, she smiled. Then she acted upon a second thought and threw him a rose. The septuagenarian was not decrepit and he had been a brave cricket player in his youth. He caught the rose and, with the air of a young gallant, raised his hat.

Then Kate ran into the house.

But old Mr. Jones said to himself, as he placed his rose in a glass of water: "I believe I'll ask that little girl to marry me."

On Sunday, Spencer came to dine as usual and after dinner Kate and he went for their usual walk. Kate felt in an unusually loving mood and she could not help thinking that Spencer was uncommonly dull. He seemed to take things so much for granted, as it were.

With the tact that women use when they wish to bring their affianced lovers to the point of setting the wedding day, Kate drew the conversation around to the subject of her graduation—and her future.

But Spencer was obstinately, stupidly dense, though unconsciously so. As a wind-up to his fate—he did not know what a blow he was dealing himself—he said:

"I'm going camping with some fellows this summer, Kitty. You'll have to miss me for two Sundays."

"Going away?"

"Yes, and we're going to have a jolly time; no girls along. Don't bother writing to me, because we intend cutting civilization even to the point of not visiting the post-office."

Old Mr. Jones did not know what a point in his favor was served by that Sunday walk. However, he came around to the Little residence the next day and, without any preliminary, preferred his suit.

Mrs. Little, to whom the proposal was made for her daughter's hand, was rather taken aback by the request. Nevertheless, weighing with maternal prudence the advantages of such a union, the suitor's age being the only drawback, she temporized by saying:

"I must ask Kitty herself."

The result we all know, for it was town talk the next day and made good writing for newspaper sensation scribblers. The engagement was announced of Miss Kate Little and Mr. Jones.

And Spencer is still wondering what was the reason.

THE HISTORIAN.

There isn't an ounce of headache in a barrel of it—Jesse Moore "A. A." Whisky.

EDUCATIONAL

Ziska Institute...

1718 Sacramento Street near Van Ness.

Thorough English Course. Foreign Languages taught rationally. Art and Music advantages the best. Prepares for American or European Colleges. . . Number of pupils limited. . . . . .

Day and Home School for Girls

Next term opens Aug. 3, 1899 MME. B. ZISKA, M A., Principa

Room for Four Boarding Pupils

L. D. VENTURA, B. E.

FORMERLY OF BOSTON

Private and Class Lessons in French

Apply by correspondence to Mt. Tamalpais Military Academy, San Rafael, Cal., or Terms Moderate

Pacific Conservatory of Music, 528 Sutter St.

Evening Classes, Monday and Thursday at 8.

at Pacific Conservatory of Music.

TRINITY SCHOOL... 3300 WASHINGTON ST SAN FRANCISCO.

(FOUNDED 1876) Boarding and Day School for Young Men and Boys

Prepares for university and college.

Accredited with the University of California and the Leland Stanford University. A faculty of eleven professors and teachers.

Boarders limited to thirty-five. Christmas term opens August 1st.

REV. DR. E. B. SPALDING, Rector.

IRVING INSTITUTE... Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies

N. E. Cor. California and Buchanan Sts., S. F.

Seminary, Conservatory of Music, Department for Children.

Carriage will call. Next Session will begin Aug. 7, 1899.

For Catalogue address the Principal,

REV. EDWARD CHURCH, A. M.

Apres l'Amour le Mort

HE KNEW it was only pastime. Lawrence knew he could not marry her. He had been engaged to another girl for five years and, after this long waiting, the day was set.

The affair was a boy and girl arrangement. There had never been any talk of rapturous adoration, or anything like that, on either side. It had simply happened in the same matter of course way that led Lawrence through school and college.

When the exigencies of his profession—he was a civil engineer—took him to Mexico he was rather glad to escape from town. Helen did not weep when he left. She was sure of having him all to herself some day; a few absences more or less, beforehand, did not matter.

And in the city of Mexico Lawrence met Tania Bell. She was quite the most fascinating feminine combination that Lawrence had ever seen. Her father was an Englishman, her mother Spanish and the mixture of blood had produced a charming woman. Tania was soft and sweet in manner at times, quiet and cold like her father's people. Then, all at once, her Spanish blood would begin to leap in her veins, her eyes would dance and her whole mood would change to the gayest of the gay. It was this double nature that made her so bewitching.

After meeting Tania at a military ball, Lawrence had followed up the chase with more vigor than he had fancied himself capable of. In fact, though he did not know it, having never really been in love before—though he had dignified many fitful bursts of passion by that name—he had fallen desperately in love with Tania Bell.

And she, with her English womanly coquetry added to the Spanish intensity of feeling, had against her will lost her heart to the young American.

Yet—

"You must not," she said, "you must not make love to me. What is only flirtation to you might become serious earnest to me. I might fall in love with you, you know."

"Well, what of that?"

"Well, what? Why, you have told me that your wedding day is set."

Lawrence had forgotten for the moment, but the words recalled to him his honor.

It was hard not to speak tenderly, lovingly and to overwhelm with kisses this girl whom he loved so wildly, so deeply, but he remembered his honor.

And a week later the conclusion of his business caused him to bid Mexico adios—and Tania.

* * * * *

Lawrence was walking along Kearny street. Tomorrow, at high noon, at St. Luke's Episcopal church, he was to be converted into a benedict.

Without rhyme or reason his thoughts reverted to Tania Bell, whom he had pushed obstinately to the bottom of memory's box and turned the key since his return to San Francisco.

But at this moment the lock flew open, Tania's image leaped into the mind's eye—and Tania in the flesh stood before him.

"My mother is dead," she said, and he saw she was gowned in black. "My father and I are on our way to London."

"And I am to be married tomorrow."

Lawrence did not mean to say that but without his volition the words leaped to his lips.

"Let us spend this day together," he said, as he walked along by her side. "Let us give ourselves up to fate; surely this meeting was planned by fate."

Tania knew the argument was specious, but it was so sweet. Besides, she was going away and Lawrence would be separated from her forever. The temptation was too seductive to be resisted.

They were as happy as children on a holiday. They went out to the park and walked about and talked. They had those old Mexican days to talk about, those old sweet days. Not once did thay talk of the future; that they tried to forget.

"It is only one day out of an eternity," extenuated Tania to herself her lapse from the strict performance of her duty. "I shall be miles and miles away and she will have him always."

Lawrence did not attempt any excuse. He did not care, but gave himself up to the pleasure of the hour.

The moments slipped by on roseate wings, and to them both it seemed as if they had just met when their car stopped in front of the Palace hotel and Lawrence walked with Tania to the door of her apartment.

He was about entering the elevator on his way back after saying good-bye, when a light step came tripping after him.

"Papa has gone out," said the girl, pinning on the hat she had just taken off. "Don't leave me alone. I do not know a single soul in this great city but yourself."

Was it fate?

It was for the last time, said Lawrence to himself. It came across his mind that he had forgotten to get his marriage license. Well, it was too late now. Tomorrow would do.

This evening he would give up to the one girl he had ever truly loved.

* * * * *

They had eaten little but had consumed a great quantity of wine. Lawrence had completely forgotten the fact that this was the eve of his wedding day. One idea only was paramount in his mind—he loved Tania Bell.

Stiff and in her most frigid English attitude, she sat opposite him, smiling occasionally with that witching smile, beaming upon him with those sweet eyes that mocked the coldness of her demeanor.

The sight of her maddened him.

He had never kissed her—but he would.

"No, no," she cried, tearing herself from his embrace, "you must not."

Then the hot Spanish blood came welling up in her heart, mingling with the English pride. It was all done so quickly that neither could have told how it occurred.

Lawrence fell back against the table, a little stream of blood trickling through the hole in his shirt-bosom and sullying its purity. Tania stood opposite him, horror in her eyes and a blood-stained hat-pin in her hand; such an innocent appearing jeweled hat-pin, in vraisemblance anything but a murderous weapon.

He put his hand over the wound to stanch the flow, but the knowledge was his that nothing was of any use.

Somehow, he did not care. Only—Helen would wait at the altar and he would not be there. Helen was so punctual—and she hated scenes.

He looked at Tania, and there was no hate in his eyes. A world of love looked from them.

"I am yours, Tania," he said, "yours in death."

It was his amende honorable.

THE MELODRAMATIST.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny Street. Elegant line of Mourning Bonnets and Veils, very latest styles.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY

12 years old
before being bottled

Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers

412 Front St., S. F.

Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

Dr. CARL DEHMEL
(formerly of Berlin)
Surgeon Chiropodist
and Masseur . . .

Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe Nails a Specialty

CONSULTATION FREE

EMPORIUM and
GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR

Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

Where Wild Roses Blow

WHERE cliffs are rugged; skies gladdest blue.
Where low-voiced waves croon the drowsy shore,
The sweetest story in Nature's love.
Where rich-robed mountains, the hazes through,
Stand guardian over the nestling bay.
Where blithesome breezes laugh lightly by.
Where home and youth's bright memories lie
I know the wild-roses are blowing today
From soft-lipped zephyrs whose amourous kiss
Is freighted with scents of more odorous flowers;
From languorous dreams in dim, tropical bowers,
I turn all a-weary, for e'en here I miss
That northern land. And wherever I roam,
Though heaven-on-earth be the spot where I stray,
'Twill only make dearer that happier day
I knew when wild flowers were blowing at home.

LEAVENWORTH MACNAB.

World of Letters

THERE SEEMS to be an unnecessary amount of feeling over Kipling's suit against the Putnams, although the only argument put forth is that Kipling enjoys a large income from his writings and so has no grievance. The Putnams have been long in the business and were both early and loud in their outcry against "piracy." They understand all the ethics of the publishing trade and would probably have been quick to resent any infringement of their own rights. Kipling certainly is justified in suppressing his Departmental Ditties if he sees fit, whether his admirers agree with him or not. The cover design of the authorized American edition—an elephant's head and the signature in facsimile—were duplicated and whether or not the printed pages were bought from an authorized publisher and rebound the Putnams had no right to add poems not included in the purchase. Moreover, that Ken of Kipling, a biographical sketch largely made up of quotations and more or less of apochryphal anecdotes, which was included in the Putnams' Brushwood edition, was neither written nor authorized by Kipling but was roundly denounced as absurd and untrue. The Putnams have tacitly admitted that they were in the wrong, at least in part, by refraining from the further use of the cover design. And Richard Le Gallienne has only pity for the deluded public who buy and read Kipling's books! Kipling, by the way, has this week brought suit against Elbert Hubbard for infringements similar to those perpetrated by the Putnams. His fellow writers should make common cause with him, for it is as much to their interests as his to have their rights definitely determined by law. Literature at best is a precarious occupation, where, besides the usual competition of a crowded field, there are all the authors since the art of writing was invented, for the death of an author not only does not put him out of the battle, but not infrequently revives a waning interest which gives rise to the issue of a new edition of his works. And now someone has discovered that Kipling merely hums to himself some Irish tune and fits the lines of his poetry to its metre. "How easily Mandelay fits into Wearing of the Green," says this new Columbus. The rest of the world might whistle O'Donnell Aboo till the cows come home and be no nearer to creating a Recessional or a White Man's Burden than they are now. Ever since Kipling loomed up on our horizon we have had pictures of him, pen in hand, in full literary costume; we know just how and when and where he writes and how much he is paid for it. But who else has followed in his footsteps—unless we accept Jack London.

Hinds and Noble of New York have issued a little book called Mistakes in Teaching, otherwise known as the Preston Papers. These papers have attracted attention all over the country and not to be familiar with them is to be behind the times. They might be termed a plea for common sense in the schoolroom and a protest against ruts and set ways. The teacher who reads this book will be animated with courage to do the things her judgment commends even if the traditions are against her, and will receive suggestions of how to adapt her methods to the child in preference to the less rational process of adapting the child to her methods. It contains valuable hints on discipline, play, rewards and other live subjects and could be read with interest and profit by parents and all others who are interested in young people. It has not a dull line from beginning to end, and even if we do not agree with all that it contains, there is nothing in it that will not give rise to thought and suggest something perhaps better.

A literary prodigy has come forward in Boston, who it is claimed has had no equal since the days of Chatterton and Keats. This is Mary Antin, a little Russian Jewess fifteen years of age, whose book, From Plotzk to Boston, is introduced by a foreword by Israel Zangwill. The child left Plotzk in Central Russia with her father four years ago and her book is a record of the impressions and recollections of her journey. If one may judge it by extracts, it is both well written and interesting. Mary Antin appears to be a remarkable child. When she arrived in Boston four years ago at eleven years of age she understood no language but Yiddish. Now she is holding her own in the first year class of the Boston Latin school. She has a decided advantage over Maurice Rosenfeld whose Songs of the Ghetto created such a stir a few months ago, in that he could write and, I understand, speak only in Yiddish.

The books which Robert Louis Stevenson presented to his mother, all first editions, were sold at auction in London a few weeks ago and brought very high prices. One would suppose that sentiment would have retained these volumes in the family for at least a decade—but no!

> Money I want, money I crave,
> And if I don't get money
> I'll hound you all to the grave.

> To be honest; to be kind; to earn a little and spend a little less; to make, upon the whole, a family happier for his presence; to renounce, when that shall be necessary, and not be imbittered; to keep a few friends but these without capitulation; above all, on the same grim condition, to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

This was Stevenson's own philosophy of life. There is nothing in it of the commercialism of his family. How long before we shall have boxes, canes, plaques etc. made from bits of the Samoan home? We should have Stevenson pen-holders and paper-weights to decorate our writing tables from the Silverado shanty and—well, one need not make suggestions. Doubtless when the literary pickings give out—if they ever do—all these will be found to have been borne in mind. The house in which Stevenson was born in Edinburgh, even that, has been sold

ALWAYS KEEP ON HAND
Pain-Killer
THERE IS NO KIND OF PAIN OR ACHE, INTERNAL OR EXTERNAL, THAT PAIN-KILLER WILL NOT RELIEVE.
LOOK OUT FOR IMITATIONS AND SUBSTITUTES. THE GENUINE BOTTLE BEARS THE NAME, PERRY DAVIS & SON.

to a Dundee solicitor for four thousand dollars, doubtless an augmented price because of its association with the name of the anthor.

It is said that Harold Frederick, who made a hobby of philately, has left a collection of postage stamps which is worth a large sum of money. This will be cheering news to those who bear in mind the fact that after his death it was discovered that all his copyrights were found to be so heavily mortgaged as to yield nothing to his family. Mrs. Frederick survived her husband but a few weeks and the doubly orphaned children, the eldest of whom was but eleven years of age, were left destitute. A fund was started sometime ago for their benefit by the literary friends of their father but I have seen no reference to it lately. The whole business of funds, collections and benefits has been so overdone that it is seldom possible any longer to obtain an appreciable sum for even the most worthy of causes. It is to be hoped that enough will be accumulated from all sources to provide some maintenance for the children until they are able at least to contribute toward their own support. They are to be sent to America to make their home in New York with their grandmother.

The business office of the Chicago board of education has adopted the spelling reform recommended by the National educational association and approved by Dr. Andrews. The accepted spelling with them now is: altho, tho, thoro, thorofare, thru, thruout, catalog, decalog, demagog, pedagog and program. On the whole, demagog seems to fit the species better than the longer form demagogue, but the pedagog has lost a foot from his stature and suffers a corresponding loss of dignity. An old rule of the board of examiners in this state used to be: "Any grammar ancient, modern or antediluvian will be accepted as authority." I wonder if the Chicago board is as liberal in regard to orthography or if they still expect their pedagogs to hold by dictionary and spelling book for their orthography?

In His Name, the novel by Charles M. Sheldon, the Kansas city clergyman to which I referred a week or two ago, is having an enormous sale in England, three million, if reports are to be credited and three other books by the same author in penny editions have reached a total of nine hundred thousand in three weeks. This, I believe, is the highest figure ever reached by any book. East Lynne which has been the best selling of any copyrighted novel, has aggregated "only" four hundred and eighty thousand. That "only" is good.

There is always some unfortunate word in our language which is working overtime and doing duty on all possible occasions. Just now "classical" appears to be a sort of Man with the Hoe. Fistic encounters and horse races have so long been described as "classical events" that the memory of man hardly runneth to the contrary. A week or so ago we had a great headline in one of the morning papers—Classical Event for Leashmen—a simple everyday, or at least every Sunday coursing match.

David Harum, which is still the best selling book of the day and which has held its own against all comers for nearly three months, was refused by two publishing firms of New York, two of Chicago, one of Boston and one of Philadelphia, before it was accepted by the Appletons. Its author, Edward Noyes Westcott, was over fifty years of age when he took up his pen as an accupation for his invalid days and did not live to see his book in print. He is said to have left but one other piece of fiction, which has been secured by the Lippincotts

---

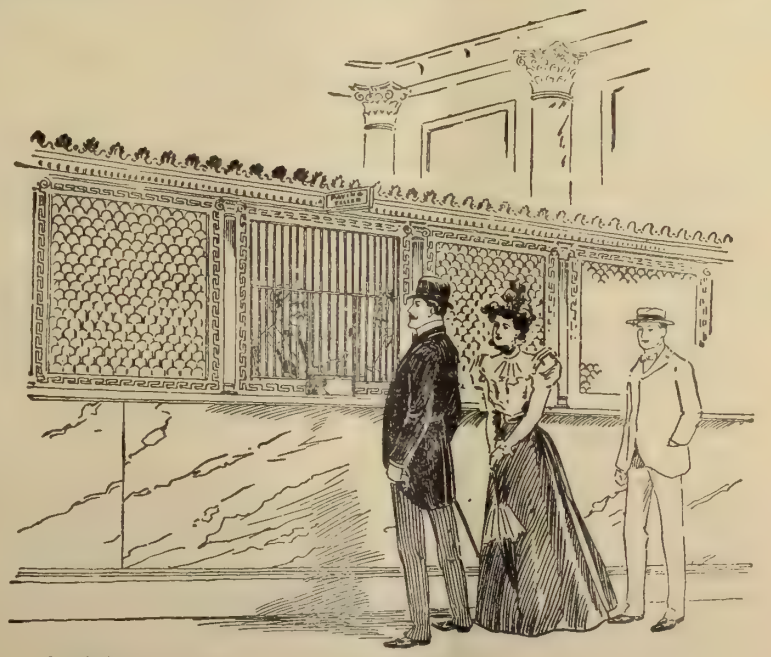
Some one paid seven hundred and fifty pounds for a first edition, uncut, of one of Sir Walter Scott's books. What possible use one could find for an uncut book is one of the "things that no fellow can find out." It would seem that the prime, whole and sole object of making a book would be to have it read and if the pages are never cut one might just as well own a block of wood, shaped and colored.

A novel which is making something of a sensation in England is entitled Unholy Matrimony, which is brought out by a canny Scot when no one else would have anything to do with it. The authority is ascribed to "John Le Breton" but is the joint work of Murray Forde, editor of Pick-me-up, and Miss Harte Potts who was once before associated with Mr. Forde in connection with a music hall journal known as The Encore.

Manx must be the finest lovers' language in the world. It is credited with having ninety-seven ways of saying my dear. Ian Maclaren says "Gaelic is the best of all languages for loving. It has fifty ways of saying darling;" but that is a long, long way behind the little Manx nation.

The Examiner has a small fame-making machine in full working order. Whether or not it will profit the young poet remains to be seen. It is only justice to Bailey Millard to state that it is not he who is turning the crank of that opinion mill.

THE BOOKWORM.



I think every man I see uses R·I·P·A·N·S.

Mr. Barry, our manager, takes one after every meal and so does his father and sister. The old gentleman has rheumatism if he don't take R·I·P·A·N·S. They use twelve a day in that house.

About half the people I know carry one of those 5-cent cartons all the time in their vest pockets.

I was in the Bowery Savings Bank to draw some money, and while I was waiting in the line a clerk came up to the paying teller and said: "Give me a Ripans!" The teller took a carton out of his pocket and handed it to the clerk, who took out one of the Tabules and handed the carton back. Then I watched him and saw him go to the water cooler and swallow the Tabule with some water; I saw him tip his head back.

It's just wonderful how everybody takes them.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents. RIPANS TABULES may also be had of grocers, general storekeepers, news agents and at liquor stores and barber shops.

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

Wm. B. Hooper, Manager — San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA

1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer, First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

Pacific Carriage Co.

OLIVER HINKLEY, SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.

STANDS

General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street

California Hotel N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny 48 Eighth Street

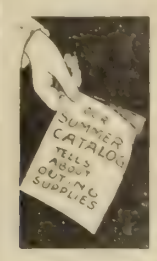
TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

— FULTON —

LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY

236 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.

Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons; Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 5610



Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST — TEL. MAIN 5522.
3253 FILLMORE ST. — TEL. WEST 152

San Francisco Sanitarium

Telephone Main 1240

MENTAL AND NERVOUS DISEASES A SPECIALTY

LOCATION, Reasonable Terms to Physicians

Former residence of Peter Donohue, Esq.
Cor. Second and Bryant and Stanley Place, SAN FRANCISCO

Mrs. Reeces Atkinson, MATRON

A. D. Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty
Open Day and Night — Telephone Main 971

Recreation Park

Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets

BASE-BALL

EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

San Jose vs. San Francisco
July 1st and 2d
July 4th Oakland vs. San Jose

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE

DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1020½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh. Office Hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND

DENTIST Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL

DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S. W. corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas."

BUSH AND SON

DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 200 Kearny St., S. F. Rooms 310-308-309 'Phone Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN

VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone 4118 San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street. Telephone 68, 1520 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

DR. H. J. STEWART

ORGANIST of Trinity Church and Synagogue Sherith Israel. Teacher of Singing, Piano, Organ and Harmony. Special preparation for vocalists desiring church appointments. 1406 Van Ness Avenue

FRANCIS STUART

TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK

HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON

MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone. Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

BYTHYNIA MINERAL WATER is a California product—stands unrivaled as a cure for constipaion, liver complaints, impure blood, and regulates the constitution. A sure cure for rheumatism, dyspepsia and diabetes.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

LOUIS CREPAUX
(Member Paris Grand Opera)

HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

PIERCE & TAYLOR

STORAGE WAREHOUSE 735 Market Street-Opposite Grant avenue. Furniture, Pianos, Trunks, Paintings, Mirrors and other goods stored in clean, light dry lofts. Charges moderate. Telephone Black 311.

DECKELMAN BROS.

RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON

COAL and WOOD; wholesale and retail dealer 628 and 630 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts., San Francisco. Telephone East 12

☞ Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LEGAL NOTICES

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE
WHY REALTY SHOULD NOT BE MORTGAGED

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE of HARRY I. THORNTON, Deceased. } Department No. 9, Probate. No. 15,715.

Upon reading and filing the verified petition of Bessie Thornton, praying that the executrix of the estate of Harry I Thornton, deceased, be authorized, empowered and directed to execute a note and to secure the payment of such note, to mortgage the real estate belonging to said estate, which is described as follows, to-wit:

All that certain tract of land situated in the County of Contra Costa, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at an ash tree 12 inches in diameter, marked S X S with two notches on the east and west sides from which a sycamore tree 20 inches in diameter bears north 9 degrees east 81 links distant; this corner is about 60 chains by a direct line down San Pablo Creek from the northeast corner of the McCoun Place; the said ash tree stands in the middle of a gulch on the west side of San Pablo Creek; thence west 147.88 chains to a stake forming the southwest corner hereof; thence north 100 chains (by true meridian) to the northwest corner hereof; thence east 65.88 chains to San Pablo Creek: at an elder tree 16 inches in diameter in the bed of the Creek; marked S X S with two notches on the south and west sides the northeast corner; thence up center of creek with its meanderings to point of beginning; containing 1000 acres of land and no more; the said tract being a portion of the Sobrante, situate in Contra Costa County and on the west side of San Pablo Creek; in the Cruizita Valley:

All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Fresno, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

According to the official plats and system of surveys of the Government of the United States; in township 13 south range 19 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, of section 34 the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter, and the south half of the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter, containing 60 acres of land, more or less, and also all water, water rights and privileges in anywise appurtenant or belonging to said land or any part thereof:

The southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 5 in township 14 south of range 19 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Lots 7 and fractional southwest quarter of southeast quarter of section 27; lot 1 and south half of northwest quarter and west half of northeast quarter of section 34, in township 12 south of range 19 east of Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, and containing 255.05 acres, more or less, as per survey:

Lot numbered 2 of northwest quarter of section 34 in township 12 south of range 19 east of Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, containing 35.71 acres of land, according to the United States Government survey:

All those pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Kings, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a point on the north or west bank of Kings River where the north line of section 1, township 17 south range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, intersects said bank; running thence due west along said north line of said section 4055 feet more or less, to the northwest corner of said section, thence due south along west line of said section 1870 feet and 5 inches, more or less, to a point on the north bank of Cole Slough, and thence along the north bank of Cole Slough and the north bank of Kings River following the meanderings thereon, to the point of beginning; the same being all of said section 1, lying north of Kings River and Cole Slough, and containing 87 acres, more or less:

Beginning at a point on the north bank of Cole Slough, where the westerly line of said section 1, township 17 south range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, intersects said bank, and running thence due north 1092 feet and 5 inches to a point; thence due west 1320 feet to a point; thence due south 582 feet to a point on the north bank of said Cole Slough; thence along the north bank of said Cole Slough following the meanderings thereof, to the point of beginning; containing 22.6 acres of land, and being a portion of the northeast quarter of section 2, township 17 south, range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian:

Those certain parcels of land situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, more particularly described as follows, to-wit:

One undivided third part of that certain lot situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the intersection of the southeasterly line of Market street with the northerly line of Seventeenth street; thence easterly along the northerly line of Seventeenth street 109 feet 8 inches; thence at right angles northerly 93 feet 9 inches to the southeasterly line of Market street; thence southwesterly along said line of Market street 144 feet 3 ½ inches to the point of beginning; being a part of Mission Block No. 115 as delineated on the official map of the City and County of San Francisco;

All that certain lot or parcel of land situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, particularly described as follows, to wit:

Commencing at a point on the east line of Castro street 180 feet south from the southerly line of Sixteenth street; thence south along the east line of Castro street 25 feet; thence at right angles east 94 feet 4½ inches; thence northeast 46 feet 2¾ inches; thence west 123 feet 7½ inches to the point of beginning:

IT IS ORDERED, that all persons interested in said Estate appear before the above-entitled Court on the 24th day of July, 1899, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., of that day, at the Court-room of said Court, Department No. 9 thereof, at the New City Hall in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California then and there to show cause, if any they can, why the said real estate or some part thereof, should not be mortgaged for the amount mentioned in said petition, to-wit: Twelve thousand six hundred and forty-three and 54-100 ($12,643.54) Dollars, or such lesser amount as to the Court shall seem meet, as is more fully set forth in said petition, reference to which is hereby made for further particulars.

Dated June 21, 1899.

J. V. COFFEY,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Section 1578 C. C. P.

Endorsed.
Filed June 21, 1899.
WM. A. DEANE, Clerk.
By V. F. NORTHROP, Deputy Clerk.

TOWN TALK prints Briefs and Transcripts

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, IN AND FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO.

In the Matter of the Estate and Guardianship of CHARLES PRETTEJOHN, sometimes known as Charles Pettejohn, an insane person.

E. MYRON WOLF, the guardian of the estate of Charles Prettejohn sometimes known as Charles Pettejohn, an insane person, having filed his petition herein praying for an order of Court directing him to sell either at public or private sale the real and personal property owned by said Charles Prettejohn for the purposes therein set forth and,

IT APPEARING to the Court from said petition that it is necessary and will be for the advantage, benefit and best interests of the said Charles Prettejohn and his estate to sell the real estate and personal property described in said petition and which said guardian prays should be sold,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED by this Court that all persons interested in said estate and the next of kin of said Charles Prettejohn appear before said Superior Court on Tuesday, the 18th day of July, 1899 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Department Number Ten (10) thereof, in the New City Hall in said City and County of San Francisco, State aforesaid, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said guardian to sell so much of the real and personal property of the said Charles Prettejohn at either private or public sale as shall be deemed necessary, expedient and beneficial.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of this order be published at least once a week for three successive weeks in TOWN TALK, a newspaper published in said City and County.

DONE IN OPEN COURT this 17th day of June, 1899.

CARROLL COOK,
Judge.

E. MYRON WOLF,
Attorney, Rooms 1015-1016 Claus Spreckels Building.

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. 2

CHRISTINA JACOBY Plaintiff vs HERMAN JACOBY Defendant } Action brought in the Superior Court City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff

The People of the State of California send Greeting to:

HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therin within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of Plaintiff since the 11th day of December A. D. 1897, and for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of defendant's willful neglect of said Plaintiff for more than one year last past; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Christina Penders, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT. } Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased,

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Joseph F. Byrne administrator of the estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said administrator at the office of his attorneys, Messrs Lent and Humphrey, Rooms 54-55 Crocker Building, San Francisco, the same being his place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOSEPH F. BYRNE
Administrator of the estate of Thomas Byrne, Deceased

Dated at San Francisco, July 1, 1899.

LENT & HUMPHREY, Attorneys for Administrator, Crocker Building, San Francisco.

Notice to Creditors

Estate of JOHN BONNER, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Geraldine Bonner, administratrix of the Estate of JOHN BONNER, deceased, to the Creditors, of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix at the office of Gordon & Young, Rooms 6, 7, 8 and 9, No. 14 Sansome street, in the City and County of San Francisco, the same being her place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

GERALDINE BONEER,
Administratrix of the estate of John Bonner, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, June 7, 1899.
GORDON & YOUNG, Attorneys for Administratrix.

LEGAL NOTICES

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

Department No. 2.

ANNA DE LAWCZYNSKI, Plaintiff, vs. THEOPHILE F. DE LAWCZYNSKI, Defendant — Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA SEND GREETING TO:

Theophile F. de Lawczynski, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful neglect of plaintiff for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of Defendant's willful desertion of said Plaintiff since the 15th day of March, 1893; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Anna Fabry, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT — Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of JOHN O'BRIEN, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, John A. Drinkhouse, administrator of the Estate of JOHN O'BRIEN deceased, to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice to the said John A. Drinkhouse, administrator as aforesaid, at his offices, No. 402 Montgomery Street, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being his place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the said City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOHN A. DRINKHOUSE,
Administrator of the estate of
John O'Brien Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, June 24, 1899.
A RUEF, Attorney for Administrator,
402 Montgomery Street

DIVIDEND NOTICES

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION, 532 California Street, corner Webb. For the half year ending with the 30th of June 1899, a dividend has been declared at the rate per annum of four (4) per cent on Term deposits and three and one third (3⅓) per cent on Ordinary deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Saturday, July 1, 1899.

LOVELL WHITE, Cashier.

THE GERMAN SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY, 526 California Street For the half year ending June 30, 1899, a dividend has been declared at the rate of four (4) per cent per annum on Term deposits and three and one-third (3⅓) per cent per annum on Ordinary deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Saturday, July 1, 1899.

GEO. TOURNY, Secretary.

MUTUAL SAVINGS BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO, 33 Post st. For the half year ending June 30, 1899, a dividend has been declared at the rate of 3 and six-tenths (3.6) per cent per annum on all deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Saturday, July 1, 1899.

GEORGE A. STORY, Cashier.

THE CONTINENTAL BUILDING AND LOAN Association of California, 222 Sansome Street, has declared for the six months ending June 30, 1899, a dividend of 6 per cent per annum on ordinary deposits, 7 per cent on one-year term deposits, 10 per cent to class "F" stock, and 14 per cent to class "A" stock. WILLIAM CORBIN, Secretary.

DIVIDEND NOTICE—Savings and Loan Society, 101 Montgomery street, corner of Sutter. The board of directors declared a dividend for the half year ending June 30, 1899, at the rate of three and eighty-four one hundredths (3.84) per cent per annum on term deposits and three and twenty hundredths (3.20) per cent per annum on ordinary deposits, free of taxes, and payable on and after Saturday, July 1, 1899. Dividends not called for are added to and bear the same rate of dividend as the principal from and after July 1, 1899. CYRUS W. CARMANY, Cashier.

DIVIDEND NOTICE—Dividend No. 94 (50 cents per share) of the Oceanic Steamship Company will be payable at the office of the company, 327 Market street, on and after Saturday, July 1, 1899.
Transfer books will close on Tuesday, June 27, 1899, at 3 o'clock p. m.

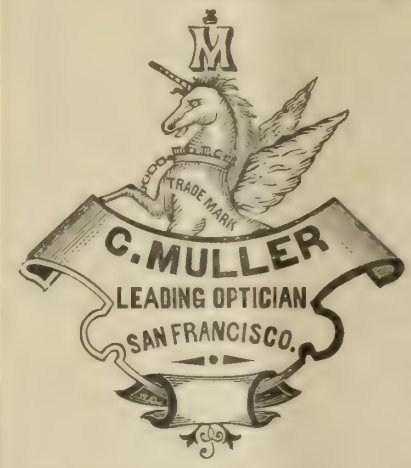
E. H. SHELDON, Secretary.

SECURITY SAVINGS BANK, 222 Montgomery street, Mills Building. For the half year ending June 30, 1899, dividends on term deposits at the rate of three and six-tenths (3 6-10) per cent per annum and on ordinary deposits at the rate of three (3) per cent per annum, free of taxes, will be payable on and after July 1, 1899. S. L. ABBOT JR., Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY, cor. Market, McAllister and Jones streets, San Francisco, June 23, 1899—At a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of this society, held this day, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one-third (3⅓) per cent per annum on all deposits for the six months ending June 30, 1899, free from all taxes, and payable on and after July 1, 1899.

ROBERT J. TOBIN, Secretary.

ESTABLISHED 1863



GOLD PEBBLE SPECTACLES
EYE GLASSES
OPERA
FIELD AND MARINE GLASSES

COMPLICATED CASES OF DEFECTIVE VISION DIAGNOSED FREE OF CHARGE

824 MARKET STREET, PHELAN BUILDING, Near Fourth.

To Chicago in 3½ Days
To New York in 4½ Days
VIA
Chicago Union Pacific
AND
Northwestern Line
Through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Buffet-Library Cars with Barber daily . . .
All Meals Served a la Carte in Dining Cars
For full information address
R. R. Ritchie, General Agent
PACIFIC COAST
No. 2 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco
PALACE HOTEL

"PIONEER LIMITED"
BETWEEN
St. Paul and Chicago

Finest and most complete train on Earth
C. L. CANFIELD, General Agent,
636 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market-street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St., Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway.
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street.

THE GREAT

SHASTA REGION

RUGGED PICTURESQUE SUBLIME

A FEW OF ITS ATTRACTIONS

SHASTA the Grandest Snow Peak in America
THE CASTLE CRAGS Scenic Marvels
Dense Forests, Alpine Lakes
A Pure Atmosphere
Dashing Mountain Streams
Comfortably Warm Days
Comfortably Cool Nights
TAVERN OF CASTLE CRAGS
Leading Mountain Hostelry of the West
Numerous Resorts
With Fine Mineral Springs
Good Hotels, Reasonable Rates

The climate is peculiarly adapted for camping, and there are many established camps affording home comforts and accommodations, bountiful board and rare opportunity for rest and recreation.

All the points of interest in this famous region are reached by the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY'S SHASTA ROUTE. Surprisingly cheap excursion rates from all parts of the State.

Folders containing full information can be obtained of

ANY SOUTHERN PACIFIC AGENT

S. A. WHITE H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W. H. PORTER
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 SAN FRANCISCO

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.
DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF
PAPER
Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty
401-403 Sansome St.
SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence

Livery and Sale Stables

423 Post Street,

W. E. BRIDGE, Proprietor
Telephone No. 1323 San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY
Office, 1004 Market Street
TELEPHONE, SOUTH—420

TELEPHONE MAIN 240
George D. Graham
MANUFACTURER OF
Printing and Lithographic INKS
Printers' Rollers and Composition
Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials
529 COMMERCIAL ST.
Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.
Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.
609 Sacramento St.,
San Francisco, Cal.

W. SCHEPPLER
DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer
. . of . .
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
Schillinger's Patent Sidewalk and Gardenwalk a specialty
Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

LEE D. CRAIG
NOTARY PUBLIC AND COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS
316 MONTGOMERY STREET,
Bet. Pine and California
San Francisco, Cal.

UNITED STATES BREWERY
311-313 FULTON STREET
CELEBRATED Steam Beer
ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS

MAISON TORTONI
S. CONSTANTIN PROPRIETOR
French Rotisserie
Private Dining Rooms, Banquet Hall. 111 O'Farrell St.

A No. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton

JAS. P. DUNNE & CO. . . .
No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL . . .
Fourth and Market Sts.
Overcoats and Valises Checked Free
TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR
THE MANHATTAN . . .
25 Geary Street, S. F.
Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5611

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world

Summer Resorts

The Resorts in this column are recognized as the leading ones in the State.

Special advantages of each place, railroad fares, modes of transportation, etc., will be furnished upon application at TOWN TALK office, 40 Ellis street, or by writing direct to resorts The Commercial Transfer Co. will call for all trunks, for summer resorts upon an order from TOWN TALK, for 25 cents for the round trip. When writing please mention TOWN TALK.

Highland Springs

THE GREAT SANITARIUM OF THE WEST

* * *

Open every day in the year. New hotel elegantly furnished. Table unsurpassed Lighted by electricity. Thousands cured by its waters. Finest swimming tank, bowling alley and dancing hall in Lake County, together with complete livery stable, gentle saddle-horses and ponies

Over Thirty Kinds of Mineral Springs

Physician in attendance; superb climate; beautiful mountain scenery; trout, deer and small game plentiful; magnificent drives; baths in variety; lawn tennis and croquet.

Reached by the shortest stage route into Lake County. Round trip fare from San Francisco, via Hopland, $8; via Calistoga, $9.

Hotel and cottage rates, $10 to $14 per week.

Take the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad to Hopland or Southern Pacific Railroad to Calistoga.

For further information, address J. CRAIG, Highland Springs, Lake County, Cal., or see L. D. CRAIG, at 316 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

Highland Springs Mineral Waters on sale at the Oakland Pioneer Soda Water Company's, Thirteenth and Webster streets, Oakland, and by Ahrens, Pein & Bullwinkle, 620 Post street, San Francisco.

BLUE LAKES HOTEL

* * *

Conducted in a quiet home-like manner. The best of tables, fine fishing and hunting. Inclosure of 25x60 feet in shallow water for women and children. Rates $10 to $12 per week in hotel or cottages according to location. Ample accommodations. Round trip good for six months, $9.50, via S.F and N. P. to Ukiah, thence by stage from Palace Hotel.

Address J WILSON, Bertha P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

LAUREL DELL . . .

* * *

Increased facilities for comfort and pleasure. New dining room, 32x170 feet, overlooking lake. Driving, boating, bathing, fishing, bowling, etc. Lighted by gas.

H. WAMBOLD, Bertha P. O , Lake Co.

DUNCAN SPRINGS . . .

HOPLAND, MENDOCINO CO.

* * *

Two miles from railroad station; 101 miles from San Francisco Unequalled soda and magnesia springs; thoroughly homelike surroundings; hard finished hotel; first-class table; charming view; two trains daily; long distance 'phone, billiards, croquet, shuffleboard, pianoforte, etc. Terms, $10 to $12 per week.

Furnished housekeeping cottages, $15 to $20 per month.
Waters bottled by W. H. Bone, 605-607 Merchant St., S.F.
Through fare, $3.80. Send for circular.

Address, O. HOWELL.

HOTEL EL PASO DE ROBLES

THE FLOWER OF CALIFORNIA RESORTS

Modern in every sense, large rooms handsomely furnished. Moderate prices. Close by are the celebrated mud baths. They are most effective in the case of rheumatism, liver and kidney troubles. They act as a strong but soothing poultice drawing out the poisons of disease and strengthening the patient.

VISIT EL PASO DE ROBLES

OTTO F. NEVER. PASO ROBLES, CAL. — CITY OFFICE. 636 MARKET ST.

...Cypress Lawn...

FRUIT FARM; PLEASANT HOME; good table; mountain water; free rides; terms reasonable.

MRS. T. H. EPLEY, Napa, Cal

Howard Springs . . .

Lake County, (Putah P. O)

* *

Hot and cold mineral springs; hot steam and plunge baths of great healing power—will cure rheumatism, nervous diseases kidney troubles, etc. Terms $10 and $12 per week. Special rates to families. Postoffice and telephone. Round trip tickets $10 at Southern Pacific office.

Address MRS. R. J. BEEBY.

Bonanza Springs . . .

Lake County, Cal.

* *

A NATURAL camping ground; five different mineral springs. We cater to campers only, and invite all who want good water pure air, fishing and hunting, to come. Hot and cold mineral baths. Cottages neatly furnished to rent from $1.50 per week. Provisions, hay, grain etc., can be purchased on the grounds. Teams meet stage at Seiglers.

Address R. F. DOCKERY, Bonanza Spgs., Putah P. O., Lake Co.

Hotel Benvenue and Cottages

LAKEPORT, CALA.

Situated on the shore of Clear Lake. Special facilities for families and children; home cooking boating bathing, billiards and shuffle board, hunting and fishing. Pavilion on the lake, containing bowling alley and large dance hall for use of guests only. Acetylene gas used.

FRANK & A. M. SCALES, Proprietors.

Parker Vineyard Summer Resort

Situated in the most pleasant spot of Cloverdale, the Eden of Sonoma County.

Natural attractions without limit, pleasant walks through canyons, fishing, hunting, etc. Plenty of fresh vegetables, fruits, butter, milk and eggs.

Large, new dining-room, shade and all comforts. Rates, $7.00 per week, children under twelve, $3.50. Free conveyance to and from all trains, when notified.

J. D. WINTER, Prop , Cloverdale. Cal.

Agua Caliente Springs Hotel,

SONOMA VALLEY

* *

Two hours from San Francisco, via Tiburon Ferry. Warm mineral swimming and tub baths Water, gas, electric bells. Rates, $10 to 12 per week, $2 per day.

Address AGUA CALIENTE SPRINGS,
Agua Caliente, Sonoma Co., Cal

SUMMER RESORTS

ANDERSON SPRINGS . . . Lake County

* * *

Natural Steam, Hot Sulphur and Iron Baths. Rates, $8 to $14 a week; telephone. Round trip, $8. Write for particulars.

J. ANDERSON, Proprietor,

Anderson Springs, Middletown P. O.

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging.

Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room, telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5.50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References, any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

GLENBROOK . . . Lake County, California

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish, If you want to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation, If you want pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an exhilarating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O. W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory

40 ELLIS ST., Rooms 1 and 2

SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00

Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

When Buying Base Ball Goods Look for Spalding's Trade-Mark

TRADE SPALDING MARK

"Standard of Quality" and take no substitute.

Handsome Catalogue Free.

A. G. SPALDING & BROS.

New York. DENVER. Chicago.

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

—PRICE, $3.00—

Saws of every description made to order. Planing and Currier Knives Lace Leather, Emery Wheels, Saw Mandrels, etc Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

TELEPHONE MAIN 400

MOISE KLINKNER CO.

RED RUBBER STAMPS, STENCILS

BOX & BURNING BRANDS

MEDALS, BADGES, CHECKS, DIES.

320 SANSOME ST. SAN FRANCISCO.

MOISE'S EASY SHINE. MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

"TOWN TALK"

Moise's

ARTISTIC RAISED LETTER

SIGNS

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO, SHELTERED FROM OCEAN WINDS AND FOGS. VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE; EASY TERMS. AMERICAN LAND AND TRUST CO., 132 MARKET STREET, S. F.

LARKSPUR

Is destined to be the metropolis of Marin County and is San Francisco's most popular suburb. It is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mount Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially, Eminent physicians pronounce it a great sanitarium.

A Great Sanitarium

Many attractions are offered—such as sea bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks snd drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations; for, Larkspur is building up more rapidly than any other town on the N. P. C. R. R. Large esidences and cottages for sale on installment payments. Do not pay rent when the same money will purchase a beautiful home. Cottages for rent; property exchanged.

AMERICAN LAND and TRUST CO.

132 MARKET STREET

SING FAT & CO.

(ESTABLISHED 1866)

Chinese AND Japanese Bazaar

CHINESE EMPEROR
TRADE MARK.

614 DUPONT STREET, next to St. Mary's Church

Beware of Firms Infringing [illegible] Name.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .

Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,

Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States

Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,

San Francisco.

A Snap

FOR BUYERS

Odds and Ends Clearance Sale

BEGINNING

Monday, June 19th

25 to 50 Per Cent Reduction

SEE PRICES IN WINDOWS

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 Market Street

Telephone, Main--1659 San Francisco

Mont Rouge Vineyard

Livermore Valley California

CHAUCHÉ & BON,

PROPRIETORS

Office and Depot, 17 First St.

Telephone Main 1514 SAN FRANCISCO.

Town Talk Prints Menus

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

PACIFIC TOWN TALK

LITERATURE · SOCIETY · MUSIC · STAGE · POLITICS

San Francisco, July 8, 1899 | Vol. 7—No. 358 | Price, 10 Cents

WATER——LIGHT

Water works and electric light plants for country clubs and residences Contracts taken for complete installations, and all work fully guaranteed. Only the best class of work solicited. No steam, heat, or danger.

HERCULES GAS ENGINE WORKS, [Inc.]

305 Market St., S. F.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teaches { Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS: 3:30 TO 4:30

You should ride a

STEARNS

Cushion Frame Bicycle

Safe Deposit Vaults

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

N. W. corner of Bush and Sansome Streets.

STORES Trunks for one dollar a month.

RENTS Safes for $5 a year, furnishing the most perfect security for valuables of all descriptions.

Office hours, 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS

AT HOME

Call and see

The Thermal Bath Cabinet

Baldwin Pharmacy

119-121 Ellis Street

BLANCHE L. BATES

Who has Returned to California, Loaded with Honors Gained in the East, and will Appear with the Frawley Company at the California.

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,162,146.40
Capital actually paid up in cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits December 31, 1898	27,289,195.73

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, January 1, 1899,	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital,	1,000,000
Reserve Fund,	205,216
Contingent Fund,	442,763

E. B. POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President

LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER ROBERT WATT THOMAS MAGEE DANIEL E. MARTIN GEORGE C. BOARDMAN W. C. B. DE FREMERY ALBERT MILLER GEO. TASHEIRA E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

DO YOU KNOW

A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT

Send for Sample Copy of the

OAKLAND TRIBUNE

and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco

Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

The S. S. Australia

Sails for Honolulu Monday, July 25, at 2 p.m.

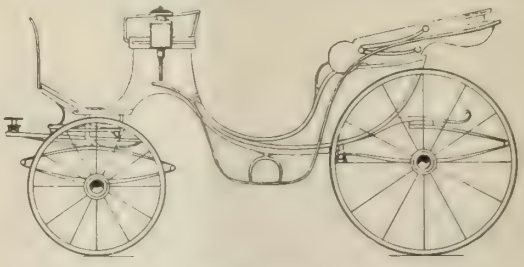
The S.S. MARIPOSA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, July 12, at 10 p.m.

Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.

FREIGHT OFFICE 327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A N Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart, H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.

You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, July 8, 1899

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

THE REVEREND MR. HAMILTON, an Episcopalian minister of Newport, has appealed to the smart set of that fashionable borough to place the stamp of aristocratic disapproval upon divorce. In a recent sermon he admitted that without the co-operation of fashionable society the church could not discourage divorce. "The people of Newport," he said, "are endowed with the power to suppress the evil. Newport has more power to check it than the combined efforts of the Christian churches from Maine to the Pacific coast." In conclusion he requested Newport society "to refuse to recognize divorce, as a favor toward the church." This is a most remarkable attitude for a minister of the gospel to assume. It is a confession of weakness of startling significance, for if we must depend upon Newport society to preserve the sanctity of the home and family then we are surely drifting upon the rocks. The fashionable set of Newport is rotten to the core. It is composed of roués and women with a past and gay matrons who have grown indifferent to the refinement of vice and to violations of the moral code. Married women who have achieved an international notoriety through their escapades are the drawing-room favorites at Newport. The hostesses at the swellest functions are women who have passed through the divorce mill and wedded the men who enticed them into infidelity. And these are the people to whom the Reverend Mr. Hamilton has directed his appeal in the interest of morality. The canon of the Episcopal church permits divorce upon only one ground—that of adultery—and the state of New York recognizes no other offense as sufficient to warrant a dissolution of the marriage tie; and both the church and state deny the privilege of remarriage to the guilty party, yet the smart set of Newport, which is composed chiefly of members of the Episcopal church, has disregarded both the law of the church and the statute. Surely the Reverend Mr. Hamilton is not serious when he appeals to those people to discourage divorce. They could undoubtedly do so if they cared to make divorce socially disreputable by placing it under the social ban but there is no likelihood of their stirring up such commotion as would result from the issuance of a fashionable edict requiring the "marble heart" and "stony-gaze" to be given to all people who have been through the divorce mill.

RECENT HAPPENINGS in the inner circles of New York swelldom have prompted the suggestion that the Episcopal marriage service be amended by omitting the word "obey," and causing the final clause to read "till death or a divorce granted by a court of competent jurisdiction doth us part." This amendment would be in keeping with the spirit of the times, and would undoubtedly meet with the approval of society people. The marriage service of all churches should be similarly amended for it is an injustice to the bride and groom to require them to swear to do something which circumstances may make repugnant. Moreover the church should not encourage prevarication. The marriage ritual is not up-to-date. It is not in harmony with the law of the land which recognizes the right of married people to change their program after they find that a change would be agreeable. The marriage ceremony is old fashioned. It was good enough for our grandparents, who were easily satisfied and of prosaic temperament, but in this age of loose morals, lax laws and accommodating ministers who stand ready to tie a new nuptial knot as soon as an old one has been severed, we need something more elastic. The service should therefore be amended, or else it should be regarded as a holy sacrament, and the spirit as well as the letter should be strictly adhered to under the laws of the church.

IF THERE IS one subject which the newspapers of the country are afraid to discuss it is religion; they are quite willing to concede that theological problems should be handled exclusively by the pulpit. Although they occasionally lampoon a sensational minister and criticise severely a preacher who makes himself ridiculous they carefully exclude all theological topics from editorial debate. The New York Sun, however, is an exception. It has lately been devoting considerable space to the subject of anti-semitism, contending that it is entirely due to the fact that the Jews insist upon making themselves a distinct class of people by intermarriage, and this topic has been followed by a discussion of the movement for Christian unity which has been started in New York. The Sun declares that the Roman Catholic church is excluded and that there can be no real Christian unity unless the majority of Christendom, which renders spiritual allegiance to the pope, is brought into it. The Sun boldly declares moreover that the Protestant sects are no longer at sword's points because there has been an obliteration of their lines of denominational distinction due to declining belief on both sides or on all sides. "If they come together," says the Sun, "it will be because they are now indifferent where once they were fired with earnest convictions." The fact is that orthodox Christianity is becoming more rare every day, for believers in scriptual inspiration are decreasing while those who regard the Bible as a fallible human production are becoming numerically stronger. There should be no difficulty in uniting the unbelievers for without the Bible as an infallible guide there should be no great or serious difference of opinion regarding the method of worship. The Bible has always been the keystone of the Protestant as well as of the Roman Catholic church but it loses its power when it is criticised as a human production, because it rests on miracles and its teachings cannot be analyzed in the light of science. If there is to be Christian unity it will be the unity of those who have ceased to regard the Bible as a divine book. There could be no other Christian unity unless it be effected for the purpose of opposing the Catholic church or the Jews and off-setting the influence which they exercise by reason of the united front which they present. But such a combination would be effected only for the purpose of religious warfare and not in the interest of humanity.

BECAUSE two political bosses have had a row San Francisco is to be denied protection from purveyors of impure food. Strange that such an effect should be produced by such a cause! Yet such is to be the consequence of Colonel Burns' violation of his political treaty with Phil Crimmins. The story current in political circles is that the two bosses agreed some time ago upon the division of patronage, and that subsequently the gentleman who manipulates state conventions and is now eager to adorn a seat in the United States Senate was caught in the act of trying to appropriate jobs that did not belong to him under the compact. This violation of political ethics aroused the indignation of the virtuous Mr. Crimmins who thereupon ordered his puppets in the board of supervisors to practice economy in the interest of the taxpayers; not general economy but just sufficient to deprive Colonel Burns' board of health from paying salaries to the colonel's minions. This is a resplendent instance of the value of the whip-hand in politics, for what doth it avail a boss to have a chattel mortgage or a health department if he cannot provide salaries for the employees?

Clara Foltz Attorney-at-Law. Offices Crocker Building, San Francisco

THE Secretary of Agriculture—one Wilson—bemoans the fate of the beef trust. Here is what he says:

> It will be a long time before the American meat packers recover from the hue and cry over the canned beef furnished the United States army. After years of unremitting efforts the packers had at last succeeded in introducing our canned meats to the European trade and there was no country where they could not be found and they were in use in most of the armies. As soon as the howl went up that these same packers had furnished rotten beef to the American armies their sales went down to nothing and now they have all their work to do over again.

And it is to be hoped that the fate of the American meat packing industry will serve as a warning to persons engaged in trade against deliberately placing deleterious foods on the markets. No person outside of McKinley's sympathetic cabinet regrets that tribulation has come to the men who poisoned American soldiers with embalmed beef. Two score of United States army officers have testified that soldiers were poisoned by the beef sold by these American meat packers. Why should anybody waste any sympathetic sobs over the losses of the men who were responsible for the poisoning of our soldiers?

TOWN TALK has been asked the question: Why are you opposed to the Committee of One Hundred? The form of the question indicates the assumption that such opposition exists, but it does not. The Committee of One Hundred is composed of public spirited citizens who have taken a deep interest in the welfare of the democratic party, and who have sought to give the city an honest government. Their efforts have not always been properly directed and they have been handicapped by the pernicious activity of certain professional job chasers who have been vouchsafed undue prominence. TOWN TALK is opposed to that element in the committee known as the "hammer-throwers." It is not a large element, but it is extremely active. It is composed of practical politicians who have identified themselves with bosses and reformers with equal earnestness. It is an element that promotes dissension. It should be relegated to the rear rank. The organization should not be required to go through another campaign burdened with the weight of the hammer-throwers.

MRS. E. D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH died last week, aged seventy-nine years. She was a most prolific writer, of whom comparatively little has been said in late years, though she still has a large following. Time was when Mrs. Southworth, Mary J. Holmes, Augusta Evans, Mrs. Henry Wood and Miss Braddon were the most popular female writers and held their own with Trollope, Dickens and Wilkie Collins, and there are few school girls in the last generation who had not managed to burn a midnight candle over "Lena Rivers," "The Hidden Hand," or "The Lost Heiress." And on the whole, in spite of the high-strung romance and melodrama, they were far healthier reading for young minds than the "Yellow Asters" and "Heavenly Twins" of the present age.

MARIN COUNTY has been enacting some new game laws, of course for the benefit of the leisure classes who shoot only for sport. The commonplace individual who goes gunning that the family dinner pot may boil to some purpose and the vulgarian who barters his bag for filthy lucre will find the laws drawn sharply against them, but the gentleman sport—the aristocrat—will have his game preserved that he may enjoy himself. More and more do we approach the English standard in this respect. The various clubs have so worked matters that none but the aristocracy may shoot ducks within a day's journey of San Francisco. Venison is an unknown luxury and small game of all kinds is beyond the reach of ordinary people. Game laws are all right and very necessary in this state, but game laws which make it a high crime for John Smith to shoot a single quail, while Clarence Columbus Kingston may "bag" a hundred are all wrong. At this rate it will soon fall out as in older countries, that to snare a rabbit will be a greater crime than to rob a bank.

THE regents of Berkeley university are having a difficult time trying to make both ends meet. It is no doubt true that like all other departments of the public service the university has been managed in an extravagant manner. It suffers from too much politics and its affairs are not improved by those regents who take too active a part in the direction of the educational system. The president should have control of the faculty and the regents should not interfere with his prerogatives. One of the causes of extravagance in educational institutions is the tendency to have all the latest fads, no matter what they cost or what they are really worth. Much of this is due to the pushing of specialists in different isms and various kinds of culture, each of whom thinks himself the great I AM and his specialty the specialty of the world and all of whom demand for their pet hobbies a comfortable place in the school system. The university has a department of pedagogy, although as the state supports nearly half a dozen normal schools such a department might be deemed a superfluity. The idea seems to be to have all you want, no matter whether it is really needed or not, the public will have to foot the bills anyhow, and if the public complains let it be———.

LITERATURE thinks we should have a holiday for the glorification of writers and writing. We have now so many days set apart for this or that special purpose that did any one attempt to observe them all he wonld be in the plight of the peasants of Southern Europe, who, a few decades ago, kept so many saints' days that they were idle oftener than they were at work. There is not a month in the year that has not its holiday, and wage-earners find themselves either debited one-sixth of their meagre weekly compensations or obliged to make up the extra day's work by putting in overtime on the remaining five. As to the form of observation, shall it be a banquet for the benefit of the Mutual Admiration Guild, "literary exercises" for the special friends of the committee, held in some stuffy hall and participated in by the elite or a procession of brass bands and bunting? A bicycle race meet would be a most fitting way to commemorate a literary holiday—or a picnic, with the usual accompaniments of beer galore and broken heads. A balloon ascension and fireworks might answer. In any event the politicians would come to the front and perhaps we should know that the president of the day would be as certain to be a candidate for mayor at the next election as it once was a foregone conclusion that the marshal of the St. Patrick's day parade would be one of the aspirants for the sheriff's office. The holiday business is overdone and employers and employees alike are in favor of ignoring instead of increasing them. Practically, instead of the dozen nominal holidays marked on our calendar in addition to Sundays, there are observed but four, Memorial Day, Fourth of July, Admission Day and Christmas.

AS USUAL one of the features of the Fourth of July parade consisted of prominent cits in carriages. Its grotesque character made it one of the most interesting features of the entire procession and if it were not for the display made by the Chinese that of the prominent cits might have been justly regarded as the very best. It must be conceded that the Chinese made the best showing from a picturesque standpoint. Their display was a novel one and it evoked the admiration of the multitude all along the line of march. But it was the novelty of the display more than the richness of the costumes worn and the picturesque character of the paraphernalia flaunted by the heathens, that made it the feature par excellence of the whole show. The prominent cits in carriages, however, were not intended by the Fourth of July committee to create a startling sensation by reason of the novelty of their appearance. They have been identified with Fourth of July parades for so many years that they have become as essential to its success as the brass bands and the grand marshal. We would all be disappointed if the procession should pass by without revealing an aggregation of our prominent cits. We should not know who our prominent cits really are if the committee failed to place them in hacks and parade them before us on the glorious Fourth. Moreover it would be an injustice to the community at large if the prominent south-side politician, and the prominent dispenser of steam beer and the prominent keeper of a hole-in-the-wall cigar store were permitted to enjoy their prominence in the solitude of their own insignificance.

SHOES MADE TO ORDER

Hand Sewed, $5.50 Repairing Done Nicely

Machine Sewed, $3.50

Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold Cheap.

Telephone Polk 18 T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

Good-Bye

WHAT SOULS about to leave their bodies bare,
Forc'd to forsake their long lov'd mansion there,
The dying anguish, the convulsive pain,
And all the racking tortures they sustain;
And, most of all, the doubt, the dreadful fear,
When thrust out hence, to go they know not where.
My soul such pangs, such sad distraction knew,
Forc'd by despairing love to part with you.
Fix'd on that face where I could ever dwell,
I sigh'd and shook, and could not say farewell.
Down my sad cheeks did tears in torrents roll,
And death's cold damp sat heavy in my soul,
My trembling eyes swam in a native flood,
As fast as they wept tears, my heart wept blood
My sinking feet seem'd rooted to their place,
And scarce could bear me to the last embrace.
Gods! where was then my soul? that parting kiss
Was both the last and dearest tale of bliss.
Ah! since that fatal time, I could not boast
Of love, of life or soul: all, all, is lost.
When the last moment that I had to stay
Call'd me, like one condemned to death, away,
Yet oft I turned, to take another view,
Oft gazed, and sighed, and murmured out, adieu!

B. & F.

The Saunterer

HOW FEW of the men who go to Del Monte or the Hotel Rafael to stay over from Saturday to Monday night possess plethoric purses. I begin to believe that a financial stringency has struck this part of the world, judging by the meagre manner in which the dollars fly this season. Seedy suits, last year's straw hats, unfashionable cuts of collars and cuffs—all are conspicuously apparent this summer in the get-up of the masculine elite who spend Sundays at the smart out-of-town hostelries. Everything, too, in the establishments of those owning suburban cottages appears to be run on an economical basis and where the host and hostess used to say to their friends, "Come and stop a week with us," they now couch their invitations in the less elaborate terms: "Come to dinner," or "Come and spend Sunday with us." What is the matter? Is it that we are growing less hospitable, or are times too hard to spend money in entertaining à la colonial days?

Another thing that is apparent even more so this year than has been noticed in former seasons is the indifference manifested by the wives of the hard-toiling merchants toward their better-halves The women who settle themselves at the fashionable hotels, surrounded by their broods of youngsters and the latter's nurses, are far from being ideal wives, in my opinion Some ugly tales have been brought to me about more than one matron who should be above suspicion and the status of the person telling the story places the gossip in the truth category. Men are few and far between on all the days of the week up to Saturday night but there are a few masculine loungers at every hotel and these manage to amuse themselves by culling sweets from every flower, as is the manner of butterflies.

The sturdy young college athletes who spend their time in the summer months at Burlingame are reviving interest in the national game. There are undergraduates of Yale, Harvard, Georgetown and other eastern colleges at Burlingame and it is their intention to organize a baseball team which will be prepared to meet all comers—professional and amateur. There is some talk of their making their appearance at Recreation park some afternoon in a game against the San Francisco team of the California league. Such a contest would undoubtedly arouse great interest. The eastern college ball-tosser is quite often as clever in the manipulation of bat and spheroid as the professional exponent of the game, and games between the National league teams and clubs representing Yale and Harvard are often played in the east in the presence of many thousands of people. Such games are regarded as great events and receive the approval of the swagger set. It is the popular impression that the athletes of Burlingame are better adapted to the playing of tiddledywinks and golf than to the more manly game of baseball and I am glad to learn that they contemplate showing that they are capable of violent exercise.

A well known attorney undertook to josh his wife the other day about the latest fashionable decree regarding the wearing of buttons in a conspicuous portion of the skirt. He declared it was an absurd as well as a vulgar fad that could have no possible excuse in reason. She thereupon requested an explanation as to why he

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco

JOHN CAFFREY Pacific Coast Representative

should wear two buttons in the rear of his cutaway coat and he had none to offer.

The latest fad is very bad
Dame Fashion, you know that you're a tease;
Close fitting skirts look nice on flirts,
But why those buttons in the rear, please?

That was an exceedingly bright notion of the Golden Gate park authorities to add to the attractions of the place cheap modes of conveyance. In Central park, New York, the "park carriages" are considered as much a part of the place as are the museum and the menagerie. You can enjoy a ride all around the park for the small sum of twenty-five cents. Ten cents a ride is all our park charges—but then Central is in New York and Golden Gate only in San Francisco.

I presume every old gentleman in town who enjoys the society of a young wife and who was fortunate enough to receive from his loving better-half last Christmas a present of several silk "nighties" will, when he reads this story, immediately scrutinize the garments to find out whether he is the individual alluded to. The story is no longer new but as it was never published I hope to be pardoned for reciting it at this late day. It leaked out because the young wife who, by the way, is a rare beauty and a favorite in society, could not keep it to herself. She told it to the young man for whom the "nighties" were intended and as he regarded it as a very good joke he has been sharing it with his friends. This young man is on very friendly terms with the young wife as must be inferred from the circumstance of her purchasing for him costly robes des nuits. Nothing could more eloquently bespeak the character of a married woman's feelings for a young man unless it be his present to her of a fancy garter. The garments never reached the young man. They were delivered at the home of the married woman a couple of days before Christmas when she was sick in bed and were received by her husband who naturally surmised that they were intended for him. He was charmed. He never noticed that the initial over the pocket was not his. He rushed off to tell his wife how delighted he was with her selection. And strange to say he has been wearing them ever since. The telltale initial has never attracted his attention. And the young wife has been a steady occupant of the anxious seat.

I can well believe that there was weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth not only across the bay but in this city when the announcement was made that Athearn Folger had passed by all the fair buds of the season—not to speak of their presumably more fascinating, through additional experience, sisters of previous seasons—and had become the accepted suitor of a widow. Mrs. Cunningham née Luning is wealthy, but that could not have cut any figure with a Folger, for Athearn's mother possesses, in common parlance, "loads of tin." By her marriage to one of the Folger boys, Mrs. Cunningham will be elevated to a higher round in the social ladder from the one she at present occupies but I do not imagine, from what I have heard of her character, that she covets the position of leader of the swim. She is fond of home life and it is that feature of her disposition, more than any other, that would naturally attract a man of Athearn Folger's stamp. His mother, so says Dame Rumor, had picked out a nice, sweet society girl for her son's wife and had intended bringing affairs to a focus this summer at San Rafael—but there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and lip.

I cannot say overmuch for the patriotism of San Franciscans, at least that portion of us that is engaged in the hatters' business. On Friday when the returning cavalry troops of volunteers were riding up from the ferry there was one of the riders minus a hat. The hot sun poured down upon his uncovered head and he was really in danger of sunstroke. It would have been an easy action and one that could not have failed to have aroused agreeable emotions in the breast of the soldier and his comrades if some hatter along the line of march had been inspired with sufficient love of country to fetch out a hat and present it to the uncovered rider with his compliments.

Upon their return from their honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Swett (Mayme Elizabeth Brown) will reside at 3014B Sacramento street and will receive their friends on second and fourth Wednesdays after August first.

"Mother may I go in the swim?"
"Yes my darling daughter:
Be sure you catch a wealthy Him
Who'll spend his dough like water."

Frank Flint has presented the trustees of the Whittier reform school with a large portrait of Governer Gage. I have no idea what the trustees intend to do with it but I presume they will hang it in a conspicuous place where it can be viewed by the inmates of the institution. It may serve as a valuable inspiration, particularly if any of the inmates have ever been engaged in the sheep-raising business. It may encourage reflection upon what can be accomplished by the transgressor if he cultivates luxuriant locks and a firm disposition. Incidentally it should be stated for the benefit of those who are interested in political gossip that the bearer of the portrait was Mr. John W. Mitchell, the southern gentleman who was an aspirant for membership in the code commission. George Denis is slated for the job that Mitchell was after but now that the latter is Portrait Bearer to his Excellency there is probably something else in sight.

I hear that Charley Fair contemplates a trip through the Yosemite valley on his automobile. He says that he can mount a forty per cent grade on his horseless carriage and that he will have no trouble in going over the roads of the Yosemite. The vehicle was in operation in Market street one afternoon recently and attracted a great deal of attention. Fair predicts that the automobile will soon be the popular vehicle all over the country. It has been in general use for some time in New York and the Prince of Wales is said to have introduced it to the smart set of London, which loves novelties.

Engraved . . . ✱
Wedding Announcements and Invitations . . . ✱
ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

There are lots of 'A. A.' brands of whisky, but only one Jesse Moore 'A A.'

When he heard of the beautiful blonde's appoaching nuptials with another man, I wonder what were the feelings of the former fiancé of Miss Alice Ames? When the lovely solo violinist of the Saturday Morning orchestra returned from studying abroad and made her début in society, almost simultaneously announcing her engagement to a young man—an Oaklander, I believe—whom she had known for years, there was little astonishment expressed by the friends of both. The marriage as arranged was considered to be en regle in every respect. Miss Ames appeared at a concert given by the orchestra of which she was one of the original members and everybody acknowledged that should she choose a public career she would be a pronounced success and without a doubt be added to the ranks of violin virtuosi now so barren of feminine stars. But Miss Ames, who has a decided will of her own, said she intended to be married. She would not have an independent career but preferred a domestic life. I understood that the wedding day was fixed even—and then, the fiancée changed her mind.

It was given out that the engagement was off because the young people had found out that they had made a mistake. Their feelings for each other was but friendly and utterly lacking in the deeper element that makes legal union possible. It was Mrs. Rushleigh in Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney's novel, "Faith Gartney's Girlhood," who remarked: "You had better go through life alone than with a wife's half-love. If you have reason to believe she feels bound by anything in the past to what the present cannot heartily ratify—release her." And it was a sentiment of this nature, I imagine, that animated the parties to this betrothal when they decided to sever their bonds. The youth joined some friends in Marin county who were enjoying a summer in bachelor fashion and his ex-fiancée went to Boston to continue her musical studies and to visit friends.

While in the city of culture Miss Ames met the man whom fate had evidently intended for her and now the announcement is made that the wedding of Miss Alice Bradford Ames, daughter of Pelham W. Ames and Thomas Hinckley Robbins of Boston will take place next Wednesday fortnight at Grace church. William Bradford Robbins, the bridegroom's brother, will be the best man and Miss Bessie Ames, the bride's sister, will be the maid of honor. Since the wedding of Miss Alice Boalt and Hugh Tevis the interior of Grace church has not presented so imposing a sight as it will on the occasion of the Ames-Robbins marriage. There will be eight bridesmaids, Misses Smedberg, Polhemus, McBean, Crosby, Wilson, Little, Preston and Shoebert and eight ushers, three of whom—Mr. Willcott, Mr. Bellows and Mr. Berby—are Boston friends of Mr. Robbins. Walter Martin, Dr. Harry Tevis, Worthington Ames, Jean Polhemus and Bryant Grimwood will be the San Franciscans in the masculine octet.

Miss Ames is not the only San Francisco girl who has chosen a husband from Boston's citizens. There was pretty Henrietta Brown, Mrs. Dr. Brown's younger daughter, who married a Boston man and went east to live. Then there is Mrs. Fred Whitwell, daughter of the William Howards of San Mateo, who now resides in Boston and is a prominent figure in the social life of the Hub. Mrs. Whitwell's mother is at present visiting her daughter at the latter's home in Beverly, Mass. The refined atmosphere of Beacon street is said to be far more attractive to these young matrons than is the fast life indulged in at the present day by the smart set of San Francisco. The follies followed by the New York swim are, I hear, decidedly repugnant to the majority of the Bostonese who, though they are not slow, are not fond of dissipation with a capital D. The principal partaker in pleasures of the New York via London order has always been Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, who vibrates between the great metropolis and Boston and introduces the fads and frivols of the former city into the quieter routine of her own home.

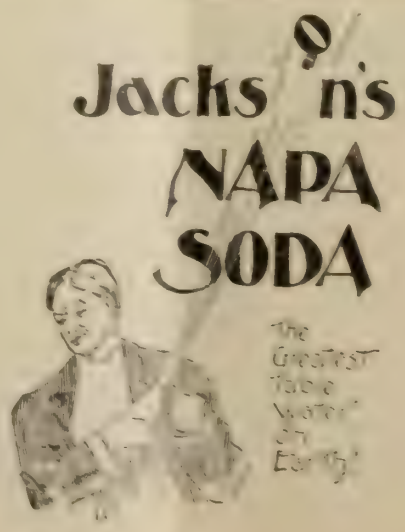
"That is what a ball-player would call an assist," remarked a blushing bud at Blingum when she saw Walter Hobart thrown over the head of his donkey last Tuesday.

"And yet," her friend remarked, "Mr. Hobart must feel 'put out.'"

William Bogen Jr. is at home from an extended European tour and has brought with him a fine collection of the latest thing in collector's fads—souvenir postal cards. They call them post-cards on the continent, as they do in Canada. Every European city that has an eye open to financial profit prints several varieties of these souvenir postal cards, each of which is adorned with a view of the show-places of the town, and every tourist is expected to add one or more of these to his collection. "Billy" Bogen did his duty in this respect at every town he visited while abroad.

Spelling reform has taken hold in earnest in France and before long the slang phrase "everything goes" will exactly describe the orthographic situation. Hereafter school children are not to be expected to take note of merely academic rules but are to be considered correct wheneyer their spelling is logical as opposed to the mere customary. I think myself that a dictionary of modern slang would be an admirable addendum to the curriculum of our public schools.

Most women at places of amusement now conform to the rule of removing their hats but occasionally one who has more selfishness than good sense makes a spectacle of herself by refusing to do so. This happened on Friday evening last at the representation of "The Barber of Seville." A lady (?) had to be requested three times by the usher to remove her headgear before she complied and seemed to be deaf, if one could judge by the indifference she displayed to the protests of those behind her. Or it is barely possible that she had just arrived from some backwoods region and was



Jacks 'n's
NAPA
SODA
The Greatest Table Water on Earth

ignorant of the custom which governs city theatre-goers. If so there is some excuse for her conduct, but there is none whatever for a woman who at this day offends from a mistaken sense of independence or from disregard for the rights of her neighbors. Such a one deserves the epithet of jay. It must be confessed that the process of removing the hat is a troublesome one. Hat-pins often stick fast and refuse to be coaxed out and carefully dressed locks become sadly disarranged. Then it is hard for a woman to reach up and preserve the balance of wrap, fan, glass and seat check, and when the hat is at last safely lifted off it is decidedly in the way on the lap. I believe a hook for suspending it on the chair in front has now been patented but I have my doubts about how it will answer. It is evident that reform will have to go one step farther and that, instead of a hat stiff and highly trimmed, ladies will learn to cover the head with something in the nature of a mantilla, lace scarf or coquettish little hood. These little pieces of vanity are always charming and invariably make a pretty woman look ten times prettier. They are worn now to dancing parties and it only wants some one to set the ball a-rolling to make them comme il faut for the theatre as well.

"Miss Swell says she will never be a good golf player."
"Is she afraid the people will call her fast?"

That marvel of industry, Leigh H. Irvine, has turned booksmith once more. There is probably no more versatile genius on the face of the earth than Leigh Irvine. I have often thought that if he had the power of concentration and were to devote himself to one occupation instead of scattering his efforts over a wide range of endeavor he would soon win recognition as a most successful man. But Irvine is an eccentric genius and like the proverbial Jack of all trades he is a master of none unless it be conceded that he is a competent newspaper reporter. When Irvine left college it was his ambition to become a lawyer. He accordingly studied law and was admitted to practice whereupon he proceeded to make a living in the newspaper business as though he were laboring under the delusion that proficiency in the law fitted him for journalism. His first important detail was the trial of a Chicago anarchist. While reporting that case he became interested in the subject of labor and wrote a philosophical work on "The Struggle for Bread," which was highly praised by economists all over the country. He afterwards came to this city and while working as a newspaper reporter he studied astronomy. He was soon a full-fledged astronomer and then he wrote a text-book on the planetary system. During the World's fair he spent considerable time in Chicago and later on he went through the country giving lectures on the exposition illustrated by stereopticon views. Subsequently he was impressed with the notion that so great was the popular craving for erotic literature that the authors of torrid stories were rapidly getting wealthy. He needed money so he wrote a novel called "The Wooden Man's Wife." It made the printers perspire when they were setting it up and almost super-induced spontaneous combustion when it was on the press. It was quickly followed by "Told in Whispers," which raised the temperature of Chicago and caused the arrest of the author. The police, I am informed, destroyed the printing plant that produced the work.

Irvine returned to San Francisco without a cent in his pocket. He plunged into the newspaper business once more and he has been pasturing in the field of journalism ever since but between details he has managed to find time to write "The Old Editor," a romance of forty thousand words which is now on the market. It is the story of a New York reporter who finds himself weary and hopeless over his prospects in life at the age of thirty-five. He is getting discouraged as he faces the prospect of growing old in the service, when he falls heir to a fortune. He afterwards meets the Old Editor, an interesting character with whom he travels to the Hawaiian islands where a number of entertaining incidents are developed. Some graphic war chapters are worked into the story and there are enough sidelights to show the abuses that abound in sensational journalism. Irvine is now at work on another novel which will soon be in the hands of the publisher.

The report of Billy Emerson's pitiful plight in Chicago caused a shock to many of the old-time friends of the popular minstrel in this city. Here was the scene of Billy Emerson's greatest triumphs. He was a favorite here for many years and San Francisco was his favorite place of residence. He made minstrelsy the popular form of entertainment in this city for years and won for it the patronage of the smart set. He made more money than any man who ever sat in a burnt-cork crescent and in the hey-day of his career he always had money to burn—and he never sighed over the ashes. His wife now occupies a palatial residence in Baker street close to the entrance to the park panhandle. She was formerly Mary Ellis, who was once noted for her beauty and vivacity. More than one club man in this city was plunged into a fit of melancholy when the handsome minstrel won the hand and fortune of the dashing beauty. Although the Emersons have been separated for some years I do not believe they ever had any domestic trouble. I have been told that the latch-string of the Baker street residence is always within reach of Emerson when he is in town.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY

12 years old
before being bottled

Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers

412 Front St., S. F.

Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

Dr. CARL DEHMEL
(formerly of Berlin)
Surgeon Chiropodist
and Masseur . . .
Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe Nails a Specialty
CONSULTATION FREE

EMPORIUM and
GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR
Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

With all the newspaper talk about bicycling being a bygone fad and no longer indulged in by the social push, wheels continue to be sold and I have noticed no decrease in the number of riders in the park or on Alameda or Berkeley roads. In the eastern cities, I am told by my correspondents, cycling is more indulged in than ever. In Indianapolis, where you have to pay a license if you own a wheel, over twenty thousand licenses were issued this year. One of the most enthusiastic cyclists in the United States, I believe, is Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt Jr. She owns several makes of wheels and finds much enjoyment in biking. Birdie, by the way, will probably come out to the coast this summer with her sister. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Oelrichs will spend some weeks at Del Monte and those who remember the fine sports inaugurated by the former during his sojourn at Monterey last summer are rejoicing that he will spend another season there.

"How are you getting on with your bike, Miss Agile?"
"Oh, I find getting on much harder than getting off."

The professional gambler thrives in the most exclusive clubs in San Francisco as well as in those resorts in which the players are required to feed the "kitty." It may surprise you to know that this is the case. The professional gambler of the club is usually a man of leisure who is supposed to enjoy an income. He pretends to gamble for amusement only, but somehow he invariably gets the money. Visitors to the clubs are quite often his prey but of course they never suspect that they have been fleeced. If you are a member of any one of the leading clubs you will probably not find it difficult to recall the names of certain individuals who can generally be found at the card table and the source of whose income is in a measure enveloped in mystery. Certain army officers who recently spent much of their time in local clubdom were victims of professional gamblers and the losses of one man, I am told, almost developed a scandal.

The genteel gambler is not less averse to practicing a little judicious fraud than the professional short-card manipulator who makes no effort to deceive people as to his vocation. One of the most adept at that sort of thing was a member of a distinguished family in Canada who came to this city some years ago. He had the entrée to the Pacific-Union and the Bohemian clubs and being a man of excellent breeding and charming manners his companionship was much sought after. He never appeared anxious to engage in a game of cards but an invitation to do so was always accepted and he never lost. He seemed particularly fond of whist and whenever he dealt it so happened that his partner invariably received all the best trumps. A certain gentleman who happened to be his partner on more than one occasion had his suspicions aroused by the coincidence and one night he abruptly quitted the game. But the gambler was never exposed until he went east where, by the way, he was introduced to many people by Tom Williams, who met him in this city and who believed him to be a man of honor.

One of our clever young attorneys is ready at any time to asseverate that a mother-in-law is the sweetest thing on earth. I verily believe that Clay Greene had in mind the fair relative of the attorney—who is like himself a Bohemian club member—when he wrote "His Japanese Wife," in which a lovely belle mère was the chief character. The attorney is not on good terms with his father-in-law, who is also a star of the legal profession, but he dotes on his mother-in-law. The latter is a very generous woman and I hear that she not only helps out her son-in-law on the rent of his residence but she also furnished the home of her daughter with luxurious lavishness. She has now gone out of town for the summer but it was a matter of delight to the young attorney and his wife that la mère should choose the same place for her outing that they had picked out for their own summer sojourn. They have a little girl and its grandmother is uncommonly fond of the child.

The guests at Mira Monte are now wondering whether it was all a joke or whether Miss Whitney and young Jim Bride really were married the other day. The whole affair was so realistic that many of the gossips are inclined to believe that there was a mutual assumption of the marital rights and duties in strict accordance with law. It had its origin in the jocular suggestion of a friend that as they were inseparable and appeared to be badly smitten the proper thing to do was to get married.

"If you haven't any money I'll lend you the price of the marriage license," he said.

The proposition was promptly accepted by Bride who remarked that he was quite willing. Miss Whitney declared that she was, too. As I heard the story, they accepted the money and went straight to the courthouse. They were seen going in and coming out and as they emerged from the building they betrayed all the signs that suggest the bridal couple; the bride was blushing and of coy demeanor and the bridegroom looked as if he had robbed a hen-roost. They told all their friends who questioned them on the subject that they were married, so it was decided to give them a fitting reception at the hotel. A wedding cake was hastily made and a table laden with flowers was reserved for them in the dining room. As the bride and bridegroom appeared at the door the old familiar wedding march was played and then it was decided that all the men present should kiss the bride and that the ladies should do the Hobson act with Mr. Bride. The wedding function bore all the ear-marks of the real thing and it proved a very enjoyable affair. The honeymoon is being spent at Mira Monte but to what extent the realism of the affair has been carried nobody is prepared to testify. Mr. Bride is a student at Berkeley and Mrs. Bride—if such she really is—is a bookkeeper for the telephone company.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, has a beautiful new line of summer dress hats.

Dr. A. C. Moore

A regular graduate of the original A. T. Still American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo.

Founded the Pacific Coast School at Los Angeles three years ago . .

Chronic Diseases and Deformities Successfully Treated . . . .

Address, 204 SUTTER STREET, S. F.

TELEPHONE MAIN 100

The Laxative Liver Lozenge

PLEASANT PURGATIVE PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable.

PRICE 25 CENTS

CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, . 139 Powell St

W. W. STOCKER.

Bakersfield, writes my correspondent, is not entirely made up of the residents of British birth who have been described as the chief element of the smart set. There are a great many bright, modern Americans here, and it is these who are the real backbone of the place. Most of these own beautiful homes, artistic in architecture and elegant in furnishings. The Dinkelspiel brothers, Emil and Louis, both own handsome homes and entertain hospitably. Mr. Alexander of Alexander & Weil has a most luxurious residence and H. H. Fish and his brother, O. D. Fish, are the possessors of lovely homes. All these are numbered among Bakersfield's "best people." Also under this classification come the Condicts. Mrs. Hollis, who was a Condict before her marriage, was a former pupil of Madame Rosewald; she has a fine voice and is soprano of the Congregational church. Mack, the banker, is one of the wealthiest residents; he has a beautiful home and an interesting family. The McMurdos are charming people and are counted among our aristocracy. Mrs. McMurdo is a native of Baltimore and possesses the delightful characteristics of the Marylanders. Mrs. Eliza Hayden and her daughter, Miss Alice Hayden, are very popular. One of the leaders in the cultured set is Mrs. Tom Young, who is gifted in many ways and is an exceptionally fine pianist.

The musical set, by the way, is in Bakersfield no especial clique but is divided much as it is in other small centres. One of the most brilliant representatives of the musical part of the community is Miss Ella Healy, who is not only a clever pianist but an uncommonly beautiful young woman as well; quite the prettiest girl here, I should say. Miss Thomas is another lovely young woman, whose musical education was obtained in New York. There are not many men here of musical inclinations. Decidedly the kingpin in this branch of culture is a young English rancher, Walter Manchester, who occasionally graces a program of the Woman's club, diversifying its succession of numbers by feminine talent with solos on his violin. He plays well and it is his intention, I understand, to go to San Francisco during the coming autumn to continue his studies there with a well known teacher of violin. Mr. Wright, the leading jeweler of this part of the world and a native of Queen Victoria's realm, has a brother who plays the violin. The former sings in the Episcopal church; he is a bachelor and consequently a matrimonial catch. Benjamin McDougall of McDougall brothers has many friends in San Francisco, where he formerly resided. He is an architect by profession and a social favorite. Another prominent Bakersfieldan and ex-San Franciscan is C. E. Arnold, the lawyer. He was recently married, his wife having been a widow.

But the beau par excellence of society in this section of California is Mr. Pope of the Kern County Land company. He is so much in demand at functions that his presence has to be requested several weeks in advance. I hear that his engagement calendars are crossed and recrossed and sometimes he has difficulty in figuring out which is which. Every young woman making her advent into the swim of the town is told that she must meet Mr. Pope and until that honor has been attained she does not feel fully initiated into the social fraternity.

LASH'S KIDNEY AND LIVER BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

The president of the Woman's club is Mrs. Stevens, a most advanced woman in her ideas and with very clear views on parliamentary rules and their application. Mrs. Stevens has lately been appointed president of the San Joaquin Valley convention of women's clubs.

Quite a budget of gossip comes to me from Russian river, which appears to be a popular outing-place this year. The little hotel at the station which takes it name from the river is by no means swell but it has considerable of swaggerdom among its guests. I understand that club circles are laughing at the predicament three women found themselves in last week. When in town they reside at the California hotel and one of them is a Honolulu lady with a presumably long bank account. They came up to the Russian river inn expecting to find not only all the comforts of home but all the luxuries of a metropolitan hostelry. And they were bitterly disappointed, of course. A combined kick came from the trio and they immediately decided that Russian river was not good enough for them; they would move along to Camp Meeker. About nine o'clock in the evening a disconsolate bevy of females, attended by a farm-hand carrying a load of hand-baggage, was seen approaching the Russian river inn. It was the California hotel trio returning from Camp Meeker. They had found their expectations unrealized in regard to luxuries at the latter hotel, only straw beds being forthcoming and a table but sparsely supplied with the dainties of the season. Therefore they decided to return to Russian river. It was a long walk, up and down hill and over high trestles, but they managed the nine miles or so though I am told their shoes were in a sorry condition when they arrived at the inn by the riverside. Bread and milk was all they asked for supper and "any old

Dr. Pierre Bernard — Hamati's Pupil
SECOND SUPREME INSTRUCTOR of the TANTRIK ORDER IN AMERICA . . .
HYPNOTISM as it applies to Medicine, Surgery and Business.
INSTRUCTIONS
Treatments—All diseases of the mind and nervous system....
Hotel Marechal Niel
404 Ellis Street

Utica Cleansing Compound AND Utica Compound Paste.....
TRADE MARK TIACU
First Prize Royal Agricultural Society, 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.
This compound is made of pure and unadulterated drugs
Used for Baths and Shampoo it will make the skin soft and white.
For Swollen and Painful Feet it is unrivaled.
For Poison Oak and Prickly Heat it is a sure remedy.
Suitable for cleansing anything.
SAMUEL SEYMOUR,
21 SPEAR ST., S. F. — Pacific Coast Agent.

The Best Dressed Men Are Club Members
Club Members patronize
S. DAMNER,
Merchant Tailor
Because he makes clothes fit;
gives you the best of material
and workmanship . . .
206 O'Farrell St.
AT BEDROCK PRICES.

place" to sleep. And the liberal Honolulan recompensed with a dollar the man who had carried the trio's luggage, which coin of the realm he will doubtless keep as a souvenir of the trip.

There was no more grumbling at the inn fare from the three women but I heard another good story about them, at least about one of the party. It sounds fishy but is really true. One evening last week the hotel porter was moving a stove from one kitchen to another. The California hotel trio sat upon the veranda and watched him. Finally Tom came out with a stove-pipe. One of the ladies, who has always displayed disdainful ignorance regarding household matters, stared inquiringly at the porter.

"What is that?" she asked, indicating the stove-pipe.

The porter explained.

"Really," said the lady, "and do you move your chimneys every night?"

At the same hostelry is staying the young widow of a naval officer who was killed in Samoa. Though she belongs to one of our wealthiest families they never seek the haunts of the swim in the summer season but always hie themselves to unfashionable hotels. Nevertheless, in spite of this idiosyncrasy they never fail to pack their trunks with smart toilets. At the Russian river resort, for instance, they electrify the other guests at the hotel by their beautiful costumes. They go in for short skirts which exhibit their shapely ankles and as they invariably wear silk stockings and low shoes of French make the effect is naturally enticing—a pity there are so few men enjoying outings this year!

J. G. Severance, the lawyer, goes in for fishing on the Russian and seems to enjoy his vacation. Otto Braunsdorf and his dog, a valuable spaniel, attract much attention. Dicky-boy, as the dog is called, is dearly beloved by his master, who has willed the clever beast three thousand dollars; at least that amount is to be expended on Dicky-boy's welfare if Mr. Braunsdorf passes away first. The dog's owner is an employe of the Western Sugar Refinery. He says Dickey-boy cost him thirty-five dollars the first month after he became the canine's master, his surgery and medicine bills figuring up that amount. Mr. Gump, a son of the picture dealer, was at Russian river last week. When asked if he had brought his kodak with him he almost shed tears. And thereby hangs a tale. Some time ago there was no more enthusiastic amateur camera artist in California than young Gump. He kodaked all his friends and finally persuaded the young woman to whom he was engaged to sit for her photograph. She was very willing to pose and got herself up charmingly for the occasion. Unfortunately just as Mr. Gump got ready to press the button, his fiancée opened her mouth to speak. When the negative was developed, the only feature noticeable was a pair of wide-open lips. The young woman was so angry, I hear, that she never spoke to young Gump again. He has never taken a snap shot since—and says he never intends to.

Two drummers who spent their holiday at Russian river failed to make a hit among the fair feminines at the hotel but that did not feaze them. They enjoyed themselves in their own way and though they did not succeed in getting any of the girls to accept their invitations to "enjoy a chat in the moonlight" they consoled themselves with a convivial supper en duo and minus feminine company. When the stage arrived to bear them away from the inn, I hear that they had to be assisted thereon.

The appointment of Adjutant-General Seaman was one of those surprises for which the wiseacres of the governor's inner circle can in no way account. I believe that nobody was more surprised over the appointment than was Major McLaughlin who is popularly supposed to enjoy the confidence of our eccentric executive. Some time ago when the adjutant-generalship was under discussion Governor Gage spoke of General Seaman in a way that warranted the inference that if the Los Angelan was the only man on earth capable of performing the duties of the office the state would have to worry along without an adjutant-general. There is a story told of the way in which Seaman managed to change the governor's views. It is said that one day he (Seaman) was severely roasted by the Los Angeles Times, the paper that scored Gage during the campaign. Seaman called the governor's attention to the roast whereupon the latter decided to make the appointment. He is a firm man, that governor of ours.

The display of Ribbons, Laces, Fine Silks, Mourning Goods, Gloves, Ladies' Tailor Made Suits, Ladies' Underwear and Boys and Children's clothing in the windows of J. J. O'Brien & Co. is most attractive and indicates enterprise and good taste upon the part of the management of the establishment. An elegant line of Ladies' Real Ostrich Boas is at present one of the attractions. The style and quality of these goods is particularly noticeable, as is also a splendid display of ribbons.

FOR A PRETTY EFFECT IN STATIONERY nothing is so chaste as the Fleur-de-Lis Linen when stamped with monogram in silver. Messrs. Cooper & Co. have superior facilities in this line, and show a number of new ideas.

A great many people are appreciative of the low prices that LEDERER makes on . .

Switches, Combs and . .
Hair Ornaments in general.

Hairdressing only 25 cents.

123 Stockton St., S. F.

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

Mechanics' Pavilion
* *
JULY 15 TO 22

The only convention of Cake Walkers ever held

—THE INTERNATIONAL—

CAKE WALK CARNIVAL

Benefit The CALIFORNIA SOLDIER BOYS' FUND

Committee of Fund Management:—HON. C. L. PATTON, Chairman, HON. TIREY L. FORD, HON. J. A. FILCHER, Sec., COL. E. A. DENICKE, GEN. R. H. WARFIELD, GEN. A. W. BARRETT.

Greatest Amusement Event of the Year.
Eight Big Championship Cake Walks Each Night

ONE DOLLAR (SIX ADMISSION) TICKET
On sale at all stores until July 15th; after that date admission is 25 cents.
Four Matinees. Bennett's Band. 3000 Free Seats. 48 Private Boxes.

A delightful hot drink may be made with the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky and the usual hot water, sugar and a little lemon skin.

Heaven and Hell

IF WITHIN those pearly portals where the just made perfect sing
Endless songs and hallelujahs in the presence of the King;

Where the Church Triumphant triumphs over all the things of earth,
Where they know the full fruition of their mystic second birth;

Born of water and the spirit into glory, into light,
Sunshine ever, darkness never, clothed in robes of spotless white;

Where through all the courts of heaven ring hosannas to the Lamb,
Where they glorify the Father, He, the One, the great I AM.

If, ye beatific spirits ever circling 'round the throne,
Ye are happy, still remain so, earth hath pleasures of her own.

Flesh and blood cannot inherit those eternal halls of light,
Though at times the baffled spirit tries to reach them in its flight;

Far above the clouds it rises on some heaven-storming strain,
But the weight of clay it carries drags it down to earth again;

Or, perhaps, when hearts are beating, and when tender lips are pressed
To our own in love's rare moments, then caressing and caressed,

Little care we for the raptures that the Sons of God may know,
Earth hath daughters still as fair as when they knew them long ago.

Where the gnawing worm ne'er dieth, and the cry of torture rolls,
Where the smoke through hell's hot hatches riseth up from burning souls,

Where old Dives, in his torment, heavenward rolls his pleading eyes,
Clutching with his shriveled fingers at the deaf and distant skies,

Sees the cool and crystal river, where the lazy Lazarus laves
His polluted limbs, and mocks him in his anguish as he raves,

Begging for one drop of water, but one drop to cool his tongue,
Though from off the leper's finger even that one drop were flung.

Where forever dwell the millions who preferred the primrose way,
Where they reap hell's hottest whirlwind and the price of evil pay;

If, my brothers in the brimstone, recollections with ye dwell
Of your earthly days, remember earth itself can turn to hell.

Go and ask that ghastly sleeper stretched upon the public slab,
When he sought the quick quietus, whether swift self given stab,

Boring bullet, gas, or poison, hell itself, he did not crave,
As his haunted, hunted spirit glared across the Stygian wave.

Go and conjure back the breath to its abandoned home of clay,
Then bend over his pale lips and listen well to what they say.

"Bankrupt purse, and tortured body, broken heart and burning brain
Fed upon me while I lived as vultures feed upon the slain,

And with hungry beak and talon did they at this carcass tear,
Till they fled their breathing banquet when the pistol shot rang clear.

Youth and health and wealth and station, all the world could give was mine,
Though the dregs were black and bitter, yet the draught was half divine.

Once I thought the light of heaven shone within a woman's eyes,
But the grail I loved and followed was the worm that never dies;

All unconscious of disaster did I clasp unto my heart,
One whose Judas lips did ever with betraying kisses part;

One whose harlot-hearted homage covered all her crafty ways,
Till hell's torturing torch was kindled, and on earth began to blaze;

In its lurid light I saw her, and by righteous vengeance swayed,
First I thought to slay the slayer of the life she had betrayed,

But a coward kindness showing, let her as the wronged appear,
Till her perjured plea "desertion" caught a judge's willing ear;

Then the court-created strumpet, licensed with her false decree,
Took my child, and took my name, and left me blasted, wrecked and free.

Tongues that had to me been silent, then the galling story told,
How when honored and beloved, and trusted in the days of old,

Had her stealthy footsteps wandered from me at the very first,
How her red adulterous lips had always known the guilty thirst;

Maddened with the revelation, quick a bullet crushed its way
Through my frenzied brain, and left me as you find me here today."

Go and give him comfort, Dives, thou art not alone accurst,
Thou but cravest drops of water, he, methinks, a hotter thirst;

Ask him as the flaming torments 'round about ye leap and blaze,
Whether hell's most cruel tortures equal his last earthly days.

LOUIS A. ROBERTSON.

Dramatic World

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "The Adventures of the Lady Ursula"—second week—continued success.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "The Beggar Student"—admirable at every point.

ALCAZAR. "Don Cæsar de Bazan"—a remarkably fine exposition of the drama.

CALIFORNIA. "A Midnight Bell"—clever and amusing.

TIVOLI. "Shamus O'Brien"—Denis is the star.

ALHAMBRA. Grand Opera—poor houses but good show.

ORPHEUM. Vaudeville—Specialties galore and all good.

PANORAMA BUILDING. "Battle of Manila"—Realistic and worth seeing.

THE FACT THAT Miss Charlotte Thompson's one act play, Only the Master Shall Blame, was presented as a curtain-raiser might create a prejudice against it by those who listen to a performance profoundly. Somehow curtain-raisers are like a preface to a book—superfluous—and seem merely introduced to fill up a certain time or space. Usually the author crams a good many words into a comparatively scanty action and instead of being a story enacted upon the boards it becomes a series of dialogues and monologues that contain at times some very clever things but deal largely with anything but the actual plot. The result is that we are impressed as if listening to a well spoken recitation and not to a dramatic performance. Really good curtain-raisers are indeed a rarety. Miss Thompson's play bears a serious title and is based upon the idea of a serious master, hence it must be considered seriously, its pretensions being extensive. The one feature that strikes you when following this play is the graceful shape of its lines. Miss Thompson is evidently thoroughly familiar with the beauty of the English language, possesses fair discrimination regarding the daintiness of appropriate modulation and is a connoisseur in juggling well-poised conversation. She also seems to know how to clothe intellectual beauty in proper word-apparel and never falls into the error of providing a skeleton of indifference with the sham array of unmeaning phrases. In fact the language of Miss Thompson's play is too luxurious for a curtain-raiser. Next to the refined expression one notices that the play consists of three dialogues. The first one between Fred Belmont and Dulce Venable does not contain anything of particular moment and would not be missed if omitted. The second takes place between Richard Leary and John Venable and discloses some cleverly thought-out epigrams some of which sound strangely familiar to one who has read a good deal The third dialogue—which is presented in two parts—is the one between Richard Leary and Margaret Neil. This last exchange of thoughts is practically the whole play. One discovers there the plot, for Richard Leary figures as the accuser while Margaret Neil defends her honor. As a matter of fact there are but three characters to the real action of the story, namely, Richard Leary the accuser, Margaret Neil the accused, and John Venable the supposedly deceived lover. The other four characters are foreign to the play and are mere figure heads to fill out time, no doubt. However, one cannot deny Miss Thompson the gift of penetration which inspired her to make the heroine of her story an actress. Does she perhaps desire to defend the much-abused profession? If so it is a noble purpose. But unfortunately she cannot serve the purpose with Margaret Neil, for there is not sufficient stress laid upon the fact that Miss Neil is an actress. Only once or twice the auditor may infer through the conversation that this is the case and throughout the eloquent recital Miss Neil never emphasizes her profession. Perhaps Miss Thompson did not intend to create her character as an evidence of defense for the theatrical profession. From a purely literary standpoint the play is a complete success; dramatically however, it lacks action—the very foundation of a good play. In conclusion it will not be amiss to refer to Miss Thompson's article in Wednesday's Call. It is indelicate of an author to thrust herself upon the readers by debating upon her own effort. Especially repulsive is the idea of meting out praise to the players and mentioning how they pleased the author in their respective roles There is but one conclusion to be drawn from such an article and that is that its author must entertain a deep respect and high opinion of the value of her own work. If this be so why we poor fellows have nothing to say, even if we are told that our advice is "much appreciated." A. M.

Alcazar DON CÆSAR DE BAZAN, preceded by Charlotte Thompson's curtain-raiser Only the Master Shall Blame, seems to have pleased the public for those present have not been stingy in bestowing their applause upon the performances. Both plays are well rendered and Miss Roberts should not be denied the credit for exhibiting a versatility that is truly admirable. There is such a deep chasm between a Margaret Neil and a Maritana that it requires remarkable histrionic accomplishments to interpret them both correctly, even when called upon to portray them during long intervals. But to present these two characters on one evening is exceedingly difficult and such a task taxes the player's ability to the utmost. Miss Roberts presents both characters exceedingly well and thereby shows the extent of her artistic facility. Lewis Morrison as Don Cæsar duplicates his former successes. Tomorrow evening will be the last performance of the above-mentioned plays and Camille will be presented next week by special request. Florence Roberts, who played the title role so effectively last year, will again interpret this important emotional role. Armand Duval will be impersonated by White Whittlesey, the Alcazar's new leading man. His fine physique and handsome features should add strength to his declamation. New settings and costumes have been provided for this occasion. Romeo and Juliet will follow Camille. The Alcazar is deserving of the patronage of local theatre-goers, because it never fails to encourage home talent. A young man or woman who has reason to believe that his or her work is worthy of recognition need not hesitate to apply to the Alcazar management, for there the play will undergo an unprejudiced examination and if there is any artistic value in it, it will be sure to be brought out.

PEARL LANDERS
The Versatile Soubrette Who Plays Dot in A Midnight Bell

Just the thing to take camping, a bottle of Chapin and Gore's old Reserve Bourbon.

Mrs S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, very latest styles in dressy outing and sailor hats.

California WITH LEWIS MORRISON at the Alcazar and Henry Miller at the Columbia, L. R. Stockwell had to fight against heavy odds at the California and yet the fact that the audiences assumed fair proportions during this week must convince Mr. Stockwell that he has not yet lost popularity in San Francisco. Mr. Stockwell is one of those comedians who are at their best when they are themselves on the stage. This able artist will pardon the statement that his face assists him a good deal in essaying a role and in this instance it may safely be asserted that "his face is his fortune" or rather part of his fortune. Another advantage of Mr. Stockwell is his ability to deport himself on the stage in the same manner as in the street or at home. And a joke said in a natural, unaffected manner is always effective. There are but three members of Mr. Stockwell s company barring himself who can be considered from an artistic standpoint. Pearl Landers displays a considerable amount of versatility as Dot Bradbury. In repartee she manifests an appreciation of quick wit, ready return of speech, and discriminates correctly as to proper emphasis. Miss Landers is very, very clever in deportment and acts freely, without restraint and without affectation. She is pretty and knows how to enhance her beauty on the stage yet does not fall into the frequent error of thrusting her good looks upon the spectators. Gus Tate is very droll as Martin Tripp. He is the essence of a mischievous young fellow who is not overburdened with knowledge but who is gifted with a considerable amount of strategy and healthy wit. Scott Seaton seems to have solved the problem of the character of a clergyman. He is dignified, does not permit passion to rule over outward appearances and carries himself in a graceful, unpretentious manner. It is the best portrayal of this character the writer has seen. Nevada Heffron is absolutely unfit to essay the part of Nora. She is by far too brusque and does not seem to understand that Nora is gentle. Her mimicry, too, is faulty; she never relaxes her stern features and when she does smile it is much too forced. Miss Heffron may be all right in heavy roles—as an adventuress for instance—but as Nora she is a failure. Jennie Wiedman overdoes Lizzie Webber. An old maid is not necessarily a mush-eating curiosity, and Miss Wiedman talks as if she were advertising Beeman's pepsin chewing gum. But then Miss Wiedman may have been miscast in character work and it would not be surprising to find her a clever little artist in legitimate dramatic work. * * * Next Monday and Tuesday the Lambardi opera company will appear at the California. On Monday Mignon will be given and for Tuesday The Barber of Seville is announced. On both evenings all the strong members of the company will appear and the music lovers of San Francisco should not omit to take advantage of the opportunity and listen once more to such exceptional vocalists as Refretto, Sestegni, Barducci, Russo, Bardarocca and Ferrari. These two performances will be positively the last ones, as the company will then leave for Los Angeles. On Thursday, July thirteenth, the Frawley company will open at the California with its great success of last season, The Dancing Girl. Miss Bates will appear in the leading role. Much is promised of this Frawley season and Mr. Friedlander deserves to be congratulated on his enterprise.

———

Grand Opera House WHENEVER one thinks that Morosco's excellent comic opera company has arrived at the pinnacle of its efficiency in a certain production, one invariably finds that it is still better in another. It was generally conceded up to last week that The Gipsy Baron was the most complete and artistic performance ever given at the Grand during the present operatic season and, now they present The Beggar Student at that place in a manner that causes you to open your eyes in wonder. It is simply astonishing what a resource of efficiency is hidden in this aggregation. There may be companies which present The Beggar Student as well as Morosco's accomplished artists, but you may safely wager that there are very, very few—if any at all—that can surpass that performance. The only two really pleasant surprises the writer has experienced during the present season were these performances of The Gipsy Baron and The Beggar Student. This time it is Arthur Wooley who has an opportunity to display the vast extent of his talent as a comedian. His deportment is exceedingly droll and his accentuation cannot but move the risibles of his auditors. When Mr. Wooley plays a comedy part he is humor personified; his face, his shape, the twinkle of his eye, his laugh—everything is funny. How exceedingly picturesque he looks when he asks, naively: "Was is das?" and how desolate and astonished he appears when his question is answered with a box on the ear! William Woolf, too, as the pompous General Ollendorf gives once more evidence of his refined humor and genuine wit. It is very difficult to give the English "sponge it out" the same expression as the German uses in the inimitable "Scwamm Drueber," but Mr. Woolf says it with an expression that brings it mightily near the original. His song containing this unique bon mot is hearily encored and every evening he is obliged to add a few more verses in order to satisfy his hearers. Of course Persse, as usual, essays the part of the lover with that dash and Schneidigkeit that contributes toward making him such a favorite. He is a fine looking fellow is Persse and his clear tenor is by no means subordinated to the pleasure created by his appearance. In histrionic accomplishments, also, Mr. Persse is entitled to hearty praise. Miss Mason looks as pretty as ever and her Laura emulates that of the foremost exponent of such roles. Miss Thorne has the first opportunity to show where her real strength lies, namely, in soubrette work that demands dash, vivaciousness and esprit. In the role of Bronaslava, she has ample opportunity to sparkle and she wins no chance to exhaust the subject. Her value to the company is indisputable. So much has been said about the musical accomplishment of the ideal chorus that it would not be amiss to add that it is an exceptionally fine looking chorus. The finale of the second act is somewhat weakened through the lack of a brass band, but perhaps San Francisco has not such a possession available and if it has, the price would doubtless be too extortionate to permit the management the additional expense every week. It is gratifying to hear that Carmen is to be presented next week; there may be another surprise in store. Special attention has been paid to scenery and costumes. This time Hattie Bell Ladd will have a chance to show whether the praise she received while east was honestly merited. She has done good work in the past and may perhaps prove a veritable surprise, much as Edith Mason was in the roles of Santuzza and Nedda. Julie Cotte, the youthful soprano, who was so graciously received as Mabel in the Pirates of Penzance, will sing Frequita. Winfred Goff, who created almost a sensation with his artistic Tanio, will no doubt duplicate his success with Escamillo.

———

Orpheum MY SWEETHEART, Minnie Palmer, will be the big card for next week. She has scored a great success in vaudeville in her comedy Rose Pompon, in which she is assisted by Francis Jerrard from the Haymarket theatre, London George Wilson, the old-time minstrel, will be a strong feature. He has been credited with being the greatest hit in the monologue line that has been seen on the vaudeville stage. The Rixfords are also new and are European acrobats of renown. Millian and Shields are said to excel as talking comedians and are sure to make a hit. But Minnie Palmer will be the star.

———

Columbia NEXT MONDAY Henry Miller will present R. C. Carton's famous comedy, Lord and Lady Algy, which comes with the stamp of approval of all the New York critics and the credit of a long run at the Empire theatre this season. In fact its success has been so great that Charles Frohman has decided to place it upon the Empire stage again next season instead of a new play. It was only taken off after many continuations to make room for the long contemplated revival of Romeo and Juliet by Maude Adams. The production at this theatre will call for an unusually strong cast, with Mr. Miller and Miss Anglin in the leading roles, while a noteworthy fact is that of the appearance among the others of Mrs. Thorndyke Boucicault and Margaret Dale, who have generously consented to oblige the management, and at the same time strengthen the cast by appearing as Lady Pamela and Miss Mallinson respectively. C. Leslie Allen will be in the cast, making his first appearance during the present season at the Columbia.

———

An interesting musical and elocutionary entertainment was given at Association Auditorium on Thursday evening of last week for the benefit of the Eureka Society for the Protection of Children when the program consisted of selections by Professor Charles F. Graeber's mandolin, guitar and banjo orchestra, an address by Charles Montgomery, songs by Miss Bertha Wadham and Mrs. H. Lewis, specialties by Mr. and Mrs. Stainley and Dody Scholz, recitations by Miss Mary G. Inglis. Miss Kilbourn and Professors Joseph Roeckel and Henry Bretherick acted as accompanists.

An excellent remedy for insomnia will be found in the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky taken at bed-time. Your druggist has it.

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison Oak and all Skin Diseases. It has been used successfully for the last twenty years and thousands will testify to its curative quality. It is a specific for Poison Oak. AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

The Proposal

SCENE: He is discovered alone. She may also be discovered, after a comparatively easy search, getting ready to come down and meet him:

HE: I'm going to do it tonight. If I don't I'm—Hello! here she is, the darling little—

She (entering the room radiantly, with his flowers in her hand): Oh, Mr. Harold, how can I thank you enough for these lovely flowers! It was awfully good of you.

He (advancing eagerly to meet her, taking her hand and holding it): I'm glad you like them, but they're a mere trifle. Happy flowers!

She (affecting surprise and looking up at him innocently): Happy flowers? Why should they be happier than other flowers?

He: Because you like them. [They seat themselves].

She: Like them? I love them. (to herself) I believe he is going to propose at last.

He: Love them? Happiest of flowers, then, I should say. I only wish I— (stops abruptly, suddenly aware that another word and he'll be in for it).

She (with downcast eyes but still encouragingly): W-e-ll?

He (to himself): Damn it! I wish I were sure she loved me. (Aloud) I was about to say-ah, that I only wish I-ah-could be the means of-of affording you more pleasure than I do. Don't you know, I think I must bore you sometimes terribly.

She (greatly provoked and to herself): Dick Harold, that isn't what you were going to say at all, and you know it! (aloud and with a touch of languid indifference): Oh, no, you don't bore me. I never allow myself to be bored.

He (maddened and to himself): I'm a fool! The girl doesn't care for me a snap! (aloud and rather stiffly): I was afraid you might. Amiable people often allow themselves to be imposed upon. (to himself): I wish I hadn't said that, damn it!

She (a flash in her eye): Mr. Harold, I don't like irony.

He (to himself): I've started a fight instead of a love scene. (aloud): I beg your pardon. I did not mean it that way. I hope I have not offended you?

She: Oh, no, not at all, Mr. Harold.

[A long pause which threatens to become awkward].

He (to himself): I don't blame her for being irritated I'm an ass. I'll get out of here as soon as I can. I must say something, I suppose.

She (to herself): He's disgusted with me, I'm sure, and he has a right to be. I wish he'd say something.

He (with an effort): How did you like Mrs. Borrelle's ball, the other night?

She: I did not enjoy it at all, to tell you the truth. How was it you were not there? (suddenly blushing furiously as she realizes the inference which may be drawn from the connection of the sentences).

He (noting her color but incredulous to its meaning): I was called out of town at the last moment.

She (impulsively to herself): The dear old stupid! He hasn't got a grain of conceit about him. (aloud): The Donners give some sort of a function tonight. I sent my regrets yesterday.

He (the fact that he had sent word yesterday that he would call tonight occurs to him, but he attaches no significance to the coincidence—aloud): Should think you would have enjoyed it.

She: But I would be depriving myself of another pleasure.

He (sublimely obtuse): Of course that would make a difference. Well, I think I-ah-must be going. (starting to rise).

She (looking up with tender reproachfulness): So soon? Are you going to begin and be formal with me? And after my staying away from the Donners, too.

He (quickly reseating himself and suddenly becoming very earnest): You don't mean to say—

She: Yes I do.

He: That you remained home to see me?

She: (faintly): Y-e-s, I thought it would be—well, more enjoyable.

He: (eying her fixedly as a light begins to break on him): Alice, I don't like irony either.

She (almost tearfully): Please don't think I could be guilty of it, Di—

He (determinedly): Alice—I can call you Alice, can't I?—I want to say something to you, but I can't.

She (involuntarily): Oh, yes, you can.

He: I tell you I can't.

She (playfully but tenderly): Spell it then.

He: I can't do that either. Alice, I-I-

She (timidly): The next word begins with l, doesn't it?

He (grabbing her): It does, Alice, my dearest. I love you, my darling. Will you be my wife?

She: Oh, Dick, this is so sudden.

WILLIAM A. TAAFFE.

W. D. Howells has decided to dramatize his Hazard of New Fortunes. This may lead him to modify his opinion that two bits is enough to pay for admission to any theatre, and if more is demanded, one had better eschew the play and invest the money in a book.

Mrs. Beatrice Priest Fine is singing at Rev. Dr Collier's church, Park avenue and Thirty-fourth street, New York. Her residence is at 966 Woody Crest avenue, Bronxville.

Jessie Dean Moore is at Guerneville for the summer.

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Fifth week of the season Begins MONDAY NIGHT. On which occasion

HENRY MILLER AND A SPECIAL COMPANY

will present for the first time in this country outside of New York City, the great Empire theatre success

"LORD AND LADY ALGY"

by R. C. Carton, author of "Liberty Hall" etc.

Grand Opera House Morosco Amusement Co., Inc Lessees.

This week, last two nights of "THE BEGGAR STUDENT"

Commencing Monday, July 9th, elaborate production of Bizet's famous opera

"CARMEN"

Our New Prices—Orchestra, (Reserved) 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

Matinee Saturday. Best reserved seat in house may be bought for 25 cts.; Family Circle 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

Branch Box Office Emporium.

Alcazar FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor MARK THALL, Manager

'Phone Main 254

Week of July 10th

"CAMILLE"

FLORENCE ROBERTS as Camille — WHITE WHITTLESEY as Armand Duval

ALCAZAR COMPANY supporting. Special stage effects and handsome wardrobes.

Our never deviating prices prevailing - 15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

In preparation, 'ROMEO AND JULIET"

Orpheum O'Farrell Street between Stockton and Powell

Week Commencing Sunday, July 9th.

MISS MINNIE PALMER, the world famous comedienne, assisted by MR FRANCIS JERRARD of the Haymarket theatre, London, in the great one-act comedy, "Rose Pompon."

GEORGE WILSON, the greatest of monologue artists.

THE RINFORDS, acrobats

MAX MILLIAN & SHIELDS, comedians.

HAYES & LYTTON, MORIE, GARDNER BROTHERS, THE FARRELLS.

Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c

Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday

California Theatre S. H. FRIEDLANDER, Manager.

Limited Engagement of five weeks and a half.

Commencing Thursday evening, July 13th.

THE FRAWLEY COMPANY AND BLANCHE BATES with a coterie of experienced players.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday Nights and Saturday Matinee. The late Augustin Daly's best play,

"THE LAST WORD"

Reserved Seats, 25, 50, 75, and 1.00.

July 17th, BLANCHE BATES in "The Dancing Girl."

Battle of Manila Bay

This Grand Historical Panorama is now on exhibition . . .

Lectures every half hour by the eminent orator, PROF. W. G. ROLLINS

Admission, 50 Cents

Children, 25 Cents.

Music World

"ES IST DAS GLUCK EIN FLUCHTIG DING"—GIEBEL

[AFTER THE GERMAN]

DAME FORTUNE is a nimble jade,
And she has been so ever,
You might pursue her round the world,
But overtake her, never.

Better to lie where the grass grows sweet,
And sing your songs unheeding,
Down through the blue air all at once
She'll come upon you speeding.

Seize her quickly and hold her fast
Nor prate meanwhile about her,
She'll slip you if she gets a chance
And you'll reach home without her.

IRENE CONNELL.

PROBABLY there are few persons who have ever paid any serious attention to the musical programs at the various theatres where legitimate dramatic performances are presented, and yet these very programs are of a certain importance that should not be underestimated. In pleasing contrast to European custom the American theatrical manager looks out considerably for the comfort of his patrons and therefore he has found means of entertaining them during the intermissions which at times occupy considerable length. This accommodation has become so well established and the public has been so perfectly accustomed to it that its discontinuance would evoke a storm of protest. And yet these programs are treated with an indifference that is even beginning to extend itself to the leader. It does not make any particular difference for what purpose any improvement is inaugurated, so long as its benefit is a matter of fact, but when this same improvement is introduced it should be done in an exemplary manner or not at all. In other words when the management of a theatre decides to entertain its patrons by means of a musical program it should be careful to see that the music is of a kind that really does entertain and not of the class that wearies. People who visit a dramatic performance, for instance, are not over anxious to listen to class cal or heavy music between the acts They like to be taken away from the seriousness of the play and rejoice in the sparkle of brilliant melodies. With this idea in my mind I listened to the various progr ms at the different theatres last week and found but one that contained the character adapted for the occasion and that program was played by Edward Lada at the Alcazar. It contained the following numbers: Overture, Franz Schubert, Suppe; selection from The Beggar Student, Milloecker; waltz from The Gypsy Baron, Strauss; prelude, siciliana and intermezzo from Cavalleria Rusticana, Mascagni; march, The King's Musketeer, Frank Hurson. That is what I call an entertaining program and Mr. Lada deserves credit for it. An example of a program as it should not be is this, which was played by August Hinrichs at the Columbia: Overture, Oberon, Weber; Faust fantasie, Gounod; selection from Il Trovatore, Verdi; and Meditation, or rather Ave Maria, Bach-Gounod. Of course no one will dispute the excellent quality of the music, but it requires a large and complete orchestra to do justice to those grand works. An orchestra like that at Mr. Hinrichs' command cannot possibly execute these works with the necessary vigor. The result is that the audiences feel bored. There was no more color to the Faust fantasie or the Oberon overture than there is to a glass of water. Of course the Ave Maria received an encore, because it was a violin solo and Mr. Hinrichs knows how to play the violin. But to play Il Trovatore and the other heavy works with a small orchestra is a grave mistake and I had given Mr Hinrichs credit for better judgment. There is but one class of music adapted for such a purpose and that is music of a light character, such as is embodied in Mr. Lada's program. It is of no use to select heavy music for two reasons. First, the people do not go to the theatres to listen to the music, and secondly, the orchestras are not complete enough to do justice to it.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street. Exclusive styles in fine millinery.

The other day Mr. Denis O'Sullivan told me that he had a grievance against me for stating that the orchestration of Shamus O'Brien is lacking force and vigor. Thinking that one hearing of the opera may not have been sufficient to receive a correct impression, I promised Mr. O'Sullivan to listen again to the work and pay particular attention to the orchestration. Following the word with the deed, I went twice more to hear Shamus O'Brien and am sorry to say that I am compelled to adhere to my first impression. Let us, however, stand pat on one particular fact, namely, that as far as originality, character and emotional quality are concerned, Shamus O'Brien stands alone in its class. No composer aside from Dr. Stanford has succeeded so well in interpreting the nationalism of Irish music. Its character stands unique and defies all adverse criticism. But what I contend is that Dr. Stanford did not completely exhaust his subject. He gives us emotion, such as love, anger and sorrow, but he does not give us the real article of passion. There is no passion in the music. The Irish people are surely not lacking in passion. They may not develop this sentiment in matters of affection but they most assuredly possess patriotic passion, a passion holier than that which Leoncavallo portrays in I'Pagliacci. Wherefore, I ask, are we denied to sip the nectar of passionate Irish music? The gem of the opera is the wail of the banshee. It is music that grips you and retains your closest attention for the reason that in it is embodied despair. It rises so much above the other strains because despair forms the nearest approach to passion. Imagine what could have been composed for the arrest, for instance. Here is a fine young fellow fighting for the liberty of his downtrodden people about to accomplish his plans and just at the moment his carefully erected structure is to be completed he is restrained by force, while his countrymen, who almost worship him, are compelled to stand by inactive. What a chance for a chorus! What a chance for an orchestration in which any instrument could shout passionate melodies! But instead we are compelled to listen to the wood-wind, which is typical of Irish music but which should be supported at places where there are unusual climaxes. Another opportunity for an outburst is during the parting of father and son and husband and wife. Some may argue that quiet sorrow is more expressive. But you must remember that the individuals are not the sole participants in this parting scene. We have the people there who witness it. It is not very likely that they keep silent at a moment of such importance to the welfare of their national independence, and the orchestration remains cold, much like a beautiful woman without a soul. I admire Shamus O'Brien as an artistic—intensely artistic—composition, but I feel no restraint in confessing that with the exception of the banshee wail it left me totally cold.

¶ ¶

As Shamus O'Brien, Mr. O'Sullivan is incomparable. He embodies in it all the bonhommie, Mutterwitz and patriotism of the Irish character. It is a sincere pleasure to watch his vigorous actions and follow the various emotions that flit across his countenance. I have been asked what I thought of Mr. O'Sullivan's voice. To tell the truth, I was so impressed with his acting that I totally omitted to pay much attention to his singing. But it seems to me that he sang exceedingly well. His voice has no particular carrying quality, neither is especially resonant but it is musical and pleasant. It tickles your ear and you never tire of listening to it. It is what may be termed a magnetic baritone. Mr. O'Sullivan sings and does not shout.

¶ ¶

From Miss Elizabeth Westgate's clever musical chat in the Alameda Argus, I glean that Mrs. Marguerite Wilbourn gave a pupil recital at Lafayette hall, Friday evening of last week The recital seems to have given general satisfaction. The duties of a teacher are responsible ones and often the nervousness of the student is laid on the shoulders of the teacher. Therefore pupil recitals should always be treated with a certain consideration. Mrs. Wilbourn, judging from the Argus report, seems to have accomplished some good work as a teacher. Miss Westgate says: "Both the vocal and piano students showed considerable individuality of

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Miss Marion Bear Concert Pianist 927 Sutter St.
Cecile von Sriberlich, vocalist, 1109 Post street
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist Oroville, Cal.
Mrs Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

method. Among the vocal pupils the best points noted were adherence to the pitch, clearness of enunciation, except in one instance, and almost entire absence of the annoying tremolo—a very commendable thing. Miss Bernstedt sings neatly. Miss Clara McCormick is a young singer with a voice of great sweetness. The Misses McDermott show talent and training and their duet was one of the features of the eveniug. Miss Mae Sadler is, without question, the most promising of the piano students. She has a feeling for music and a respect for the pedal, and her technic has been looked after. Mrs. Ralph Bennet played the old Blacksmith pleasantly. Miss Lillian Woolmington's small fingers got over two movements of the Mozart sonata in C major very nicely."

¶ ¶

And then comes something about the great violinist and composer Julius A. Haug, of Alameda. This time he played at a pupil's concert and the following words of encouragement which the critic of the Argus bestows upon him are apropos: "After the reading Mr. Julius A. Haug played upon the piano his composition representing the allegory in music. It was intended that this should have been given by violin, 'cello and piano; but it was not found feasible to do so on this occasion. Mr. Haug intends to arrange it for string quartet, and also for orchestra. It is program music, and the personifications of the various actors in the allegory are represented by motifs of originality and interest. For example, the white rose is a coquettish melody given to the violin; the 'cello has the faun theme; the boisterous wind, the young moon, the fountain, are each in turn represented by appropriate and agreeable motifs. It is quite a clever piece of work, and proves that Mr. Haug did not in vain spend four years at composition with teachers in Europe." Mr. Wurtsch played the Bach-Gounod Ave Maria as a 'cello solo and played it smoothly and well. Mrs. Wilbourn accompanied in a way to enhance the singing of her pupils.

¶ ¶

The Saturday club of Sacramento has issued its announcements for the season of 1899-1900. The officers of the society are: President, Mrs. J. B. Wright; vice presidents, Miss Nellie Siddons and Mrs. Egbert Adams; secretary, Miss Mildred Obarr; treasurer, Miss A. M. Waite. The executive committee consists of the following members: Mrs. Frances Moeller, Mrs. R. H. Hawley, Mrs. Albert Elkus, Miss Maye Carroll and Miss Helen Dunn Among the musicians from San Francisco who will participate in the concerts of the coming season at Sacramento are Mrs. J. E. Birmingham, Hugo Mansfeldt and Mrs. Mary Fairweather.

¶ ¶

From the official program of the Fourth of July celebration at San Jose I see that James Hamilton Howe was the musical director. The San Jose oratorio society participated in the program and was at times augmented by the vast audience present which numbered about five thousand Mr. Howe's Unity was also sung on this occasion.

¶ ¶

Mr. and Mrs. Willard J Batchelder are spending their vacation in Sonoma as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Grant. Mr. Batchelder expects to resume teaching on August first.

¶ ¶

Manager S. H. Friedlander has concluded arrangements with Gilmore's band for a few concerts in San Francisco next

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . -

Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.

Specialist in the Development of the Voice

* * * HOME STUDIO:

RECEPTION HOURS, 12 TO 2 912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .

Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,

Studio for Voice Culture Operatic Repertoire,
Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method

Engagements accepted for Concerts
Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.

Terms Moderate

Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

MR. PERCY A. R. DOW . .

PUPIL OF { VANNINI, FLORENCE
HENSCHEL, LONDON

Special Classes
for Study of the Voice

During June, July and August

Studio: 1654 Pacific Street

RECEPTION HOURS
2 to 3 Monday and Thursday NEAR VAN NESS AVE.

MR. FRANCIS STUART

. . . Teacher of Singing

1615 Jackson St., near Polk

DR H J. STEWART . . . .

Organist of Trinity Church and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .

has removed his

MUSIC STUDIO

to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine

Singing Piano Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music

F. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street

Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.

A thorough course for teaching. Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Under direction of Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck

For Voice Culture Piano and Organ

COMPLETE CONSERVATORY COURSES including instruction in Harmony, Theory,
Chorus and Sight Singing. Ensemble Playing
Languages and Physical Culture Special Preparation for Church Choir Work (weekly rehearsals with the choir of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.) Lectures on Musical Topics

* *

Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy
Coaching for Lighter and Grand Opera by Mrs Henri Fairweather
Send for Illustrated Catalogue giving full particulars 831 Fulton St, S. F

Reception Hours 12 to 2 daily Telephone West 223

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use

BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE

It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.

PRICE $3.00

At music stores or by mail Descriptive circulars sent upon application.

HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

season. This organization is considered by many as being superior to Sousa's band.

¶ ¶

It seems that the rumor of Mr. Hermann Genss' appointment as conductor of the Symphony orchestra for next season is assuming more feasible proportions. I see from a letter received from Chicago last week that Fritz Scheel expects to organize an orchestra and begin a series of symphony concerts in the eastern cities. If this be true the San Francisco Symphony society will be in need of a conductor who is a thorough musician, and that in Mr. Genss it will find the very man necessary for these affairs I shall prove within the next few weeks.

ALFRED METZGER.

¶ ¶

Minor Notes

MISS ELLA McCLOSKEY left last Sunday for a visit of some weeks to Castle Crag and Portland. Cecile von Seiberlich is spending the summer months at Los Gatos. Charles von Oer is in the city, having come from Oroville on a visit. Miss Caroline Shindler, a local composer, will soon publish some new waltzes, Dreams of Love, that have been highly praised by Herr Stark, who will play them at Colorado springs this season. Miss Claire Cole, pianist of the Corona club, is now a member of the choir of St. Mary's cathedral. * * Cyrus Brownlee Newton mourns the loss of one of his brightest pupils, Miss Watkins, who died last week. She had made a bright beginning as a reader and would have become prominent in the profession, for while only eighteen she displayed more than ordinary ability. * * Roscoe Warren Lucy has been ill with blood-poisoning, but has recovered. * * Walter J. Talbot, a pupil of J. W. McKenzie, who has made quite a reputation in the east as a singer, was married recently in St. Joseph's Catholic church, Boston, his bride being Miss Frances Helena Curran of that city. Lawrence B. O'Connor, the eminent pianist of Boston, was the best man. Another pupil, Mr. Grodgens, who was always a favorite at the McKenzie concerts, has secured an engagement with the Bostonians. The society will give a concert this month.

MARY FRANCES FRANCIS.

¶ ¶

The organ recitals at Trinity church, which have been such a feature of the musical services since the erection of the new organ, now take place every Sunday afternoon beginning with a short choral service at four o'clock. Dr. Stewart's program for tomorrow will be as follows: Prelude and fugue in G, Bach; Cantilena, in A minor, Grison; Albumblatt, Kirchner; Christmas offertory, Grison.

¶ ¶

The beautiful silk flag at the right of the band stand on the Fourth added greatly to the impressiveness of Old Flag Forever, when that selection—the composition of Leila France—was played. One hears that this fine martial work was to have been played also at Metropolitan hall but the orchestration was not completed in time.

SATISFACTORY TO THE EYE AND EAR

BYRON MAUZY PIANOS
308-314 POST ST

Sheet Music, Books, etc. Telephone Main 5261

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd

TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral
Voice Culture and the Art of Singing
First-class Engagements only accepted.
Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing.
Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave.
Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing.
Residence, 1622 Fell Street,
near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE

SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakland. Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL

SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing. Begs to announce that she has returned from Europe and resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento street. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL

POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire.
130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS

CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches.
Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER

TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY

TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St.
Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH

PUPILS of Madame de la Grange Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

ANTON SCHOTT

WAGNERIAN TENOR. Vocal Instructor. Old Italian School. Studio: 2433 Buchanan St.

J. W. McKENZIE

VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX

PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A. Building Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30. Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL

VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue. Studio, 717 Sutter Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON

SINGING and Piano.
Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK

PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 575. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH

PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory, Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE.
Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M.
1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA

TEACHER OF PIANO.
2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER

TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays, 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony.
2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE

TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a m to 1:30 p. m. Thursday excepted. Telephone Hyde 1491 825 Sutter Street, S.F.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE

PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street.
Telephone Larkin 782.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano.
MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.

ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F.

H. BRETHERICK

TEACHER of Organ, Piano and Harmony. Organist of the First Unitarian Church and Beth Israel Synagogue.
Residence: 2527 California St., San Francisco

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.

PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies.
Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m
Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON

CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher.
Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin
Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA

TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St
Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN

TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.

TEACHER OF ZITHER.
Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street.
Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.

VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn.
Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR

MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL
Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5.
Will accept engagements for concerts.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

World of Law

THE IMPRESSION is gaining ground every day that the Supreme court will surely grant a re-hearing of the county clerk's deputies' case. Ever since Judge Slack went so far as to say openly that the court had got mixed up between too many lawyers and had never grasped the exact legal situation, it is wonderful to note how many people there are who are forced to say: "In the interest of this community, a new trial should be had. The county clerk's office cannot be run with so few men as the Supreme court decision allows."

What nonsense all that is. If the Supreme court on careful examination of the record finds that it has been mistaken in its conception of what the attorneys for the deputies sought to establish, it will grant a re-hearing. But to grant a re-hearing merely because the city had been put into a tight place by its recent decision, because the community would be benefited by a decision the other way, the tribunal of last resort in this state has never done and never will do. It is the business of the legislators to frame the laws and for the Supreme court to construe them and to pass upon their constitutionality. It is not for the Supreme court to amend laws, to supply deficiencies, to remedy defects. If the men chosen by the people to represent the state in senate and assembly are so grossly incompetent as to pass laws which are so full of holes as to do the community more harm than good, that is the fault of the people who elect them. The Supreme court is bound to be iron-clad in its construction of the laws and can do no more.

As the petition for a re-hearing was filed some days ago, some disposition of it will probably be made soon after this appears, possibly before. But it will not be to do the community a favor that the Supreme court will grant a re-hearing, but only if it concludes that some important points have escaped its notice. One man, referring to the array of attorneys who fought the battle of the county clerk's office, said something about "too many cooks." Surely it would be better if one counsel only on either side of a case were to present the combined views of his associates and himself.

Judge Coffey is in hiding just now and enjoying a well-earned rest. The probate judge is so precise and elaborate in all that he does that he is often accused of doing an unnecessary amount of work. That is his nature, however, and if a fault it is one on the right side. He will be invincible if he runs for re-election next year. Apropos of the judge's reputation for saying smart things, I heard a good story the other day. The judge had the case of Ellen Murphy, deceased, on his calendar one day. Now, Daniel Murphy was the husband of Ellen, deceased, and the memory of the gone partner of his joys was so strong upon him that he took unto himself a second wife whose name, also, was Ellen. Mr. Charles F. Hanlon was the attorney for the estate, and everyone knows that Mr. Charles F. Hanlon's sense of humor is immense. The case came up and Hanlon called out:

"Ellen Murphy."

The judge looked up. "Yes, this is the estate of Ellen Murphy, is it not, Mr. Hanlon? And you represent the estate?"

"Yes, sir," returned Hanlon, stolidly. "Ellen Murphy, take the stand."

And a tall, buxom woman walked up and took her seat. Judge Coffey looked at his calendar and then at her, and for a moment was puzzled. Then he turned to Hanlon with a grin and asked:

"Mr. Hanlon, what is this you are working on the court? A miracle, or a resurrection?"

Now, if Hanlon had known his business he would have shouted with laughter at this juncture. Instead of which, he gravely and prosily explained to the court how there came to be two Ellen Murphys. Judge Coffey did not forgive him for some time.

Oscar A. Tolle, deputy county clerk and professor of elocution, left for Los Angeles last Sunday night. He will be the guest of E. J. Baldwin at the Santa Anita ranch. Afterwards he will go to the Tallac house at Lake Tahoe, where "Lucky" Baldwin also reigns supreme.

Edward J. Banning and Bert Schlesinger, the talented deputy United States district attorneys, have left for a horseback trip through Sierra county. Schlesinger was born in Sierra county and the two will visit his old home on their travels. They will be gone about two weeks.

Justice of the Peace Cook has suddenly discovered that he is a badly used man. The man who is popularly supposed to have seen nearly one hundred winters has been brooding long and painfully over what he is now firmly convinced was a gross injustice done him by Presiding Judge Daingerfield of the Superior court. I refer, of course, to the occasion of his being found guilty of contempt of court in having willfully disobeyed a writ of prohibition and his being fined five dollars for his offense. The aged justice on his trial swore that he had not received any writ of prohibition from any one until long after he had done the act which he was expressly forbidden to do. He gave a glib story of some man coming into his courtroom while he was engaged with attorneys Bergerot and Cobb—the attorneys in the case, by the way, whom the writ of prohibition most affected—and depositing a paper on the lawyer's desk in front of him. He didn't examine it; didn't know what it was. Bergerot corroborated Cook and said he picked the paper up and saw it was a writ of prohibition. He did not take further notice of it as he had his order already signed by the justice and so prohibition was no longer the legal remedy.

Judge Daingerfield did not believe nonogenarian G. W. F. He showed that by finding the old man guilty and fining him. At the time, Justice Cook appeared remarkably cheerful at getting off so easy and he paid his fine without a murmur. Since then, however, he has had time to reflect and also to look about his courtroom. He is now prepared to show in the clearest possible manner that he could not have committed the act of contempt imputed to him; that it would have been a physical impossibility. The old man demonstrated this to a friend of mine the other day. He led him up to the courtroom desk and showed him a fearful and wonderful pile of books of all sorts and descriptions towering in one cover thereof.

"Look there," he said, "look at that pile of books. In order to find me guilty they had to find that I received the writ of prohibition, saw what it was and passed it to Mr. Bergerot, who made away with it.

"How could I have done that," cried the old man as he hobbled round his desk. "Mr. Bergerot was in front of the desk, this pile of books between. I could not have passed the paper to him, I must have thrown it in the air like a skyrocket and it must have fallen on the lawyer's table in front of Mr. Bergerot. No, no, my friend, no such feats of jugglery for me at my time of life. The truth of the matter is that the young man came in, laid the paper down before Mr. Bergerot and never handed it to me at all."

My friend did not think it worth while to ask Judge Cook whether the pile of books was on his desk on the eventful occasion or whether they had been placed there since. Be that as it may, the aged justice had better hold his tongue about the whole occurrence. It was disgraceful enough, and the old man's very explanation shows that he knew perfectly well what the paper which was served on him was and why he concluded to ignore it.

"My sense of duty and honor compelled me to set aside that judgment," (and incidentally to release some property from attachment and so prevent an honest litigant from getting his money.) Judge Cook, go slow. Why was General Cobb employed in the case? THE COURT REPORTER.

THE CAKE WALK carnival that opens at Mechanics' Pavilion next Saturday will number contestants from Portland, Sacramento, Oakland, San Jose, New York, London, Chicago, Hawaii and Manila, so there will be plenty of variety in the pedestrianism. There will also be eight Chinese couples and five genuine Philippine islanders in the cake walk. Bennett's band will furnish the music. A part of the receipts will go to the California Soldier Boys' fund. Charles L. Patton is chairman of the committee of management and Louis W. Buckley is the manager.

THE DRAW for the dog races at Union coursing park today and tomorrow resulted in a seventy-four dog stake, in which several dogs make their first appearance. The coursing will begin at 1:30 P. M. Saturday and at 11 A. M. Sunday. The total stake money is $965 Among the dogs drawn for the races were Mialmo, Lady Blanche, Emin Pasha, Prince Hal, Mountain Beauty and For Glory.

THOSE popular mixologists, Ben Tarbox and Ed Parker, who are now the hosts of the Reception in Sutter street above Kearny, have added a grill to their establishment and beneath the bar they have located a handsomely appointed piano room which has become the rendezvous of the vocalists of the town. All the boys who sing know Ben Tarbox, for Ben has a fine organ himself, and impromptu musicales are now a feature of the Reception. Convivial bohemians who like good singing, as well as the succulent bivalve and the exhilarating cocktail, are habitues of the Tarbox & Parker establishment.

The Writing Desk

THE FAMILY lived in a large city in the eastern part of France. Monsieur occupied an important position in the government service, which kept him exceedingly busy. His beautiful wife was a prominent figure in the city's social life and their young daughter was attending a convent school as a boarder. Madame was carrying on a flirtation with a young officer and was infatuated with him to such a degree that no thought of child or husband restrained her insane passion. The husband, as usual, was in blissful ignorance of the affair. One day, however, the gossips learned that the lover had been promoted in rank and transferred to another city, while the husband was sent to the south, so near his landed estate that he could easily live on it.

After a month he resigned from the service, retired to his chateau, and the couple found themselves as alone as in the days of their honeymoon: he, more mature, but as loving as before; she, sullen, desperate, crushed by this unexpected change, not knowing whether or not it was premeditated, half suspecting that some one had meddled, but not knowing who.

Her husband's sudden resignation made her fear that he was trying to isolate her, and the thought that he had given up his career to be near her made her simply furious. To think that he was depriving her of her former liberty and hopelessly separating her from her loved one, was unbearable. Growing more restive every day, she was a score of times on the point of running away but was restrained by her lover's imperative letters counseling patience. Her disposition grew bitter, hard, ironical. Her only sentiment was hatred for her husband. He attributed his wife's ill-humor to the change of climate, to her pining for society, to that very nervousness which formerly had made her a woman of ever-varying charm. He sent for their daughter, hoping she might prove a welcome companion.

The only change after the daughter's arrival was that there were now two to suffer instead of one, and that madame insisted more and more on being left alone. At last she became ill with fever, the outcome of her suppressed passion. She grew rapidly worse and the doctor gave little hope.

"She is young and strong," he said.

And the unhappy husband became the most devoted nurse, watching with a smile on his lips and death in his heart the dreaded symptoms, asking questions in a cheerful tone, and not daring to insist on the answer, though life and death might hang upon it. He was assisted by his little daughter, who, with the instinct of unloved children, adored her mother.

The patient herself, at first, had rebelled and taken as a personal affront the illness which made her more than ever dependent on those about her. She became taciturn and gloomy in her passive suffering. When she grew too weak to even rebel, she was sometimes touched by the devotion of those two loving beings who tended her and occasionally she rewarded them with a smile or one of her graceful little gestures that they had missed for so long, and which now made her broken-hearted husband pray for the return of her former brusqueness.

She never for a moment doubted her recovery, not that she cared particularly to live, but the thought of death simply had not occurred to her. One day, because of an open door, she heard these words of the doctor's:

"The fever is abating. She may yet last five or six days. I can do nothing to save her, but she will pass away painlessly."

The voices and steps died away. She turned her face to the wall and repeated the cruel words to herself. They were sharp and precise as a death sentence, not leaving her the slightest hope. They seared themselves into her brain, and her physical being gave up the struggle.

Five days, perhaps six, and then all would be at an end. The unknown would begin. Her thoughts reverted to her absent lover. She must die without seeing him. She thought of her past joys and of the suffering she had undergone during the last few months. To her passionate love an irrevocable separation seemed preferable to what she must endure had she lived.

A slight noise made her open her eyes without changing her position. Her daughter's large, tender eyes were sadly gazing at her with a mingled expression of a child's fear and a woman's comprehension. Thinking her mother asleep the young girl's face brightened as by a ray of sunlight, and motioning to her father she again raised the curtain. He, still overcome by the doctor's words, shook his head. But the child's confidence made him obey her gesture, and with his knee on a chair and his head against his daughter's, he glanced at his wife. He hastily turned away, but the child clung to him and with consoling words rocked his fears to sleep. He remained.

Under the double scrutiny of these two beings, the invalid grew restless. What was she to them? What had she ever been? What would they lose in losing her? Nothing, forsooth! A certain joy filled her at the thought that hereafter she would always appear to them as she did at this moment, young, fascinating, beloved, idealized as are those who die so early. It would soon be over and she be delivered forever. Notwithstanding she had been imprudent, her husband was ignorant of her guilt. Surely no one would inform him now; her daughter would never know of her mother's fault.

She was about to open her eyes and smile when a sudden thought brought the sweat of agony to her brow. All her loved one's letters and her own, which she had insisted on having returned, were in her writing desk! Any one of them would condemn her, and there were packages of them. The first time after her death that her husband would sit before that desk he would find them—at a single stroke would lose ten years of past happiness.

She had never had the courage to destroy them. To her there was something about the scent, the folding, the character of his letters so real that to sacrifice them would have been as painful as to sacrifice him. Mechanically she tried to think of the number of letters she had, beginning at the left hand pile, whose contents she knew by heart. Her letters she remembered less distinctly. She could not exactly count them, and here her fever fancies would stop. To think that an hour of health would be enough to destroy all these tell-tale witnesses! Even now she wanted but a moment's assured solitude, and the grate fire in her room might swallow her secret.

She repeated to herself the words: "She may last five or six days" and decided that in this brief respite the deed must be done. If the doctor were mistaken? If that very evening or the next day she should die suddenly?

At the thought her heart beat to suffocation. A cry which she could not quite stifle died away in a moan; a shiver ran through her frame. From that instant she ever watched for the propitious moment. She fought against sleep, though feigning it constantly, against thirst, against her suffering, against the desire for the thousand little trifles that invalids incessantly demand. She hoped that by remaining motionless she might persuade her husband and daughter to go to sleep for an instant. But he never closed his eyes.

Finding herself unsuccessful in this plan she excluded them from her room, pretending that their movements, even their breathing exhausted her. All she gained was that they went into the next room, watching her from afar, and that her least move brought them to the threshold. But oh! the tortures of the night.

When her daughter left her, after taking her good-night kiss upon her mother's fingers or a corner of the counterpane, she was alone with her husband, and that tête-â-tête doubled the horror of her agony. Sometimes he would try to steal a furtive caress, again he would silently look at her for hours. It seemed to her that her secret must be written upon her brow, or that, against her will, she would scream it aloud.

Once, desperation became so strong that she sat upright ready to go to her desk. She had already put her foot to the floor when, thinking she was delirious, her husband gently laid her down again.

After four such days her state became positively pitiful. If the physician had spoken the truth, she had but twelve hours left to complete her task. How could she find the longed for opportunity? It was in her power to make her life innocent or guilty for those who were to mourn her.

Her husband attributed her growing agitation to the horror of the final battle. His heart bled with pity at sight of the revolt; he could so well understand her desire to live. Her fever increased. Her lips became dry as soon as the wet handkerchief which cooled them was removed. Her voice left her. She rivited her eyes upon the pendulum of the clock, whose uniform motion seemed to hypnotize her. Gasping with fear, she felt the regular strokes one by one, as if the metal at each beat stung her sharply. The influence of the repeated ticking was so manifest that they wished to stop it, hoping thus to relieve her. But she begged for it with imploring eyes and trembled with emotion, until the monotonous tic-tac began again to cut her life and heart.

The next night was better. Fatalist in accepting the delay, the patient wanted to reserve her final strength for the supreme effort she had resolved upon. When she awoke in the morning, she appeared smiling and, by a terrible effort, without agitation or care.

For the first time since the overheard conversation she spoke of her recovery, was tenderly anxious about her husband's pallor and her daughter's hollow cheeks, scolded each for not taking care of the other, for their stubbornness in remaining indoors instead of breathing the fresh air outside, and declared that she wanted to eat and drink, and that she would feel better if she could have a certain wine, which once, long ago, she had tasted at an inn she named. Surprised, trembling with hope, radiant at the expressed desire, her husband immediately rose to give his orders, but she stopped him.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny Street. Elegant line of Mourning Bonnet and Veils, very latest styles.

That was not what she wanted. She demanded that her husband, accompanied by the little girl, should go for the wine.

"The drive is but fifteen minutes. All you have to do is to harness the bays. In thirty minutes exactly you will be back."

As he still hesitated she called him to her, dismissing her daughter with a gesture, and with pleading eyes and voice she recalled to him the day of their wedding trip, when at supper in this same inn they had drunk this wine, which she wanted today, but wanted only from his hand.

To make sure her words would come out distinctly, without being broken by the chattering of her teeth, she formed them in advance and uttered them slowly, digging her nails into her palms to conquer the nervous twitching she felt all the time. The comedy was so repulsive to her that she felt her courage failing while she smiled to supply the missing words of endearment.

He kissed her fervently and wishing to completely satisfy her sudden fancy, he went out, calling his daughter. The sound of the wheels rolling on the gravel of the avenue went through her like an electric shock. She opened her eyes and stared at her enemy the clock which was ticking the last hours of her life away, then quickly dismissed the maid, bidding her to close the door. There was absolute silence now. As she slid to the floor the creaking of the bed caused her a little shudder of fear.

When she stood up her ears rang, as if she were under water. Her step was uncertain and when she thought she had crossed the room she found herself only near the window. Holding on to the curtains, she caught her breath. The room seemed to change its shape and to turn around with her. By a superhuman effort she finally reached the desk, just as her trembling hand sought a support. When her fingers touched it she thrilled with exultant joy that gave her strength, but the key which she had twice turned as she locked it last was hard to move. She tried several times unsuccessfully—at last it yielded.

The ribbon-tied packages were there. She thought of her little girls' candid eyes whose lustre—she now felt sure—would never be dimmed at the thought of her mother's sin. Again a rush of blood to the head made her ears ring, obscured her sight and made her brain whirl. There was such an atrocious pain at her heart that she could not mistake its meaning.

Gathering her last strength, like a wrestler who feels himself beaten, she pulled the drawer toward her. It came out so suddenly that she lost her balance and fell, scattering the letters all over her white gown.

Thus husband and daughter found her—dead. The girl returned to the convent. She has never left it.

[Translated from the French of Jeanne Schultz by ALICE ZISKA.]

World of Letters

I AM TOLD this true story of a novice in the newspaper field, who was told to get up a reading notice for an undertaking establishment, and evolved the following, thereby losing for his journal a cash display advertiser:

"A GRATIFYING DEPARTURE

"'All the world's a stage,' said the Bard of Avon, and upon the strength of that assertion the most of us have made an attempt to act our parts thereon with intelligence. We usually make a brilliant entrance, welcomed and applauded, and manage to keep up during our lifetime a semblance of respectibility even if we possees it not. But the exit—ah, there's the rub! To make a graceful departure when 'tired, he sleeps, and life's poor play is over,' then is the time when without others' assistance a proper exit is impossible. It thus behooves one who desires to leave this world with all the observances entailed by the rule 'good form' to be sure that his executors will make choice of a good undertaker, one of standing in the community, and who can be trusted to carry out the details of a funeral with fidelity. Such a one is the firm of A. B. Blank & Co., which has been so many years established in this city. This firm carries a stock of the newest styles of caskets, satin-lined, elegant funeral apparel and furnishings, at the most reasonable price, and the service is always willing, cheerful and prompt. Remember Blank & Co. when looking for an undertaker to take charge of the funeral of your relative or friend."

The Man with the Hoe is the title of a collection of Edwin Markham's poems issued by the Doubleday-McClures and for sale by Payot Upham & Co. The poem which confers its name upon the book has aroused more controversy than any other piece of verse written in late years, but to those who love poetry for its own beautiful sake it appeals less strongly than do other pieces of Mr. Markham's. His work is not excelled by any other verse hitherto produced in California, and is characterized by lucidity and strength, for he has a sure hold on both thought and expression. He avoids, too, those elaborate and artificial meters so much affected by weak versifiers and contents himself with those simpler melodic forms which convey naturally the music of the English tongue. Nature and life are in his song, love too, perhaps, but as the deep note in the harmony, felt rather than insisted upon. It is strange that Mr. Markham's work suggests musical comparisons, but indeed much of its effect is like that of hearing fine chords. Reviewers have quoted so largely from his poems that it is not necessary to cull in order to introduce him to readers, but it would be easy to select splendid lines and images of brilliancy and fire. A Look into the Gulf abounds with such, and so does A Hidden Valley with its striking close:

> Gods! I shall come on Dian unaware
> Look on her fearful beauty and be lost

Mr. Markham is particularly happy in his short poems, little bits of beauty condensed into a few lines. Fays is a good example, so is My Comrade. The mechanical part of the book is worthy of praise and the pleasure of reading the poems is much enhanced by their good typographical setting.

An eastern spiritual medium has been receiving poetic communications from no less a personage than Shakespeare. Here is a fair specimen of the immortal William's latest production:

> Second comes the God-
> Dess supreme
> Delight called Satisfaction
> To teach you that
> All things are for
> Your heart's benefaction.

Now let the various adherents of the Bacon, Green or Marlowe factions cast lots among themselves to decide which really deserves the credit for this gem. And I remember to have seen some years ago a reputed interview with the spirit of Robert Burns, in which he was made to say: "I didn't never meet up with Jean," which sounds very much as though Bobby had "met up with" former inhabitants of the western cattle country who had corrupted the speech of the braw Scot. It is no laughing matter, however, for if after two hundred years of heavenly harmonies, Shakespeare has come to this, what are we to expect from—say, Stephen Crane or Charlotte Perkins Stetson?

The question which is agitating literary circles just at present is the value of book reviews as affecting sales. Conan Doyle is rapping W. Robertson Nicoll over the knuckles for writing reviews of the same book over different pen names and publishing them in several papers or periodicals, thus spreading his opinions unduly. Nicoll replies that his various pen names are as well known as his own and are known to stand for him so that there is no deception, that he never misuses his privileges by crushing a young author, and that reviews are meant for the enlightenment of the reader, not the instruction of the writer, with much more in the same strain. Clement K. Shorter expatiates at some length upon the same subject in the current (June) Bookman. He says: "One tries not to minimize his own efforts too much, therefore I prefer to keep a good face in the presence of a publisher. I never meet any one of these gentlemen without adopting a most optimistic attitude—of course, also a most conciliatory one. It is the publishers business in life to provide me with gratis reading; and, of course, I am to give him an equivalent in return." He is of the opinion that expansive reviews are of little value, but bright paragraphs, anecdotes, dinner-table chat and in general, anything which calls attention to the personality of an author all assist

CURE ALL YOUR PAINS WITH Pain-Killer.
A Medicine Chest in Itself.
Simple, Safe and Quick Cure for
CRAMPS, DIARRHOEA, COUGHS, COLDS, RHEUMATISM,
NEURALGIA.
25 and 50 cent Bottles.
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.
BUY ONLY THE GENUINE.
PERRY DAVIS'

in selling his books. A writer in Munsey's takes the contrary view: "If you will take the trouble to inquire among publishers, you will find that the sales of a book usually pick up immediately after a slashing criticism in a prominent periodical." In this last case it would probably be shown in the final analysis that the review itself was responsible for personal paragraphs and bits of quotation which were the immediate factors in the increased demand. There are always a certain number of people who cannot or will not trust their own judgment and never take hold of a book until they have first read every review they can become possessed of, but these can hardly be classed as intelligent readers, and moreover they are quite as apt to borrow their books as their opinions, so they may be disregarded. The general practice seems to be to read the first book and then the signed reviews in order to see wherein reader and critic agree or differ, but the ordinary, so-called review, which is merely a padding out of the publisher's printed notice accompanying the volume is not worth the time it takes to look it over, and moreover, none but the veriest tyro is deceived by it. There is one form of book review which as yet has gained little ground on this coast though it prevails in the east, which should be severely condemned. That is the practice of giving two or three columns to a single book, exposing its whole scope and contents, with comment and copious extracts. For history, biography, travel or books of general reference this might be excellent treatment, but it is rarely, if ever, applied to them. On the contrary it is reserved for works of fiction, where, generally speaking, "The end of uncertainty is the death of interest." When the plot is outlined in its entirety, the manner in which the dénouement is brought about is exposed, and the long extracts, sufficient to give an insight to the style of the author are so selected as to cover the important points of the story, what inducement is there left to persuade a possible reader to give the book further attention? A reviewer who resorts to this method is either very inexperienced or possesses a facile pen without ideas to guide it. Self-confidence and glibness are not the only qualities necessary for a critic, and there is little to choose amongst the three styles—log-rolling by the Admiration club, unmerited roasting and complete give-away.

The Coming of Chloe is the latest output of the Lippincott select series of novels. It belongs to a class more often produced in England than in our own country and must please a large circle else the production would cease. Chloe, whose coming is such an overwhelming event, is one of the young ladies who live only between book covers. She is of course rich, beautiful, accomplished and virtuous. The siuations are all elemental and the misunderstandings and cross purposes of the various pairs of lovers which serve to stretch the story over two hundred and ninety pages would not baffle the insight of a half-blind kitten. Tom Lloyd is apparently an estimable young man in the eyes of the authoress, for he is rewarded with the hand of his Olivia in the end, but barring profanity, a Tar Flat hoodlum could hardly speak more insultingly to his lady-love than he has done and instead of any special consideration from either her or Major O'Hara, he richly deserves a horse whipping. Of course, the right couples all sort themselves out in the final chapter. The scene is laid in an Irish village, presumably because it had to be somewhere on the earth, but Dawson city or Honolulu would have answered the purpose equally well. The Coming of Chloe will make a good summer novel. No one will feel any sense of loss if it is left unfinished and if by any accident one omits a chapter or so, the thread of the story will not be interrupted. There is however, one point in its favor—it is clean and wholesome.

R. P. Brorup has just issued a volume under the title Truth and Poetry, of which a critic remarks that the title is only half applicable, as the poetry is omitted. A somewhat similar expression was applied to the Autobiography of Alexander Salvini, in which it will be remembered, he spoke unfavorably of nearly every actor whom he met: "A very great actor, but a very small man was the man who wrote the book."

A new magazine under the highly classical title Columbia Poetica, is to be launched upon the sea of literature. Its headquarters are in Washington and it proposes to see that the heretofore "mute, inglorious Miltons" have a hearing. Whatever other misfortune may befall the venture, it will not die for lack of copy.

Gertrude Franklin Atherton has another novel on hand, the hero of which is to be a Californian senator. She must be going back a long way, for it is many a year since there has been anything heroic about one of our senators. The book is to be published by John Lane of New York.

Miss Mary E. Braddon, who is now sixty-two years old, will soon have another novel ready for publication. Miss Braddon began to write in 1862 and since then there have been but two years in which she has not issued a romance.

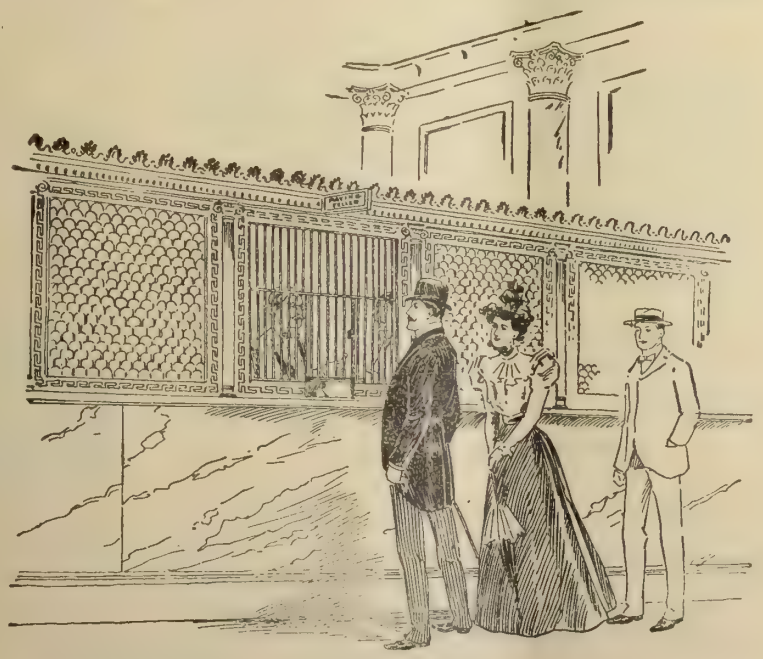
Much to-do as has been raised over the MacGregor poem Me und Gott, it is said that the German emperor, in his private capacity, considers it a great joke. Sensible man!

A contemporary states that "Mary Dickens', granddaughter of the novelist, is about to bring out a piece of fiction dealing with theatrical life." Italics are mine.

Munsey's for June had a story by Arthur McEwen, As She was Born, and among the storiettes The Upper Hand bears the signature Juliet Wilbor Tompkins.

The three hundred and fifty dollar prize story, The Statement of Jared John, son, in the June number of the Black Cat was by Geraldine Bonner.

THE BOOKWORM.



I think every man I see uses R·I·P·A·N·S.

Mr. Barry, our manager, takes one after every meal and so does his father and sister. The old gentleman has rheumatism if he don't take R·I·P·A·N·S. They use twelve a day in that house.

About half the people I know carry one of those 5-cent cartons all the time in their vest pockets.

I was in the Bowery Savings Bank to draw some money, and while I was waiting in the line a clerk came up to the paying teller and said: "Give me a Ripans!" The teller took a carton out of his pocket and handed it to the clerk, who took out one of the Tabules and handed the carton back. Then I watched him and saw him go to the water cooler and swallow the Tabule with some water; I saw him tip his head back.

It's just wonderful how everybody takes them.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents. RIPANS TABULES may also be had of grocers, general storekeepers, news agents and at liquor stores and barber shops.

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

Wm. B. Hooper, Manager — San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA

1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY.

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

Pacific Carriage Co.

OLIVER HINKLEY, SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.

STANDS:

General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street

California Hotel — N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny — 48 Eighth Street

TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 — Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

A. D. Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty
Open Day and Night — Telephone Main 971

EDUCATIONAL

Ziska Institute...

1718 Sacramento Street near Van Ness.

Thorough English Course. Foreign Languages taught rationally. Art and Music advantages the best. Prepares for American or European Colleges. . . Number of pupils limited. . . . . .

Day and Home School for Girls

Next term opens Aug 3, 1899 — MME. B. ZISKA, M. A., Principal

Room for Four Boarding Pupils

L. D. VENTURA, B. E.

FORMERLY OF BOSTON

Private and Class Lessons in French

Apply by correspondence to
Mt. Tamalpais Military Academy, San Rafael, Cal., or — Terms Moderate
Pacific Conservatory of Music, 525 Sutter St.
Evening Classes, Monday and Thursday at 8.
at Pacific Conservatory of Music

TRINITY SCHOOL...

3300 WASHINGTON ST
SAN FRANCISCO

(FOUNDED 1876) Boarding and Day School for Young Men and Boys

Prepares for university and college.

Accredited with the University of California and the Leland Stanford University. A faculty of eleven professors and teachers.

Boarders limited to thirty-five. — Christmas term opens August 1st

REV. DR. E. B. SPALDING, Rector.

IRVING INSTITUTE...

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies

N. E. Cor. California and Buchanan Sts., S. F.

Seminary, Conservatory of Music, Department for Children.

Carriage will call. Next Session will begin Aug. 7, 1899.
For Catalogue address the Principal.

REV. EDWARD CHURCH, A. M.

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

—PRICE, $3.00—

Saws of every description made to order.
Planing and Currier Knives, Lace Leather, Emery Wheels, Saw Mandrels, etc
Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE

DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1029½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh.
Office Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND

DENTIST.
Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL

DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S W. corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas."

BUSH AND SON

DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 206 Kearny St., S. F. Rooms 310-308-309 'Phone Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN

VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone, 4118, San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street, Telephone 66. 1529 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

FRANCIS STUART

TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK

HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON

MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone, Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LOUIS CREPAUX

(Member Paris Grand Opera)

HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

PIERCE & TAYLOR

STORAGE WAREHOUSE, 735 Market Street-Opposite Grant avenue. Furniture, Pianos, Trunks, Paintings, Mirrors and other goods stored in clean, light dry lofts. Charges moderate. Telephone Black 311.

DECKELMAN BROS.

RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON

COAL and WOOD; wholesale and retail dealer 628 and 630 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts., San Francisco. Telephone East 12

LEGAL NOTICES

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE
WHY REALTY SHOULD NOT BE MORTGAGED

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE of HARRY I. THORNTON, Deceased. } Department No. 9, Probate. No. 15,715.

Upon reading and filing the verified petition of Bessie Thornton, praying that the executrix of the estate of Harry I. Thornton, deceased, be authorized, empowered and directed to execute a note and to secure the payment of such note, to mortgage the real estate belonging to said estate, which is described as follows, to-wit:

All that certain tract of land situated in the County of Contra Costa, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at an ash tree 12 inches in diameter, marked S X S with two notches on the east and west sides from which a sycamore tree 20 inches in diameter bears north 9 degrees east 81 links distant; this corner is about 60 chains by a direct line down San Pablo Creek from the northeast corner of the McCoun Place; the said ash tree stands in the middle of a gulch on the west side of San Pablo Creek; thence west 147.88 chains to a stake forming the southwest corner hereof; thence north 100 chains (by true meridian) to the northwest corner hereof; thence east 65.88 chains to San Pablo Creek: at an elder tree 16 inches in diameter in the bed of the Creek; marked S X S with two notches on the south and west sides the northeast corner; thence up center of creek with its meanderings to point of beginning; containing 1000 acres of land and no more; the said tract being a portion of the Sobrante, situate in Contra Costa County and on the west side of San Pablo Creek; in the Cruizita Valley:

All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Fresno, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

According to the official plats and system of surveys of the Government of the United States; in township 13 south range 19 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, of section 34, the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter, and the south half of the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter, containing 60 acres of land, more or less, and also all water, water rights and privileges in anywise appurtenant or belonging to said land or any part thereof:

The southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 5 in township 14 south of range 19 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Lots 7 and fractional southwest quarter of southeast quarter of section 27; lot 1 and south half of northwest quarter and west half of northeast quarter of section 34, in township 12 south of range 19 east of Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, and containing 255.05 acres, more or less, as per survey:

Lot numbered 2 of northwest quarter of section 34 in township 12 south of range 19 east of Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, containing 35.71 acres of land, according to the United States Government survey:

All those pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Kings, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a point on the north or west bank of Kings River where the north line of section 1, township 17 south range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, intersects said bank; running thence due west along said north line of said section 4055 feet more or less, to the northwest corner of said section, thence due south along west line of said section 1870 feet and 5 inches, more or less, to a point on the north bank of Cole Slough, and thence along the north bank of Cole Slough and the north bank of Kings River following the meanderings thereon, to the point of beginning; the same being all of said section 1, lying north of Kings River and Cole Slough, and containing 87 acres, more or less:

Beginning at a point on the north bank of Cole Slough, where the westerly line of said section 1, township 17 south range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, intersects said bank, and running thence due north 1092 feet and 5 inches to a point; thence due west 1320 feet to a point; thence due south 582 feet to a point on the north bank of said Cole Slough; thence along the north bank of said Cole Slough following the meanderings thereof, to the point of beginning; containing 22.6 acres of land, and being a portion of the northeast quarter of section 2, township 17 south, range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian:

Those certain parcels of land situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, more particularly described as follows, to-wit:

One undivided third part of that certain lot situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the intersection of the southeasterly line of Market street with the northerly line of Seventeenth street; thence easterly along the northerly line of Seventeenth street 109 feet 8 inches; thence at right angles northerly 93 feet 9 inches to the southeasterly line of Market street; thence southwesterly along said line of Market street 144 feet 3 ½ inches to the point of beginning; being a part of Mission Block No. 115 as delineated on the official map of the City and County of San Francisco;

All that certain lot or parcel of land situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, particularly described as follows, to wit:

Commencing at a point on the east line of Castro street 180 feet south from the southerly line of Sixteenth street; thence south along the east line of Castro street 25 feet; thence at right angles east 94 feet 4½ inches; thence northeast 46 feet 2¾ inches; thence west 123 feet 7½ inches to the point of beginning:

IT IS ORDERED, that all persons interested in said Estate appear before the above-entitled Court on the 24th day of July, 1899, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., of that day, at the Court-room of said Court, Department No. 9 thereof, at the New City Hall in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, then and there to show cause, if any they can, why the said real estate or some part thereof, should not be mortgaged for the amount mentioned in said petition, to-wit: Twelve thousand six hundred and forty-three and 54-100 ($12,643.54) Dollars, or such lesser amount as to the Court shall seem meet, as is more fully set forth in said petition, reference to which is hereby made for further particulars.

Dated June 21, 1899.

J. V. COFFEY,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Section 1578 C. C. P.

Endorsed.
Filed June 21, 1899.
WM. A. DEANE, Clerk.
By V. F. NORTHROP, Deputy Clerk.

TOWN TALK prints Briefs and Transcripts

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, IN AND FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO.

In the Matter of the Estate and Guardianship of CHARLES PRETTEJOHN, sometimes known as Charles Pettejohn, an insane person.

E. MYRON WOLF, the guardian of the estate of Charles Prettejohn sometimes known as Charles Pettejohn, an insane person, having filed his petition herein praying for an order of Court directing him to sell either at public or private sale the real and personal property owned by said Charles Prettejohn for the purposes therein set forth and,

IT APPEARING to the Court from said petition that it is necessary and will be for the advantage, benefit and best interests of the said Charles Prettejohn and his estate to sell the real estate and personal property described in said petition and which said guardian prays should be sold,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED by this Court that all persons interested in said estate and the next of kin of said Charles Prettejohn appear before said Superior Court on Tuesday, the 18th day of July, 1899, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Department Number Ten (10) thereof, in the New City Hall in said City and County of San Francisco, State aforesaid, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said guardian to sell so much of the real and personal property of the said Charles Prettejohn at either private or public sale as shall be deemed necessary, expedient and beneficial.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of this order be published at least once a week for three successive weeks in TOWN TALK, a newspaper published in said City and County.

DONE IN OPEN COURT this 17th day of June, 1899.

CARROLL COOK,
Judge.

E. MYRON WOLF,
Attorney, Rooms 1015-1016 Claus Spreckels Building.

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. 2

CHRISTINA JACOBY, Plaintiff vs. HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant } Action brought in the Superior Court City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff

The People of the State of California send Greeting to:

HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therin within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of Plaintiff since the 11th day of December A. D. 1897, and for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of defendant's willful neglect of said Plaintiff for more than one year last past; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Christina Penders, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT. } Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased,

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Joseph F. Byrne administrator of the estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said administrator at the office of his attorneys, Messrs Lent and Humphrey, Rooms 54-55 Crocker Building, San Francisco, the same being his place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOSEPH F. BYRNE
Administrator of the estate of Thomas Byrne, Deceased

Dated at San Francisco, July 1, 1899.

LENT & HUMPHREY, Attorneys for Administrator,
Crocker Building, San Francisco.

Notice to Creditors

Estate of JOHN BONNER, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Geraldine Bonner, administratrix of the Estate of JOHN BONNER, deceased, to the Creditors, of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administratrix at the office of Gordon & Young, Rooms 6, 7, 8 and 9, No. 14 Sansome street, in the City and County of San Francisco, the same being her place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

GERALDINE BONEER,
Administratrix of the estate of John Bonner, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, June 7, 1899.
GORDON & YOUNG, Attorneys for Administratrix.

LEGAL NOTICES

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

Department No. 2.

ANNA DE LAWCZYNSKI, Plaintiff vs. THEOPHILE F. DE LAWCZYNSKI, Defendant	Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA SEND GREETING TO:

Theophile F. de Lawczynski, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful neglect of plaintiff for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of Defendant's willful desertion of said Plaintiff since the 15th day of March, 1898; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Anna Fabry, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT.	Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of JOHN O'BRIEN, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, John A. Drinkhouse, administrator of the Estate of JOHN O'BRIEN deceased, to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice to the said John A. Drinkhouse, administrator as aforesaid, at his offices, No. 402 Montgomery Street, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being his place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the said City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOHN A. DRINKHOUSE,
Administrator of the estate of
John O'Brien Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, June 24, 1899.

A RUEF, Attorney for Administrator,
402 Montgomery Street.

DIVIDEND NOTICES

THE CONTINENTAL BUILDING AND LOAN Association of California, 222 Sansome Street, has declared for the six months ending June 30, 1899, a dividend of 6 per cent per annum on ordinary deposits, 7 per cent on one-year term deposits, 10 per cent to class "F" stock, and 14 per cent to class "A" stock. WILLIAM CORBIN, Secretary.

DIVIDEND NOTICE—Savings and Loan Society, 101 Montgomery street, corner of Sutter. The board of directors declared a dividend for the half year ending June 30, 1899, at the rate of three and eighty-four one hundredths (3.84) per cent per annum on term deposits and three and twenty hundredths (3.20) per cent per annum on ordinary deposits, free of taxes, and payable on and after Saturday, July 1, 1899. Dividends not called for are added to and bear the same rate of dividend as the principal from and after July 1, 1899. CYRUS W. CARMANY, Cashier.

OFFICE OF THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY, cor. Market, McAllister and Jones streets, San Francisco, June 23, 1899—At a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of this society, held this day, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one-third (3⅓) per cent per annum on all deposits for the six months ending June 30, 1899, free from all taxes, and payable on and after July 1, 1899.

ROBERT J. TOBIN, Secretary.

Recreation Park
Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets
BASE-BALL
EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY
San Francisco vs. Watsonville
July 8th and 9th

ESTABLISHED 1863

GOLD PEBBLE SPECTACLES
EYE GLASSES
OPERA FIELD AND MARINE GLASSES

COMPLICATED CASES OF DEFECTIVE VISION DIAGNOSED FREE OF CHARGE

824 MARKET STREET, PHELAN BUILDING, Near Fourth.

To Chicago in 3½ Days
To New York in 4½ Days
VIA
Chicago Union Pacific
AND
Northwestern Line
Through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Buffet-Library Cars with Barber daily . . .
All Meals Served a la Carte in Dining Cars
For full information address
R. R. Ritchie, General Agent
PACIFIC COAST
No. 2 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco
PALACE HOTEL

"PIONEER LIMITED"
BETWEEN
St. Paul and Chicago

Finest and most complete train on Earth
C. L. CANFIELD, General Agent,
636 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

Town Talk does Job Printing

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St., Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway.
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street.

THE GREAT

SHASTA REGION

RUGGED PICTURESQUE SUBLIME

A FEW OF ITS ATTRACTIONS

SHASTA the Grandest Snow Peak in America
THE CASTLE CRAGS Scenic Marvels
Dense Forests, Alpine Lakes
A Pure Atmosphere
Dashing Mountain Streams
Comfortably Warm Days
Comfortably Cool Nights
TAVERN OF CASTLE CRAGS
Leading Mountain Hostelry of the West
Numerous Resorts
With Fine Mineral Springs
Good Hotels, Reasonable Rates

The climate is peculiarly adapted for camping, and there are many established camps, affording home comforts and accommodations, bountiful board and rare opportunity for rest and recreation.

All the points of interest in this famous region are reached by the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY'S SHASTA ROUTE. Surprisingly cheap excursion rates from all parts of the State.

Folders containing full information can be obtained of

ANY SOUTHERN PACIFIC AGENT

S. A. WHITE H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W. H. PORTER
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 SAN FRANCISCO

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.
DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF
PAPER
Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty
401-403 Sansome St.
SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence

Livery and Sale Stables

423 Post Street,
W. E. BRIDGE, Proprietor
Telephone No. 1323 San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY
Office, 1004 Market Street
TELEPHONE, SOUTH—420

TELEPHONE MAIN 240
George D. Graham
MANUFACTURER OF
Printing and Lithographic INKS
Printers' Rollers and Composition
Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials
529 COMMERCIAL ST.
Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.
Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.
609 Sacramento St.,
San Francisco, Cal.

W. SCHEPPLER
DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer
of
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
Schillinger's Patent Sidewalk and Gardenwalk a specialty
Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

LEE D. CRAIG
NOTARY PUBLIC AND COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS
316 MONTGOMERY STREET,
Bet. Pine and California
San Francisco, Cal.

UNITED STATES BREWERY
311-313 FULTON STREET
CELEBRATED Steam Beer
ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS

MAISON TORTONI
S. CONSTANTIN PROPRIETOR.
French Rotisserie
Private Dining Rooms, Banquet Hall. 111 O'Farrell St.

A No. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton
JAS. P. DUNNE & CO.
No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL
Fourth and Market Sts.
Overcoats and Valises Checked Free
TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR
THE MANHATTAN
25 Geary Street, S. F.
Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5611

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world

Summer Resorts

The Resorts in this column are recognized as the leading ones in the State.

Special advantages of each place, railroad fares, modes of transportation, etc., will be furnished upon application at TOWN TALK office, 40 Ellis street, or by writing direct to resorts. The Commercial Transfer Co. will call for all trunks, for summer resorts upon an order from TOWN TALK, for 25 cents for the round trip. When writing please mention TOWN TALK.

Highland Springs

THE GREAT SANITARIUM OF THE WEST

Open every day in the year. New hotel elegantly furnished. Table unsurpassed. Lighted by electricity. Thousands cured by its waters. Finest swimming tank, bowling alley and dancing hall in Lake County, together with complete livery stable, gentle saddle-horses and ponies.

Over Thirty Kinds of Mineral Springs

Physician in attendance; superb climate; beautiful mountain scenery; trout, deer and small game plentiful; magnificent drives; baths in variety; lawn tennis and croquet.

Reached by the shortest stage route into Lake County. Round trip fare from San Francisco, via Hopland, $8; via Calistoga, $9.

Hotel and cottage rates, $10 to $14 per week.

Take the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad to Hopland or Southern Pacific Railroad to Calistoga.

For further information, address J. CRAIG, Highland Springs, Lake County, Cal., or see L. D. CRAIG, at 316 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

Highland Springs Mineral Waters on sale at the Oakland Pioneer Soda Water Company's, Thirteenth and Webster streets, Oakland, and by Ahrens, Pein & Bullwinkle, 620 Post street, San Francisco.

BLUE LAKES HOTEL

Conducted in a quiet home-like manner. The best of tables, fine fishing and hunting. Inclosure of 25x60 feet in shallow water for women and children. Rates $10 to $12 per week in hotel or cottages according to location. Ample accommodations. Round trip, good for six months, $9.50, via S.F and N. P. to Ukiah, thence by stage from Palace Hotel.

Address J. WILSON, Bertha P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

LAUREL DELL . . .

Increased facilities for comfort and pleasure. New dining room, 32x170 feet, overlooking lake. Driving, boating, bathing, fishing, bowling, etc. Lighted by gas.

H. WAMBOLD, Bertha P. O., Lake Co.

ANDERSON SPRINGS . . .

Lake County

Natural Steam, Hot Sulphur and Iron Baths. Rates, $8 to $14 a week; telephone. Round trip, $8. Write for particulars.

J. ANDERSON, Proprietor,
Anderson Springs, Middletown P. O.

HOTEL EL PASO DE ROBLES

THE FLOWER OF CALIFORNIA RESORTS

Modern in every sense, large rooms handsomely furnished. Moderate prices. Close by are the celebrated mud baths. They are most effective in the case of rheumatism, liver and kidney troubles. They act as a strong but soothing poultice drawing out the poisons of disease and strengthening the patient.

VISIT EL PASO DE ROBLES.

OTTO E. NEVER, PASO ROBLES, CAL.

CITY OFFICE, 638 MARKET ST

...Cypress Lawn...

FRUIT FARM; PLEASANT HOME good table; mountain water; free rides terms reasonable.

MRS. T. H. EPLEY, Napa , al

Howard Springs . . .

Lake County, (Putah P. O.)

Hot and cold mineral springs; hot steam and plunge baths of great healing power—will cure rheumatism, nervous diseases kidney troubles, etc. Terms $10 and $12 per week. Special rates to families. Postoffice and telephone. Round trip tickets $10 at Southern Pacific office.

Address MRS. R. J. BEEBY.

Bonanza Springs . . .

Lake County, Cal.

A NATURAL camping ground; five different mineral springs. We cater to campers only, and invite all who want good water pure air, fishing and hunting, to come. Hot and cold mineral baths. Cottages neatly furnished to rent from $1.50 per week. Provisions, hay, grain etc., can be purchased on the grounds. Teams meet stage at Seiglers.

Address R. F. DOCKERY, Bonanza Spgs., Putah P. O., Lake Co.

Hotel Benvenue and Cottages

LAKEPORT, CALA.

Situated on the shore of Clear Lake. Special facilities for families and children; home cooking boating bathing, billiards and shuffle board, hunting and fishing. Pavilion on the lake, containing bowling alley and large dance hall for use of guests only. Acetylene gas used.

FRANK & A. M. SCALES, Proprietors.

Parker Vineyard Summer Resort

Situated in the most pleasant spot of Cloverdale, the Eden of Sonoma County.

Natural attractions without limit. pleasant walks through canyons, fishing, hunting, etc. Plenty of fresh vegetables, fruits, butter, milk and eggs.

Large, new dining-room, shade and all comforts. Rates, $7.00 per week, children under twelve, $3.50. Free conveyance to and from all trains, when notified.

J. D. WINTER, Prop., Cloverdale, Cal.

Agua Caliente Springs Hotel,

SONOMA VALLEY

Two hours from San Francisco, via Tiburon Ferry. Warm mineral swimming and tub baths. Water, gas, electric bells. Rates, $10 to 12 per week, $2 per day.

Address AGUA CALIENTE SPRINGS,
Agua Caliente, Sonoma Co., Cal.

SUMMER RESORTS

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging

Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room, telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5.50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References, any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

GLENBROOK . . . Lake County, California

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish, If you want to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation, If you want pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an exhilarating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O. W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

San Francisco Sanitarium

Telephone Main 1240

MENTAL AND NERVOUS DISEASES A SPECIALTY

LOCATION, Reasonable Terms to Physicians

Former residence of Peter Donohue, Esq.
Cor. Second and Bryant and Stanley Place, Mrs. Reeves Atkinson
SAN FRANCISCO MATRON

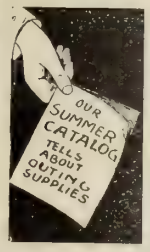
BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory

40 ELLIS ST., Rooms and 2

SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00

Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

Town Talk does Printing of all Kinds



Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST
TEL. MAIN 5522.

3253 FILLMORE ST.
TEL. WEST 152

FULTON

LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY

246 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.

Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons; Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 561c

"TOWN TALK"

Moise's

ARTISTIC RAISED LETTER SIGNS

MOISE'S EASY SHINE. MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO, SHELTERED FROM OCEAN WINDS AND FOGS. VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE; EASY TERMS. AMERICAN LAND AND TRUST CO., 132 MARKET STREET, S. F.

LARKSPUR

Is destined to be the metropolis of Marin County and is San Francisco's most popular suburb. It is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mount Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially, Eminent physicians pronounce it a great sanitarium.

A Great Sanitarium

Many attractions are offered—such as sea bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks snd drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations; for, Larkspur is building up more rapidly than any other town on the N. P. C. R. R. Large esidences and cottages for sale on installment payments. Do not pay rent when the same money will purchase a beautiful home. Cottages for rent; property exchanged.

AMERICAN LAND and TRUST CO.

132 MARKET STREET

Mont Rouge Vineyard

Livermore Valley · California

CHAUCHÉ & BON,

PROPRIETORS

Office and Depot, 17 First St.

Telephone Main 1514 SAN FRANCISCO.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .

Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,

Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States

Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,

San Francisco.

Don't LOSE A

GOOD OPPORTUNITY

Big Reductions

25 to 50 Per Cent Saved

Clearance Sale

Odds and Ends--Broken Sizes

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 Market Street

Telephone, Main--1659 San Francisco

GERMEA

THE

KING

OF

BREAKFAST

FOODS

Town Talk Prints Menus

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY

TOWN TALK

PACIFIC LITERATURE SOCIETY MUSIC STAGE POLITICS

San Francisco, July 15, 1899 Vol. 7—No. 359 Price, 10 Cents

This Paper not to be taken from the Library.

WATER——LIGHT

Water works and electric light plants for country clubs and residences Contracts taken for complete installations, and all work fully guaranteed. Only the best class of work solicited. No steam, heat, or danger.

HERCULES GAS ENGINE WORKS, [Inc.]

305 Market St., S. F.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teaches { Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS: 3:30 TO 4:30

You should ride a

STEARNS

Cushion Frame Bicycle

Safe Deposit Vaults

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

N. W. corner of Bush and Sansome Streets.

STORES Trunks for one dollar a month.

RENTS Safes for $5 a year, furnishing the most perfect security for valuables of all descriptions.

Office hours, 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS
AT HOME

Call and see

The Thermal Bath Cabinet

Baldwin Pharmacy

119-121 Ellis Street

A NOTABLE EVENT!

Family Excursion

to Santa Cruz

SUNDAY, JULY 23

Splendid Trains of First-Class Coaches

A VERY LOW RATE OF FARE

Besides Swimming, Boating and Driving, Excursionists will have an opportunity to visit the League of the Cross Encampment.

The round-trip rate for this occasion has been placed at the very low price of

$2.00

and special excursion tickets will be placed on sale at the Grand Hotel ticket office on July 19th, 20th, 21st and 22d, and at the depot ticket office on the morning of the excursion. Those intending to avail themselves of this opportunity will take the 7:45 A. M. boat from the San Francisco ferry landing. Trains leave Fourteenth and Franklin street at 7:45 A. M. and from Alameda-Park street at 8:20 A. M. Returning, excursionists will be landed at San Francisco at 8:05 P. M.

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,187,617.90
Capital actually paid up in cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1898	27,656,613.03

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, July 1, 1899,	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital,	1,000,000
Reserve Fund,	205,215
Contingent Fund,	442,763

E. B POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President

LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER ROBERT WATT THOMAS MAGEE DANIEL E. MARTIN GEORGE C. BOARDMAN W. C. B. DE FREMERY ALBERT MILLER GEO. TASHEIRA E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

DO YOU KNOW

A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT

Send or Sample Copy of the

OAKLAND TRIBUNE

and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco

Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

OCEANIC Steamship Company

The S. S. Australia

Sails for Honolulu Wednsday, July 26, at 2 p.m.

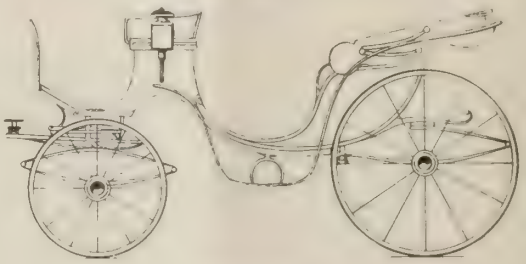
The S.S. MARIPOSA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, July 12, at 10 p.m.

Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.

FREIGHT OFFICE—327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A N Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart, H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.

California Optical Co. Scientific & Manufacturing Opticians Strictly Reliable

You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, July 15, 1899

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

IT IS generally supposed that all music has soothing effects but it has remained for President Harper of the Chicago university to discover that there is some music which is demoralizing. He has issued an edict against "A Hot Time in the Old Town," a tune that has served to inspire our troops in Cuba and in the Philippines. It is, according to one musical authority, an Ethiopian chef-d'œuvre, and at a recent re-union of the rough riders at Las Vagas it was referred to by Mr. Lafe Young of Iowa as "the second 'Battle Hymn of the Republic.'" Our colored troops never fought more nobly than they did at Santiago under the inspiring influences of that rollicking appeal to their lighter spirits. And it was not long ago that it was regarded, in this city, as appropriate wedding music. Yet President Harper of that cultured college of the embalmed beef borough inveighs against it on the score of immorality. Its ethical significance is offensive to him, more so perhaps than the couchee couchee, which as he probably knows is associated with a performance which he can hardly regard as edifying. But we have never heard of any objection to that seductive composition emanating from Chicago's seat of learning and culture. "A Hot Time" is the one tune that must be eliminated from the repertory of the college band. "The tune," says President Harper "is vulgar and immoral and its effect upon undergraduates is demoralizing." If his objection were based on the ground that it was a sample of musical syncopation, and that he considered that sort of thing vulgar from a classical standpoint, we could understand the purpose of his censorship. He probably is as well versed in music as President Jordan is in fish, and the telescoping of one tune by another is probably as offensive to his sense of harmony as the baiting of a trout with an angle-worm is to the piscatorial soul of our Palo Alto fisherman. But wherein the tune is immoral it is difficult to imagine. It is certainly not one of those pieces of music that are wedded to immortal verse but it surely serves to smooth away the ruder sounds of earth and help us forget some of the miseries of life.

THE NEXT national campaign is destined to be one of the hottest in the history of the country. McKinley is to be the choice of the republican party again and Bryan is to be given one more trial by the democracy. These are not mere predictions; they are the inevitable consequence of conditions that prevail all over the country. It will be a campaign of unusual torridity because while Mr. McKinley will stand on his war record the democratic orators and press will excoriate him for the alleged infamy of his administration. No man that occupied the presidential chair was ever called upon to answer such grave charges as will be hurled at the friend of Hanna and Alger when he comes before the people to seek their endorsement of the policy which he has pursued. It would be difficult to refer to a single act of his administration which it is not proposed to cite in connection with a story of his reprobation. It is alleged that a political trust holds his personal notes which were executed in 1883 to enable him to go through insolvency, and that they are now used as whip and spur to direct his official course. He is accused of having bribed old John Sherman in his dotage to leave the Senate for the state department to make room for Hanna and that later he drove Sherman into retirement to create a vacancy for John Hay and thereby to pay his political debts to the Western Union of which Hay is one of the principal owners. He put Alger—so the campaign indictment reads—in the war department in consideration of money advanced for election expenses, and he made Wilson secretary of the agricultural department at the behest of the beef poisoners whose wares he would have to inspect. He called Gage to the treasury at the instigation of Kohlsaat, the Chicago editor whose paper has just borrowed four hundred thousand dollars from Gage's bank. And that is not all. Griggs was made attorney-general to take care of the trusts, while Choate was sent to England to please the Vanderbilts who wanted to get rid of him so that they could elect Depew to the Senate. Moreover it has been ascertained that he tried to avert hostilities with Spain to please the owners of a heavy Spanish debt for whose benefit the twenty millions were paid for the Philippines at the wind-up of the war. The purchase of boats at three prices will not be forgotten and evidence will be produced that Abner McKinley, the brother of the President, had a hand in every big contract awarded during the war. These being some of the Mausers in the campaign arsenal it can readily be understood that there is destined to be some very rapid firing. As the president appears to be intent upon thrusting his war record into the fray, probably it would be well for him to have it protected behind armor plate.

THAT A WRITER of fiction should discover the solution of a sanitary problem that has puzzled men of science for many years may seem strange, but that is what Victor Hugo did, and the city of Paris is soon to enjoy the benefit of the practical exposition of his views. In "Les Miserables" Hugo delved into the sewers of Paris and brought up considerable valuable and interesting information about those subterranean channels. Incidentally he discussed the sewage question from the standpoint of utility and he advanced the theory that there could be no better way of disposing of a city's sewage than to utilize it for farming purposes. The soundness of his views on this subject has lately been demonstrated by the construction of a system in Paris which has gone into operation. Instead of being conducted into the Seine as heretofore the entire sewage of the metropolis now pours into one large drain and is carried to a waste territory in the suburbs where it is utilized in the fertilization of two great farms. It pours upon a sandy plain out of which it is expected to produce pasture lands upon which the herds that are to supply Paris with milk will graze. This enterprising experiment is no doubt the result of the argument of the great French novelist. He had given the subject deep study and the earnestness of his views must have impressed itself upon the minds of sanitary engineers. The experiment will be watched with interest all over the world for the sanitary problem is of vast importance to all large cities. Health considerations demand that the present system of transferring pollution from one point to another be abandoned and if modern progress has devised a scheme by which facilities for the promotion of agriculture are created by the correction of the evils of unsanitary conditions, the end subserved is of the highest value.

IF DR. PERRAULT could resist the temptation "to do republican politics" he would make a record that might prove advantageous in the furtherance of his political ambition. The doctor has managed to keep his skirts clean by not engaging in any of the deals that are popularly supposed to prove remunerative to hungry supervisors, but he would be entitled to greater credit for his virtuous abstinence if his loyalty to the taxpayers were manifest in all of his official acts. The day of the partisan and peanut politician in the affairs of the municipal government has passed. The doctrine to the victor belongs the spoils still obtains, but that should not be construed to mean that in providing places for the push it is proper to be extravagant in the management of one department so long as funds can be obtained by crippling another. The supervisors intend to authorize the appointment of a large number of police officers not, however, because the city is suffering from an increase of crime or is menaced by the hoodlum element. The supervisors will be permitted by the police commissioners to provide jobs for their friends on the force, and that is why the police department is favored while the fire department is to be crippled. Dr. Perrault appears to be in on the deal. He is the chairman of the finance committee, and as such is largely responsible for the tax levy for the ensuing year. Dr. Perrault is in politics with the expectation of staying for awhile, but he will have to change his tactics or suffer a severe disappointment.

SOME OF THE weekly papers have of late been giving their attention to decrying the ten cent magazines, which are represented as poor trash and doing an infinite amount of harm by reason of the inferior quality of their contents. As a matter of fact there is little if any merit in these complaints. The cheap magazines are by no means entirely given over to fiction, nor even in undue proportion to the rest of their contents, and their contributors are among the best writers of the day. Harold Frederick, Anthony Hope, Max Pemberton, Gilbert Parker, Kipling, A. Conan Doyle, Howells, Grant Allen and a dozen others might be cited, all of whom hold high places as writers of fiction. Ernest Ingersoll, Olive Thorne Miller, John Burroughs and other naturalists have not disdained the ten cent periodicals, and the best known names in all branches of literature may be found gracing their indices. In the matter of illustration there is, of course, no comparison. The half-tone portraits of actresses and prominent people are not to be mentioned beside the reproductions of artistic masterpieces, nor are photographic copies by means of the various cheap processes to be compared with the wood engravings now almost a thing of the past, and the engraved plates of the Century. None the less, in their own way, the illustrations of the cheap magazines are excellent and to a large proportion of the population of our country, a picture is a picture. If the cheap magazines were usurping the field and crowding out the Atlantic or the Century, the matter would be worth serious inquiry. As a fact these magazines do not find their circulation affected from this cause. The ten cent publications have almost entirely crowded out the Saturday Nights and Fireside Companions which used to be popular among people of moderate means who either found it easier to spare their dime a week than a larger sum all at once, or who never counted the aggregate cost and so failed to realize that their Family Story Paper cost much more than Harpers'. The cheap magazines probably cut into the circulation of weekly papers, most of which cost as much by the year as the first-class magazines and yet are rarely preserved. Moreover, business men who subscribe for these papers generally have them delivered at their offices, and read them down town, rarely burdening themselves to carry them home, whereas, the magazines, being of so much more handy form, is either bought at the news-stand, or reserved to read on the cars, with the result that the whole family has the benefit of the dollar a year. To a large proportion of the population the question is not "Shall I spend five dollars or one dollar for my magazine, ?" but "Can I afford one dollar, or nothing ?" Oftentimes five dollars must furnish all the recreation for a year and the question is whether to spend all in a lump for a high-class magazine, or to take a cheaper magazine and spend the rest on one or two visits to the theatre or on other books. Many of the girls whose weekly wage is but five or six dollars take, each, one of the dollar magazines and by exchanging with each other secure good reading matter which they would be deprived of otherwise. They can omit Munsey's stage beauties if they are so inclined or skip the sermons in the Home Journal or anything else that does not commend itself to individual taste, and find enough in historical, biographical or scientific articles to leave them in no danger of weakening their intellect by overdoses of poor fiction, or of ruining their eyesight by the vile print of the old fashioned story papers. No one who had occasion to note the disappearance of the Old Nick Carter and Three Fingered Jack style of literature from the hands of small boys making their first venture into business life as cash boys and messengers can find any fault with the substitution of Munsey's and McClure's. "Great oaks from little acorns grow" and anyone who has time and inclination to examine the early files of the Atlantic, Scribner's or Harpers' will find that they did not begin their career on quite the same plane as they now occupy. On the contrary, there will be found in them a large amount of literary matter embalmed in print which would not at this day find its way into the pages of the disdained "ten centers."

JOHN STRANGE WINTER'S recent novel, "Heart and Sword," is based upon a theme which involves one of the questions of the day, namely: "How far should a woman with a career allow it to interfere with her duties as a wife ?" That the question is not an idle one is exemplified in the lives of numerous women of all professions, from Sonia Kovalevsky, the Russian mathematical prodigy, down to our own Blanche Bates. The dramatic profession undoubtedly contains the greatest number of those whose lives might point a moral or adorn a tale, but other professions could also supply their quota. No man or woman can serve two masters and she who swears allegiance to her art or her business must of necessity fall short in that devotion to home and husband which is supposed to be one of the characteristics of the ideal wife. The novel we have referred to presents an extreme case but the case is well presented. The woman in question goes upon the stage to earn her living while waiting for a fiancé who is too poor to marry her. She achieves almost at a bound the topmost heights of success and has the most conscientious ideas of the dignity of her calling and her duties to the public. In short she is an artist utterly devoted to her art, as well as a woman of perfectly unexceptionable character and deportment. But the exigencies of her stage life bring about the inevitable. She and her husband grow apart, lose their love for each other, separate and the marriage ends in a tragedy. This is the husband's point of view: "You don't know how narrow a life an actress lives. They call it wide because they don't pay afternoon calls and they don't go to church on Sunday. Just at first it seems that there is something very free, very unfettered in the life which is led by people who make the stage the end and aim of their existence. It was what she called a narrow life to observe the outward decencies of society, as you must do if you are in society at all. When I had leave I always had to eat my dinner at an ungodly hour because she had to go to the theatre, either that or dine alone and let her dine alone. I had to seek my own amusement in the evening without her. I had to do the civil to a lot of cads she said would be useful to her and they had to be made much of, and by Jove! I had to do it. And then Kit was so wrapped up in her acting that she didn't care anything more about me." The wife admits to herself at last: "I was wedded to my art, and it cost me my husband." A woman who makes her home and her husband second to her other affairs must not complain if she fails to secure faithfulness and happiness in matrimony, and yet if she has chosen a profession and loves it and wishes to stand high in it, what is she to do ? A wife married to a great or distinguished man may and often does wholly efface herself and bend all her energies toward helping him forward, but as yet such abnegation can hardly be asked of a husband married to an ambitious woman, unless he is willing to be considered a ninny and lacking in proper manliness. Now, as of old, no one need envy the other one in the team where "the gray mare is the better horse."

BLANCHE BATES, who has had an experience somewhat similar to that of the heroine of John Strange Winter's novel, now appears to be much worried over the question as to whether an actress can be a Christian. To obtain a satisfactory answer to the question she is said to have addressed a circular letter of inquiry to a number of prominent divines. In some quarters she is suspeeted of a desire to get a lot of cheap advertising and her action in soliciting the views of divines on the subject would suggest a lack of sincerity. Blanche Bates is a sensible woman and being an actress she should be more capable of determining the question than ministers of the gospel whose knowledge of the stage is of such a character that they could give nothing but hearsay testimony. There is no reason why an actress cannot be a Christian, and we should like to know why Blanche Bates has any doubt on the subject. It may be exceedingly difficult for an actress to be a Christian but in overcoming the temptations that beset her she augments the measure of spiritual reward to which she is entitled. All that is necessary for her to do is to comply with the laws of the Christian church of whatever denomination to which she may belong. There is surely nothing in the ethics of the dramatic profession which prohibits her from so doing. She may be called upon at times to assist in the production of "The Turtle" or some other equally immoral play but it is her privilege to decline. The declination may entail the loss of her job but if she is a good actress as well as a good Christian she will not be long out of an engagement.

JUNE AND DECEMBER

TAPERING rosy fingers
Tangling in my hair;
As I lie in leafy shade
Free from every care;
Eyes, bright, clear and shining,
Dance like a flower in air.

Lying in white moonlight
On a silver bier
Cold, the keen wind toying
With her golden hair;
Fair was young Love's dawning
Bright his noon-tide glare,
O God! 'twas hollow seeming
For the foul snake, lust,
Crept there.

B. WELWYN ASHLEY.

The Saunterer

BECAUSE, sans doute, of the "ladyship" of the proprietor most of the English papers highly praise Lady Randolph Churchill's Anglo-Saxon Review, but the London Chronicle says of it: "Notwithstanding the gorgeous binding, it is nothing but a colorable imitation of the Yellow Book with the same writers, the same make-up and the same kind of contents." During the past two years the fad of authorship has steadily grown. Society women of all ages have rushed into print and those who cannot write have paid others to do it for them. Walter Besant in his "Armorel of Lyonnesse" explained how one may gain fame and money by exploiting the work of other people as one's own. The villain-hero of this story paid a brilliant artist, a talented musician, a soulful poetess and a society woman who was "on" to all the gossip of London's inner circle to let him pass off their paintings, music, poems and stories as his own. Of course when finally exposed he was very severely sat upon—but after all, from one point of view, the works were his own. He had paid for them. And I am told buying and selling of this order goes on every day in our midst. Hubert Howe Bancroft was the introducer of the system here.

However, the literary fever that rages most severely in the swim is that which calls for original work. Many of our society girls scribble in private and inspired by the success of Katherine Jarboe (Mrs. Bull) and Juliet Wilbor Tompkins they write long and late at their desks, evolving poems and love stories and dialogues of scenes in which figure the beaux and belles of the swim. They but emulate the example of Queen Victora, Carmen Sylva and other high lights of royalty. And apropos of Her Majesty the London Critic says: "Queen Victora spends much of her spare time in reading and having read to her the proofs of the 'Official Biography of the Duchess of Teck.' She also insists on seeing everything in connection with the 'Life of Beaconsfield' "—which may perhaps account for the delay in the appearance of that long-looked for publication.

And now Madame Rigo, erstwhile Princess of Chimay, has an attack of journalistic fever. She talks of starting a paper in Cairo. There will be lively times in newspaperdom as well as in society if she is as independent of law and order in the conduct of her business as she is in her life. However, in Cairo it will not so much matter and the paper will only be a tiny tempest in a tinier teapot, après tout.

From "When Knighthood was in Flower," the novel that is the present rage in the east: "Of what use, let me ask, is a friend unless you can unload your heart upon him? It matters not whether the load be joy or sorrow; if the former, the need is all the greater, for joy has an expansive power, as some persons claim steam has, and must escape from the heart upon some one else."

Although John W. Mackay is a most liberal contributor to the national campaign fund of the republican party there are few men who have fewer favors to ask the administration. Knowing as I do his generosity to his party as well as to his friends and of his diffidence in the matter of asking for favors I felt certain that as he had taken a deep interest in the case of Captain John M. Neall of the Fourth cavalry, President McKinley would probably be prevailed upon to deal leniently with that most unfortunate, brave and gallant officer. Much to my surprise the President turned a deaf ear to the pleading of Mr. Mackay and insisted upon the retirement of Captain Neall from the army. It is the old,

There isn't an ounce of headache in a barrel of it—Jesse Moore "A. A." Whisky.

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco

JOHN CAFFREY, Pacific Coast Representative

old story of the scapegoat. At any other time Captain Neall would have been reprimanded for his delinquency and probably suspended for a few months. He was particularly unfortunate in having his case brought to the attention of the authorities just at a time when the war department was writhing under the lash of public criticism. The president felt that it behooved him to make an example of somebody and Neall came along at an opportune time for the sacrifice. His greatest mistake was in neglecting to be born in Mark Hanna's state. That is where Captain Carter hails from and that enterprising individual stole one million six hundred thousand dollars in 1891, but he is still on the pay roll.

Now that Captain Neall is out of the army I suppose that his enemies will rejoice. One of the most bitter of his prosecutors was Colonel Compton of the Fourth cavalry who retired from the service a short time ago although he could have gone to the Philippines with his regiment if he had been anxious to do a little fighting. Being old enough to go on the retired list he availed himself of his privilege and being interested in the welfare of the service I am glad that he is now a private citizen. Colonel Compton had a little experience himself with a court-martial about eight years ago when he was at Walla Walla. He was the central figure, occupying the centre of the stage throughout the proceedings and when they were all over he was suspended for three years without rank or pay. If the charge against him could have been reduced to the vernacular of the day it would have read like this: "He hadn't sense enough to seek shelter when it rained." I have heard that Captain Neall once refused to become a member of Colonel Compton's staff.

Jennie Giddigirl: I don't want to go to heaven when I die.

Flossie Fatlegs: Why not? I'm sure I'd not like to go to the other place. Our greenroom is hot enough for me.

J. G. Well, but just fancy a golden-harped chorus singing not only for five hours a day, but for eternity; and no chance to get a speaking part.

It is unfortunate that the members of the last legislature who undertook to place obstacles in the way of newspaper men overlooked the interloper in journalism who writes about people in bad English. Surely there should be some redress from the fellow who was educated in the collar button and bicycle business and who manages by hook or crook to break into journalism. I have met a score of these misplaced mortals but I have in mind just now the publisher of a local monthly whose only hope for success in journalism is based upon a vain conceit born of aptitude in the art of sandbagging the unwary. His paper purports to be a medium for the advertising of hotels in the interior and he endeavors to eke out an existence by securing the patronage of proprietors of hostelries. Those who refuse to be goldbricked by this pseudo journalist receive insulting letters from him couched in bad English. Can you imagine a more serious offense against the dignity of the United States mail service? It is bad enough for the postal authorities to be required to aid the circulation of the hotel guide but it is infinitely worse to compel them to aid and abet the crime of encouraging onslaughts on the queen's English which are designed to give offense to innocent people. The only adequate penalty that I know of would be to restrict the perpetrator to the use of postal cards upon which he should be compelled to subscribe himself "An Ass." Then he would not be taken seriously. The last issue of his paper contained an ungrammatical sermon on weekly journalism. I am unable to suggest the punishment to fit the crime. No punishment that could be suggested would serve as a wholesome example. The man who tries to tell people in bad English how to conduct a newspaper is not susceptible of a deterrent influence.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

Little Willie: Papa, what is a white elephant?

Willie's papa: Sometimes it is a park lot and sometimes it is an insurance policy that you can't keep up.

Apropos of Brooke Wright, whose engagement to Miss Alice Beatty has just been made known, is a good story. Young Brooke's mother is an Episcopalian but his father, the late Judge Selden S. Wright, was a Baptist and the son, when he became of sufficient age to make a choice in religions, decided that he would follow in the footsteps of his paternal ancestors. Therefore he went before the deacons of the First Baptist church, of which his father was an honored member, and made his confession of faith. Now the feature of the Baptist ceremony of "joining the church" is immersion and oftentimes those undergoing the ceremonial find it very trying on the nerves. And Reverend William Kincaid, the officiating clergyman, said to young Wright:

"You won't be frightened, will you?"

"Not a bit," said Brooke—and the assembled deacons could not forbear a smile—"Why, I can swim like a duck."

As the baptistry is a tank not usually used for swimming purposes, the joke is readily understood.

Ben Small, assistant cashier of the custom house, has dreams and occasionally they come true. He is a wonderful man, is Ben Small. Some days ago he was short in his accounts in the sum of fifty dollars. It was not a dishonest shortage but simply an error. He had paid fifty dollars to somebody who was not entitled to the money and he could not discover how the error occurred. When he went home that evening he worried over the matter and he fell asleep worrying. And then he had a dream in which he saw the face of a prominent merchant and the merchant informed him that he had fifty dollars that belonged to the custom house. The following morning he verified his dream and received the lost money.

Wallace Pond, a purveyor of drugs at Berkeley, is, I understand, to receive from the governor the appointment to the office of labor commissioner. I believe that his special fitness for the office was demonstrated some years ago when he placed Daniel M. Burns in nomination for the office of county clerk of Yolo. The colonel has probably often wished that he had never seen the county clerk's office of Yolo but he has evidently forgiven Wallace Pond for having been instrumental in getting him the job.

Engraved . . . ✷
Wedding Announcements and Invitations . . . ✷

ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

A good banjo player has been turned loose in the person of Mr. Ashton Stevens who for some months past has been airing his opinions of things dramatic in the columns of the Call. As the Call has no longer any use for Mr. Ashton Stevens' services I suppose he will resume where he left off on the banjo. Mr. Ashton Stevens the dramatic critic was never in the same class with Mr. Ashton Stevens the banjo artist, nevertheless he wrote entertainingly of the stage and the mummers and the Call was satisfied with his work. The management of the paper recently decided to cut down the supply of free theatrical advertising on Sundays and to have the dramatic department handled by regular members of the staff. Hence the services of Mr. Ashton Stevens were dispensed with. The Sunday supplement of the Call is now in charge of A. J. Moore, who was until recently press agent of the Orpheum and who received his newspaper training in New York. He took the place of Orrin Black who is now night editor of the paper. W. A. Boyce, the oldest employe on the paper, who was formerly night editor, is now news editor.

The Call is not the only paper that has been making changes. There was a shake-up in the Examiner office the other day. The entire corps of Oakland representatives headed by Paul Goldsmith, who has been gathering news for the Examiner across the bay for many years, was recalled and little Jack Barrett, better known as "Johnny-on-the-Spot," was appointed director-general of the reorganized Oakland forces. I understand that the change was deemed advisable because the Oakland representatives had become somewhat partisan in their views of political affairs across the bay. Long association with some of the city officials has resulted in the absorption of prejudices. They will be given a chance to broaden their views in the less circumscribed field on this side of the bay.

The voice was pleasant but firm:

"No I can trust you no longer."

The listener thought it was a love scene until he discovered the fact that a Chinese fruit-peddler was speaking to the lady.

The feminine members of Ross valley's summer population will have to dispense with the pleasure of getting weighed unless they are willing to sacrifice a dime apiece for the privilege. The young ladies who have been in the habit of driving down to the station, and measuring their avoirdupois by the scale found there, have a grievance against the ticket agent whom they now denominate "a horrid old thing" where they formerly considered the gentleman one of the nicest fellows they had ever met. The reason of this change of temperature is to be found in the fact that the agent thought so much use of the scales was putting the instrument out of order and the other day, when a group of organdie-frocked damsels invaded his sanctuary, he froze the dazzling smile on their lips with the announcement: "Hereafter everybody desiring to be weighed must pay ten cents."

That it is not always well to be too precise in the use of language was exemplified in the case of a college professor who telegraphed to his wife:

"I have gotten tickets for the theatre tonight. Meet me there."

The operator transmitted the message:

"I have got ten tickets," etc., and Mrs. Professor accordingly invited eight friends to accompany her, much to the surprise of the gentleman and the lightening of his pocket-book. This is the story, ben trovato I suspect, for firstly, such a stickler for correctness would have omitted got or gotten entirely and, secondly, by so doing he would have made out a message of just ten words instead of eleven.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street. Exclusive styles in fine millinery.

AT THE GRAND:

First chappie—Every time I look at those pretty chorus girls I feel like opening wine, doncherknow.

Second chappie—Well, old boy, that's an expensive way to feel. You should take a run up to the Tivoli. The old girls up there will bring you back to a beer and sandwich appetite.

The bibulous tastes of our society matrons vary. Not long ago at a smart function a well known hostess mysteriously took a favored guest into the curtained retreat at the left of the banquet hall.

"My dear," said she in a sympathetic tone, "I know you do not care for such sweet liquor as the rest. Let me give you a glass of gin—that's the stuff that sticks to the ribs," tossing off a glass of the "stuff" as she spoke.

There's a fine, delicate taste for you. Somewhat along a different line is the remark made by another sedate matron some years ago in the hearing of several young men on a warm day:

"You can talk about your 'soft drinks' all you please, your ice cream soda, your frappéd champagne and ice cold lemonade and water ices and all that. But there's nothing, after all, that gets to the pit of my stomach like a glass of ice water!"

When the Sea Queen with the harbor commissioners and other distinguished cits, including Judge Dunne, Frank Moffitt, James H. O'Brien, Senator Bettman and a brass band, drew up alongside the transport Ohio last Wednesday afternoon, the enthusiasts aboard the tug began cheering for the Oregon troops. Every cheer that was proposed was responded to by lusty lungs. Presently "Ole Bill" English proposed three cheers for Major Harney. He referred of course to the harbor commissioner but the tug party supposed that there was a Major Harney aboard the transport and the responsive chorus was most vociferous. And then the band played "He's a jolly good fellow," after which the boys on the transport cheered. It was a great day for Major Harney.

Among those who had a score of welcoming hands extended to them on their return from the Philippines was Captain "Charley" MacDonald of the Oregon volunteers who was a passenger on one of the transports that arrived on Wednesday. Charley is one of Portland's smart set and though he is a temperance man by inclination and disdains all the vices usually boasted of by members of the inner circle he is one of the most popular young men in Portland. He has distinguished himself on the athletic field and was once centre rush of the Multnomah football team. As a drill-master he has few equals and he is up in all national guard matters. Now that he has had practical

LEDERER

123 Stockton Street

Calls attention to these facts:

Best hairdressing is only 25 cents.

Combs and hair ornaments at half the prices asked elsewhere.

Largest stock of switches in the city, and the lowest prices.

experience he will be of more value than ever as a military man, and Portland has good cause to be proud of Company H's commander. I am told that Captain MacDonald's company was in charge of the custom house during its stay in Manila and the captain received much praise for the manner in which he discharged his duties. The company was not on guard duty all the time but saw some active service, being in more than one fight.

Few young women of the Oakland swim enjoy such good times as those in which figure the daughters of U. S. Senator George C. Perkins. They only lately returned from the Yosemite where their camp, Tally-Ho, was one of the jolliest that has been pitched in the valley this season. In the party were George Bew and his mother, Mrs. George H. Bew of Alameda, Misses Mae and Pansy Perkins, Mrs. Carl Brunch and daughter, Miss Gretchen Brunch, Colonel J. J. Tobin, Mrs. Tobin and daughters, Miss Nellie and Edith Sullivan, Hon. J. J. R. Peel, a cousin of Lord Peel, ex-Speaker of the House of Commons, Miss May Bramhall, Miss Anna Kruger, Sidney Haslett, W. Whiley, Fred Russ and Roland Young. On Monday Senator Perkins left for Alaska with his daughters, Pansy and Mae, and they expect to be absent some weeks. Therefore I consider I am correct in saying that few young women in the Oakland swim—or in San Francisco either, for that matter—know so well what a good time means as do the Perkins girls.

The difference between the proprietor of our up to date yellow journal and the newspaper publisher of a generation agone is that the fin de siecle journalist spends money to startle the public by some sensational feat concerning which he may devote pages of screaming description, while his enterprising predecessor was content to confine his prodigality to the hiring of talent and the purchase of choice reading matter. Of this latter class was Robert Bonner, founder of the New York Ledger, who died last week in New York. He ever advocated the publishing of the best articles to be secured regardless of cost and to that principle much of the success of the Ledger was due. He paid Henry Ward Beecher thirty thousand dollars for his novel, "Norwood," he paid Lord Tennyson five thousand dollars for a poem and Charles Dickens a like amount for the only story he ever wrote for an American publication. One of the most popular writers in this country at that time was Fannie Fern (Mrs. Parton) whom Bonner offered twenty-five dollars a column for a story, which was refused. He afterward paid her one thousand dollars for the ten column story, "Fanny Ford." During his life he spent over six hundred thousand dollars in purchasing and breeding trotting horses but he never raced one for money. I wonder if any of the enterprising newspaper publishers of today who indulge in such luxuries as fast trains, special commissioners to interview the Shah of Shad and spectacular tug-boats would be willing to pay thirty thousand dollars for a story ?

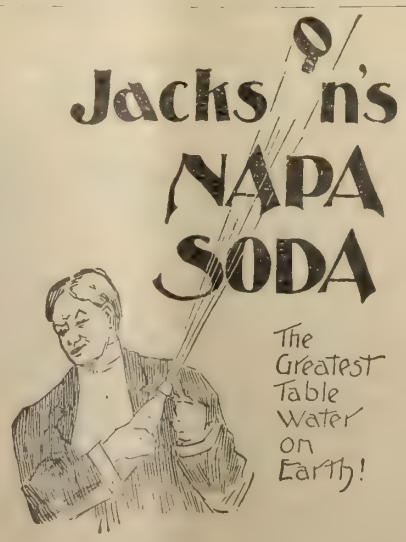
During the administration of Governor Budd eleven of the sixteen wharfingers employed on the water front were representatives of the republican party. Governor Budd promised that as soon as the complexion of the harbor commission changed the republican wharfingers would be succeeded by democrats. Two of the three present commissioners were appointed by Budd and a short time ago they voted for the appointment of two wharfingers who were elected to the last assembly on the republican ticket. The hand that is directing affairs down in the big ferry building is a hand of mystery. Politicians are trying to guess why the republican chairman of a democratic board should be permitted to exercise so much influence. There is undoubtedly an African in the water front woodpile but it is difficult to locate him.

Knowing that I am expected to give publicity to social happenings of interest I am constrained to mention that Mr. Thomas Sharkey, the prominent bruiser who has lately been affecting an eagerness for a meeting with Mr. James Jeffries the distinguished discoverer of a solar plexus counter-irritant, was the guest last week of Mr. C. A. Buckley at the Livermore home of the well known agriculturist. Mr. Sharkey was entertained in a most hospitable manner. I understand that Mr. Buckley has been a great admirer of the burly bruiser ever since that little function at the Mechanics' Pavilon in which the late Robert Fitzsimmons was treated to a great surprise. It was the first time that Mr. Buckley realized that there could be an exception to the rule which invests the victor with the spoils. The man that could lose and still get the money is an object of much interest to the Livermore farmer.

Phil Hastings is in Lake county recuperating from his recent illness.

San Diego is feeling the effect of the National Educational association's gathering at Los Angeles and the city is livelier than it has been for a long time, in spite of the fact that many of the socially prominent are out of town. Miss Opal Pierce of San Francisco is visiting the J. W. Seftons. The Jesse Grants are at La Jolla for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Southworth, who have spent the past few months in San Diego and Coronado, left this week for the grand canyon of the Colorado. The engagement of Miss Calhoun Mills of Springfield, Illinois, and Claude C. Craig of San Diego is announced. Judge Sloan and family are at La Jolla for July. Colonel F. S. Chadbourne of San Francisco is the guest of Colonel F. G. Gassen.

The old established house of J. J. O'Brien & Co. continues to hold its place in the front rank of the retail dry goods trade. Its display of black goods, laces, ribbons, gloves, ladies tailor made suits, fine quality hosiery, Corsets, Silks and boys' and children's clothing during the past week has attracted particular attention. The numerous patrons of this popular establishment are undoubtedly pleased to observe the successful business which is being transacted within its doors.



The London Academy criticises John Brisben Walker for expurgating Tolstoi's novel as it appears in the Cosmopolitan. "If no right to excise was stipulated for, the author is entitled to feel aggrieved at the excisions which have been made. The alterations and modifications are of a nature quite unnecessary from even an extreme Puritanical standpoint. Tolstoi does not mince his words nor choose his incidents with too much regard for family reading but the editor of the Cosmopolitan must have known this before he accepted the serial." The Academy, however, has not shown that the right of excision was not stipulated for and as the Cosmopolitan aims to be a magazine for general and family reading in all probability the editor knew just what he was doing when he accepted Tolstoi's novel and there is every reason to suppose that he arranged accordingly. The missing links which the Academy regrets are descriptions of scenes in low houses. If one could read the story in the original one might regret losing Tolstoi's language and style but in a translation which reads smoothly there is nothing to be gained by poring over what would not be tolerated in original English. American boys are not sent as a rule away from home to big schools nor are our girls kept in the nursery or under the eye of a governess. Whether this be the wisest plan, it is the fact and even Tolstoi's descriptions of life and adventures in houses of ill-repute are not good reading for youngsters. Moreover, as the Academy informs us that "The Awakening" is published in English without revision and as the complete novel in book form will probably be given in full there is not the slightest danger that anyone who can read will suffer from ungratified curiosity. It is said that Tolstoi's wife has no sympathy with his peculiar whims and six of his eight children sympathize with their mother. She is quite wealthy and has the copyright of several of Tolstoi's earlier books which he presented to her before he adopted his present views. These bring her an appreciable income. Tolstoi himself owns nothing and when he visits his family at Moscow he is a guest of Madame Tolstoi. I often wonder whether he would see so many virtues in poverty did he not know he held open this door of escape for, of course, whenever he becomes tired of the masquerade he can go back to affluence—and cleanliness.

The Count: My dear Miss Heiress, I am so sorry you are going. And shall I see anything of you in town this winter?

Miss Heiress: That depends on circumstances. I only wear tailor-gowns in the street but usually appear décolleté at the opera.

There is a young man sunning himself among the bright educators assembled in convention at Los Angeles who owes his presence there among the delegates to a lucky but inadvertent hit at speech-making some time since. At a meeting of prominent teachers held in one of the midland counties, the young man was suddenly called upon for some remarks. He was utterly unprepared and not a word of the subject under discussion sprang to his dulled brain. In his emergency he suddenly remembered an article he had read, having little bearing upon the subject but which might on the spur of the moment be adapted to fill a gap. Therefore he rose and gave vent in words to the article he had read. It struck the assembled auditors as one of the most remarkable extemporaneous addresses they had ever listened to and when the speaker had finished the applause was terrific. The county papers devoted columns of space to the young man and his address and when the county educators elected a delegate to the next convention the unanimous choice fell upon the embryonic Daniel Webster.

When Dr. Cohen, the quarantine officer of the local health department, had his attention called to some very active cockroaches in the steerage of the Nippon Maru he was very much surprised but he was not crestfallen. To characterize Dr. Cohen as a crestfallen medico would be to assert that it was possible for him to become dejected or disspirited or to lose his normal Vere de Vere repose, and Dr. Cohen will not confess to having any such weakness. He is a stoic at all times and under all circumstances. Yet G. Lindsay Campbell, a Chronicle reporter, had the temerity to describe the doctor as a crestfallen individual on the day of his introduction to the active marine cockroaches. The reporter no doubt felt that it behooved Dr. Cohen to be crestfallen because he had been boasting of the efficacy of the fumigation to which he had subjected the ship—a fumigation, by the way, which burnt holes in the decks and upholstered furniture but failed to destroy animal life. A few days after the article appeared which reflected upon the quarantine officer's ironclad complacancy he encountered Campbell in the street and there was a scene.

"It voz a tammed lie!" exclaimed Dr. Cohen, somewhat fiercely.

"What are you talking about?" asked the reporter, who showed no signs of fright.

"I was not krrestfawlin," was the reply.

And thus ended the incident.

Mrs. E. G. Carrera is spending the summer in Sonoma county with her parents and her sister, Miss Belle Herzer. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watson are enjoying a tour through the south of England and it will be some months before they return to California.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny Street. Elegant line of Mourning Bonnets

Dr. Pierre Bernard — Hamati's Pupil

SECOND SUPREME INSTRUCTOR of the TANTRIK ORDER IN AMERICA . . .

HYPNOTISM as it applies to Medicine, Surgery and Business.

INSTRUCTIONS

Treatments—All diseases of the mind and nervous system....

Hotel Marechal Niel
404 Ellis Street

SHOES MADE TO ORDER

Hand Sewed, $5.50 — Repairing Done Nicely

Machine Sewed, $3.50

Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold Cheap.

Telephone Polk 18 — T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

Utica Cleansing Compound AND Utica Compound Paste.....

TRADE MARK TIACU

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society, 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

This compound is made of pure and unadulterated drugs
Used for Baths and Shampoo it will make the skin soft and white.

For Swollen and Painful Feet it is unrivaled.

For Poison Oak and Prickly Heat it is a sure remedy.

Suitable for cleansing anything

SAMUEL SEYMOUR,
21 SPEAR ST., S. F. — Pacific Coast Agent.

Job Burns, aged eighty-five years, one of the immortal "Six hundred," was recently sentenced for three months for begging in the public streets of Londan. How long will it be before some of our own volunteers will find themselves in the same predicament? Other things being equal, all of what are commonly known as "political appointments" should be held by ex-volunteers but there is no danger of anything of that kind coming to pass while there are "workers" to be had who are wise enough to stay at home and keep up their fences. We shall soon begin to hear again of the "soldiers' vote" but bear in mind, the "heeler" has votes by the score and it is numbers that count.

"I am not surprised that Jenks has made a record at football."

"Why? Was he always athletic?"

"No, but he was the champion kicker at our boarding house fare last winter."

Last Saturday evening the Haywards hotel at Haywards was the scene of a brilliant gathering, the occasion being a progressive euchre party. Nine tables were arranged for the game. The guests assembled at half past eight and a spirited contest was held for over two hours. The prizes were well selected and much appreciated. The first prize (lady's) was won by Mrs. George Reed, the gentleman's by Judge J.C.B. Hebbard, who is as well versed in cards as he is in the law. The consolation prizes were won by Mrs. John Curtis and Mr. Wright. After the game light refreshments were served and then the guests indulged in dancing.

I often wonder why it is that ladies with reputations that are a trifle ragged at the seams usually choose some spa as their annual summer outing-place? It is so abroad and it is much the same in our state. Probably it is because only people possessing comfortable incomes can afford to go to the springs and that there are always to be found at these places, drinking the sulphur or iron water, wealthy old widowers or bachelors who—perforce for the lack of other modes of murdering time—act the role of invalids and are sufferers from rheumatism or kidney troubles for the time being. These are easy prey for the women who swell their incomes at others' expense. At one of the California resorts of this nature—I shall not indicate which one, but it is a "springs" and high-priced—a centre of attraction is a very beautiful young woman who lately came into a fortune by the death of her sister. She has long been déclassé but she manages to get along without social recognition and has a good time wherever she pitches her tent. Now, at this same healthful retreat are staying a prominent lawyer and also a gentleman well known in the business world of San Francisco. They are both elderly and one of them is known to be not a little susceptible to feminine charms. Though I have heard nothing definite, I can easily fancy how pleasant the sojourn of these two elderly gentlemen at the springs may be made, through the close proximity of the pretty young women referred to.

I am told that the economies indulged in by some members of the local swim who desire to enjoy an outing, yet find it difficult to pay for it, would make good reading for their friends. There is one family that is so swell that it even calls the waiters and chambermaids in a country tavern by their last names, and which is at present sojourning at a resort in the Sonoma county redwoods. This family prides itself upon its ability to speak English with the real London accent and the daughters are astonishing the natives of the redwoods with their style of dress and their manner of speech. Referring to these people the other day a club man of my acquaintance told me that he had heard that the feminine head of the family was so economical that she fed her servants on liver every day. A new maid just making her advent into the dormitory of domestics inquired the reason of the monotony of the daily fare.

"That is easily answered," said the footman. "The butcher gives the liver for nothing."

I heard, also, of another family prominent in the swim. They live at a smart private hotel and both monsieur and madame are aristocratic to the backbone. Their disdain of the common herd is immense and both speak of money as if they were the owners of unbounded acres of silver and gold. Yet the other day they returned from the country where they had been spending a few days with friends. Shortly after their arrival the bell-boy knocked at the door of their apartments and said that their trunks had come.

"All right. Have the porter bring them up."

A moment later the bell-boy returned with the explanation that the transfer man would not leave the trunks till he received a dollar and a half.

"Tell him to call at my office tomorrow," said monsieur, after a fruitless search through his pockets.

Mrs S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, has a beautiful new line of summer dress hats.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison Oak and all Skin Diseases. It has been used successfully for the last twenty years and thousands will testify to its curative quality. It is a specific for Poison Oak. AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST
TEL. MAIN 5522.

3253 FILLMORE ST.
TEL. WEST 152

"Unless, my dear," (to his wife) "you have the amount."

Madame found nothing in her purse, either, and the children's bonne, who was asked to join in the search for coin, was forced to acknowledge her impecuniosity. The transfer man could not leave the trunks, by order from his superiors, until the one-fifty was forthcoming so the bell-boy considerately put up the cash. I hope he found the loan was but a temporary one but from my knowledge of his debtors I fear that it was more in the nature of a gift.

The tabbies are wondering if there is anything significant in the fact that almost simultaneously with the arrival of Walter Dean and his parents at the Hotel Rafael, the papers announced the appearance at Del Monte, for the season, of Miss Emilie Hager. It seems such a pity that this love affair, which has given the gossips so much material to work upon during the past few years, should not be brought to a termination. Mrs. Hager opposed the match but she has passed away now and if Miss Hager really intends to crown Mr. Dean's devotion with the gift of her hand and heart, now is the time ripe for such a consummation. At one time the rumor was going the rounds that the fair Emilie had become bohemian in her tastes and had fallen in love with the gentleman who was her instructor in singing but, like all such gossip, the rumor turned out to be mere idle words. However, had the report been true, one could have easily forgiven the young woman for her aberration, as the masculine referred to is one of the most striking figures and most clever minds in clubdom.

Jags: Well, I'm glad they are married. There can be no more talk.

Tags: That is true. I hear they do not speak to each other, scarcely, now.

Dr. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president-elect of the state university, is a magnetic chap. He extended the glad hand to the regents and although a few of them were inclined to give him the frappéd frown he succeeded in thawing them out. I understand that Dr. Wheeler was reluctant to accept the presidency of the university because he had heard of a member of the faculty who exercised a political pull through his relationship with one of the regents. Dr. Wheeler has no love for political professors and when he takes charge of affairs at Berkeley it will be with the distinct understanding that the members of the faculty shall be subject to his directions.

Andy Lawrence is back from Catalina and the fate of the Monarch is once more in his hands. During his absence all sorts of rumors were in circulation about the purpose of his trip to the southland. The most persistent one was that he had been commissioned by Mr. Hearst to purchase a newspaper, the supposition being that as the Napoleon of journalism had nothing but the Examiner and Morning and Evening Journals on his hands he was suffering from ennui and wanted something to keep him busy. But Mr. Lawrence was not on a still hunt for another paper. He went to Catalina for only one purpose and that was to play golf. He took with him the handsomest assortment of golf stockings in this state and when he appeared on the links he made the other golfers look like a lot of Scotch farm-hands.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

The people of Highland springs are laughing yet over the plight of an equestrian party that started out one morning about two weeks ago to enjoy a thirty-six mile ride. The party consisted of George D. Graham, the ink merchant, and his wife, Luther K. Fitch of the Bulletin and his wife, and George Crothers, unattached. None of these people had the faintest conception of what sort of physical endurance was required for a thirty-six mile ride on a hard and unsympathetic saddle. But after traversing about six miles on a horse that insisted on trotting even down grade it suddenly occurred to Mr. Fitch that the diversion involved some pain. His courage failed him and he returned home alone filled with an almost irresistible desire to imitate circus equestrian performers whom he had seen standing erect during their act. The other members of the party returned after dark and after a most tedious journey. I understand that they covered a considerable portion of the return trip in wagons. They were unable to conceal the fact that their feelings were very much hurt.

The career of John Lord Love, the attorney who died last week, was a notable one by reason of its sky-rocket character. He was a man well versed in the law and of considerable intellectual force and in early manhood his prospects were of dazzling brightness. He aimed high at the threshold of his career and hit the mark without an effort. He was attorney-general of the state at an age when other lawyers are content to represent impecunious clients for a nominal fee. And when his term was over he resumed the drudgery of private practice with reluctant spirit. Instead of soaring higher he drooped his wings and took a downward course until he struck a perch in the office of city and county attorney. There was nothing he liked better than public office and when he was out of it he had little or no ambition. Years after he ceased to be city attorney he became a police judge and with his term on the bench ended his public career. If he had never been a politician he might have won many laurels in his profession.

• Dr. A. C. Moore •

A regular graduate of the original A. T. Still American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo.

Founded the Pacific Coast School at Los Angeles three years ago . .

Chronic Diseases and Deformities Successfully Treated . . . .

Address, 204 SUTTER STREET, S. F.

TELEPHONE MAIN 100

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY

12 years old before being bottled

Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers

412 Front St., S. F.

Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

Dr. CARL DEHMEL
(formerly of Berlin)
Surgeon Chiropodist and Masseur . . .

Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe Nails a Specialty

CONSULTATION FREE

EMPORIUM and
GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR

Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

An interesting chapter of reminiscence was revived the other day by some oldtimers who were discussing the histrionic talent of Blanche Bates. They were veteran theatre-goers who could tell you all about the plays that were produced at the old American theatre in Sansome street and of the mummers that appeared at the Metropolitan opera-house in the days when dramatic companies came from New York to San Francisco by water. And it came about that the name of Sallie Hinckley came into the conversation, because Blanche Bates calls Sallie "Auntie" and it was largely to the generosity of the ex-actress that the present Frawley star owes the thoroughness of her education, which included not only ordinary branches of learning but extended into drama and music. I am told that Signor Lucchesi says of his former pupil that she would have made name and fame on the concert stage had she not chosen to adopt a dramatic career instead. Sallie Hinckley and Blanche's mother have been friends from girlhood's days and the former was as solicitous for the welfare of Mrs. Bates' daughter as if she had been in reality the child's aunt. She was herself a mother, having a son by the husband with whom she had eloped at the age of sixteen, Roundey by name, but in Blanche Bates she took an almost deeper interest than in her own child. Possibly she saw in Blanche the makings of the fine actress the girl has since become.

Now there are not many people in San Francisco who remember Sallie Hinckley or any of the incidents in her romantic career. Sallie was one of the most popular of early Californian actresses and she was a woman of many personal charms combined with all the dash and coquetry of a Parisienne. When she exhibited her ravishing curves in the role of Mazeppa, the men-about-town of the period were plunged into rapturous admiration. And when Sallie Hinckley got through entertaining the public there was no entertainment too expensive for her and there were men by the score willing to provide it. The swath that she cut was a wide one indeed. She could have had half the town if she wanted it. A banker chaperoned her to New York and spent a fortune to exploit her in "The Black Crook" and he lost his money but not his ardor. And there were others as gallant and generous as the banker. A pretty woman was a rara avis in San Francisco in those days and Sallie Hinckley queened it for awhile, but she could not retain that divine figure forever. Adipose tissue came with years and when embonpoint asserted itself Sallie Hinckley left the stage and opened a lodging house in Montgomery street.

About that time another footlight favorite came tripping to the front. She was Susie Soulé, a woman of varied accomplishments. She had apartments in the Montgomery block where she used to entertain her friends. Among them was George Hinckley, an actor and a brother of Sallie, and Joe Ford, a gay stockbroker of the period and a literary chap. He wrote "The Red Pocketbook" and addressed sonnets to Susie Soulé. One day he met George Hinckley in the actress' apartments and there was a row. Hinckley received a pistol wound and some months later he died in his sister's lodging house. Sallie Hinckley is still living, a buxom woman, sedate and dignified. She is the wife of Arthur Forbes, a bookkeeper for Josselyn & Co., the ship chandlery firm, and her husband is some years her junior. By the way, Forbes was one of Sallie Hinckley's acquaintances in the days when she kept the lodging house in Montgomery street. He was a very young man then and he occupied a room in the house of the ex-actress. Another man who figured in that set was Theodore Le Roy, the banker, who died some years later in France. Immediately after his death there was a contest over his large estate and Sallie Hinckley was one of the principal claimants. She demanded a wife's portion but compromised with the French heirs for about a quarter of a million dollars. She then married Arthur Forbes.

First Artist: Did you hear about Palette? He has left Paris for good.

Second Artist: Why so? Has he given up his study of the nude?

First Artist: No, the fad is raging with greater vigor than ever—he is at Santa Cruz now.

Roger Prendergast, the miner who died several days ago leaving an estate valued at sixty thousand dollars, was one of those rare specimens of manhood that one reads about in Bret Harte's stories and meets in plays of the "My Partner" class but seldom communes with in real life. He was a mining superintendent on the Comstock in the bonanza days and he spent the greater part of his life in Nevada. He had more hairbreadth escapes in mining disasters than any other man that ever delved for the precious metals and he held the record for life-saving in the sagebrush state. He risked his own life in half a dozen instances to save the lives of others and his death could be traced to injuries received in an explosion in a mine and incurred in a reckless attempt to rescue a number of unfortunates. All the old residents of Virginia city are familiar with the stories that are told of Roger Prendergast, for his life was made up of incidents which showed him to be a man of unusual nobility of character. One that I remember was about the discharge of a foreman in a mine in which Prendergast was superintendent. It was not unusual for the employes of a mine to subscribe to a fund for the purchase of a valuable present for the superintendent. The man that collected the money was generally the sycophant of the crew, who

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

The Laxative Liver Lozenge

PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable.

PRICE 25 CENTS
CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, - 139 Powell St
W. W. STOCKER.

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory
40 ELLIS ST., Rooms 1 and 2
SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00
Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

CAPTAIN C. MacDONALD
Who returned from Manila, with Company H, First Regiment Oregon Vols.

was bent upon winning the favor of the superintendent, but the friendship of Roger Prendergast could not be purchased. The foreman that collected a fund in the mine which he superintended was discharged.

"The men that work in this mine," said Prendergast, "earned their wages and I'll not permit them to be blackmailed out of it."

The statement that Auditor Wells has discovered that the merchant creditors of the board of education, by withdrawing their claims to segregate and classify them, have left the school teachers salary claimants in the position of preferred creditors, since all claims on the treasury must be paid in the order they are presented prompted our local dailies to take advantage of the opportunity to spread scare head lines announcing that "Teachers may be paid." Let us hope that they may be. In connection with the payment of salaries, the question has more than once derisively been asked: "What did you gain by your litigation, you teachers who were so anxious to rush into court with your grievances?" And this is how the question has been answered by a teacher who occasionally tells her troubles to TOWN TALK: "We have gained a decision as to our vacation salary which sets forever at rest the attempts to hold up our June money under the plea that we are being paid when we are idle. It has established the fact that our salaries are so much per year, payable for the convenience of the city in twelve monthly installments. It has also decided that the creditors of the old board could not be paid in full—and that preserves for us the June salary of this year. We also demonstrated that there are a lot of sneaks in the school department, those who signed the agreement to enter litigation, with its attendant expenses, and because the lawyers did not succeed in gaining our salaries, have refused to pay more than the first installment. Many of those who would not sign at all have benefited by the action of those upon whom the expense has fallen. Those derelicts are well known and it is understood that when the committee on litigation winds up its affairs the black-list will be given out for publication. Why should a few stand all the expense and the rest escape?

"The protests from indignant parents regarding examinations come thick and fast—and as soon as schools re-open the lives of the clerks of the board of education, to say nothing of the superintendent, and his assistants will be one long mad nightmare of 'Why wasn't my child promoted?' The examinations were sprung on the schools, but as one school director confidentially said 'It's not a trap to catch teachers, as much as it is a trap to catch principals. It's all nonsense for principals to try to shift the blame of the poor work done in their schools upon the shoulders of their assistants. The idea of any principal not knowing whether or not his teachers were following the course of study! We've had enough of 'office' principals. The law requires a certain amount of supervision from a principal and they've got to give it. A poor teacher can't excuse her negligence by pleading ignorance of the course, and no principal can escape condemnation because of poor teachers. This board has given principals ample opportunity to report upon the qualifications of their teachers. If they have sent in their lists with 'satisfactory' against each name—how can the principals now blame the teachers when the work is not up to the grade? Whose standard was wrong?'"

When the St. Joseph (Mo.) high school class was graduated a week ago it greeted the assembled audience with a class yell—a combination of cackling, croaking and cat-calling which lasted half a minute. It is time this nonsense was stopped and class yelling should be made a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment.

MARION MANOLA MOULD, at the California

Now it is reported that Grandma Grant does not approve of the prince so Miss Julia will be expected to withdraw from her engagement with His Highness. For pity's sake let it go on now, otherwise we shall have a new alliance proposed and another dose of lingerie literature. However Papa Grant and Aunt Palmer are a unit with Miss Julia thus far, so at best there are three against one and:

When a woman will, she will, you may depend on't;
And when she won't, she won't, and there's an end on't.

The bright child who so aptly settled the race question has an equal in the person of another rising young geographer. In answer to the question, "Name five animals peculiar to the frigid zone," he enumerated: "Elephant, hippopotamus, rhinoceros, tiger and lion." When brought to book for his apparent heedlessness it came out that he had reasoned that peculiar meant queer or odd and his list of torrid zone fauna would, in his opinion, have been decidedly peculiar to the frigid zone.

It is said that a woman if she really loves a man has no thought of any other; one at a time is all sufficient. But a man may love one woman with the warmth of a simoon and at the same time feel like a good healthy south wind toward a dozen others.

It is not easy to recall the names of all the pupils of the late Madame Ziska who have distinguished themselves in the worlds of society, art and letters since they attended the Ziska seminary. I remember, however, very well the school when it was situated in South park in the residence now occupied by the widow and family of the late Joseph Smith. Madame Ziska's seminary was always exceedingly select and among the boarding and day pupils were many of foreign birth. Of those who attended the school in the early seventies my recollection chiefly centres about the beautiful Rodriquez girls of whom one later married a nephew of Lloyd Tevis. They were four in number—Amelia, Aurelia and two Lolas, one a niece of the others—and were perfect types of Spanish beauty. They lived in Brannan street which was at that time a smart residence locality, being sufficiently under the shadow of South park and Rincon hill to share their aristocratic aroma.

It is a matter of regret that Madame Ziska did not leave a book of her personal recollections of San Francisco society life. She had lived here so many years that she knew practically everybody and among her pupils were many, as I said before, who have since come before the public eye either as society leaders or in the arts or professions. Madame Ziska was a charming writer, her work chiefly consisting of translations from the modern French authors, and she was a frequent and valued contributor to TOWN TALK.

I see by the educational advertisements in the daily papers that Miss M. E. Mortee is principal of St. Katherine's Episcopal school in Fulton street. Miss Mortee's name brings to the writer memories of Dr. Huddart's academy which in the early seventies was a fashionable institution of learning situated at the corner of Second and Bryant streets. While I am not sure the principal of St. Katherine's school is the same person, there was a Miss Mortee in charge of the primary class at Huddart's and she was much beloved by her young pupils. Among the primary pupils were Frank Willey, Maxwell Bugbee, Millie Ashe, Angela Forbes, George and Jennie Cheeseman, Nellie and Henry Miller, Gordon Harris, Frank and Russell Avery.

The Man is Nothing, The Work is All

[DOUBLE BALLADE]

THE WORLD is but a noisy show,
A mighty, motley masquerade,
Where countless actors come and go,
A tragedy and gasconade,
Where many puzzling parts are played,
Till curtained with death's dusty pall,
And in Time's testing balance weighed,
The man is nothing, the work is all.

Forward they press, both high and low,
And rich and poor, and gay and staid;
Some climb where Fame's fair mountains glow,
While others grovel in the glade;
But when, at last, the sexton's spade
Hath built the bed to which they crawl,
When requiems roll and prayers are prayed,
The man is nothing, the work is all.

Though rivers red as crimson flow
Beneath the shot torn barricade,
Though on the clay of fallen foe,
Thrones have been reared with reeking blade,
Still war is but a sorry trade,
And often but a murderous brawl;
For even Glory's gleam will fade;
The man is nothing, the work is all.

Fate's shuttle flashes to and fro,
And many curious webs are made;
For Fortune may her smile bestow,
And light some dullard through the shade
To where Fame's glittering prize is paid;
While Genius labors like a thrall,
But lifts the world without her aid;
The man is nothing, the work is all.

In vilest soil the seed may grow,
For many a living germ hath strayed
Where sower never meant to sow;
The heart of reckless renegade
Hath been, ere this, a shrine where swayed
Truth's sacred censer, letting fall
The spark unknown, but yet obeyed;
The man is nothing, the work is all.

To some misleading guides we owe
Lights that have made us retrograde;
While others from Time's ramparts throw
To us a shining escalade,
By which we shall, at last, invade
Truth's glorious and eternal hall;
Or fair, or foul in life's crusade,
The man is nothing, the work is all.

ENVOY

Whene'er we glory or upbraid
The good or bad, the great or small,
Time laughs at our rodomontade,
The man is nothing, the work is all.

LOUIS A. ROBERTSON.

World of Law

ERILY, the ways of our Supreme court are devious and difficult to follow. Any lawyer who thinks he has a sure thing when he takes a case up on appeal has an amount of confidence which must be born of hope rather than of experience. The latest feat of the tribunal of last resort is to affirm the verdict and judgment of our Superior court in the case of one Harry Winters. Some instructions were given by the trial judge in the case which would make the average criminal lawyer's hair stand on end. It is a good thing that Mr. Winters is a criminal of so glaring a type that one feels a sort of unholy joy that the Supreme court did go out of its way to "cinch" him. His exploit was the effecting of a burglarious entrance into a hotel at Baden in company with another enterprising burglar named Raymond. In the fracas that ensued a boarder in the hotel was killed. Winters was found guilty of murder in the first degree and was sentenced to death in most appropriate fashion. So far, so good, and the Supreme court has affirmed the verdict. But three justices, including the chief justice, dissent from that affirmance in vigorous terms.

The defense set up by Winters was an alibi. That is to say, he sought to show that at the time of the burglary he was in the company of friends at a place many miles away from the scene. The trial judge in charging the jury made the statement that an alibi was "a proper defense, if proved" and further stated that in order to establish the alibi the defendant must show a state of facts which should make it practically improbable or impossible for the defendant to have committed the murder, by reason of his having been in another locality at the time. The judge said that the alibi need not be conclusively established, but must be proven sufficiently to create a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jury as to whether or not the defendant was where he claimed to be.

Now, the defendant's attorney took this instruction up to the Supreme court, assigning it as error. In the majority opinion, written by Mr. Justice Garoutte and concurred in by Justices Harrison, McFarland and Van Dyke, it was held not to be error. The court admitted that the word "defense" was not a proper term to apply to an "alibi," and also that the court should not not have used the words "if proven." However, Judge Garoutte said that the whole instruction must be taken as a whole and not in part and that there was little doubt that the court merely meant to instruct the jury that in order to establish his alibi the defendant must produce sufficient evidence to create a reasonable doubt of his guilt in the minds of the intelligent jury.

The fact that the case was a hanging matter did not appear to cut much figure. The court found that the defendant was not prejudiced by the instruction and unless a re-hearing is granted Harry Winters will go to the scaffold, a fate, indeed, he richly deserves. But there was attached to the majority opinion a copious dissenting opinion written by Mr. Justice Henshaw and concurred in by Justices Jackson, Temple and Chief Justice Beatty. In this the trial court's instruction on the subject of alibi is unmercifully slated. Justice Henshaw points out that no man is required to prove an alibi, nor to show that it was practically improbable or impossible that he could have committed the crime charged to him. In this very Supreme court of ours a prominent criminal case was reversed and the conviction of the prisoner set aside because the judge in charging upon the subject of alibi used these words: "When satisfactorily proven it is a good defense in law."

So, the Supreme court has once more reversed itself. It is in criminal cases chiefly that this phenomenon is observable. It is only a couple of years since the Paulsell robbery case was reversed by Department Two of the august tribunal because, it was stated, Judge Belcher had erred in his instruction to the jury upon the doctrine of reasonable doubt. He had departed from the definition composed by Chief Justice Shaw of somewhere and accepted as the standard and had inserted the words "common sense" as a part of the intelligence to be brought to bear upon the evidence before the reasonable doubt should be found to exist. It so happened that Judge Belcher took the instruction bodily from the Shaughnessy case tried some months before the Paulsell case and in which the judgment was affirmed by this same Department Two of the Supreme court. The same justice wrote the opinion in each case and the same justices concurred. Judge Belcher lo t no time in proving to the Supreme court its reversal of itself, and his memory is cherished in consequence by the inhabitants of the top floor of the Parrott building.

That the Supreme court will sooner or later have to reverse itself on other matters more important to the commonwealth than a criminal case is apparent to most lawyers. One matter is that of wills which create trusts. The decisions in the Walkerly and other cases appear to have established an iron-clad rule against testators who desire to tie up their children's property. Yet it is now felt that the court has gone too far in this direction, and it is confronted by a problem in the Fair case which is keeping it busy a-thinking. Already after months of deliberation, the court has been compelled to set aside the submission of the case, on the pretext that it would like the assistance of Mr. Justice Van Dyke, who was not present at the original hearing. Now it transpires that there will be no re-submission without further oral argument from the army of attorneys engaged.

The fact is that the court is badly divided on the trust question. Added to which, it is divided against itself on personal matters. The enmity existing between two prominent members of the tribunal is well known. Still, as Attorney-General Fitzgerald once remarked: "I don't see how the public can complain if mistakes are occasionally made. The court is badly overworked." That is true. It is not "pie" to have to grind out musty opinions and dig up musty law out of musty old books from morning till night with the hum of the busy street below constantly in one's aching ears.

Talking of the Supreme court, an ex-justice of that tribunal, Van R. Paterson, met with an accident at his San Mateo residence the other day. He fell downstairs and broke himself somewhere. Fortunately, he is recovering rapidly. Judge Paterson is a lawyer of the old school, though a comparatively young man. He is courteous and affable and his style of practice is one that speaks for itself. He toiled away for years on the Supreme bench, drawing a paltry five hundred dollars per month till Dame Fortune smiled upon him and introduced him to Arthur Rodgers. Judge Paterson said one day, recently: "I never knew what it was to have a bank account until I left the Supreme bench." He deserves his success, which he endures modestly. In that he is like unto ex-Judge C. D. Slack, who threw up the Superior bench and the Deanery of the Hastings Law college to join the happy party comprised of Rodgers, Paterson & Co.

Garret McEnerney is away on a vacation, wonderful to relate. He has been up at Tallac, and is now at Del Monte. Under the shadow of the cavernous rocks that rise above Lake Tahoe. Garret dismissed legal subjects from his mind and thanked his stars that he was now in a position to snap his fingers at fate. He has made a great deal of money in late years, done by application, by sheer hard work. Garret has a frame that can stand fatigue and he has never dissipated. He would like to have his friend, Judge W. P. Lawlor, with him, for the latter is great company and is full of wise saws and modern instances. Perhaps the latter will adjourn court awhile as soon as it is known whether or not Minnie Adams is to suffer punishment for killing her illegitimate child. Governor Solomon and Attorney Mack have dragged that unfortunate case out beyond all reasonable length.

Judge Troutt, he of the mild manners that belie his ferocious appearance, has discovered that his recent attack of rheumatism was occasioned by the varied draughts that play around his courtroom. So he has had a fearful and wonderful door made for the room, which is covered with green cloth studded with nails, such as one often sees at the entrance to a library. The door swings to and fro immediately outside the ordinary glass door, so that the visitor entering abruptly is likely to put his head through the glass and make a rather unceremonious entrance into the judicial presence. By the way, Judge Troutt performed the marriage service the other day over Lester H. Jacobs, attorney-at-law, and a young lady who was teacher of mathematics at the Van Ness seminary.

There are lots of 'A. A.' brands of whisky, but only one Jesse Moore 'A. A.'

Mr. Jacobs is a promising young attorney and is a pleasant fellow besides. His bride is attractive and clever. It is said that the difference in religion between the pair made them present themselves before Judge Troutt instead of repairing to church.

—o—

Superior Judge George H. Bahrs recently returned from an extended eastern trip. He went out as Grand Exalted Laborer of the Ancient Order of Workmen, or in some such capacity and visited Chicago, Washington, Boston, New York and other eastern cities. He expresses himself pleased at all he saw and thinks that the trip has broadened his intellect. It was his first venture out of the state in his thirty odd years of existence upon this planet. He thinks, however, that there is only one California and that it is good enough for him.

"Why, in some ways, the east is far behind us," says the judge. "No city has our car system, our telephone system, our electric light system, our fire system. And then the climate! The east is great and wonderful; it is one continuous, tumultuous hurry-scurry after the almighty dollar. But to live in, give me San Francisco!"

By the way, Judge Bahrs had the honor of calling upon President McKinley while he was in Washington. He was very graciously received and occupied the President's entire attention for about a quarter of an hour The President, whom Judge Bahrs found to be a handsome, young-looking, well-mannered man, spoke warmly of the west, and was pleased to know that he had found favor there. He told Judge Bahrs that he contemplated a western trip ere long, if his engagements would permit. Since that interview, however, Judge Bahrs has learned of the change of plans and the final abandonment of the western trip. THE COURT REPORTER.

Dramatic World

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "Lord and Lady Algy"—a picture of high life, low in spots.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "Carmen"—better sung than acted.

ALCAZAR. "Camille"—as interesting as ever.

CALIFORNIA. "The Last Word"—and the return of Blanche Bates.

TIVOLI. "Bluebeard"—who kills the show as well as his wives.

ORPHEUM. Vaudeville—Minnie Palmer is all right.

PANORAMA BUILDING. "Battle of Manila"—realistic and worth seeing.

IN THE WHOLE, while it may not be our "best" people who have flocked to see Lord and Lady Algy this week, the audiences filling the Columbia have certainly been composed of our smartest people. You must be smart thoroughly to enjoy Lord and Lady Algy, or if you are not in the swim you must at least have spent a day among the fashionables else you will not know how to take the scenes in the play. One can fancy how the Carton drama attained its great vogue in London, for it is London swelldom that the author "hits where it lives," to use a bit of slang which becomes especially expressive when applied to Lord and Lady Algy. The play is not immoral, neither is it vulgar but the characters are decidedly so in some instances. These smart people even exhibit lack of breeding—and that is where Mr. Carton has made an error. Spurious swells might guy an old woman; it would even be expected of them, as the characters do in the second act, but real gentlepeople such as Lord Algy's relatives—no matter how fast and foolish their other actions—would not do so. In fact there are a good many weaknesses in the play. But its cleverness is so pronounced, its dialogue so vivacious, that the audience cannot fail to get a solid two hours of enjoyment out of it. The plot is ably outlined and the story tells itself almost, as the characters move in and out in pleasing sequence. The company is so admirable that not the most miniature role is slighted and even the servants are stars. Lord Algy is not a pleasant character but one has seen many of his prototypes in life. He is not a caricature: he is the real thing. George R. Sims was not so far off when he wrote:

> Bother guilt upon your conscience,
> If you've gold inside your purse
> You can be as bad as I am
> And in fact a great deal worse.

The Marquis of Quarmby is a despicable creature when you look at him through the moral lorgnette but on the stage he appears a very decent sort of a chap, somewhat lacking in backbone but making up for this by his fine physique and swell air. He is a splendid picture of a man; that the portrait is minus a soul does not matter much. * * The act which is weakest in Mr. Carton's drama is the one which by right should be the strongest for in it the point of the story is brought out, a man searching for a woman about whose identity he is not sure and to whom he has been asked to give some good advice. The man, Lord Algy, comes to a fancy dress ball given by the lady whom he is to advise and he is in a state popularly known as "loaded" In fact, a man so far gone as is Lord Algy would certainly have better sense than to make his appearance at a social function in such a state of intoxication;in real life he would first have given himself a partial sobering-up by taking a Turkish bath or at least a rub-down with rough towels and cold water. Again, it is not likely a man in Lord Algy's state would have been admitted to a ball-room; the maitre de ceremonie would have barred his entrée. If,as has been argued,people of the Tudway order would have only been too glad to admit a lord to their ball, drunk or sober, this theory is not borne out in the wholesale snubbing Lord Algy receives during his stay. The drunken scene, consequently, being so unnatural an incident, weakens the second act. Another point that might be touched upon, a minor one but which is noticeable since Lady Algy is the guilty one, is the scene where Quarmby's sister-in-law interrupts him in his conversation with Mrs. Tudway, where they are planning their elopement. A woman of Lady Algy's type would not only not commit the moral solecism of eavesdropping but, if she had found herself in the unpleasant predicament of an unconscious listener to something not intended for her ears, she would certainly not have thrust her presence upon the marquis and his inamorata, as Mr. Carton makes his heroine do. The

J. MINKOWSKY
Whose opera "The Smugglers of Badayez" is praised by the New York press

flimsy pretext, "I have forgotten my fan," is as absurd as the mislaid pocket-book episode in the first act. The third act, where Lord and Lady Algy make up their differences and smoke en duo the cigarette of peace, is the best in the play. We are left in doubt as to the ultimate result of Quarmby's flirtation with Mrs. Brabazon Tudway although the deceived husband is pacified to his own satisfaction and that of the others, Lady Algy being the medium of pacification. * * Mr. Miller gives a capable portrayal of the Duke of Droneborough's younger son. Neither he nor Miss Anglin, however, quite grasps the possibilities of the characters sketched by the playwright. It is a case where their clothes fit them better than do their parts. Miss Anglin wears several striking and handsome frocks and Mr. Miller's array of costumes must make Mr. Joseph Sadoc Tobin turn green with envy. One imagines that Mr. Miller does not wholly like his part, though he goes through his drunken scene as if it were played con amore. Earnestness is always one of the pleasing points in Mr. Miller's acting. But Miss Anglin is miles and miles away from the Lady Algy of Mr. Carton's muse. She is not English enough for one thing, her London fringe and style of hairdressing being the only thing distinctively un-American about her. What one misses in her interpretation is the frank and boyish manner that should be the prominent attribute of Lady Algy. The modern "good fellow" of the feminine gender is not affected, she is not silly and her jolly air is not "put on." Now Lady Algy is an all-round good fellow who is up in race slang, smokes cigarettes and can—presumably—encircle a high-ball with anybody. Au fond she is the same good young woman she always was, refined and charming and very, very much in love with Lord Algy. Miss Anglin makes the mistake of playing always to the audience; she cannot lose her identity as Margaret Anglin. Therefore her Lady Algy is almost colorless, except in the last act where the actress forgets herself and becomes the character of the play. * * * Mrs. Whiffen has an amusing part, that of Mrs. Tudway's mother, Mrs. Vokins, and in her make-up at the ball where she appears dressed as a Dresden shepherdess she is delightful. She has one particularly good scene with the Duke of Droneborough (Mr. Walcot), where she waylays him and makes him take her down to supper. Mr. Lamb makes Swepson, the valet, a distinct part of the first and third acts. Mr. Lamb has played for so many years with Henry Miller that the two understand each other's modes of acting perfectly and play into each other's hands in a manner pleasing to behold. Mrs. Thorndyke-Boucicault appears in a magnificent blue gown, extremely décolleté, and "strengthens the cast" by walking through the second act. A fine bit of acting is done by young Thomas Whiffen as Mawley Jemmett, Lord Algy's jockey, who poses as his friend at the ball costumed as a Highlander, and assists Algy's failing footsteps, when the latter's successive and excessive potations begin to take effect. James Lindsay gives color to the part of Captain Standidge and Thomas S. Lowell goes through his role of Mr. Jeal, the society reporter, with considerable zeal. The stage settings are worthy of mention for their beauty and accuracy. * * Next week will be the last of Lord and Lady Algy and Heartsease will follow, Miss Anglin taking the part filled by Mabel Bert in last year's production.

THE LAMBARDIS drew big houses at the California on Monday and Tuesday evenings, in Mignon and The Barber of Seville, thus proving that the theatre oftentimes makes or mars a show. At the Alhambra the company did not draw; at the California the organization was most enthusiastically received. Mr. Friedlander will bring the company back again later on.

Orpheum

THEY HAVE a disrobing scene at the Orpheum this week but it produces not the slightest shock. Two men disrobe simultaneously in the centre of the stage and in the full glare of the calcium and the orchestra plays slow music. They remove coats, vests, shirts and trousers and while they are shedding their clothes one man is unblushingly balanced on the other's head and his legs are dangling indecorously in the air. If a woman were to do the same thing the police would probably be called upon to stop the show, but there is not enough indelicacy about this performance to incarnadine the cheek of a modest grammar school maiden. In fact it is a highly moral performance. The two are athletes and they are remarkably clever and finished acrobats. They appear on the program as the Rixfords. Minnie Palmer, the veteran soubrette who has had more free advertising in her time than most actresses have been able to get, is also at the Orpheum this week. She appears in a little French sketch which gives her opportunity for the display of what is left of her soubrette ability. The feature of the show is still The Wise Guy, who is none other than Edmond Hayes who once played serious roles in society and melodrama, and who is now a low comedian of the most boisterous type. Next week the bill will include four new acts. Kilpatrick and Barber, the great trick bicycle riders, are direct from England and the Orpheum management has brought out from Paris Les Browns, the only one-legged male and female acrobats and instrumentalists in the world. They caeated a sensation at the Olympia, Paris. The De Pasqualis have been re-engaged and will present several new operatic selections. Houdini, the man who puzzled the police and all others who saw him with his marvelous ability of disentangling himself from chains, ropes and other bonds, particularly handcuffs, will play a return engagement.

Grand Opera House

IT SHOWS THE VERSATILITY of Morosco's stock opera company—Southwell's that was—that the members can spring from grand to comic opera without, as it were, stopping to breathe. This fact was demonstrated shortly after the company came here when Cavalleria Rusticana and I'Pagliacci were given, and now Carmen gives Hattie Belle Ladd a chance to prove that she, as well as Edith Mason, has the ability to interpret heavier roles than those found in comic opera. Miss Ladd is a very bewitching Carmen, not so seductively fascinating perhaps as Thea Dorre or Zelie de Lussan, but still far more acceptable than many Carmens who stand on higher planes in the world of music. There is not much in the Bizet opera for blasé theatre-goers beyond the cigarette girl herself and the toreador song, and these are wholly satisfying in the Morosco production Next week the company will make the spring to comic opera when Miss Mason will sing the title role in Olivette. The strength of the company will be in the cast.

Apropos of Carmen, the following has been communicated: "Some of the press notices of Carmen during the past week have referred to it as grand opera. Strictly speaking the rhythmical parts of grand opera are separated by recitative and not by spoken dialogue. The distinction is purely technical, and has nothing to do with the subject or style of music. It has existed since 1750 when the Grand opera house of Paris claimed that a company performing musical pieces at the Théâtre de la Foire was infringing on its patent, and an agreement between the two houses was concluded by which the latter must have speaking in all the pieces it produced. The distinction was thus established between grand opera and opera comique. It

Two Noted Resorts both under one management, noted for its efficiency. Representing the mountain interior and seaside of Central California.

THE . . . CELEBRATED Hotel del Monte, MONTEREY, . . . CAL

"The queen of American watering places" Only 3½ hours from San Francisco by express trains of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY. OPEN ALL THE YEAR.

RATES MODERATE.

The Tavern of Castle Crag and Soda Springs

320 miles from San Francisco, on the famous SHASTA ROUTE within sight of MOUNT SHASTA and the wonderful CASTLE CRAGS, altitude 2,100 feet.

Rates: by the day, $2 $2.50, $3.
By the week, $14 to $17.50.
Bath rooms extra.

Season, June to September

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION ADDRESS GEO. SCHONEWALD, MANAGER
Hotel del Monte, Monterey, Cal, or Tavern of Castle Crag, Castle Crag, Cal.

is said that the composer of Carmen intended to have the fatal quarrel between Don Jose and the gypsy girl take place in the bull-ring under the seats and I believe it is so carried out in Paris. In the last tableau the toreador is seen leaning over the vanquished bull, while the spectators sing the well-known chorus."

California SAN FRANCISCO SOCIETY turned out in full force to greet Blanche Bates and the Frawley company at the California on Thursday evening. Every member was received lustily and heartily and Blanche Bates received an ovation. Again and again rounds of applause poured forth from the enthusiastic assemblage. Mr. Frawley's appearance was another signal for continuous applause the heartiness of which could not be questioned. The company was fully entitled to this enthusiastic reception and no doubt the engagement will be a successful one judging from the grand opening night. Next week The Dancing Girl will be presented with Miss Bates in the leading role. Among the strong attractions of the repertory will be The Great Ruby. Hope Ross will make her appearance next Monday.

Alcazar FLORENCE ROBERTS easily holds her own as an interpreter of Camille with others who have visited San Francisco. She exhibits the same sincerity, the charming lack of affectation that was remarked upon in her portrayal of Dumas' character last season. An Armand such as that given by White Whittlesey serves to make plain to the audience many points in the drama that usually elude comprehension. Marguerite can be forgiven for loving and sacrificing herself to an Armand so manly and handsome as Mr. Whittlesey. It is rarely one finds a Marguerite and Armand so well mated physically as are the hero and heroine in the Alcazar presentation of the play. Next week The New Magdalen will be given, a play seldom produced nowadays and in which the leading character should give Miss Roberts scope for the display of splendid emotional work. The Morrisons deserve the patronage of the best class of our theatre-goers, for they include in their repertory plays which everybody wishes to see and which, though favorites of our mothers and fathers, are not often seen upon the present play-lists of theatrical companies. The New Magdalen is one of the strongest novels of the many interesting works written by Wilkie Collins; in its dramatic form it is equally as powerful.

THE PRINCE OF WALES LIKES IT

THE clarets and sauternes from the Mount Rouge vineyard at Livermore, of Chauché & Bon, are rapidly becoming famous not only in all the large eastern cities but also in England where they are preferred by swell club men to those of France. The Prince of Wales recently paid California a high compliment by ordering several cases of Jurancon which is acknowledged by experts to be the most delicious of California products.

THE SECRETARY of the Osteopathic institute in Sutter street, Mrs. Alice T. Moore, has gone to Los Angeles for a vacation trip. Dr. A. C. Moore, her husband, the physician in charge of the institute, will shortly join Mrs. Moore in the south.

Mrs. S. R Hall, 10 Kearny Street. Elegant line of Mourning Bonnets

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Beginning Monday, Sixth week of the season. Charles Frohman presents

HENRY MILLER
AND
A SPECIAL COMPANY

Last six nights. Matinee Saturday.

"LORD AND LADY ALGY"

July 24th, the romantic comedy,

"HEARTSEASE"

Grand Opera House

Morosco Amusement Co., Inc. Lessees. Telephone Main 532.

Commencing Monday, July 17th.
Magnificent revival of Audran's charming opera,

"OLIVETTE"

Our New Prices—Orchestra, (Reserved) 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

Matinee Saturday. Orchestra and Dress Circle 25 cts.; Family Circle 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

☞ Branch Ticket Office just inside main entrance of Emporium.

Alcazar

FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor
MARK THALL, Manager

'Phone Main 254

Week of July 17th.

"THE NEW MAGDELEN"

With the talented FLORENCE ROBERTS
and
THE ALCAZAR STOCK COMPANY Supporting,

In a play with a soul, brilliant in dialogue, masterly in situations and rich in settings and wardrobe. First time at popular prices.

Our prices, Reserved—15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street between Stockton and Powell

Week Commencing Sunday Matinee, July 16th.

Direct from England, KILPATRICK & BARBER, Great Trick Bicycle Riders.

Direct from the Olympia, Paris, LES BROWNS, the only Monopede Acrobats in the world.

Re-engagement for one week only of the PASQUALIS, in selections from Cavalleria Rusticana

The Great HOUDINI, King of Handcuffs, in new and sensational feats.

MINNIE PALMER, in new Specialties, THE RIXFORDS, HAYES & LYTTON, in a new act, GEORGE WILSON, Monologuist, MILLIAN & SHIELDS.

Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c
Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday

Farewell Concert

OF

Emil Steinegger, Pianist

Prior to his departure for Vienna

ASSISTED BY THE

Press Club Quartette

At Sherman-Clay Hall, 223 Sutter St.

On THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 10, 1899, at 8:15 o'clock.

Tickets can be had at Sherman, Clay & Co's, at 618 Fell St., or of any of Mr. Steinegger's pupils

Admission 50 Cents Including Reserved Seat

Seats can be reserved on Aug. 9th at Sherman, Clay & Co's

Mechanics' Pavilion

The only convention of Cake Walkers ever held

JULY 15 TO 22

—THE INTERNATIONAL—

CAKE WALK CARNIVAL

Benefit The CALIFORNIA SOLDIER BOYS' FUND

Committee of Fund Management:—HON C. L. PATTON, Chairman, HON. TIREY L. FORD, HON. J. A FILCHER, Sec., COL. E. A. DENICKE GEN. R. H. WARFIELD, GEN. A. W. BARRETT.

Greatest Amusement Event of the Year.
Eight Big Championship Cake Walks Each Night

ONE DOLLAR (SIX ADMISSION) TICKET

On sale at all stores until July 15th; after that date admission is 25 cents.
Four Matinees. Bennett's Band 3000 Free Seats. 48 Private Boxes.

California Theatre

S. H. FRIEDLANDER, Manager.

Tremendous success of
MISS BLANCHE BATES and COMPANY OF PLAYERS
Ovations at every performance.

Commencing with Monday evening, July 17th, Magnificent Production of

"THE DANCING GIRL"

With Blanche Bates as "Drusilla Ives."
And all the members of the Frawley Company in leading roles.

Reserved Seats, 25, 50, 75, and 1.00. Tel. Main 1731.

Battle of Manila Bay

This Grand Historical Panorama is now on exhibition . . .

Lectures every half hour by the eminent orator, PROF. W. G. ROLLINS

Admission, 50 Cents
Children, 25 Cents.

A Sausalito Episode

BULLOCK was a young Englishman whose fondness for women's society was very noticeable, and he took them all in turn, the girls at the summer resort. With some he flirted outrageously and to others he went for a sort of moral tonic. The sympathy of the feminine heart under the expanding influence of the moonlight was his to command when he poured out his confidences. "Renouncing it" was what he called the operation which is more graphically described in America by the term "swearing off." His latest "renunciation" had caused him to cut loose from all flirtations with married women, a diversion of which he—like many another young man—was compromisingly fond. And this is how it happened.

A certain lady came to the hotel accompanied by her servant and children. The last were no incumbrance to her for she turned the second over to the first and let them take care of each other with that perfect trust in Providence which so often marks the career of the hotel habitué and the married flirt. She was handsome, dressed well and was perfectly willing to receive the attention of men; or, to be more accurate, she was determined to have it and being a woman of extensive experiences, of vast resources and an easy conscience she had what she wanted.

The first conquest of the lady was that of "Val," a great, fat lump of conceit, egotism and gluttony. It flattered his vanity to have a handsome woman listen to his long yarns and even seem to welcome his approach. So carried away was Val with the unusual experience of having any woman take notice of him that he invited her to walk down to the club-house with him, treated her several times to a soda lemonade, and on one never-to-be-forgotten occasion—perhaps as it was on Fourth of July it was also as a patriotic ebullition—he opened a bottle of champagne in her honor. It being well known, his ability to imbibe freely at other people's expense and a corresponding reluctance to do so at his own, this act of champagne extravagance was to be explained only on the ground of his being "hard hit."

But his day of triumph was short lived. A younger, more agreeable and far more liberal man, in the person of young Bullock, appeared upon the scene With his usual characteristic impetuosity, he began a fast and furious flirtation with the fascinating lady. At first all went well. That is, the affair aroused no special amount of comment at a summer resort where all flirted, or would if they could. Still, some people naturally of a captious temperament might have taken exception to the little entertainment that was held on the Fourth of July, in Mrs. Noyes' room, in which she was assisted in her duties as hostess by a fat, good-natured matron from the country.

Coming as it did fairly on top of Val's champagne treat the entertainment, or "function," is easily open to criticism as possibly lacking in good taste. It mattered little that the hostess had never met some of the gentlemen prior to the moment they came trooping to her apartment, or that they all made merry in a way that rather disturbed the rest of the inmates of the hotel to judge from the adverse looks and indignation meetings held in halls, porches and parlor the next day.

But as Mrs. Noyes naively said:

"The boys were having such fun that we hated to send them away."

In their hilarity they knocked over the water pitcher and then had what the fat country matron called "a terrible back-bending time" in mopping up the water. Then they sent Val for more beer, and when he was gone they bunched a wet towel over the door so that it would drop upon his head when he re-entered the room. The delicate reference to his condition conveyed in the pantomime with a wet towel and his head was considered a rare joke and the very essence of wit

But to return to the flirtation of Mrs. Noyes. It may be said that the fall of the towel and of Val's supremacy were simultaneous and Bullock, the bright mind that had conceived the delicate joke, reigned in his stead as a squire of dames—of Mrs. Noyes in particular.

What need to dwell upon the walks and corner-of-the-porch talks, the dances, the moonlight rows? And then Mr. Noyes arrived at the hotel. At first he was flattered at the society belle position which his wife seemed to hold. This state of mind was rapidly succeeded by one far less comfortable and reassuring. For Mrs. Noyes was a woman with a past—not a very far past, or a dark past—but nevertheless when Mr. Noyes allowed himself to remember that his wife had left her first husband for him, taking the intermediate divorce as easily as a thoroughbred does a five-barred gate, he was naturally just a little suspicious of the Bullock attentions.

In a burst of temper, he forbade his wife to continue her flirtation. She simply ignored the prohibition, and Noyes grew surly and the end began to come into view. One evening as they were all standing on the porch, preparatory to departing on a "tugging party," Noyes walked up to his wife, who was talking with Bullock.

"My dear," said he in an unsteady voice, "I want you to come into the house."

Mrs. Noyes began to pace the porch and Bullock walked with her. This enraged Noyes, who lost all sense of propriety and shouted:

"Do you hear me, madam? I tell you to go into the house. I will not have this affair go any further, I say. I'll have you see who's master here."

Mrs. Bullock fled quickly from the porch and her husband turned on Bullock as if to strike him, but he merely exclaimed:

"As for you, sir, you're a contemptible puppy. That's my opinion of you, sir."

Bullock flared up at once:

"What do you mean by such language?" he demanded. "You shall answer to me for this insult."

"It is you that had better explain yourself," angrily said Noyes. "A man with so little honor as to steal another man's wife——"

And then he stopped, possibly remembering how he himself had obtained the lady for a wife.

"I have an engagement now on the hill," said Bullock, calming himself in his own peculiar manner, pulling out his watch as he spoke, "but you must meet me ——."

"Any time you like," snorted Noyes.

"At twelve, then, on the pier," said Bullock, moving away, "at twelve, after you return from the tugging party."

As he stepped off with his dignified bearing, Mrs. Noyes reappeared just in time to join the rest of the party.

"I was so afraid I couldn't come," she lisped with an arch glance at her husband, "for I've been such a bad girl"

But he took no notice of her, and they all hurried down to the raft and hastily embarked upon the gasolene launch. The evening passed without incident save that those who went with plug hats came home without them.

At nearly four in the morning as the tug drew up to the pier, a solitary figure was seen walking up and down. It was Bullock and the inference was that he had been waiting there since midnight. Noyes sprang out first and Bullock met him with these words:

"You must apologize to me for your language. How was I to know that a man objected to a gentleman's extending ordinary courtesy to his wife?"

"I've requested my wife not to accept your attentions," said Noyes, trying to bluster, but feeling turned to stone under the icy glare of Bullock in the chill morning starlight.

"I never heard of it," said Bullock in an aggrieved tone. "Call your wife and ask her if she ever told me so."

Mrs. Noyes was interrogated by her husband, and forced to admit that Bullock was correct

"Now," said Bullock very impressively, "under the circumstances yon have behaved most outrageously. You have insulted me, a gentleman who paid you the compliment of admiring your wife, and by your act you have subjected her to all sorts of scandalous talk. As for me—it does not matter. I am a stranger here. I may go away in a week, but you live in San Francisco and people will talk about you and your wife, and how you acted tonight, a year hence. Instead of protecting your wife you have exposed her to the tongues of gossip. It is you that have caused the scandal, not I."

Poor Noyes had nothing to say against such reasoning as this. He apologized to Bullock and the next day Bullock came over to San Francisco and "renounced" flirting with married women--for the present. THE SUMMER RESORTER.

You never have a head in the morning from drinking Jesse Moore "A. A." Whisky.

FOR A PRETTY EFFECT IN STATIONERY nothing is so chaste as the Fleur-de-Lis Linen when stamped with monogram in silver. Messrs. Cooper & Co. have superior facilities in this line, and show a number of new ideas.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased,

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Joseph F. Byrne administrator of the estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said administrator at the office of his attorneys, Messrs. Lent and Humphrey, Rooms 54-55 Crocker Building, San Francisco, the same being his place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOSEPH F. BYRNE
Administrator of the estate of Thomas Byrne, Deceased

Dated at San Francisco, July 1, 1899.

LENT & HUMPHREY. Attorneys for Administrator,
Crocker Building, San Francisco.

A Little Puritan

THE BEGINNING was in the early seventies, at the Fourth of July picnic. He was a tall, ill-dressed youth of nineteen, she a slim, awkward girl two years younger, in a frock of white muslin sprigged with blue and made pull-back after the fashion of the day. They had just graduated in the same class from the Hillsdale academy, but Horace Bent was not a product of that slow little town among the New Hampshire hills. He had come out from California with his widowed mother four years previously and carried about him in his air and voice some suggestion of the larger and freer west. He detested the narrow little town where his mother had been born and raised and to which she had returned in the days of her early widowhood, and now that Horace had graduated they were both going west again, where an uncle was ready to give Horace a start in the world

So at the Fourth of July picnic he said good-bye to Libbie Hale, who had been his favorite among the Hillsdale maids, and told her he was going to write to her. He gave her his tintype, too, a crude thing taken that very day by a traveling photographer, and asked her not to forget him. And then he bade the Hillsdale world good-bye, while Libbie began a woman's monotonous life in a quiet little New England town.

The correspondence between them went to the length of exactly one letter which Silas Hale took out of the post-office, carried home, and burned before his daughter's eyes, without even allowing her to open it. Old Silas was an autocrat in his own house and neither wife nor child was in the habit of going contrary to his dictates. He had never liked Horace Bent's breezy ways, his ringing voice, nor the independent style in which he offered himself as Libbie's gallant.

"That young fellow's too smart; he'll git into the legislature or the penitentiary yet," was his comment.

He forbade her even to think of the young man and Libbie promised obedience, though in her secret heart she disobeyed and cherished her one romance. And she kept the tintype which her father knew nothing of.

But all that was seventeen years ago, and time had not stood still even with the sleepy Hillsdale folk. Old Hale and his wife were dead, Libbie was teaching school over in New York state, and the old home was rented to a woman who kept summer boarders. One afternoon as Libbie walked homeward through the long November shadows she stopped at the post-office for her paper or perhaps a letter from cousin Martha Hale who kept boarders in Boston. She received instead an envelope with the postmark "San Francisco." She tried to open it and read the sheet it contained, but the writing danced before her eyes. She was compelled to replace the letter in the envelope and wait till she was secure in her own room, where she read it with burning cheeks and a heart beating like a great mill-hammer. This is what she read:

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,
NOVEMBER 21, 1890.

Dear old friend and classmate:

You will no doubt be surprised to receive a letter from this part of the world, and will at once look at the signature to find out who is writing to you Well, you have not forgotten me, have you, and do you know that you owe me a letter anyhow? For you never answered one that I wrote to you years and years ago. I met one of the old Hillsdale boys, Newton Cole, on Market street a few days ago and he told me all the news. Although I only lived in the old place four years of my existence, somehow it holds a big place in my recollections. I hear that your people are dead and that you are not married. I lost my wife four years ago, and my mother has been dead a long, long time. I am alone in the world like yourself. Why could not old folks like us write to each other now and then? I was always curious to know why you never answered that letter of mine. I hardly write any letters nowadays except on business. I hope you will not be too busy to answer this as I should like very much to hear from you.

Your old schoolmate,
HORACE BENT.

Then she rummaged for the old tintype and gazed at it. It showed a tall ungainly youth with eager eyes, determined chin and thick hair flung off a high forehead. Of course he must be greatly changed now, but she was glad he had not forgotten her. She never expected to hear from him again. It was all like a dream, the picnic and the letter her father had burned and all those seventeen years passed and gone. All but the old tin-type which she hardly ever looked at nowadays.

She would answer his letter, of course. And she did, the exchange of epistles lasting until the close of her school term in July. She wrote to him that she expected to go down to Boston to visit cousin Martha Hale and to do some shopping. He answered that he had some law business that would take him east and that he would call upon her at Miss Hale's address.

If the many friends of Horace Bent, man of the world, politician and lawyer, had been aware that he was corresponding with a little New England school ma'am, they would have thought it a good joke. But Horace was getting somewhat tired of the world; he had enjoyed too many of its good things. He was a lawyer of good practice and had been to the legislature, so half of old Silas Hale's prophesy had come true. He had married a California girl who had brought him a moderate fortune, the marriage had been childless, and Horace was getting rather lonely. Many a pretty girl and dashing woman would have been glad to share his name and income, but though gallant to all he was devoted to none.

It is not to be imagined for a moment that considerations of sentiment had induced him to pen that letter to Libbie Hale. He had not been, as the novels have it, in love with her all these years. In fact, he had hardly thought of her. But his conversation with Newton Cole over their dinner at the University club had brought back the old place and his little classmate, and come to think of it, why the deuce had Libbie never answered that letter? Newton said she was still unmarried. It would be a good joke and a new experience to write to her. The result of his cogitations was the letter we have read.

As the correspondence progressed he really grew interested. There was something fascinating about Libbie's letters, something childlike, simple and sincere, which formed a contrast to the worldly women of his acquaintance. To be sure she was a woman of thirty-four, but she wrote like a girl of seventeen. She had never been to a theatre, she had never read Ouida—people still read Ouida in those days—and he enjoyed awakening her mind and calling out her ideas as one would those of an interesting child. And as luck would have it, there was that case of Grant's—somebody ought to go east about it. By Jove! he could go and as Libbie was to be in Boston, he would run in on her and make her visit pleasant. If he brought a wife back, one of those prim little thorough-going New England women who make such capital housekeepers, how San Francisco tongues would wag for about a week. He chuckled as he thought of it. It was an all-around good joke.

One morning Martha Hale's door bell rang and a telegram was delivered for her cousin Libby.

"Cousin Martha," said she with a blush, "a friend from California is in Boston and tells me he will call this evening."

"Libby, who do you know in California?"

"Oh, only one of the old academy boys. He's been out there a good many years."

"And how have you kept the run of him?"

"Well, the truth is, we've been writing to each other lately."

"Who is he, anyway?"

"Oh, his name is Horace Bent. He's a lawyer."

Cousin Martha scented a romance but was too wise to say anything. She helped Libby to dress for the evening, and could not deny herself a peep over the bannister when the door bell rang at eight o'clock.

The girl opened the door, showed a gentleman into the prim parlor and went to call the ladies. Libby could not summon courage to go down alone, so cousin Martha, preforce, had to go with her. At the door she was almost struck dumb. Was that Horace? That stout, bald man, rather slouchy in his attire, who sat holding a soft gray felt hat on his knee?

He rose to meet her.

"Miss Hale?"

"Mr. Bent. This is my cousin, Miss Hale, also"

And neither knew what to say next. Each was thinking how little the other had answered to expectations. Horace's natural self assurance came to his rescue and tided them over an embarrassing moment. He talked of this, that and the other, soon gaining assistance from cousin Martha's garrulity. Libby was silent. She sat like one in a dream. She was thinking of the tintype.

Horace was disappointed. This shy, old-fashioned little lady, why she was not a bit like what he imagined from her letters. She could not talk and she had no style. Sleeves were just then beginning to expand and those of her prim little sateen clung tightly to a meagre arm. She could not be so very old either, but she had not at all the dash and confidence of the Californian femme de trente ans. But he did his best to draw her into conversation, finally getting her promise to accompany him to the theatre the next evening, and firmly refusing Cousin Martha's invitation to dinner on the plea of business, for he had his doubts of the viands Miss Hale placed before her boarders.

The next evening Libbie made her first entrance into the theatre. Her long residence in a little New England town, broken only by infrequent visits to her cousin, had given her no taste for these vanities and her religious training had caused her to look upon them as of rather dubious morality. She was in a state of trepidation. What should she wear? Ought she really to go? Cousin Martha offered the best assistance she could, but when she came into the parlor where Horace was waiting for her, he realized that his Californian friends would have smiled at her appearance. He could not have criticised her attire, but he was sure that she was something of a dowdy.

In all cases of physical and mental exhaustion the use of a little Jesse Moore Whisky will be found invaluable as a stimulant.

And Libbie thought that he looked rough and careless compared with the black-coated ministers and professors that answered to her ideal. Then she was not used to such a loud voice or such a confident manner. And she was sure he smoked. It is true that Horace was the proverbially careless Californian man in his attire, but he looked for style in women folks

The play was "Camille," a most unfortunate choice. The leading role was played by an actress well known in the Golden State, and Horace spoke of her as a personal acquaintance. Libbie was shocked and speechless. She sat red and uncomortable and Horace divined her feelings.

"You do not like the play?"

"No, I do not care for it. But I do not know much about plays."

"Don't you like Modjeska?"

"No, I don't see how any woman can play such a character. I should think she would rather die. She ought not to take such a part."

Bent laughed to himself and thought "Little Puritan." But he saw how uncomfortable she was and took her home before the final act. The next day he called and bade her farewell, pleading sudden business.

Cousin Martha was in despair.

"He was such a fine man. And he could have made your visit so pleasant, Lib, if he had time to stay."

But Libbie went back to her school and the first thing she did was to roll the tintype into a tight bundle, wrap it up, tie a stone to it and throw it into the mill pond. She exchanged no more letters with Horace. And the next spring she married the minister of Little Bradford.

Bent is still a well known character in San Francisco. He has never married, and is as sans facon, eccentric and as independent as of yore. And not one of his five hundred friends knows the least thing about his brief penchant for a Little Puritan. IRENE CONNELL.

AT THE SUMMER RESORTS

THE IMPRESSION at the beginning of the season that this was to be a poor year at the summer resorts proved to be a great mistake. Never were the summer hotels better patronized than now. The various springs have "drawn well," as they say of a theatrical show, and the mountain and interior places of sojourn are keeping up their end excellently.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Mauzy and family returned last week from a pleasant trip through the country, driving their own team and stopping at Napa Soda springs, Johannisburg, Angwin's, the Geysers, Skaggs springs and the Hotel Rafael.

Judge J. C. B. Hebbard is at Haywards, enjoying a brief vacation from legal duties.

Fred Belasco and his wife (Juliet Crosby) spent the Fourth of July holidays at Suisun

William Broderick and family returned on Thursday from Vichy springs.

Judge T. Graham is sojourning at Westport in Mendocino county.

THE NEVADA

IF THE PEOPLE of San Francisco are particular about any one thing, it is in regard to their eating-places. They ask for the best in this line and they usually get it. One of the most popular restaurants in town is the Nevada, at 126 and 128 Geary street and 119 Union Square avenue, between Grant avenue and Stockton. Since its removal from its Pine street location Noel P. Loupy's rotisserie has not lost in popularity but instead has steadily gained in favor. Especially is the Nevada favored by families, who find it a delightful substitute for the home dining-room.

TWO HIGH CLASS STAKES

THE ATTRACTION at the Union coursing park today and tomorrow will be a winners and reserve stake. In the winners stake there are eight entries and in the reserve stake forty-eight dogs will run. The winners stake has the crack dogs of the coast entered and some high class coursing is sure to occur. The stake is composed of the following hounds: St. Oran, Threon, Twin City Girl, Prince Hal, Lord Byron, Susie, Emin Pasha and Gladiator. The dogs are so evenly matched that it is hard to pick the winner in the stake but in the reserve stake it looks as if Mialmo would either win or be "runner-up."

CAKE WALK CARNIVAL

The Mechanics' Pavilion will likely hold a big crowd tonight when the grand cake walk carnival for the benefit of the California Soldier Boys' fund opens. Benefits were given during the week by California Parlor No 1, N. S. G. W., Court Defiance No. 28, F. of A., Professor Francis' mandolin club, Maine Social circle, the Aim club, Ivanhoe and Syracuse lodges, K. of P., Court Independence No. 104, F. of A., the Pacific Coast Waiters' association and Eureka Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, to insure the proper equipment for the affair and other organizations are arranging to have special nights and are selling tickets to benefit the treasury. Society cake-walkers from other states have entered their names in competition for the prizes that will be awarded, and novel steps will be introduced by the confectionery pedestrians. The cake walk is still the raging fad in the line of terpsichorean feats and the craze for cake-walking extends throughout all grades of society.

DR. ABORN, the eye, ear, catarrh, asthma and lung specialist, of over thirty years' practice, is located at 554 Sutter street. Dr. Aborn's inhalation, building up and vitalizing treatment gives instant relief, curing where ordinary methods always fail. Dr. Aborn's is decidedly "the treatment that cures."

ESTABLISHED 1863

GOLD
PEBBLE
SPECTACLES
EYE GLASSES
OPERA
FIELD AND MARINE
GLASSES

COMPLICATED
CASES OF DEFECTIVE
VISION
DIAGNOSED
FREE OF
CHARGE

824 MARKET STREET, PHELAN BUILDING, Near Fourth.

"PIONEER LIMITED"
BETWEEN
St. Paul and Chicago

Finest and most complete train on Earth

C. L. CANFIELD, General Agent,
636 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

Recreation Park Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets

BASE-BALL
EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY
Oakland vs. Sacramento
July 15th and 16th

FULTON
LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY
256 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.
Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons, Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 561c

UN REVE

AND NOW I am at home alone. 'Tis night.
All still within the house, no fire, no light.
Let me, too, sleep. Alas! no sleep is there!
Pray then. My spirit will not hear my prayer.
My ear is still with dancing measures ringing,
Echoes which memory back to sense is bringing:
I close my eyes: before my inward glance
Still swims the fete, still whirls the giddy dance;
The graceful phantoms of the vanished ball
Come flitting by in beauty each and all;
A glance still haunts my couch; a soft hand seems
To press my hand, that trembles in my dreams,
Fair tresses in the dance's flight brought nigh,
Just touch my cheek, and like the wind flow by,
I see from maiden brows the roses falling,
I hear beloved lips my name recalling—
Anne, Lucy, Blanche!—Where am I—What is this?
What must love be, when even love's dream is bliss!

[Translated from the French of Lamartine]

Music World

NOT SO very long ago I debated at length upon the merit of an opera composed by J. Minkowski. In the course of my remarks I said: "In Italy he had an opportunity to study the modern Italian school. This, together with the knowledge he acquired with Richter, imbued his opera with the power of German orchestration coupled with the brilliancy of the modern Italian school of singing." These remarks were based partly upon the piano score and partly upon the elucidations of the composer. The reader will please observe that there is not a word about an existing orchestration but "the opera is imbued with power [the power of German orchestration] and brilliancy [the brilliancy of the modern Italian school of singing]." The power of German orchestration, it must be understood, is not necessarily the orchestration of Mr. Minkowsky and besides it seems to me one could easily ascertain from a piano score the character of a subsequent orchestration. Had I known that my remarks were going to be read by a shallow intellect, I should have been more explicit at the time. But as it was, both the comment as well as the reference to the orchestration seem to have invoked the ire of the critic of a local weekly who evidently does not believe that other people have a right to their own opinions. At the time, I refrained from answering the vindictive and vituperative article, because it seemed beneath contempt, but since then Mr. Minkowski's work has been commented upon by the New York critics, which fact recalled to me an incident that had already escaped my memory. Permit me to quote from the weekly in question and mark well the dignity, intellectuality and good breeding embodied in these remarks: "The obscure imp who scribbles for a local weekly is mad because I (accent on the I) ridiculed an assertion made about the orchestration of Mr. Minkowski's vaudeville The Smuggler's Bride. He declared with the presumption of a preposterous ass that Mr. Minkowski's orchestration is imbued of remarkable power when as a matter of fact the orchestration does not exist. Of course the abbreviated nonentity [Ah well! I'm not so small. There are others.] would rather die than make such a laughable blunder, but having committed it he has the 'gall' to live." Casually permit me to state that I never said that "the orchestration was imbued of remarkable power;" but that 'his opera was imbued with the power of German orchestration." Secondly, the opera is not a vaudeville like the concerto Madame Carreno was kind enough to take out of San Francisco. But if anyone is yet in doubt, permit me to quote from the New York Journal of July second. The article accompanied by Mr. Minkowski's portrait reads in part as follows: "The only purely lyrical organization in this country accepted Mr. Minkowski's work as an exceptionally fine example of lyrical composition for the stage. * * In New York he was a pupil of Dvorak, who was at pains to foster in him the characteristic Northern temperament, which adds to the Southern romantic, melodic features of composition the richer color in orchestration that seems to have relieved his very tuneful work of the insipidity which mars so many scores wholly Italian in their treatment. This was the verdict of a small audience of musicians, managers and critics which a few days ago attended a private hearing of The Smugglers of Badayez. * * The principal melodies for soprano, alto, tenor and baritone are of a far higher type than is common to light opera, and the orchestration—such as can be expected only from a Northerner—elevates the work to the plane of grand opera. * * 'Ah, it is too good for New Yorkers—except the Metropolitan Opera House,' said one of the managers present. * * 'It is absolute romance,'" said another—'Italy, Italy, Italy.' * * Up spoke a critic: 'It is lyrical, it is romantic, it is sweet; but in its sugar is mixed the stuff that Grieg and Brahms dipped their pens in.'" I wonder whether the critic or the ournal—for whoever wrote the above is a musician—has still "the 'gall' to live after making such a blunder?" For his reference to the orchestration is strictly in harmony with that of the one which appeared in TOWN TALK of April twenty-ninth. And all this fuss in the aforesaid weekly was made because Mr. Minkowski did not consider the critic of that paper efficient enough to pass his opinion on his work, but preferred asking the advice of others.

¶ ¶

Considerable interest is manifested in Bosworth's Complete Harmonic Cycle but I discover that there seems to be a doubt as to the utility of the device. There cannot be any doubt for the simple reason that the Cycle is based upon actual facts. Permit me to illustrate. There was a time when globes and maps were unknown. Now let us suppose a teacher of geography desired to explain to his pupils the location of a certain country or city. He was obliged to explain as much as possible the direction in which the place was situated and then the pupils had a faint idea of where the point was located. But the globe or map upon which countries and towns are marked gives us a decisive idea of the relative position of the various geographical points. By scanning the globe we can fix in our memory the exact direction of the compass. Formerly we were obliged to imagine these things; now we have a miniature earth which we can rivet into our mind. What is good of geography and the globe is also to be utilized as to Mr. Bosworth's Cycle. Hitherto the harmonic relationships—that is to say the relative position of the various chords and groups of notes to each other—were merely abstract matters. The teacher told you that such a fact has been established and you were obliged to take his word for it and retain in your memory what has been told you, without really knowing the actual reason and cause for the existence of these facts. Mr. Bosworth has promulgated a globe or rather disk upon which he has drawn out all the various chords and the scale. With the aid of this disk you are enabled to follow the elucidations of your teacher—for a teacher is always preferable to self-tuition—and just as the globe simplifies and eases the study of geography, Mr. Bosworth's musical globe simplifies and eases the study of harmony; for instead of basing your ideas upon words and phrases you can now picture them in your mind as they are shown on a certain disk.

¶ ¶

I hear from excellent authority that there will not be any grand opera season this fall. It appears that Mr. Maurice Grau, while very anxious to obtain a healthy price of admission for his performance, is unwilling to concede to the proprietors of the Grand opera-house a remuneration reasonable enough to compensate them for the discontinuance of their comic opera season. I am further told that one of the legitimate theatres has concluded arrangements with Mr. Grau to perform grand opera next year after the conclusion of the New York season. It seems to be settled that there will be no grand opera this fall by the Grau company.

¶ ¶

Miss Beresford Joy has resigned her position as contralto at Calvary Presbyterian church and will leave for Chicago on the first of August in order to resume a choir position. Miss Joy is at Pacific Grove, where she participated in The Messiah and in concerts connected with the Chautauqua assembly. On July fifteenth Miss Joy will sing at an orchestral concert in Los Angeles and from there she will leave for Chicago. Miss Joy is a vocalist of considerable skill and possesses a voice of much value. It is gratifying to know that her talent is appreciated, and she will no doubt be very successful in Chicago.

¶ ¶

It may be of interest to a local critic who sneered at the idea that J. Minkowski was able to orchestrate his opera to learn that the orchestration is nearly completed, has met with

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Miss Marion Bear, Concert Pianist, 927 Sutter St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, Vocalist, 1109 Post street.
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist, Oroville. Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . .

Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.

Specialist in the Development of the Voice

* * * HOME STUDIO:

RECEPTION HOURS. 12 TO 2 912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .

Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu-El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,

Studio for Voice Culture Operatic Repertoire,
Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method.

Engagements accepted for Concerts
Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.

Terms Moderate

Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

MR. PERCY A. R. DOW . .

PUPIL OF { VANNINI, FLORENCE
HENSCHEL, LONDON

Special Classes
for Study of the Voice

During June, July and August

Studio: 1654 Pacific Street

RECEPTION HOURS:
2 to 3, Monday and Thursday NEAR VAN NESS AVE.

MR. FRANCIS STUART

. . . Teacher of Singing

1615 Jackson St., near Polk

DR. H. J. STEWART . . . .

Organist of Trinity Church and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .

has removed his
MUSIC STUDIO
to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine

Singing, Piano, Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music

F. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street

Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.

A thorough course for teaching. Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Under direction of Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck

For Voice Culture Piano and Organ

COMPLETE CONSERVATORY COURSES, including instruction in Harmony, Theory, Chorus and Sight Singing, Ensemble Playing, Languages and Physical Culture. Special Preparation for Church Choir Work (weekly rehearsals with the choir of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.) Lectures on Musical Topics

* *

Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy

Coaching for Lighter and Grand Opera by Mrs. Henri Fairweather
Send for Illustrated Catalogue giving full particulars 841 Fulton St., S. F.

Reception Hours, 12 to 2 daily. Telephone West 223

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use

BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE

It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.

PRICE $3.00

At music stores or by mail. Descriptive circulars sent upon application.

HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

the approval of prominent New York musicians and critics and was arranged by the same man whose work was ridiculed, sneered at and condemned, despite the fact that the calumniator had never seen nor heard the work.

Carrie Roma is scoring a great success in London, where the press is not backward in bestowing upon her that praise which seems to be merited. Miss Roma was at one time a pupil of Alfred Kelleher, who has returned from Manila and has again resumed his duties as a teacher.

The summer school of music which was opened at Pacific Grove under the direction of Professor James Hamilton Howe is a complete success. Continued applications for membership are pouring in and the teachers have their hands full.

Fred. R. Howe, one of Santa Cruz's musical lights, paid this city a visit last week accompanied by his wife. Mr. Howe has succeeded in becoming known outside the seaside resort because of his ability as a composer of popular songs.

ALFRED METZGER.

¶ ¶

Emil Steinegger, who is one of the best known of our local piano teachers, will shortly leave for Vienna where one understands he will study under Leschetizky. Prior to his departure, Mr. Steinegger will give a farewell concert at Sherman-Clay hall, when the pianist will be assisted by the Press club quartet. The date of the affair is set for the tenth of August.

Someone has been inquiring into the duration of the popularity of songs. Two years is considered a long lease of life for even the best, while some last only a few weeks. Six months is a good average, but those which are introduced in a play which has a good run often hold their own throughout the theatrical season. Sentimental songs last longer in favor than the humorous variety. One can only pray that something will put an end to coon songs—so called—the majority of which would cause a respectable negro to blush.

The eighteenth musicale of the J. W. McKenzie musical society will take place next Thursday evening at Odd Fellows' hall; an admirable program has been arranged for the event.

E. S. Bonelli is spending the summer at Mount View hotel, Ross valley, but comes to town on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays to attend to his classes in piano.

SOHMER PIANOS BYRON MAUZY
Agent 308--314 Post Street, San Francisco
Sheet Music, Books, etc. Tel. Main 5261

LASH'S BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd
TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral. Voice Culture and the Art of Singing. First-class Engagements only accepted. Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave. Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Residence, 1622 Fell Street, near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE
SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakland, Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL
SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing. Begs to announce that she has returned from Europe and resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento street. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL
POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire. 130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS
CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches. Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE
TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER
TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY
TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St. Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH
PUPILS of Madame de la Grange Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

J. W. McKENZIE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX
PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A. Building. Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30. Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL
VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue. Studio, 717 Sutter Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON
SINGING and Piano. Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK
PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 975. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH
PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory, Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M. 1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA
TEACHER OF PIANO. 2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER
TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays. 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony. 2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE
TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club. Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a. m to 1:30 p. m. Thursday excepted. Telephone Hyde 1491 825 Sutter Street, S.F.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE
PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street. Telephone Larkin 782.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.
ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F.

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.
PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies. Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON
CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher. Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA
TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. GERTRUDE JUDD
WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN
TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.
TEACHER OF ZITHER. Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street. Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.
VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn. Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR
MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5. Will accept engagements for concerts.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano.
MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

World of Letters

CREATION Myths of Primitive America, in relation to the Religious History and Mental Development of Mankind, by Jeremiah Curtin, the translator of Sienkiwiczs' works. When we consider the great debts literature owes to the myths of Greece and Rome, how the world of poetry has been peopled for ages from the pantheon of the gods and the galaxy of naiads, dryads who forever are the inhabitants of sea and forest, we may well conjecture the possibility of these Myths of America upon the future literature when these fanciful legends have in their turn become classics for unborn generations. Mr. Curtin himself says: "The treasure saved to seience by the primitive race of America is unique in value and of high significance. The first result from it is to carry us back through untold centuries to that epoch when man made the earliest collective and consistent explanation of this universe and its origin. Occupying this vantage-ground, we can now throw a flood of light on all those mythologies and ethnic religions or systems of thought from which are lost in part, great or small, the materials needed to prove the foundation and beginnings of each of them. In this condition are all ancient recorded religions, whether of Greece, Rome, Chaldea, Persia or India. Through amazing ability of primitive man on this continent to retain, or perhaps through his inability to change and go forward, he has preserved a system of thought already old at the time of the first cuneiform letters and of the earliest statements on stone or papyrus. And the discovery of this system of ours almost with the moment when America after a century and a quarter of free political activity, and of intellectual labor unexampled in fruitfulness, takes her place as a world power and enters into intimate and searching relations not with Europe alone or one section of mankind but with the whole human race wherever fixed or resident." With these myths we feel how ancient is this land of America, that it has such a past as had Egypt and, to abide by the belief of many Americans, has the right of way into antiquity. We reflect with awe upon the conditions in pre-historic times when Egypt lay silent beneath the waters and this land was teeming with a civilization we can only dream of vaguely. In this volume we find somewhat of all this impressed upon tradition: That the earlier world had two periods of duration, one of complete harmony, another of violent collision and conflict. In the prior time of harmony, the hero of a certain myth controls all things by his wishes, he metamorphosizes the people called to a feast. He cries out: "I wish this house to be red-hot"—it is red-hot immediately. His enemies closed in are in a dreadful condition; their heads burst from heat. Something living and different springs from each, an owl, a hawk etc. and each turns into that which his qualities called forth, so he becomes outward and visibly what he has been hitherto internally and in secret. There are different systems in the book: In the winter system all changes were effected by Olelbis. But he has agents to assist him in his transformation, old Sas, the false and vain chief of Saskewil, is beaten by his son-in-law and receives his present form of the sun and moon at the end of a long and bitter struggle, in which strength, wit and keenness use the very last of their resources. There were a group among this people who fled away and avoided the metamorphosis. It is impossible to quote rationally from this work—it is necessary to possess and study these weird and fascinating folk-tales in their entirety to understand them at all. The last one in the series is one of the most interesting. It is called The First Battle in the World and the Making of the Yana. Mr. Curtin explains how he came to gather these legends together. In 1895 he made a journey to California, having an arrangement with Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun by which on consecutive Sundays such myth tales as were esteemed of sufficient value were to be published. These myths were found by Mr. Curtin in California, along the Sacramento river. The myths in this volume were from California, Mexico and Guatamala. The Wintus were a nation who occupied that part of California situated on the right bank of the Sacramento, from its source near the foot of Mount Shasta to the mouth of the San Francisco bay. They possessed this country before the coming of the white men. The Notes contain an interesting account of them. Mem Loinies is a beautiful myth of the wind and water. That of Norwan bears a relationship to the story of Helen of Troy. The notes are most fascinating reading; indeed the whole volume is of inestimable value and certainly no library is complete without this book having its place side by side with the old classics. Not only are the notes valuable, but there is an explanation of the meaning of all the names, also a guide for the pronunciation. Mr. Curtin has produced other works similar—the Myths and Folk-tales of the Russians, Western Slavs and Magyars, Hero-tales of Ireland, also Tales of the Fairies and of the Ghost-world.

ANNA COX STEPHENS.

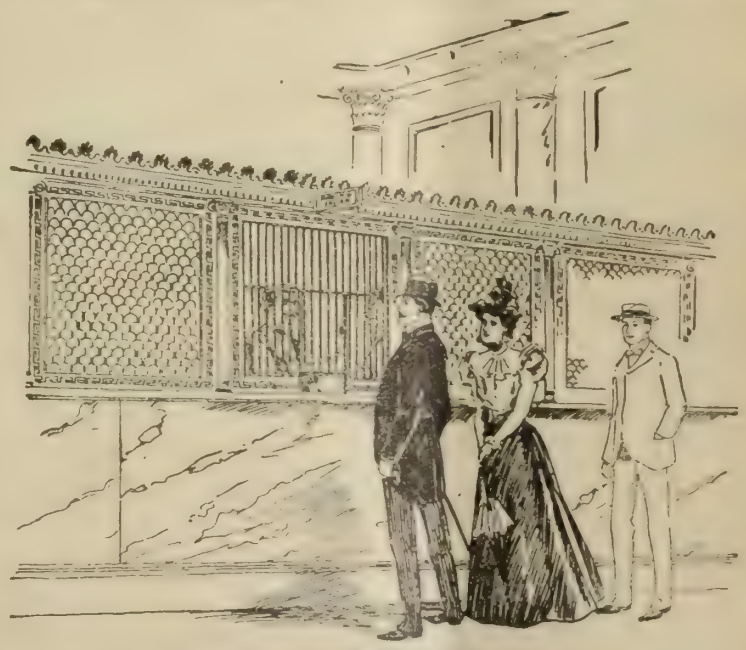
ALWAYS KEEP ON HAND

Pain-Killer

THERE IS NO KIND OF PAIN OR ACHE, INTERNAL OR EXTERNAL, THAT PAIN-KILLER WILL NOT RELIEVE.

LOOK OUT FOR IMITATIONS AND SUBSTITUTES. THE GENUINE BOTTLE BEARS THE NAME,

PERRY DAVIS & SON.



I think every man I see uses R·I·P·A·N·S.

Mr. Barry, our manager, takes one after every meal and so does his father and sister. The old gentleman has rheumatism if he don't take R·I·P·A·N·S. They use twelve a day in that house.

About half the people I know carry one of those 5-cent cartons all the time in their vest pockets.

I was in the Bowery Savings Bank to draw some money, and while I was waiting in the line a clerk came up to the paying teller and said: "Give me a Ripans!" The teller took a carton out of his pocket and handed it to the clerk, who took out one of the Tabules and handed the carton back. Then I watched him and saw him go to the water cooler and swallow the Tabule with some water; I saw him tip his head back.

It's just wonderful how everybody takes them.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton of TEN TABULES will be sent for five cents. RIPANS TABULES may also be had of grocers, general storekeepers, news agents and at liquor stores and barber shops.

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

Wm. B. Hooper, Manager — San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA

.....1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer, First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY.

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

Pacific Carriage Co.

OLIVER HINKLEY, SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.

STANDS:

General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street

California Hotel — N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny — 48 Eighth Street

TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 — Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

A. D. Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty
Open Day and Night — Telephone Main 971

EDUCATIONAL

Ziska Institute...

1718 Sacramento Street near Van Ness.

Thorough English Course. Foreign Languages taught rationally. Art and Music advantages the best. Prepares for American or European Colleges. . . Number of pupils limited. . . . . .

Day and Home School for Girls

Next term opens Aug. 3, 1899

Room for Four Boarding Pupils

SELBORNE SCHOOL... FOR BOYS

....SAN RAFAEL....

The school will reopen on August 29th in the fine new buildings, heated by steam and lighted with electricity.

For catalogue apply to the Principal,

REV. CHARLES HITCHCOCK,
SAN RAFAEL

TRINITY SCHOOL...

3300 WASHINGTON ST. SAN FRANCISCO.

(FOUNDED 1876) Boarding and Day School for Young Men and Boys

Prepares for university and college.

Accredited with the University of California and the Leland Stanford University. A faculty of eleven professors and teachers.

Boarders limited to thirty-five. Christmas term opens August 1st

REV. DR. E. B. SPALDING, Rector.

IRVING INSTITUTE...

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies

N. E. Cor. California and Buchanan Sts, S. F.

ACCREDITED TO THE UNIVERSITIES

Seminary, Conservatory of Music, Department for Children

Carriage will call. Next Session will begin Aug. 7, 1899.

For Catalogue address the Principal,

REV. EDWARD CHURCH, A. M.

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

—PRICE, $3.00—

Saws of every description made to order. Planing and Currier Knives. Lace Leather, Emery Wheels, Saw Mandrels, etc

Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE

DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1029½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh.
Office Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND

DENTIST. Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL

DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S W. corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas."

BUSH AND SON

DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 206 Kearny St., S. F. Rooms 310-308-309. 'Phone Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN

VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone, 4118, San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street, Telephone 66. 1529 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

FRANCIS STUART

TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK

HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON

MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone. Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LOUIS CREPAUX

(Member Paris Grand Opera)

HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

PIERCE & TAYLOR

STORAGE WAREHOUSE, 735 Market Street-Opposite Grant avenue. Furniture, Pianos, Trunks, Paintings, Mirrors and other goods stored in clean, light dry lofts. Charges moderate. Telephone Black 311.

DECKELMAN BROS.

RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON

COAL and WOOD; wholesale and retail dealer 628 and 630 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts, San Francisco. Telephone East 12

LEGAL NOTICES

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

WHY REALTY SHOULD NOT BE MORTGAGED

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE of HARRY I. THORNTON, Deceased. } Department No. 9, Probate. No. 15,715.

Upon reading and filing the verified petition of Bessie Thornton, praying that the executrix of the estate of Harry I Thornton, deceased, be authorized, empowered and directed to execute a note and to secure the payment of such note, to mortgage the real estate belonging to said estate, which is described as follows, to-wit:

All that certain tract of land situated in the County of Contra Costa, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at an ash tree 12 inches in diameter, marked S X S with two notches on the east and west sides from which a sycamore tree 20 inches in diameter bears north 9 degrees east 81 links distant; this corner is about 60 chains by a direct line down San Pablo Creek from the northeast corner of the McCoun Place; the said ash tree stands in the middle of a gulch on the west side of San Pablo Creek; thence west 147.88 chains to a stake forming the southwest corner hereof; thence north 100 chains (by true meridian) to the northwest corner hereof; thence east 65.88 chains to San Pablo Creek: at an elder tree 16 inches in diameter in the bed of the Creek; marked S X S with two notches on the south and west sides the northeast corner; thence up center of creek with its meanderings to point of beginning; containing 1000 acres of land and no more; the said tract being a portion of the Sobrante, situate in Contra Costa County and on the west side of San Pablo Creek; in the Cruizita Valley:

All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Fresno, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

According to the official plats and system of surveys of the Government of the United States; in township 13 south range 19 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, of section 34 the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter, and the south half of the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter, containing 60 acres of land, more or less, and also all water, water rights and privileges in anywise appurtenant or belonging to said land or any part thereof:

The southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 5 in township 14 south of range 19 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Lots 7 and fractional southwest quarter of southeast quarter of section 27; lot 1 and south half of northwest quarter and west half of northeast quarter of section 34, in township 12 south of range 19 east of Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, and containing 255.05 acres, more or less, as per survey:

Lot numbered 2 of northwest quarter of section 34 in township 12 south of range 19 east of Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, containing 35.71 acres of land, according to the United States Government survey:

All those pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Kings, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a point on the north or west bank of Kings River where the north line of section 1, township 17 south range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, intersects said bank; running thence due west along said north line of said section 4055 feet more or less, to the northwest corner of said section, thence due south along west line of said section 1870 feet and 5 inches, more or less, to a point on the north bank of Cole Slough, and thence along the north bank of Cole Slough and the north bank of Kings River following the meanderings thereon, to the point of beginning; the same being all of said section 1, lying north of Kings River and Cole Slough, and containing 87 acres, more or less:

Beginning at a point on the north bank of Cole Slough, where the westerly line of said section 1, township 17 south range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, intersects said bank, and running thence due north 1092 feet and 5 inches to a point; thence due west 1320 feet to a point; thence due south 582 feet to a point on the north bank of said Cole Slough; thence along the north bank of said Cole Slough following the meanderings thereof, to the point of beginning; containing 22.6 acres of land, and being a portion of the northeast quarter of section 2, township 17 south, range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian:

Those certain parcels of land situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, more particularly described as follows, to-wit:

One undivided third part of that certain lot situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the intersection of the southeasterly line of Market street with the northerly line of Seventeenth street; thence easterly along the northerly line of Seventeenth street 109 feet 8 inches; thence at right angles northerly 93 feet 9 inches to the southeasterly line of Market street; thence southwesterly along said line of Market street 144 feet 3 ½ inches to the point of beginning; being a part of Mission Block No. 115 as delineated on the official map of the City and County of San Francisco;

All that certain lot or parcel of land situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, particularly described as follows, to wit:

Commencing at a point on the east line of Castro street 180 feet south from the southerly line of Sixteenth street; thence south along the east line of Castro street 25 feet; thence at right angles east 94 feet 4½ inches; thence northeast 46 feet 2¾ inches; thence west 123 feet 7½ inches to the point of beginning:

IT IS ORDERED, that all persons interested in said Estate appear before the above-entitled Court on the 24th day of July, 1899, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., of that day, at the Court-room of said Court, Department No. 9 thereof, at the New City Hall in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, then and there to show cause, if any they can, why the said real estate or some part thereof, should not be mortgaged for the amount mentioned in said petition, to-wit: Twelve thousand six hundred and forty-three and 54-100 ($12,643.54) Dollars, or such lesser amount as to the Court shall seem meet, as is more fully set forth in said petition, reference to which is hereby made for further particulars.

Dated June 21, 1899.

J. V. COFFEY,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Section 1578 C. C. P.

Endorsed.
Filed June 21, 1899.
WM. A. DEANE, Clerk.
By V. F. NORTHROP, Deputy Clerk.

TOWN TALK prints Briefs and Transcripts

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. 2

CHRISTINA JACOBY, Plaintiff vs. HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant } Action brought in the SuperiorCourt City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff

The People of the State of California send Greeting to:

HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therin within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of Plaintiff since the 11th day of December A. D. 1897, and for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of defendant's willful neglect of said Plaintiff for more than one year last past; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Christina Penders, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT. } Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

Department No. 2.

ANNA DE LAWCZYNSKI, Plaintiff vs. THEOPHILE F. DE LAWCZYNSKI, Defendant } Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA SEND GREETING TO:

Theophile F. de Lawczynski, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful neglect of plaintiff for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of Defendant's willful desertion of said Plaintiff since the 15th day of March, 1898; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Anna Fabry, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT. } Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of JOHN O'BRIEN, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, John A. Drinkhouse, administrator of the Estate of JOHN O'BRIEN deceased, to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice to the said John A. Drinkhouse, administrator as aforesaid, at his offices, No. 402 Montgomery Street, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being his place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the said City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOHN A. DRINKHOUSE,
Administrator of the estate of
John O'Brien Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, June 24, 1899.

A RUEF, Attorney for Administrator,
402 Montgomery Street.

Santa Fe Route

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market-street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St., Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway.
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street

Lake Tahoe

The Most Picturesque Mountain Lake on the Continent

Its Attractive Resorts

Tahoe City — Tallac
McKinney's — Lakeside House
Rubicon Park — Glenbrook
Emerald Bay — Deer Park Inn
Glen Alpine Springs

Afford fine hotels, home comforts and all modern conveniences at reasonable rates.

Endless opportunity for outdoor recreation, such as boating, bathing, steamer excursions around the lake, mountain climbing, sight seeing, hunting and fishing

The atmosphere is pure, dry and health giving. Absolutely no malaria and no insect pests. Nights cool and delightful. Holders of Ogden Route tickets with sufficient limit may be granted a stop-over at Truckee to visit the lake. Side trip including trip around the lake, $6.00.

ALL AGENTS OF THE

Southern Pacific Company

are supplied with handsomely illustrated folders for free distribution, giving full and complete information. Ask or send for one.

S. A WHITE — H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W H. PORTER
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 — SAN FRANCISCO

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.

DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF

PAPER

Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty

401-403 Sansome St.

SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence

Livery and Sale Stables

423 Post Street,

W. E. BRIDGE, Proprietor
Telephone No. 1323 — San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY

Office, 1004 Market Street

TELEPHONE. SOUTH—420

TELEPHONE MAIN 240

George D. Graham
MANUFACTURER OF
Printing and Lithographic INKS
Printers' Rollers and Composition
Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials
529 COMMERCIAL ST.
Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.

Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.

609 Sacramento St.,
San Francisco, Cal.

W. SCHEPPLER

DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer
. . of . .
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

Schillinger's Patent Sidewalk and Gardenwalk a specialty

Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

UNITED STATES BREWERY

311-313 FULTON STREET

CELEBRATED Steam Beer

ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS

EDWIN E. PARKER — BENJ. L. TARBOX

The Reception

206 SUTTER ST., San Francisco.

Private Rooms for Ladies — Music Room at
Oysters in Every Style. — Disposal of Patrons
TELEPHONE MAIN 1231.

MAISON TORTONI
* *
S. CONSTANTINI
PROPRIETOR.

French Rotisserie

Private Dining Rooms,
Banquet Hall.
111 O'Farrell St.

A NO. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton

JAS. P. DUNNE & CO. . . .
* *
No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL . . .
* *
Fourth and Market Sts.

Overcoats and Valises Checked Free — TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR

THE MANHATTAN . . .
* *
25 Geary Street, S. F

Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5611

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world

LEE D. CRAIG ....

NOTARY PUBLIC AND COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS

316 MONTGOMERY STREET,
Bet. Pine and California
San Francisco, Cal.

Summer Resorts

Highland Springs

THE GREAT SANITARIUM OF THE WEST

* * *

Open every day in the year. New hotel elegantly furnished. Table unsurpassed. Lighted by electricity. Thousands cured by its waters. Finest swimming tank, bowling alley and dancing hall in Lake County, together with complete livery stable, gentle saddle-horses and ponies.

Over Thirty Kinds of Mineral Springs

Physician in attendance; superb climate; beautiful mountain scenery; trout, deer and small game plentiful; magnificent drives; baths in variety; lawn tennis and croquet.

Reached by the shortest stage route into Lake County. Round trip fare from San Francisco, via Hopland, $8; via Calistoga, $9.

Hotel and cottage rates, $10 to $14 per week.

Take the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad to Hopland or Southern Pacific Railroad to Calistoga.

For further information, address J. CRAIG, Highland Springs, Lake County, Cal., or see L. D. CRAIG, at 316 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

Highland Springs Mineral Waters on sale at the Oakland Pioneer Soda Water Company's, Thirteenth and Webster streets, Oakland, and by Ahrens, Pein & Bullwinkle, 620 Post street, San Francisco.

BLUE LAKES HOTEL

* * *

Conducted in a quiet home-like manner. The best of tables, fine fishing and hunting. Inclosure of 25x60 feet in shallow water for women and children. Rates $10 to $12 per week in hotel or cottages according to location. Ample accommodations. Round trip, good for six months, $9.50, via S.F and N. P. to Ukiah, thence by stage from Palace Hotel.

Address J. WILSON, Bertha P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

LAUREL DELL . . .

* * *

Increased facilities for comfort and pleasure. New dining room, 32x170 feet, overlooking lake. Driving, boating, bathing, fishing, bowling, etc. Lighted by gas.

H. WAMBOLD, Bertha P. O., Lake Co.

ANDERSON SPRINGS . . .

* * * Lake County

Natural Steam, Hot Sulphur and Iron Baths. Rates, $8 to $14 a week; telephone. Round trip, $8. Write for particulars.

J ANDERSON, Proprietor,

Anderson Springs, Middletown P. O.

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging

Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room, telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5.50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References, any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

GLENBROOK . . .

Lake County, California

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish, If you want to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation. If you want pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an exhilarating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O. W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

HOTEL EL PASO DE ROBLES

THE FLOWER OF CALIFORNIA RESORTS.

Modern in every sense, large rooms handsomely furnished. Moderate prices. Close by are the celebrated mud baths. They are most effective in the case of rheumatism, liver and kidney troubles. They act as a strong but soothing poultice drawing out the poisons of disease and strengthening the patient.

VISIT EL PASO DE ROBLES

OTTO E. NEVER, PASO ROBLES, CAL. CITY OFFICE, 636 MARKET ST

...Cypress Lawn...

FRUIT FARM; PLEASANT HOME good table; mountain water; free rides terms reasonable.

MRS. T. H. EPLEY, Napa

Howard Springs . . .

Lake County, (Putah P. O.)

* *

Hot and cold mineral springs; hot steam and plunge baths of great healing power—will cure rheumatism, nervous diseases kidney troubles, etc. Terms $10 and $12 per week. Special rates to families. Postoffice and telephone. Round trip tickets $10 at Southern Pacific office.

Address MRS. R. J. BEEBY.

Bonanza Springs . . .

Lake County, Cal.

* *

A NATURAL camping ground; five different mineral springs. We cater to campers only, and invite all who want good water pure air, fishing and hunting, to come. Hot and cold mineral baths. Cottages neatly furnished to rent from $1.50 per week. Provisions, hay, grain etc., can be purchased on the grounds. Teams meet stage at Seiglers.

Address R. F. DOCKERY, Bonanza Spgs., Putah P. O., Lake Co.

Hotel Benvenue and Cottages

LAKEPORT, CALA.

Situated on the shore of Clear Lake. Special facilities for families and children; home cooking, boating, bathing, billiards and shuffle board, hunting and fishing. Pavilion on the lake, containing bowling alley and large dance hall for use of guests only. Acetylene gas used.

FRANK & A. M. SCALES, Proprietors.

Parker Vineyard Summer Resort

Situated in the most pleasant spot of Cloverdale, the Eden of Sonoma County.

Natural attractions without limit, pleasant walks through canyons, fishing, hunting, etc. Plenty of fresh vegetables, fruits, butter, milk and eggs.

Large, new dining-room, shade and all comforts. Rates, $7.00 per week, children under twelve, $3.50. Free conveyance to and from all trains, when notified.

J. D. WINTER, Prop., Cloverdale, Cal.

Agua Caliente Springs Hotel,

SONOMA VALLEY

* *

Two hours from San Francisco, via Tiburon Ferry. Warm mineral swimming and tub baths. Water, gas, electric bells. Rates, $10 to 12 per week, $2 per day.

Address AGUA CALIENTE SPRINGS,

Agua Caliente, Sonoma Co., Cal

GERMEA

THE

KING

OF

BREAKFAST

FOODS

To Chicago in 3½ Days
To New York in 4½ Days
VIA
Chicago Union Pacific
AND
Northwestern Line

Through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Buffet Library Cars with Barber daily . . .
All Meals Served a la Carte in Dining Cars

For full information address
R. R. Ritchie, General Agent
PACIFIC COAST
No. 2 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco
PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco Sanitarium

Telephone Main 1240

MENTAL AND NERVOUS DISEASES A SPECIALTY

LOCATION,
Former residence of Peter Donohue, Esq.
Cor. Second and Bryant and Stanley Place,
SAN FRANCISCO

Reasonable Terms to Physicians

Mrs. Reeves Atkinson
MATRON

MOISE'S EASY SHINE. MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

"TOWN TALK"
Moise's
ARTISTIC
RAISED LETTER
SIGNS

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO, SHELTERED FROM OCEAN WINDS AND FOGS. VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE; EASY TERMS. AMERICAN LAND AND TRUST CO., 132 MARKET STREET, S. F.

LARKSPUR

Is destined to be the metropolis of Marin County and is San Francisco's most popular suburb. It is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mount Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially, Eminent physicians pronounce it a great sanitarium.

A Great Sanitarium

Many attractions are offered—such as sea bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks snd drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations; for, Larkspur is building up more rapidly than any other town on the N. P. C. R. R. Large esidences and cottages for sale on installment payments. Do not pay rent when the same money will purchase a beautiful home. Cottages for rent; property exchanged.

AMERICAN LAND and TRUST CO.

132 MARKET STREET

SING FAT & CO.

(ESTABLISHED 1866)

Chinese AND Japanese Bazaar

CHINESE EMPEROR
TRADE MARK.

614 DUPONT STREET, next to St. Mary's Church

Beware of Firms Infringing Upon Our Name.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .

Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,

Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States

Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,

San Francisco.

Mont Rouge Vineyard

Livermore Valley California

CHAUCHÉ & BON,

PROPRIETORS

Office and Depot, 17 First St.

Telephone Main 1514 SAN FRANCISCO.

Don't LOSE A GOOD OPPORTUNITY

Big Reductions

25 to 50 Per Cent Saved

Clearance Sale

Odds and Ends--Broken Sizes

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 Market Street

Telephone, Main--1659 San Francisco

Town Talk Prints Menus

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

This Paper not to be taken from the Library. ++++

This Paper not to be taken from the Library. ++++

PACIFIC TOWN TALK

LITERATURE · POLITICS · SOCIETY · STAGE · MUSIC

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY

San Francisco, July 22, 1899 Vol. 7—No. 360 Price, 10 Cents

WATER——LIGHT

Water works and electric light plants for country clubs and residences Contracts taken for complete installations, and all work fully guaranteed. Only the best class of work solicited. No steam, heat, or danger.

HERCULES GAS ENGINE WORKS, [Inc.]

305 Market St., S. F.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teaches { Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS: 3:30 TO 4:30

You should ride a

STEARNS

Cushion Frame Bicycle

Safe Deposit Vaults

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

N. W. corner of Bush and Sansome Streets.

STORES Trunks for one dollar a month.

RENTS Safes for $5 a year, furnishing the most perfect security for valuables of all descriptions.

Office hours, 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS

AT HOME

Call and see

The Thermal Bath Cabinet

Baldwin Pharmacy

119-121 Ellis Street

Scene from "Heartsease" at the Columbia Next Week

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus. .	$ 2,187,617.90
Capital actually paid up in cash.....	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1899.....	27,656,513.03

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier, William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, July 1, 1899, - - - - - -	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital, - - - - - - - - - -	1,000,000
Reserve Fund, - - - - - - - - - - -	205,215
Contingent Fund, - - - - - - - - -	442,763

E. B POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President

LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER ROBERT WATT THOMAS MAGEE DANIEL E. MARTIN GEORGE C. BOARDMAN W. C. B. DE FREMERY ALBERT MILLER GEO. TASHEIRA E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over - - -	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital - - - - -	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund - - -	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over - - - -	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits -	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits -	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock - -	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock - -	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

DO YOU KNOW

A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT

Send or Sample Copy of the

OAKLAND TRIBUNE

and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco

Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

The S. S. Australia

Sails for Honolulu Wednesday, July 26, at 2 p. m

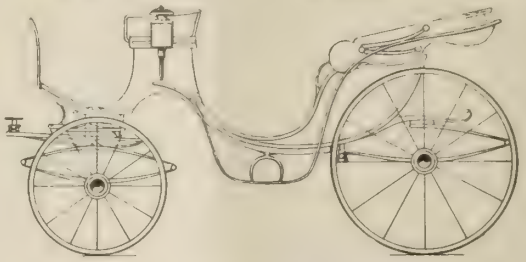
The S. S. MOANA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, Aug 9, at 10 p.m.

Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.

FREIGHT OFFICE—327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A N Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart, H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

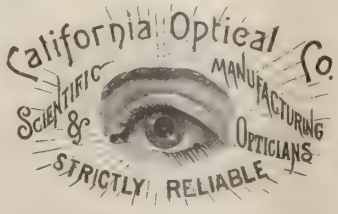
Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month. Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.



You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, July 22, 1899

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL SAN FRANCISCO

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

A WRITER in Self Culture for July contends that a work of art cannot in itself be immoral. If all people could take that view of the matter there would be no immorality in the world, but there are people who are shocked by nude statuary and who insist upon draping cold marble and insensate bronze, and while those people are permitted by a kind Providence to roam at large we cannot concede that the cry of "Art for Art's Sake" is a shibboleth that should have the sanction of the statutes. All women are not like the woman whose retort courteous is referred to by the writer in Self Culture for the purpose of emphasizing the argument. This particular woman had a passionate love for the beautiful in all forms, a love which expressed itself in her surroundings. She was asked by a friend why she had so many pictures of the nude and her reply was: "Because to me pictures of the human figure speak so clearly of the divine in man that I sometimes forget there are those who have not yet risen above the animal." The same writer contends if a book is well written it is good and if it is badly written it is bad, and that this is the final test in writing. In other words there can be no evil in a book if it is the work of a master hand and is well written. According to that notion a vicious book written for the purpose of creating prejudices or to appeal to coarseness in taste, is not necessarily immoral. If it is well written the author cannot be charged with having produced an immoral work. No matter what his subject if he has the power to overcome the difficulties of language and to express his thoughts with rhetorical finish his work is moral, whereas if he should make a religious topic his theme and advocate the highest principles of Christian doctrine, if his style and diction lacked artistic finish and his language were crude, he would be guilty of a breach of the moral code. It is well to know these things, for otherwise we might betray primitive ideas on subjects with which we had supposed we were somewhat familiar.

A NEW YORK theatrical firm is about to undertake the task of elevating the stage. And strange as it may appear the work of elevation is to be started in a vaudeville house. If there is one form of theatrical entertainment which is expected to be less refined than another it is that which is commonly known as vaudeville. Patrons of the "variety show" do not pay their money to witness a classical performance. They seek entertainment that appeals to their sense of the ridiculous, and they easily enthuse over the sentimental ballad and the grotesque comedian and the comical freak. Dialogue that would disgust on the dramatic stage excites the risibles of an audience at a vaudeville performance. Yet the management of a vaudeville house has deemed it advisable to institute reform and it is in New York where "The Turtle" was a great success that the improvement in tone is to be made. Koster, Bial & Co, proprietors of the pioneer music hall of America, have announced their intention to revive the class of show that was given before the imported indecencies were introduced to American theatre-goers. Some time ago their refined patrons were insulted with a gross pantomime entitled "An Affair of Honor." It was so bad that Cissie Loftus, who had come to this country to appear at Koster & Bial's theatre, had to break her engagement to retain her self respect, and that high-priced artist is far from being a prude. The patrons of the house began to protest and the management decided to change the style of the bill. Hereafter every performer will be required to give a full rehearsal in costume before being permitted to appear on the stage. Anything that is in the slightest offensive to decency will be cut out. Now if the managers of the more fashionable theatres will show the same deference to decency, they may encourage their patrons in the cultivation of a taste for wholesome dramas.

THERE is little use in preachers thundering from the pulpit against the divorce evil when amongst themselves they furnish a fair share of the clients of divorce courts and are willing to contract alliances with divorcées, or when a fat fee will superinduce forgetfulness on their part of the facts. Nothing short of a public sentiment which is expressed by social ostracism will stay the rush; but how is a public sentiment to be established in a community where there is hardly a family not more or less remotely affected? Laws are passed looking toward a check in the tide and lawyers are set to work to pick holes in the fabric or devise means by which they may be evaded. Collusion is supposed to act as a bar to divorce but two-thirds, if not more, of all the applications are granted on a default of the defendant who is generally willing to lose the case provided that no charge is preferred which may tend to degrade him (or her) in the eyes of the community and by some curious perversion of the moral sense desertion, cruelty or failure to provide the necessaries of life for wife and children are not regarded as degrading. They are so well understood to be mere "charges" that within an hour after a man has been separated from one wife because of his most cruel treatment he is united to another woman willing to take the same risks, and the chances are that she knows by her own experience just what the accusations are worth. A very large proportion of the people who now run into court with their grievances, real or imaginary, would fix up a modus vivendi if they did not know there was that door ajar and if it were possible to refuse separations by default and compel the plaintiff to prove the assertions and the defendant to combat the evidence as he would in any other case the door would be more often closed than opened. It is the law in Norway that when a widower is married he must divide amongst his children such a part of his estate as would fall to them at his death. If we had such a regulation in this country, applicable also to "legal" widows and widowers, there would be very few old fools made the prey of adventuresses and fewer family dissentions brought about by the advent of a youthful step mother. The divorce question has become so much a part of the life of the people that it excites no comment to find that the same person has had two or even three experiences or that a whole family for three generations has been unmarried. But a few years ago a woman (divorced) right here in our city applied for a warrant for the arrest of her thirteen-year-old daughter who she stated had left her home and taken up her residence with a "strange man." The child was found under the care of a man who seemed attached to her and whom she called grandfather but later explained that he was not exactly her grandfather, as he was only the divorced second husband of her grandmother, and therefore persona non grata to the family. Is there anything to choose between that and the funny-column joke of the Chicago child who upon being reprimanded for attracting the attention of a stranger on the street remonstrated: "But, mamma, that was papa last year?"

WHILE the preachers all over the United States are crying that "God is in the Battle," "Christ behind the Bayonets" and so on, General Otis is seriously considering a project to get rid of the missionaries in the Philippines. The natives have been subject to Christianizing influences for nearly three hundred years and are in all probability as nearly converted as their civilization will permit. At all events they are satisfied with their religion, though it may not be of the precise brand that these newest evangelists approve, and the only effect that their interference has had thus far is to hamper the military authorities and incite in the natives a fear that they will be obliged to change their form of worship. Thus far the United States has kept church and state apart but every now and then some "reformer" or ignoramus brings up a scheme for uniting them in some special instance. Last winter our pious legislators came to the conclusion that church property should be exempted from taxation and now comes forward a good woman—a Californian, worse luck—asking that this Christian government stamp its coin of the jubilee year (query—jubilee of what?) with the cross and a portrait of Christ. It may astonish some good people to discover that the United States is not only passively secular but that in treaties with non-Christian nations there is a distinct agreement that we shall take no part in religious disputes. Jewish and Mohammed as citizens, would be well within their rights in objecting to these Christian coins and with far better reason than had the A.P.A. in its protest against the Catholic missionaries on the Trans-Mississippi postage stamp. All our Sunday laws aim at a union of church and state and the protests of the religious bodies against the seating of Roberts in Congress tend in the same direction. He is as fairly representative of his constituents as are other delegates to Washington. They evidently were well aware of his plural wives when they voted for him and, moreover, if that is a valid excuse for unseating a member, and generally enforced, there would be a surprising number of vacancies in the House. The way to suppress polygamy is to suppress it. There is nothing like being in earnest, and hysterical shrieking after the mischief is done is of little avail in any cause.

MR. F. G. COOK was permitted to air his opinions in the Atlantic Monthly of July. He thinks that the system of electing judges by popular vote should be discontinued because it takes judges into politics. Not having the acquaintance of Mr. Cook, TOWN TALK is unable to say whether his opinions in general are worth anything. He may be a wise man but he has surely failed to reach the depths of the judicial disorder with his mental soundings. He was not the first man to discover that the selection of judges by popular vote necessitates their mingling in politics. That is the basis of the argument that has always been used in favor of the appointment of judges, but nobody has ever been able to demonstrate that if an aspirant for judicial honors were forced to depend upon the favor of the governor of a state or other executive he would thereby be rendered independent of political influences, or that as a consequence of such system of selection the appointing powers would supply the most competent and conscientious men. Even Mr. Cook would probably find it difficult to prove that California would have a better judiciary if Governor Gage instead of the people were vested with the power of selection. Experience has shown that the people exercise most religiously their powers of discrimination in the matter of selecting material for the bench. They are fooled sometimes but not all the time, but as they have no political debts to pay or influential friends to reward they are not as likely to select the wrong man as the Governor of the State would be. When it is remembered that our judges do not come from the masses, but from a comparatively small class, it should be considered remarkable that we succeed in getting as many competent men on the bench as we do. And when it is also remembered that that class is composed entirely of lawyers it should be considered little short of phenomenal that the people are so wise in the exercise of their discrimination that they permit so few rascals to get upon the bench. Everybody knows that an honest lawyer is one of the rarest works of God. We must not expect then an abundance of honest judges. When virtue becomes the sequence of vice we then expect to see the villain that connives at the bribing of a jury to-day engaged on the morrow in dispensing justice with an impartial hand. But while looking forward to this phenomenon in evolution we may as well make up our minds to one fact, and it is this: that we cannot improve on our system of selecting the judiciary. Our only recourse is to purify the legal profession, the source from whence pollution comes. Let us try to improve on the ethics of that so-called honorable profession. There must be something wrong with the code that governs the acts of lawyers, for the list of most eminent members of the profession includes its most artful rogues.

"WHAT WOMEN CAN EARN," is another volume of essays collected from various sources, which apparently aims at convincing women that "anybody can do anything." Most of the articles appear to belong to the "Ladies Column" of the weekly papers and contain no practical information, but vaguely encourage every dissatisfied housewife to believe that her true sphere is that of an artist. "Any woman with an eye for color and form may become an artist in oil," and where is the woman who does not imagine herself possessed of just such an eye? Despite of all that has been written against the kodak fiend, the qualifications given as necessary requisites in order to become a successful photographer are rather startling in their wide range and completeness. "The best photographer is one who is most Chesterfieldian in his manners, a Bacon in his range of information, a Rembrandt in his art and a small edition of Shakespeare in his knowledge of human nature, all blended with the humor of Dickens." That sentence reveals two things: that the writer is thoroughly English and that he is not a disciple of Ignatius Donnelly. The only effect of such books of pretended advice and guidance is to encourage women of tuppenny talent and idle time to waste material in jig-sawed gimcracks, paper flowers and "oil paintings" as flat and hideous, useless and utterly unsalable outside of the circle of admiring relatives. Busy idlers should not be encouraged to flood the labor markets in order to earn pin money. And those to whom the alternative is work or starve will find little of even dry bread between these book-covers.

SOME WEEKS AGO TOWN TALK called attention to the conspicuous incompetency of the major-general commanding the American troops in the Philippines, and suggested that General Miles be substituted as rapidly as submarine telegraphy and the transport service would permit. Specific acts which evinced the incompetency of Secretary Alger's toy general were pointed out, but the suggestion went unheeded. Now almost every newspaper in the country is demanding that General Otis be recalled. That General Otis is a mistake there can be no doubt, but this, the administration with its usual reluctance to confess error, will hesitate to admit. Otis will be recalled but not until pretext can be had by which he may be enabled to retire gracefully. If he could conveniently get sick there would be no further difficulty. The incompetency of General Otis has been no secret anywhere except in the White House. His official blunders have been the theme of discussion wherever army men congregate. He is not fitted for the important task to which he was assigned. He is better adapted for clerical work at an army post. His specialty is the training of his luxuriant side-whiskers. He is an amiable man and a patriotic citizen, and he can always be depended upon to do his duty as he understands it, but his understanding is not of very great capacity.

TAKE YOUR FAMILY

A NOTABLE EVENT in the annals of Southern Pacific excursions will be the family excursion to Santa Cruz tomorrow, when the round-trip rate will be only two dollars. It is not too much to say that Santa Cruz is the most popular seaside resort in the state and the opportunity of spending a day there, at such slight outlay on the pocket-book, is a pleasure rarely attained, especially now during the height of the season. Those going from San Francisco will take the 7:45 A. M. boat from the ferry landing, and splendid trains of first class coaches will leave Fourteenth and Franklin street, Oakland, at 7:45 A. M.; Alameda, Park street, at 8:20 A. M. The return trip to San Francisco will bring the excursionists home by 8:05 P. M. The League of the Cross encampment is now in progress in Santa Cruz and this excursion will give San Franciscans a chance to visit the boys in camp.

THEY ALL DRINK ÆTNA

SPARKLING, effervescent and a most delightful drink altogether, besides being a valuable remedy for kidney diseases and a sure cure for rheumatism, dyspepsia and indigestion—that describes Ætna mineral water. Ætna is not a soda, it is a genuine mineral water, the product of a real spring, and it is on a par with the waters of the most famous European spas. Indeed, by those who have tested the mineral waters of other countries, Ætna is said to be superior to any in the world. Linn & Klee are the sole agents for the United States for Ætna Mineral Water; office and warerooms, 619 Montgomery street.

POMMERY IS KING

POMMERY CHAMPAGNE is once more the popular high class beverage. Wine experts have placed the seal of their approval on Pommery and clubmen prefer it to all other brands of the effervescent fluid. John Caffrey, the local agent for Pommery, never loses an opportunity to exploit the merits of the wine. In addition to its exhilarating properties it promotes digestion and stimulates the mental faculties. When you want to feel like a millionaire, drink Pommery.

Handsome hats and stylish bonnets at your own price this week—Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street.

ENGLAMOURED

THERE'S A LOVE that every other love excelleth,
And its glamour doth outglow the noonday sun:
'Tis the faith that with suspicion never dwelleth,
And the rapture that is reckless to outrun
The fond hope that every compassed joy surpasses,
Till with eagerness it thrilleth to embrace.
They may bid me look on thee through doubt's dark glasses,
But I only see the beauty in thy face.

LOUIS A. ROBERTSON.

The Saunterer

EVER SO MANY more people than one fancies find San Francisco not a bad sort of a place to spend July in. The trunks have been coming back from the country at a great rate this week and those people who left town in April seem only too willing to return in July. There has been no removal of the boards concealing the front doors, so I fancy the back entrances are in use when hotels have not been frequented. Most of the Burlingame and San Rafael people stay at the Palace when enjoying temporary visits to town in summer, for it is too much of a bother to open the town-house for such a brief stay. Summer means au revoir to formality and a shelving of conventionality for the nonce. You can do many things in summer that would be impossible in winter and I have frequently happened upon young matrons dining en duo with masculine friends, and young benedicts with feminine ditto, at the several grills. The theatres have been well patronized and especially has "Lord and Lady Algy" caught on. The California, with Blanche Bates as the attraction, has also held smart audiences every night. I saw a young paterfamilias at the Columbia one night last week with three of his sisters-in-law, and they seemed to be having an exceedingly pleasant time. He is an admirable brother-in-law and falls in with his wife's matrimonial ambitions, I am told, for her sisters. His wife is now at Del Monte with her prettiest sister.

"I hear that old Soak has laid out some money on a centre board."

"Oh, no, you have got it just a trifle wrong. It was a sideboard he bought."

The twenty-fourth anniversary of the birth of Fred Holland was charmingly celebrated by a surprise reception given to the young attorney-at-law by about twenty of his friends, last Saturday evening. The affair was given at Mr. Holland's home in Franklin street and was enjoyable in every detail. Music, dancing, and toasts and speeches during the progress of a delicious supper formed the ordre du soir. Mr. Holland is a very popular young man and in his profession is regarded as a rising legal light.

Adjutant-General Seamans of the national guard is going to be a valuable contributor to the gayety of the people of the state. During the preparations for the reception of the Oregon troops our adjutant-general strutted about with all the pride and pomp of a peacock. It was his first opportunity to exhibit himself in his new role and he availed himself of it with the air of a man who appreciated the full measure of the dignity of his position. When the tugs were hovering around the transports on the day of the arrival of the troops the band on the Sea Queen played "Hail to the Chief" in honor of Governor Geer of Oregon who was on the Irwin. General Seamans was also on the Irwin and when he heard the band play he took off his hat and bowed with great dignity.

He: Young Soak has taken the gold cure.
She: Really?
He: Yes, he married Miss Millions yesterday.

Although the J. P. Smiths are in Europe, Santa Cruz is not suffering from despondency. The Smiths have always contributed to the gayety of the town and they would be missed perhaps, if it were not for the H. Francis Andersons. The Andersons are an English couple who came over to this country with money to burn and settled at Ben Lomond, which is not far from Santa Cruz when you have a large variety of traps and carts and fast horses. The Andersons have fitted up a sumptupus residence at Ben Lomond on the style of the country home of the English gentleman one reads about in novels that deal with the provincial aristocracy of Great Britain. They entertain the people for miles around and their receptions are of the most lavish kind. They spend a great deal of their time in Santa Cruz where H. Francis Anderson presides over the destinies of the Country club, the members of which are addicted to golf and other mild dissipations. This Country club has quarters in the old home of the Pilot club, once the swell organization of the town but which died of inanition or something equally fatal. Baron Von Hillier was treasurer of the club for a while but the responsibilities were too great and he resigned. The baron is a real live representative of the German titular aristocracy and as he is a nephew of millionaire Hihn, he stands well in Santa

There are lots of 'A. A.' brands of whisky, but only one Jesse Moore 'A A'

POMMERY
SEC BRUT
Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne
CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco
JOHN CAFFREY, Pacific Coast Representative

Cruz. Paul Jarboe is also a member of the Country club and he spends a considerable portion of his time on the links at Vue de l' Eau in company with his brother-in-law, Jerome Case Bull of magazine fame.

Santa Cruz was greatly shocked the other day over the report that Mrs. H. Francis Anderson had been seriously injured at Felton by the capsizing of her spider-trap. This is a tall vehicle that enables the occupants to look down on the bourgeoisie from a lofty height, and to be thrown out of it is akin to a fall from a second story window. It appears that the Andersons had gone to the train to meet their friend C. B. Charlesworth and his bride, who were enjoying a honeymoon trip from the east. Being fond of spectacular display and desiring to give their friends a royal reception, the Andersons hired a brass band. It was the Ben Lomond brass band, a newly organized musical institution. Now the horses attached to the trap, though spirited, were accustomed to the noises of steam engines and were not what might be deemed skittenish. but when the Ben Lomond brass band began operations, the animals reared up and made one supreme effort to divest themselves of their harness. Over went the rig and the occupants were thrown out; fortunately they received ouly slight scratches.

Apropos of the Andersons and their old country style of entertainment, I am reminded of the fact that Gaston Ashe is pursuing the even tenor of his way after the manner of the hospitable rural gentleman. After his marriage a couple of years ago, he found himself in possession of a valuable ranch near Hollister and he immediately bade farewell to the madding crowd together with the gayeties of the metropolis and hied himself to bucolic regions where he is now enjoying the ideal existence of the man that loves nature as much as he despises the bustle and tumult of the crowded city. And he has become very popular throughout the surrounding country, for his at homes are famous over quite a stretch of territory. I understand that he can go to a state convention whenever he wants. He is recognized as the farmers' friend and they are his constituents.

Luck seems to be coming Porter Ashe's way once more. For awhile he was getting more than his share of ill-fortune. Geraldine, the game mare that won so many purses for him in the days when he sported a plethoric purse and which appeared as a triple star with Aubrey Boucicault and E. J. Henley when "The Favorite" had its initial presentation on the stage in this city a few years back, got too old for use on the track and Porter put her on a breeding farm. Her first colt was deformed and it was then thought that she was worthless. About that time Ruinart promised to accomplish great things on the turf but while in training for a stake race he injured a leg and was sent away for repairs. Bad luck came in bunches until Ashe ran for the state senate and was elected. The hoodoo was declared off. A little later Geraldine became the dam of as fine a colt as was ever seen, Ruinart recovered the use of his injured limb and his owner was hired to break the will of I. G. Wickersham, the Petaluma millionaire. What greater stroke of fortune could a lawyer ask for? And it appears as if the will is not a hard one to break. Ashe's client is Frank Wickersham of Fresno, the son of the dead millionaire.

A serious illness is often averted by the prompt use of a pure and wholesome stimulant. The famous old Jesse Moore Whisky is the best.

Wickersham was an eccentric old man who after accumulating an immense fortune was afflicted with the hallucination that he was destined to become a pauper. Some years ago he became interested in a bank in San Luis Obispo and through mismanagement, or worse, he lost considerable money in the institution. James Crittenden, the attorney, was interested in the same bank and I believe he manipulated the stock and elected himself president at a large salary. At any rate, he raised a row that involved the bank in litigation that proved disastrous. About that time the Fresno boom collapsed and Wickersham saw more of his coin vanishing. He had staked his son Frank to about eighty thousand dollars to lend in Fresno and for awhile the latter collected interest at the rate of about one per cent per month, but when the boom ended people ceased to pay their interest and the security ceased to be worth the face value of the mortgage. Old Wickersham fretted over the situation but his son assured him that everything would come out all right. The old man thought otherwise and one day he presented his son a document to sign, saying:

"If it's all right put your signature on that paper."

The paper contained the following: "In consideration of eighty thousand dollars heretofore loaned to me by my father, I hereby waive all claim to his estate."

When the banker died and his will was opened it was found that Frank Wickersham was not included among the legatees. It was explained that one had already received his share of the estate. The bulk of the estate was left to Fred Wickersham, a son of the deceased. Frank Wickersham now hopes to convince a jury that he was buncoed by his father.

Although the automobile is making a strong bid for popular favor with a fair prospect of rendering the horse obsolete, it cannot be trifled with even at this early stage of its career. William K. Vanderbilt Jr. recently attempted to take liberties with his automobile and he found it as stubborn as a mule. He tried to back the machine down a steep grade and after going some distance he applied the brake and with his foot still on the reverse he started the machine forward. With the two currents applied simultaneously the machine went right over backward and the young millionaire had a narrow escape from being crushed to death. Under similar treatment a horse would have made it disagreeable for its rider. If you pull on the lines and apply the spur at the same time the horse will demur in a most demonstrative manner. It is somewhat pleasing to know that a fool on an automobile is just as likely to get himself into trouble as a fool on horseback. Young Mr. Vanderbilt is not exactly a fool although he did leave college before he finished his studies in order to get married, but his manner of handling an automobile showed that he is actually in need of a chaperon as badly as he thought he was in need of a wife.

Engraved . . . ✱
Wedding Announcements and Invitations . . . ✱

ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

M. Delorme, the well known writer of music, died in Paris recently. Perhaps his best known composition is the "Boulanger" march from which he is said to have derived an income of ten thousand dollars a year. On the same day there died in Bellevue hospital, New York, Charles Graham, author of "Two Little Girls in Blue," The Picture that is Turned Towards the Wall" and other popular successes. He was absolutely penniless and left a widow and five young children in destitution. Graham sold his "Two Little Girls in Blue" for ten dollars and all he ever realized from "The Picture that is Turned Towards the Wall" was five hundred dollars, paid to him in small sums, though the publishers cleared twenty-five thousand dollars. Music publishing, like every other business, has its risks and those who engage in it probably put out hundreds of songs every year that do not sell copies enough to pay for the paper they are printed on, so that the one success must make good the large number of failures; still, such a disproportion as five hundred dollars to the composer and twenty-five thousand dollars to the publishers, shows either a very poor business capacity on the part of Graham or extraordinary rapacity and misrepresentation on the part of the publishers. Local composers, by the way, could tell some queer tales on this same subject of the disproportionately small returns that reach the pockets of song writers, and also, if I am not mistaken, more than one San Francisco song-writer has experienced the doubtful pleasure of seeing some of his compositions passing under an alias, both as to title and author.

Mrs. Jones: My husband's new trousers caused me to lie awake half the night.
Mrs. Smith: Why, what was the matter?
Mrs. Jones: They are of that new English plaid.

Someone once said it would be the best thing that could happen for the good name of California if Bret Harte would cease to exist. Charles S. Greene of the Overland wrote a poem not long since the gist of which is that if Harte is going to continue writing stories the scenes of which lie within the borders of our state, he had better return and study his ground again. Certainly he has done his full share of mischief in perpetuating Jack Hamlin and Colonel Culpepper Starbottle as types of the Californian gentleman. One might go over the state with the traditional fine-tooth comb and find very few if any even approximate representatives of the M'liss and Miggles class, nor is it a necessary perquisite of the floor manager of a California ball that he should have "shot Sandy Magee." Society on the Stanislaus in 1849 was somewhat primitive as compared to San Francisco fifty years later. The Philadelphia Post announces that Bret Harte is about to contribute to that publication a series of four stories dealing with Californian life in the days of the great gold fever. "A Treasure of the Redwoods," the first of these characteristic tales, appeared in the Saturday Evening Post of July eighth. The series is along the lines upon which Mr. Harte made his first brilliant successes. The good eastern people will, of course, proceed to ignore the limitations of time and circumstances and though many of them may have visited California two or three times since Bret Harte shook our dust from his feet, they will be unable to interpret what their own eyes have seen elsewhere than in print.

From the Hotel Bertrand, Tocaloma, a correspondent writes: This quiet spot, close to the lovely Bear valley, is rapidly filling with guests from the east and with people who have enjoyed M. Bertrand's hospitality during former seasons. The pleasant windless afternoons and early evenings have been made enjoyable by guitar and mandolin music by Captain George Maxwell and family, and solos and duets by the Misses Elva and Fannie Woodman, whose parents are old friends of Madame Bertrand and her husband. Among late arrivals at the hotel are Colonel F. H. Osborne, R. H. A., of Madras, H. Block, Mrs. Block, Miss Elise Beth Block, Mr. and Mrs. H. Krodes, M. E. and Mrs. Labordette, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Daneri, H. G. Markey, Madame H. W. Jandin, Madame B. Bretonel and son, Mrs. Gray, Mr. Weekman, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Woodman.

AT DINNER:
Mr. Clubwit: I can't tell you that egg story, after all.
Miss Decollete: Why not?
Mr. Clubwit: Two bad.

I am told that there is no truth in the sensational story about the forced retirement of a swell physician from a smart hospital. The man of medicine is one of the most successful surgeons in the city. He came hither from Germany several years ago with a big reputation and a small pocket-book. He succeeded in identifying himself with the hospital, the directorate of which includes a number of prominent society women, and in a short time he built up such a lucrative practice that he is now one of the most prosperous medical men in the city. He is a fine looking fellow of the leonine type of masculine beauty and more than one society belle has looked upon him with admiring eye and palpitating heart, but he is not among the eligibles, for rumor sayeth that he has a wife and family in Europe. There was considerable mystery surrounding

Just the thing to take camping, a bottle of Chapin and Gore's old Reserve Bourbon.

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY
12 years old before being bottled

Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers
412 Front St., S. F.
Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

The Laxative Liver Lozenge
PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE
This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable.
PRICE 25 CENTS
CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, 139 Powell St
W. W. STOCKER.

Dr. CARL DEHMEL
(formerly of Berlin)
Surgeon Chiropodist
and Masseur . . .
Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe Nails a Specialty
CONSULTATION FREE
EMPORIUM and
GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR
Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

his alleged retirement from the medical corps of the hospital and it was diluted with a few drops of scandal. The tongue of gossip has been wagging and the doctor's name has been associated most persistently with that of several nurses, but I am glad to say the story is untrue

---

Pretty Alice Nielsen is enjoying a brief respite from her prima donna duties in a quiet spot across the bay. The greatest hit that Alice ever made in her professional career was with Tom Williams, the popular horseman, and since her return to the coast the rumor of her impending marriage to him has been going the rounds. I know that Williams is very fond of the little songbird and that he is in a great measure responsible for her success on the operatic stage but it does not necessarily follow that they contemplate becoming man and wife. Williams is noted for his generosity and his readiness to assist people for whom he has taken a fancy and nobody was surprised when it was learned that Alice Nielsen's venture as a star in light opera was backed by the gallant jockey-club president. The venture has proved a success and the little woman who not many years ago was doing a song and dance at the Wigwam is now recognized as one of the most attractive queens of light opera. Her pluck and energy are deserving of success.

AT CASTLE CRAGS:

Diana: Mr. Hill went deer hunting yesterday.

Di Vernon: Yes, I saw him walking in the canyon with Miss Flyrte. She's pretty dear, I'm told.

At the summer resorts this year they are complaining more than ever of the dearth of men. The same wail of distress comes from all over the state. If the dry goods firms in the city continue to work their clerks twelve consecutive months in the year the summer girl will stay at home and the resorts will have to close up. Even at Capitola, which is not a fashionable resort but which has always been frequented by the overworked gentlemen of temporary leisure and where you could always find at least one male to every five females, the proportion has become much greater. They had a dance at Capitola last Saturday night and there was only one man by actual count in five sets of the lancers. Down at Coronado the male biped has also been made conspicuous by the preponderence of the gentler sex. As a consequence Edgar Peixotto, the attorney, has been cock of the walk, as it were. He has been playing golf, giving launch parties and making himself generally useful. He has been "it" from start to finish in a bevy of buds and matrons. They point him out as the man who prosecuted Durrant and altogether he has been made much of. Of course you cannot blame the dear girls in view of the scarcity of the species. I do not mean to intimate that it is a case of any port in a storm for Edgar is a very nice young fellow even though he did prosecute Durrant.

Oh the summer months are speeding,
And our days for ice cream feeding
Are most rapidly receding,
As upon the beach we loll in discontent;
One Peixotto makes no summer,
Though at golf he is a hummer,
I'd prefer just now a drummer,
Who'd make up for lost time in a whirl of merriment.

In an article in the current Atlantic, entitled "The True American Spirit in Literature," Charles Johnson remarks upon the heathenism of Mark Twain's description of Buck Fanshaw's funeral. No doubt it is hard upon the sensibilities of religiously inclined New Englanders who naturally regard it as a a bit of blasphemous invention, but years ago I met an old gentleman who was a resident of Virginia city at the time and he solemnly assured me that the account given in "Roughing It" is little more than an exact description of the affair as it was actually carried out. This same pioneer said his brother and Mark Twain were intimate friends, though I am not certain that they were partners. At all events, they lived in the same cabin and my informant had opportunities enough for observing the future humorist. He said that Mark appeared to be rather stolid and evinced but little interest in what was said and done in his presence so that he was usually looked upon as stupid. How far that was from the true state of the case was proved when his book came out and it was found that instead of not comprehending or appreciating his surroundings he had literally taken in everything that was said and done in the camp and his apparent stolidity served to draw on the unwary.

Edwin Stevens, the comedian, having decided to join a first-class theatrical company, the moribund Tivoli management is congratulating itself upon the prospective reducing of expenses. Stevens is a high-salaried man and during the past two years if it had not been for him the Tivoli performances would have been absolutely beyond endurance. Lovers of artistic work went to the Tivoli to see Stevens and then sat through the show trying to concentrate all their attention on him and to close their eyes and ears to all the others on the stage. And that is no easy thing to do especially when there is a Phil Branson perspiring with exertion to be funny, and exercising his nasal organ in lieu of his vocal chords. As a comedian and a singer Branson is up to the Tivoli standard and as he is not an expensive artist he will be retained. The stage director always instructs the chorus women to laugh at Phil when he is trying to be funny so as to insure him a stage laugh if nothing more, and when he sings Doc Leahy stands in the foyer and applauds with both feet. They are strong in team work at the Tivoli, and that is why they should play football instead of opera.

A delightful hot drink may be made with the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky and the usual hot water, sugar and a little lemon skin.

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST
TEL MAIN 5522.

3253 FILLMORE ST.
TEL. WEST 152

The respective merits of certain brands of cigarettes were the cause of a serious difference of opinion between Lord and Lady Algy, leading up to a separation and the establishment of the young husband in apartments furnished beyond his income. That the lady finally compromised and smoked an Egyptian showed that she had really no very strong feeling in the matter. I am told that the cigarette has never been more popular in the east than at the present time, it being considered bad form now at Newport for the jeunesse d'oree to smoke any other weed in the presence of their womenkind. Older men are permitted to smoke cigars but the once favored pipe is not permissible under any circumstances whatever. It is said that the reason the cigarette rules is that a man is expected to pass his case around to the women, and for that reason he always chooses the daintiest brands and those that are delicately shaped. A New York correspondent says that in consequence of this feminine indulgence in tobacco, the gilded youths have fallen into the expensive habit of importing their cigarettes at no less price than three dollars a hundred from a well known London tobacconist who is purveyor by special appointment to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, an inveterate but fastidious lover of the weed. The princess is said to prefer Turkish tobacco and a small cigarette with a cork mouthpiece. Therefore the swell youth about town offering his sister's chums the hospitality of his supply usually has exact duplicates of Her Highness' own in his case. A San Franciscan who lived abroad for many years tells me that in Vienna and Berlin both men and women who have any pretensions to being called smart smoke very tiny Turkish cigarettes, which are always on the market in those cities. Large cigarettes are not en regle in Austrian or German society. And where formerly in London and New York it was the proper thing to roll your own cigarette, the ready-made brands are now considered more strictly à la mode.

FARCE THAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN TRAGEDY.

Madame (drawing away from her husband's embrace): No, I cannot kiss you. I——

Monsieur (fiercely): You are false to me! His name?

Elle: You are mistaken. I——

Lui: Speak, quickly.

Elle (sobbing on his neck): I ate two raw onions for luncheon.

Miss Kate Corbett will shortly leave for Honolulu and will remain in the Hawaiian islands about four months visiting friends. Miss Pearl Pierce is visiting the Bourguignons in San Jose. Miss Georgia Hopkins has returned to Menlo. She will be one of the winter's débutantes, having finished her studies at an eastern seminary. Mr. and Mrs. M. H. de Young are entertaining with their usual kindly hospitality at their San Rafael home.

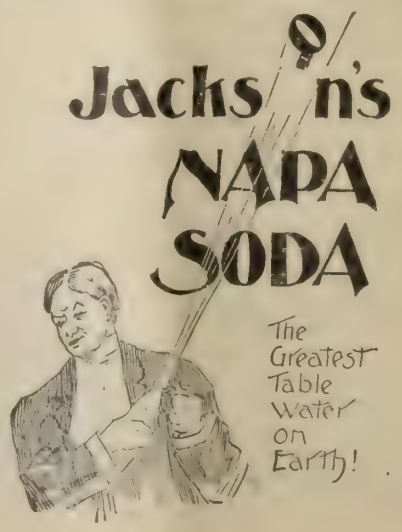
In reviewing "The Man With the Hoe," the Overland says: "It is open to that terrible charge of being a poem with a purpose and the strength of the conception is rather Millet's than Markham's." It would be quite useless to repeat that Millet himself was of peasant stock and long after he was famous as an artist he delighted in reassuming the peasant garb and wooden sabots and in taking part in the labors of the farm. Markham has seen in the painting what Millet not only did not see in the peasant but would have emphatically denied to exist. The Man with the Hoe, by the way, is beginning to excite discussion in England. One of the eastern papers gave two columns with illustrations to The Man with the Hoe last week—not Markham's man, however, nor Millet's, but the man who routed ex-President Cleveland.

There are many marriageable maidens at Del Monte this summer. Seldom has such an array of heiresses been seen on the hotel veranda après déjeuner as during the present season. It is a thousand pities that there are not more men waiting to snap up these fine fishes. Among the eligible young women at Del Monte are the two Loughborough sisters, Fanny and Josephine. They are nice girls and the elder, Fanny, is one of the swellest girls of the swim as far as attire goes. The Loughboroughs owe much of their social prestige to the fact that they are the granddaughters of old General Keyes. Some people who are not conversant with early Californian history know the general chiefly because of a building in the tenderloin district which was named after him. It is said that General Keyes, upon beholding this building after his return from an extended trip abroad, remarked, holding his hands up in holy horror:

"My God! And they call that place by my good name!"

His grandsons, so the story goes, had just been telling the old man of some of the delights the outer walls of that building concealed.

Speaking of heiresses, I often wonder why Jennie Blair has not been snapped up by some migratory fortune-hunter. She is as pretty as a picture with her fair skin, blue-gray Irish eyes and auburn hair, she is petite and chic and has attained the age celebrated in modern novels as being woman's most fascinating period of existence. She is rich and though she owns a house in Van Ness avenue she prefers the more independent life of a hotel. From childhood Miss Blair has always been of an independent disposition and has followed her own sweet will wherever its leadings dictated. She is a charming hostess and it used to be said of her that "nobody knows so well as Jennie Blair how to give a luncheon." In the set in which Miss Blair formerly moved and in which she was a shining star were included Tessie Fair, Annie Buckbee, Bessie Shreve, Gertrude Severance, Laura Bates and a few others whose names I do not now recall. Some of these are married now and the little clique is consequently broken up.



The departure of the Borels from San Francisco means a consequent diminution of vivacity in the neighborhood of the residence they occupied for so many years, in Stockton street just below Grace Episcopal church. The Borel girls are nothing if not lively and among their pleasing divertisements was that of playing pranks upon passing pedestrians. A high fence encloses the garden of the Stockton street house and passers-by who would hear a whistle or a burst of laughter would look about them in wonder whence the noises proceeded. They would never have suspected the French banker's pretty, quiet-looking daughters, though the neighbors understood well enough the mischief-loving proclivities of the supposedly demure young girls. At one time the Borel girls, I am told, kept a gramophone going for about a week much to the disgust of the residents of adjacent houses. The Borels, I understand, last year fell heir to a beautiful château in Switzerland where they will hereafter reside. Mrs. Borel's invalidism has precluded the possibility of the carrying out of many hospitable plans she had outlined for the entertainment of her daughters' friends here, but everybody remembers the delightful ball that was given when the elder girls made their début in society.

Miss Oldmayde: Oh, I am so afraid of the kissing-bug.
Miss Bachelorgyrle: You need not be. If one alighted on your lips—well, good-bye to the bug!

Californian nurses are not good enough for the barracks' hospital at the Presidio. That, I understand, is the opinion of Chief Surgeon Matthews, and it is his reason for ousting them and sending to Iowa for women to fill their places. And the Iowa trained nurse is not always supplied with a diploma but still she is preferred by Dr. Matthews, who I believe has some prejudice against the native feminine. A short time ago he removed Miss McLean, who was formerly connected with the county hospital, and who won distinction at that institution by volunteering to nurse a typhus patient. She afterwards served as a nurse in the fever stricken hospital at Camp Merritt and her competency was never questioned until she encountered the autocrat of the barracks. Senator George C. Perkins was importuned to intercede in her behalf and he promised to do so but I believe that he was reluctant to question the conduct of Dr. Matthews.

"I see that Jags has resigned from his job at the hall."
"Yes, he's been sick, had the fever and is still very weak."
"Lost his pull—eh?"

It was at Highland springs the morning after Mrs. Luther Fitch and Mrs. George Graham returned weary and worn from their thirty-mile equestrian jaunt. Jabez Swan, the wag who paints for a living and tells funny stories on the side, greeted them as they were entering the dining room. With a rueful countenance he expressed deep sympathy for them.

"Of course," he said, "I know it's a delicate matter to speak about. I know how you feel. If you had a maimed hand I could ask you how it was getting along, or if it were only a sore elbow I could inquire about its condition, but now all I can do is to ask you how is your general health."

And the ladies failed to smile.

A New York newspaper detective has lately unearthed a case of unusual interest in a youth of brains but no money who utilized the former to bring in the latter, his efforts being crowned with success. The young man belonged to no less than sixty clubs, social, athletic, religious, business and secret, and he managed to make himself so prominent in all of them that his advice was solicited upon every occasion. The manner in which the youth repaid the confidence reposed in him showed that he was not only worthy of it but that he had a good business head on him. The newspaper detective discovered that the young man used his influence in behalf of a certain caterer so that the latter was exclusively patronized for a whole year by every one of the sixty clubs of which the youth was a member. He was a first-class caterer, so no slurs could be cast upon the young man's taste in viands and menus. The caterer paid the youth who recommended him a tidy commission and as this covered the orders from sixty clubs for twelve months' entertainments it can easily be calculated what an easy income was assured to the young man.

This happened in "the provinces," that is in a town without the metropolitan attributes of New York, but a plan nearly resembling it has been carried out in San Francisco. Three of our social leaders have been known to exploit brands of champagne at clubs of which they were members. Nevertheless, I have heard of no local youth possessing sufficient adroitness to earn his entire living from recommending a certain caterer or wine merchant and, if he tried to accomplish his purpose in such a wholesale manner as that followed by the poor but honest eastern man, it is not likely he could, undetected, work his scheme. In San Francisco one man could not gain such unlimited power in so many clubs. He might in—say—three or four but the commissions on supper supplies to three or four clubs could not float him in style unless he added to his exchequer in legitimate modes of wage-getting as well.

I hear that the major-domo is now a part of nearly all the modish establishments of New York and that this has opened a new road to wealth to impecunious youths of birth and breeding and wide social acquaintance. The major-domo proper is a social introducer as

---

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of ROGER PRENDERGAST Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, executors of the last will and testament of ROGER PRENDERGAST deceased, to the creditors, of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executors at the law office of J. J. Dwyer at the Mills Building, Seventh Floor, Room 38, northeast corner of Bush and Montgomery streets in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

PETER J. DUNNE and CHARLES HIRSHFELD,
Executors of the last will and testament of
Roger Prendergast Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 22, 1899.

J. J. DWYER, Mills Building,
Attorney for Executors.

Utica Cleansing Compound and Utica Compound Paste.....

TRADE MARK UTICA

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society, 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

This compound is made of pure and unadulterated drugs
Used for Baths and Shampoo it will make the skin soft and white.

For Swollen and Painful Feet it is unrivaled.

For Poison Oak and Prickly Heat it is a sure remedy.

Suitable for cleansing anything.

SAMUEL SEYMOUR,
Pacific Coast Agent.

21 SPEAR ST., S. F.

well as a walking dictionary in matters of fashion and form. He tells the nouveau riche what to do and how to do it, paves their entrée into the swim and shows them how to spend their money in such a manner as to give the spenders the air of having been born with golden spoons in their mouths and having been used to limitless luxury all their lives. Such a major-domo might be useful to one or two people in San Francisco but I have not heard of any of our parvenu families who have indulged in such an expensive gratification. I have heard of two wealthy women who employed feminine aid to instruct them in the demands of their social position, but the major-domo has not yet made his appearance upon the horizon of our society.

"Darling, do be kind do me. Please give me a small show."
"Certainly. What would you rather have—a scene from "Camille," an imitation of Anna Held or the couchee-couchee?"

The return of Miss Emilia Kalisher from Paris and Miss Blanche Letcher from New York means the infusion of several new ideas into the local world of art. Mrs. Denis O'Sullivan (Elizabeth Curtis) came back from London with the latest English art terms and now the Sketch club and the members of the erstwhile Art Students' league are digesting the newest designations of works of art that are in common use in New York and Paris. Miss Letcher has, I hear, some admirable sketches in her collection and which show conclusively that her San Francisco friends were right in urging her to keep to portrait work and black and white illustration as her specialties. All young artists look to oils as the consummation of their ambition but in the meantime those who know what art really means are satisfied to dip their brushes into less difficult admixtures. Mrs. O'Sullivan and Miss Kalisher used to be the star portrait painters of the local League and I understand that the latter made a decided success of her studies in France.

And, speaking of art and artists, I am reminded that from New York my correspondents write me that one of the most indefatigable students in art is Mrs. Addison Niles (Isabelle Morrison) who left here for the great metropolis last year. Mrs. Niles is devoted to her art and in her ambition is uplifted by her husband, who is also an artist of no mean talent.

THOSE ROSY LIPS

Those rosy lips of hers,
How oft' I've tried to kiss!
Into a pout she'd purse
Those rosy lips of hers,
And (was luck ever worse?)
I'd try—'twas but to miss!—
Those rosy lips of hers,
How oft' I've tried to kiss!
—The Young Lover.

Life at Bonanza springs is going on with lots of dash and plenty of enjoyment. The arrivals for the week ending July fifteenth were Mrs. J. M. Mitchell and daughter, Mrs. Ollinger, George and Miss Rachel Ollinger of Vallejo; Mr. Pritchard, Mr. Taylor, Mrs. Shirland and three children of Dixon; Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Leigh and two grandchildren, also of Dixon; Mr Jarrillo, wife and four children of Woodland; Mr. Sohler and two sons of Kelseyville, Cal.

The board of directors of the Mechanics' Institute is pushing preparations for the forthcoming fair which will be held in September. One of the best moves made by the board was the appointment of a local newspaper man as press agent, David E. W. Williamson, late sporting editor of the Report, who will keep the public informed in regard to the attractions that are expected to draw the public to the exhibition. Music as usual is to be made a special feature and, as I mentioned a few week ago, Miss Alice Raymond will be brought out from New York to fill the position of cornet soloist at the Mechanics' Fair.

"Mr. Henpecked's wife is dead—forever at rest."
"Yes, so is Henpecked."

Mae Taber, to borrow from the vernacular of the turf, is on velvet ouce more. Miss Taber, it should be remembered, came into prominence about two years ago in the role of chère amie of the amorous and eccentric General Barillas of Guatamala. After taking her to Europe and introducing her into the royal set of St. Petersburg he returned to this country and transferred his warm Latin affections to a young woman who occupied a glass case in a cigar store and served in the capacity of cashier. That little affair got the general into various complications and when he emerged from them a poorer but a wiser man he returned to his coffee plantation. Being a very liberal man it was his custom to testify his admiration for the fair sex by making the most costly presents. He never entered a jewelry store to purchase a single article. He was not a cheap man. If milady wanted a watch the general would buy her a trayful; and so it was with all his purchases. In the course of time his funds ran short and upon his return to Guatemala he found his plantation in the hands of a German syndicate of creditors. They compromised with him by agreeing to let him manage the plantation providing he would not draw more than one thousand dollars a month. He agreed and no doubt meant to keep his contract but the bewitching Mae Taber appeared on the scene once more and then the general resumed his extravagances. The creditors finally called a halt and the San Francisco girl was prevailed upon to return to her home. Her lover gave her a little pocket-money for the trip, a mere bagatelle—I believe it was about two thousand dollars—and I hear that the German creditors were so anxious for her to depart that they promised to ship her three hundred sacks of coffee out of the next crop. The coffee arrived the other day and that is why I say that Mae Taber is on velvet. The coffee is worth about eighteen dollars per sack.

The cakewalk carnival has drawn well and the Oregon soldier-boys have enjoyed the exhibition as well as anybody. The volunteers now resting at the Presidio on their way home have been the recipients of many courtesies during their stay. Colonel Summers' entire regiment has been invited to attend the baseball game today at Recreation park and various other invitations have been forthcoming for the soldiers' entertainment.

The newly arrived stock of Black Crepons now being displayed in the spacious show windows of J. J. O'Brien & Co. do credit to the sklll and taste of Mr. Thomas P. Crowley, Superintendent of the Black Goods Department in the O'Brien establishment, by whom these goods have been selected. These choice Crepons range in price from 75 cents to $3.50 per yard and are of the newest and most desirable patterns.

There was a time in the history of clubdom in San Francisco that the man who tried to get into a club, and failed, was looked upon as an individual whose reputation was below par. It is no longer so. There are so many club members who permit themselves to be influenced by petty jealousies that it is by no means a reflection upon the character of a candidate if his friends are compelled to withdraw his name. The unknown or nonentity can get into almost any club so long as he has sufficient money to hold his end up, possesses the necessary qualifications in the way of ordinary decency and is properly proposed and presented. But insurmountable difficulties are in the way of the man who has the courage of his convictions even though he may have distinguished himself. The man who is well known must be cautious about permitting his name to be presented to a club in which he may have professional or business rivals. There is nothing like the obscurity of mediocrity to keep away black balls. Popularity is often fatal.

IN PARIS:

Aged tourist: My pretty dear, surely you will not object to a kiss. Why, at my age I might easily be your grandfather.

Soubrette: Easily—very easily. It is a wise child that knows its own father—or grandfather.

"The school principals were given a hard rap in TOWN TALK last week," said one of them who called to discuss school department affairs.

"But you were right in what you said," she confessed. "You spoke of 'office principals.' I suppose you had in mind the 'political principal' who sits in his office smoking a cigar and who does not take his feet from his desk even when a parent enters. Or perhaps you had in mind one of the 'drunken principals.' No, I'm not going to tell you who they are; but liquor has wrecked more than one teacher in this department. Only I do think it a pity that any man's political pull should keep him in a position where he can shift all responsibility upon his teachers, spend his time loafing and draw a big salary for doing worse than nothing, letting the school run down in scholarship, go to pieces in discipline, and then lay the blame upon his teachers, weakly saying 'They won't do what they are told.' But is it not absurd for the board to say that the examinations were given so as to satisfy the teachers examining classes that the children are well fitted to do their work, and that heretofore teachers have promoted pupils unfit for the grade? I want to say right here that such a charge is a slander upon the teachers of this department. In all my years as principal, I have yet to find teachers anxious to hurry unprepared pupils into the next grade. As to that, there are some principals who will never put a child back into a lower grade. The truth of the matter is, our schools became badly demoralized by the last board of education, who in the endeavor to 'take care of its friends,' to make classes for its favorites, played ducks and drakes with the classification of the schools. Now we are feeling the results. But among all those who have discussed the examinations in my hearing, I have yet to find a teacher who does not feel relieved that the pressure always brought to hear by parents in behalf of their unprepared children cannot be exerted this year. By the examinations they stand or fall and we are content to let it go at that."

Charlie de Young knows how to sit his horse and I am not surprised that he should have come in an easy winner in the paper chase last Saturday, with Miss Marie Oge as his partner. Charlie de Young has known how to bestride an equine artistically and guide the animal scientifically since he was an infant and it is a pleasure to see him ride.

Miss Alice Moffitt, who won the title of golf champion in the Fourth of July tournament across the bay, possesses almost boyish traits of character. Like most Oakland girls she has much individuality and, though she is a lady to the finger-tips when it comes down to drawing-room manners, she does not form her actions after hidebound conventional models. She never poses, and probably that is why she plays golf so well. She does not stop at a critical point in her game to consider whether her nose is red or her hat on straight. She just goes at the game and plays. When speaking of Miss Moffitt I am reminded of the commencement exercises of the Oakland high school a few years ago, when the pretty golf champion was one of the graduates. Miss Moffitt sat with the other graduates on the stage and she was in full view of the audience. Her parents were among the audience and I noticed that they seemed to be telegraphing some injunction to their daughter. Following their gaze it was observed that Alice sat with one knee crossed over the other and not a slight portion of fluffy petticoat, with a glimpse of hosiery, was consequently revealed. The young woman smiled back at her parents but evidently misunderstood their signals and remained sublimely unconscious of the effect of her pose upon the spectators sitting in the front rows. Short skirts were not then such ordinary occurrences as they are nowadays, and it was the pictures in the dailies of Miss Moffitt in her golf poses that brought back memories of the Oakland girl's graduation day.

"Mrs. Plump looks simply great in her bike suit."

"And immense in her bathing costume—she only weighs three hundred and fifty-six pounds."

I. J. Truman, one of the leaders in the latest republican reform movement, is the treasurer of the city and county. Mr. Truman accepted a nomination from Crimmins and Kelly last year and he was elected on their ticket. He is now drawing a salary every month through the courtesy of the two bosses against whom the reform movement is directed. It is of course Mr. Truman's privilege to undertake the work of purifying his party, but it seems like ingratitude in

LEDERER

123 Stockton Street

Calls attention to these facts:

Best hairdressing is only 25 cents.

Combs and hair ornaments at half the prices asked elsewhere.

Largest stock of switches in the city, and the lowest prices.

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison Oak and all Skin Diseases. It has been used successfully for the last twenty years and thousands will testify to its curative quality. It is a specific for Poison Oak. AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

a man to attack the men to whom he is indebted for political favors. But Mr. Truman is a natural born reformer. He has been in the reforming business for years and he has denounced the tax-eaters at the city hall in fierce terms, but now that he is one himself it is somewhat surprising to find him engaged in making the same old bluff. Henry T. Scott, the leader of the little band of republican reformers, is a brother of Irvie Scott, the man that got the senatorial bee in his bonnet during the last session of the legislature. It would probably be cruel to suggest that if the head of the iron works' firm did not care a tinker's imprecation for the toga Henry Scott would not now be taking such an active interest in politics.

Struggling with his lot: The man who bought Lot 1, chairs and tables, at the auction and had to carry them home himself.

Even among the "best people" of Napa there is occasional relaxation of the kind that is not approved by the moral code. I hear that the choir of the Episcopal church of that sedate burg has lost two of its most accomplished vocalists. Mother and daughter—the former being the widow of a distinguished attorney who, at the time of his death a few years ago, was prominent in democratic state politics—will no longer swell the volume of sacred harmony in that little country church. Their conduct, a short time ago, shocked the good people of the congregation, and as a consequence the services of the gay widow and her festive daughter were dispensed with. It appears that they went out for a little rollicking sport with two of the rapid young men of the town, and they enjoyed themselves in a way that betokened a too ardent fondness for diversions that are regarded as decidedly risqué.

The lady who desires to have the head of Christ placed upon coins of the realm, and who has lately made herself notorious through a public expression of that desire, is a conspicuous figure among the attendants at old St. Mary's church in California street. She was not long since converted to Roman Catholicism and she has taken up religion and church-going with the vigor that has always been noticeable in persons going in for such pursuits as fads. I do not wish to assert that Mrs. Clemmons—as Mrs. Howard Gould's sister, the late Mrs. Overacker, now calls herself, I am told—is a faddist but usually when people emblazon from the housetops the fact of their conversion to a new creed there is reason to believe that the change of religious base is not founded upon anything more than a desire for novelty. When she goes to church Mrs. Clemmons carries a pile of prayer-books with her that must be more than a foot high and a heavy burden for a delicate woman's arm to bear. She is a strikingly handsome woman and the stole that is a prominent portion of her attire gives her a startlingly religieuse air.

Frank Coffin is getting on in his profession. It is a considerable step from the Tivoli to the Columbia, though if you reckon it by blocks it is only around the corner. But to spring from Doc Leahy's aggregation of talent into the metropolitan magnificence of Henry Miller's company of players is a great feat and that is what not only Edwin Stevens, but also Frank Coffin has accomplished. Mr. Coffin will appear in "Heartsease" next week directing the double quartet that will render the incidental vocal music in the piece. Frank will not have a speaking part so-called but he will be there, on the stage. Homer Henley will also appear in "Heartsease" and the public will find no difficulty in recognizing his big bass when it peals forth in the double quartet.

Clancy on Seamans, Et Al

"IT'S A TURRIBLE THING, Barry, to be thrubled with th' itch f'r prominense, to want to be befure th' people all th' time, to keep in th' public eye as th' shpeakers say. Did ye iver have that bad disorder, Barry?" asked Mr. Clancy.

"Not iv me own knowledge," was the reply.

"It's worse than the boobonick plague," continued Mr. Clancy. "I wuz vaxinated agin it when I wuz a lad; me mother, God bless her, left th' vaxinashin marks on me so that I couldn't sit down f'r a week an' all because I wuz makin' meself so prominent in th' neighborhood that th' polise were on to me. Now I tind to me little baar and nobody's th' wiser. But look at me frind Seamens, th' adjitant-ginral; he wants to be in an open caridge in a Fourth iv July parade ivry day, with goold brade on his close an' a brass band be his side. Th' first thing we know he'll be a bigger attrackshin than th' guvinor himself an' then Hinry'll take th' job away frim him, f'r Gage likes th' cinter iv th' stage, too. There's some people that always want to be th' sinnosure. I knew a Tipprary man wanse who was just like Seamans. He was th' first man to shtand up in church whin th' tip came frim th' alther, an' he'd be th' first to walk down th' main aisle whin th' mass wuz over, an' he wuz always late iv a Sunda'. His great hobby wuz fun'rals an' he always wanted to carry the corpse so that he'd be seen. He wuz always on hand for pall-bearing. Whin there was a prominint person dead in the parish, he'd be th' first mourner at th' house an' he'd shtay weepin' till they'd ax him to assisht in th' obsqueeze. I oftin wondhered how it wuz that he always held th' place iv honor at th' head iv th' corpse until I lurrened that he fixed it with th' undertaker who wuz his frind. Wan day whin there wuz a new masther iv cerimonies actin' f'r th' undertaker, th' Tipprary man wuz in distrhress f'r awhile but he finally suggisted to his fellow pall-bearers to shake th' dice to see who would have first chice iv place on the coffin. It wuz forty-fives they shook an' he won an' he came out iv th' church at th' head iv the procishin. I oftin thought aftherwards that the dice were loaded. It's a powerful disease, Barry, is this itch f'r public attinshin an' whin it gets hold iv a man there's no toxsign to shtop its ravidges. It must run its coorse. Th' man that wants to be an aide on th' guviner's shtaff is a bad case iv it. An' the chief iv polise that rides along th' line iv march a block ahead of the proceshin yellin' to the people to keep back has no mild dose. He ain't usurpin' th' pathrolman's job because he likes wurruk—divil a bit. It's th' itch he has. He's as bad as th' candydate f'r office who sits in the grand shtand at th' ball game hopin' to be hit be a foul ball so that'll atthract attinshun."

"Has Sammy Brownard got th' bad disordher ye shpeak about?" asked Mr. Barry.

"Has he got it; wuz he iver without it? Whin he meets ye on th' shtreet he shpeaks to ye through a megaphone so as to atthract ittinshun. He's got it so bad its infeckshus. I hope that some day he'll be quarranteened."

"Phwat's that?"

"I dinnaw, but I think it's somethin' that Brownard needs."

SEE HOW THEY RUN

UNION COURSING PARK will run wide open this week, and one hundred and seventy-six greyhounds have been entered for the two stakes on the card There are forty-eight nominations in the puppy stake and one hundred and twenty-eight in the reserve. A number of Los Angeles dogs and some recently imported from Australia are in the lists. The added money is nearly eight hundred dollars The first train for the park on Saturday will leave at 9:15, an early start being necessary in order to complete the stake Two rounds of the reserve stake will be run today and one round of the puppy stake.

The Emporium has taken five thousand sets of the complete edition of Kipling's works. As there are fifteen volumes in the set, this means seventy-five thousand books—the largest order ever given on the coast.

World of Law

WELL, the Supreme court has declined to assist Mr. County Clerk Deane, and Mr. County Clerk Deane is in sore distress. He is ordered by the august tribunal of last resort to conduct his office with the limited staff of thirty-two men, and he is at his wit's end to devise a scheme whereby he can do justice at that rate to the thousand and one lawyers who want this, that and the other at a moment's notice every day. He thinks it very inconsiderate of the Supreme court to place him in such a horrible predicament. He has already once weeded out his office. Being charged by the auditor not to violate the One Twelfth act, he cut his staff down some weeks ago from seventy-seven to fifty-two. This was done by the ingenious process of drawing lots to see who should go and who should stay. At five o'clock on a Saturday afternoon the deputies assembled in Judge Dunne's courtroom, where two ballot boxes lay upon the judicial bench, filled with the names, one of the copyists, the other of the deputies, in active service. Fourteen names were drawn from the first box, twenty-six from the second, and as each name was drawn forth and read by Joseph Goddard, surnamed the Oracle, its owner breathed a sigh of relief, while his yet expectant companions broke forth in suspiciously exuberant applause.

There were sad, long faces and there were proud, happy ones after that drawing. It was of the element of chance merely that the most useful men, heads of various branches of the office, were lucky enough to draw winning numbers. Some useful ones, alas! were sent to the right about, notably Louis Jacobs and George McComb. It is with pride that Messrs Deane and Goddard point to these names whenever some suspicious person hints at "stuffing." By the way, it was grimly amusing to note that the presage of ill had struck home to the hearts of not a few in that throng. For they all assembled in the county clerk's office at first, and when the signal was given to proceed to the courtroom some one struck up Chopin's funeral march. The air was caught up instantly, and when old Major Whitesides strode along ahead of the gallant crew the spectators wondered whether, after all, this was not a dream and they were once more standing by the graves of departed comrades in Odd Fellows' cemetery on memorial day.

Now, alas, a second weeding out must be done. There is no redress; the Supreme court has said it and has refused to unsay it. So eighteen more must be offered up in sacrifice to a strict interpretation of the laws of this, our state. How Deane is going to do it he does not himself know, yet. He would tear his hair, if he could; but owing to tonsorial experiments, he has none to tear. His head is shaved like that of a convict, comfort and not beauty being Mr. Deane's passion during the summer months. Mr. Goddard shakes his head and rolls out something like this:

"I had diagnosed the situation in a converse manner. But the Supreme court being the tribune of final arbitrament, the penultimate result is that we must bow to the will of those above us."

Now, as I remarked before, one of the attorneys for the deputies who wastes not his words assured me that in deciding as they did the august justices of the Supreme court had quite missed the point sought to be laid before it. I note, too, that Mr. Justice McFarland dissented from the majority opinion of his brethren. That being so, why did not the court reopen the case for further argument? It is a serious matter. It doesn't matter a straw whether the county clerk's office has been extravagantly run in former years or not. Billy Deane has worked faithfully and well and all his men have so far had to lawfully earn their salaries. It is not so much for him, but for the city, that every effort should be made to reconcile the laws with the constitution. A county clerk's office run with thirty-two men is absurd. Besides, the courtroom clerks have not yet been interfered with, and they must be soon. Here are twelve courtrooms, and the law as interpreted by the Supreme court allows only nine clerks. Yet the law also says that there shall be one clerk for each department. With grim humor the Supreme court tells Billy Deane that he has the power to appoint extra deputies, if he so chooses, but he must pay their salaries out of his own pocket. Pleasant prospect!

To make matters worse, the Superior judges appear to take the view that they have no power to appoint clerks themselves. The power, they say, rests with Deane and not with them. So the matter resolves itself into this: either Deane must appoint three extra courtroom clerks and then leave it to the judges to devise a means of paying them by a peremptory order upon the treasurer, or, the three departments unprovided for must be clerked by register clerks or others, or, the three departments must close up. It's an awful muddle, which nobody but the Supreme court enjoys. The justices up above loll back in their chairs and say:

"It's not our fault. If you elect incompetent men to legislate for you, and your legislation is faulty, we must so find it. It's not our business to make laws for you; we only construe those you have made."

And, on the whole, I think they are right. Only, I also think they might have granted a rehearing of the case, so as to make sure that they had quite understood the point which the lawyers sought to establish.

Mr. E. J. Banning, assistant deputy United States attorney for the Northern District of California, has just returned from what was originally intended to be a horseback trip through Sierra county. He was accompanied by Mr. Bert Schlesinger, who hails from Sierra county and whose glad mission it was to reveal to Mr. E. J. Banning the beauteous wonders of that lofty region. I find in the notes handed to me of their trip plenty of references to buggies and teams, but there is no record of the noble animal having been bestridden at any part of the journey, save at one stage between Downieville and Sierra city. In one corner of a page, barely legible, are words that read like "Schlesinger renigged on horse." They had a great time, even if they did look between the ears of the equine from behind his tail and not from the vantage ground of his withers. They took it in easy stages, making their first stop at Colfax. Hence they went to Nevada city, San Juan, Downieville, Sierra city and Sierraville. They looked at the rivers and Mr. Banning describes the scenery between San Juan and Downieville as truly great. They saw Dan Cole's Mountain House and they reached the foot of a lofty eminence at the top of which lies the stronghold of the Schlesingers. Here it was Mr. Banning who "renigged," and he reposed in comfort while Mr. Schlesinger scaled the ramparts. They were away ten days only.

The world is very small. In that lonely region, far from the hum of the busy world, the two were teaming it one day when, at a sharp turn in the mountain road, they narrowly escaped a collision with Arthur Rodgers. The well known lawyer was in a rig and had his wife and family aboard. It appears that he owns a place near there and was hastening citywards to attend a meeting of the board of regents of the State University. The parties exchanged pleasant greetings and then went their ways. Rodgers is going up to Lake Tahoe for a few weeks.

Another eminent luminary, Mr. Garret W. McEnerney, is disporting himself at Hotel Del Monte. He is not reported as having distinguished himself in any particular athletic form of exercise, but is described as an ardent looker-on. He watches golf, tennis, swimming, everything and dismisses all earthly cares from his mind as he swings ponderously in a stout hammock. He was joined for a few days by his boon companion, Judge W. P. Lawlor of the Superior court, who found Del Monte much to his liking. He remarked, sententiously, on his return:

"They used to call that place 'Crocker's Folly.' I dunno. I guess old Crocker just made up his mind that he'd have one ideal country residence in California before he died; and by George! he got it. If he had lived I suppose he'd have gone on spending money on it to the end. It reminds me of a trim, spic-and-span, well-swabbed ferryboat; it's in such an apple-pie order. They tell me the gardens cost four thousand dollars a month to keep up. They're worth it."

All of which shows that His Honor of Department Eleven is a man of taste and judgment.

Judge Troutt received a present of fish from Judge Hunt the other day. Judge Hunt is at Boca, on the Truckee river. He must have caught some fish this year, for there are no markets in the vicinity. THE COURT REPORTER.

An excellent remedy for insomnia will be found in the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky taken at bed-time. Your druggist has it.

LEE D. CRAIG .....
NOTARY PUBLIC AND COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS
316 MONTGOMERY STREET, Bet. Pine and California
San Francisco, Cal.

VICARIOUS

THE MERCHANT, to secure his treasure,
Conveys it in a borrow'd name:
Euphelia serves to grace my measure;
But Chloe is my real flame.

My softest verse, my darling lyre,
Upon Euphelia's toilet lay;
When Chloe noted her desire,
That I should sing, that I should play.

My lyre I tune, my voice I raise
But with my numbers mix my sighs;
And, whilst I sing Euphelia's praise,
I fix my soul on Chloe's eyes.

Fair Chloe blush'd: Euphelia frown'd;
I sung and gazed; I play'd and trembled:
And Venus to the Loves around
Remark'd, how ill we all dissembled.—Prior

Dramatic World

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "Lord and Lady Algy"—second edition, up to date and clever.

CALIFORNIA. "The Dancing Girl"—Blanche Bates in the title role.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "Olivette"—a revival that shouldn't be missed.

ALCAZAR. "The New Magdalen"—a strong production.

TIVOLI. "Bluebeard"—dull and wearisome. If you can sit through it you're a wonder.

ORPHEUM. Vaudeville—The Pasqualis are grand operatic gems.

PANORAMA BUILDING. "Battle of Manila"—realistic and worth seeing.

WHENEVER the public patronizes a company liberally and puts its stamp of approval upon a performance by depositing a handsome amount in the treasury of a theatre, adverse criticism becomes futile. The fact that the house is crowded every evening belies the justice of condemning articles. After all the people are the pre-eminent critics, for they pay for the privilege, and a writer who thrusts his own individuality before public opinion is unfit to wield a critical pen. When therefore the California is crowded nightly during the engagement of the Frawley company it would seem that the public does not agree with the critics of the daily press on the merit of the organization. The large audience that filled the theatre on Tuesday evening was very cold—chilly, in fact, and did not warm up until the third act of the play, which contains the dramatic climax. The Dancing Girl is partly sentimental, partly it may be styled melodramatic and the beginning of the first act reminds one very much of the good old days when Morosco's was famed for its melodramatic productions. But this recollection is caused by the general aspect of the scene not by the work of the actors for they are careful to retain the refinement of dramatic declamation. The trouble with the Frawley production of The Dancing Girl is that it drags. Indeed the first act is a good remedy for insomnia and when the curtain falls you know that you were just about to seek refuge in the land of dreams. The second act finds us in a boudoir in Richmond, where the plot thickens and Miss Bates is given an excellent opportunity to assert her versatility. In the expression of various moods Miss Bates has attained the highest artistic refinement. She changes from joy to sorrow in a manner that is flavored with reality. Miss Bates has a particularly difficult task, to bring out the dramatic character of this act—especially the scene with John Christison—as Mr. Reynolds does not seem to enter into the spirit of the situation. If Mr. Reynolds had appreciated the importance of his role he would have known that a man who loves a certain woman sincerely and is obliged to give her up must needs display considerable emotion. But as a matter of fact Mr. Reynolds not only refrains from infusing his speech with passion and despair but his deportment is so awkward and ungraceful that one feels sorry for Miss Bates, who necessarily has to increase her intensity in order to get the proper spirit from this scene. She is therefore entitled to more praise than would have belonged to her had she been blessed with a worthy partner—and one remembers how magnificently Julia Arthur acted the scene. Mr. Reynolds must become more of a man with blood in his veins when he essays the part of John Christison. There are times when the most phlegmatic characters must discard their cloak of indifference. Mr. Frawley, too, has a somewhat tame conception of the Duke of Guisebury, and one has Wilton Lackaye's interpretation to use as contrast. But then one is so used to Mr. Frawley as an easy-going actor who smiles when a slip of the tongue mars the solemnity of the occasion, and who is the same jovial good fellow Frawley on as off the stage, that one cannot blame him for his dramatic lapses. It is after all a great art to be yourself on the stage; this art seems to be thoroughly mastered by Mr. Frawley, and the people like him for it. However, the third act is really the act of the piece and any inaccuracy of play as well as players that may have crept into the other acts pales beside the dramatic incident of the last reception. The valuable scene in this act is that between Drusilla (Blanche Bates) and David Ives (Augustus Cook) her father. It is a scene whose dramatic intensity makes it the strong point of the play. Both artists do full justice to the situation and support each other to work this dialogue up to a climax which increases in tension until the fall down the steps, which is really a masterpiece of deportment. It is easy to look at, but very difficult to execute, because Miss Bates' fall is true to life and does not reveal any signs of premeditated study. Here it is where the audience awakes and applauds heartily. This one scene redeems everything of error that may have preceeded it, for it shows us the ability of two truly great artists. Hope Ross, too, is deserving of her share of encouragement for she interprets the lame girl with sweetness and grace.

Julie Cotte at the Grand Opera House

———

Apropos of the third act of The Dancing Girl, a correspondent writes: "There is one little business that should be abandoned, namely, the entrance of the violinist. Why should art be made the means to create a laugh at the expense of a genius? The violinist Poniatowski, who has the reputation of being a genius, is invited to play at this function. He is made to enter in a grotesque two-step, his hair making headway toward the moon, and carrying his 'fiddle' under his arm. Now this is all ridiculous. A violinist never carries his violin under his arm, especially when it is not enclosed in a case. For besides running in danger of displacing the violin bridge, he would thereby soil his evening suit with the resin that may remain on the strings. Furthermore, a violinist would not dance into a house but would walk there like other people. And then again there is no occasion for the entrance of this violinist anyway; he is absolutely superfluous and ridiculous and the only course the author could have had in his introduction is to have a joke at the expense of the art, which is in very bad taste to say the least."

———

Madame Sans Gene will be given its initial production by the Frawleys on Monday evening, when Miss Bates will essay the character formerly played by Katherine Kidder in the performance of Sardou's drama at the Baldwin. Augustus Cook, who was the Napoleon of the Kidder production, will have his original part at the California. He is considered the greatest exponent on the stage today of the Emperor Napoleon I.

———

Grand Opera House

ALTHOUGH somewhat antiquated, Olivette is still attractive because of its sparkling melodies and the vein of humor that enlivens its story. Besides, the clever company at the Grand interpolate picturesque terpsichorean features and add melodious solos. The costumes are brilliant and elegant and the mounting makes that luxurious impression which Mr. Jones understands so well how to obtain. Messrs. Wolff and Wooley have an excellent chance to give their comedy talent full sway and the audience is easily made aware of this fact by the persistence of their risibles to solve the problem of perpetual motion. When one considers that Miss Mason sings every night and during matinees, attends rehearsals and thus uses her voices almost constantly, it is simply wonderful how well she understands how to preserve the clarity of her organ. In fact almost every member in the company frequently shows signs of fatigue in the voice, but Miss Mason's soprano is always fresh and clear. The art of preserving one's voice is the acme of artistic refinement and Miss Mason has attained it. Her Olivette is a masterpiece. There will be a severe test of Miss Mason's versatility when she is called upon to sing Marguerite in Faust next week, but this clever artist inspires confidence and it is safe to predict that she will sing and act the role in an exemplary manner. Mr. Persse is given a well earned relaxation in the light role of Valentine. As a matter of fact the management should have given him a week's vacation after his brilliant success as Don Jose in Carmen. To sing Don Jose seven times in one week is an herculean task and it is astonishing that Mr. Persse has sufficient strength left to sing Valentine in Olivette so well. Besides, he will sing Faust next week. It seems to a fair-minded person that this is asking too much of one man. It is fortunate that Mr. Persse has power of perseverance, a healthy constitution and strong vocal chords, else the company would be minus an excellent tenor and actor by this time. It must be quite a satisfaction to Mr. Persse to be so warmly received nightly by the audience. Among the newly risen constellations at the Grand is Mindel Fern Dreyfuss, a local product. She made her debut last Monday and did not exhibit that embarrassment usually the companion of novices. This shows that Miss Dreyfuss and the stage agree—a most gratifying circumstance. While the young actress has not yet solved the art of being "snappy," she is sufficiently chic to make the impression that she is a clever terpsichorean artist and possesses a pleasant voice. Thus one more pretty singer has been added to the Grand's collection of beauty. The presentation of Faust announced for next week may well be regarded as the most ambitious effort of this company so far, and a glance over the cast creates the belief that it will be a model performance. The advance sale for next week is exceptionally large and crowded houses will no doubt be the motto during the Faust production.

———

Great bargains this week in elegant "dress hats," stylish outing hats and dainty little bonnets.—Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street

Orpheum

SIGNOR AND SIGNORA DI PASQUALI form the central attraction at the Orpheum this week. They sing selections from Cavalleria Rusticana, and the audience, which usually only finds cause for rejoicing in coon songs and acrobatic feats, applauds enthusiastically these two artists whose polished voices ring out brilliantly through this model place of amusement. Those acquainted with the chilliness of an Orpheum audience—especially as it concerns highly artistic features—are not a little surprised to find encores insisted upon and Signora Di Pasquali has just reason to feel proud of the triumph obtained at that place. But this artistic success may not be solely described to the daintiness and freshness of an admirable voice but also to an intensity of dramatic temperament that is so rarely observable in a highly gifted vocalist. While Signor Di Pasquali's lyric tenor suffers somewhat beside the brilliant organ of his wife, his superior efforts should not be regarded with carelessness. George Wilson is a monologuist of quick and fluent address. His political speech is a marvel and keeps the audience amused from beginning to end. Kilpatrick and Barber, the bicyclists, perform rare feats on their wheels. The new attractions for next week will be Laura Joyce Bell in the brilliant comedy Wig and Gown; La Fafalla, dancer, in The Lotus Flower, a "dance vision." Elizabeth Murray, comedienne; the Phoites in their original comic trick pantomime Flip-Flap-Flop, and the Eldridges, "past masters of colored comedy."

———

Alcazar

IF AN AUTHOR desires to play with the emotions of an audience he seeks a character in the tenderloin district of a metropolis—preferably a woman—clothes her in the habilaments of respectability, places opposite her people of good social standing who shrink from contact with her and accuse her freely of her crimes, and finally creates another character—preferably a man—who pities the poor creature and perhaps marries her. A play thus constructed never fails to move an audienee, for it is a weakness of the masses to bestow sympathy upon any criminal provided that he shows repentance and some trait of goodness. Even a murderer pursued by justice would create a favorable interest among the auditors if he but showed some goodness of character. And this is correct. There exists in every criminal some good, and if this one good trait is fostered by the experienced hand of a just and kind person it may in time outgrow the evil. Of course it is not wise to assume that kindness to a criminal is always productive of good results, but reformation depends largely upon those who endeavor to exercise it. In The New Magdalen, as it is so well expressed by Florence Roberts and the Alcazar company, the sympathy of the audience is with Mercy Merrick. She has been convicted despite her innocence, has fallen because of her gloomy condition and shows her repentance by becoming a nurse. Circumstances bring her to people who understand how to nurture her good qualities and the reformation becomes successful. Of course the audience is against Grace Roseberry because this lady demands retribution for the wrong done her and thus stands in the way of Mercy Merrick's prosperity. Florence Roberts is indebted for much of the applause awarded her to May Nannery who plays Grace Roseberry with a vigor and intensity that are truly crushing to the New Magdalen. Whenever an actor or actress succeeds in playing the heavy part of a melodrama with such effect that the audience applauds the victims, then the mission has been well performed. Miss Nannery has always been an actress of great versatility and deep intelligence which bring her applause and encouragement wherever she may appear. And yet while the audience applauds a new Magdalen and condemns a Grace Roseberry, it reserves its emotions for the playhouse only for even the young woman who is sometimes poor but respectable would shrink from a Camille or a New Magdalen should she perchance come in contact with her in life. The writer heard a young man—and a real good chap he is, too—say after the performance at the Alcazar last Wednesday:

"There are no 'New Magdalens', they are well enough on the stage, but in real life we find them not."

And presumably he is right. Yet the cruelty of society is truthfully pictured in Grace Roseberry. Wilkie Collins and the dramatized version of his novel are still up to date in sentiment though years have rolled by since the drama received its initial production. Mr. Whittlesey, while not having much scope in the rather quiet and unassuming role of Julian Gray, makes enough of it to reveal the elegant actor that he is. Of course Miss Roberts does not miss the opportunity to show the fine conception she possesses of characters such as the New Magdalen and Camille. Carlysle Moore, the clever stage director of the Alcazar, exhibits considerable ingenuity. Especially handsome is the setting of the second and third acts. Lewis Morrison will say farewell to his many admirers here as Mephisto in Faust next week. This is one of Mr. Morrison's masterpieces—if not the masterpiece of his repertory. After Mr. Morrison's departure, Miss Roberts will remain a few weeks longer and will be seen in an elegant production of Romeo and Juliet during the week of July thirty-first.

Columbia LORD AND LADY ALGY is one of the treats of the season. It is clever way through and, if its moralities do not appeal to every conscience, nobody can deny the fact that it furnishes good entertainment. Next week the success of last season, than which no more beautiful play has ever been produced at a local theatre, Heartsease, will be the bill. Henry Miller has in the musician apart far more in his line than is Lord Algy and in it he has opportunity to do work fully as strong as that which one remembers in Sowing the Wind, when Mr. Miller played the part of the father who "reaped the whirlwind." The Miller season has other pleasures in store, but Heartsease will be sufficient enjoyment for one week. Hamlet will follow. Margaret Anglin is said to beone of the best Ophelias on the modern stage. Only four more weeks remain of the Miller season.

Heart and Sword, by John Strange Winter, has evidently been read to purpose, for a local carpet dealer has incorporated the initial sentence into his advertisement. It is not just to a novel to regard it in any sense as a tract, but in Heart and Sword the author has preached a plain sermon upon the impossibility of being a wife and something else at the same time. London must be different indeed from the rest of the world if a girl of seventeen—a nobody, can after two or three nights of theatrical experience as the star of a Sunday school entertainment, bring first class managers to the point of paying her three guineas a week, and mount to the top of the ladder with all the agility of a monkey.

The New York Sun, in commenting upon the volume of short stories, A Silent Singer, given out by Mrs. Harriott, better known as Clara Morris, the actress, says: "The public will wish that she had some entirely disinterested friend of strong character and ruthless execution, that he or she might have gone through the tales and cut out the adjectives that kill the nouns, the squeaky exclamations, and the reflections which are for the most part out of place, and always unnecessary. As a writer of prose Clara Morris displays many of the qualities that mark her work as an actress. She is nothing if not emotional." Those who remember her in Camille and East Lynne will have a very good idea of her style and can decide for themselves whether they care to take hold of the same thing in cold print. The Sun also says: It is probable that some one or other will be referring to Clara Morris as the Marie Corelli of America. We wish to forestall the discoverer."

Robert Barr and Cosmo Hamilton are collaborating in a dramatization of Thekla, and Conan Doyle and William Gillette are similarly at work on Sherlock Holmes.

Leoncavallo is studying Quo Vadis with a view to preparing an operatic libretto. Should he decide to undertake the task, the whole production will of course be his own.

Miss Julie Cotte will sing Marguerite on Tuesday evening and Saturday night. Miss Cotte has a splendid soprano and should be successful in this role.

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Seventh week of the season
Only six nights
Matinee Saturday Only

HENRY MILLER
AND
A SPECIAL COMPANY

In a superb revival of the charming romantic comedy,

"HEARTSEASE"

Next production,

"HAMLET"

Grand Opera House

Morosco Amusement Co., Inc. Lessees.
Telephone. Main 532.

Week of Monday, July 24th.

"FAUST"
(In English)

— CAST —

Faust	THOMAS H. PERSSE
Mephisto	WILLIAM WOLFF.
Valentine	WINFRED GOFF.
Wagner	ARTHUR WOOLEY.
Siebel	HATTIE BELLE LADD.
Dame Martha	BERTHA RICCI.
Marguerite	EDITH MASON.

Our New Prices—Orchestra floor, 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved) 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts

Matinee Saturday. Best seat in the house, 25 cents

Branch Ticket Office just inside main entrance of Emporium.

Alcazar

FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor
MARK THALL, Manager

'Phone Main 254

Week of July 24th
Re-appearance and Farewell week of
LEWIS MORRISON,
In his created character of MEPHISTO, in a Gorgeous Scenic Spectacle of

"FAUST"

FLORENCE ROBERTS as Marguerite

Scale of Admission—15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Next—"ROMEO AND JULIET"

Orpheum

O'Farrell Street between Stockton and Powell

FIVE. New attractions. FIVE.

LAURA JOYCE BELL and CO., in the old English comedietta, "Wig and Gown."
LA FAFALLA, in Herr Von Palms latest spectacular dance "The Lotus Flower."
THE PHOITES, in a new and original pantomime, "Flip, Flap, Flop."
ELIZABETH MURRAY, comedienne and mimic extraordinary.
THE ELDRIDGES, past masters of colored comedy.
KILPATRICK & BARBER, MINNIE PALMER and CO., LES BROWNS.

Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c
Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday

Farewell Concert

OF

Emil Steinegger, Pianist

Prior to his departure for Vienna

ASSISTED BY THE

Press Club Quartette

At Sherman-Clay Hall, 223 Sutter St.

On THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 10, 1899, at 8:15 o'clock.

Tickets can be had at Sherman, Clay & Co's, at 618 Fell St., or of any of Mr. Steinegger's pupils

Admission 50 Cents
Including Reserved Seat

Seats can be reserved on Aug. 9th at Sherman, Clay & Co's

California Theatre

S. H. FRIEDLANDER, Manager.

Tremendous success of
MISS BLANCHE BATES and COMPANY OF PLAYERS
Houses crowded at every Performance

Commencing with Monday evening, July 24th, T. Daniel Frawley will present MISS BLANCHE BATES in Sardou's masterpiece,

"MADAME SANS GENE"

Reserved Seats, 25, 50, 75, and 1.00. Tel. Main 173'.
Monday, July 31st, "LONDON ASSURANCE"

Battle of Manila Bay

This Grand Historical Panorama is now on exhibition . . .

Lectures every half hour by the eminent orator, PROF. W. G. ROLLINS

Admission, 50 Cents
Children, 25 Cents.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, IN AND FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA.

IN THE MATTER OF CARLO SAVONELLO, Bankrupt.

Take notice, that CARLO SAVONELLO, Bankrupt, above named, has been duly adjudicated a bankrupt under the Act of Congress of July 1, 1898, and that the first meeting of the creditors has been called to meet at the office of the undersigned at room 94, Chronicle Building, San Francisco, California, on Wednesday the second day of August 1899, at the hour of eleven o'clock A. M., for the purpose of proving their claims against the estate of said bankrupt; and that at the same time and place all creditors whose claims have been duly proven and allowed shall appoint one or three trustees of said estate.

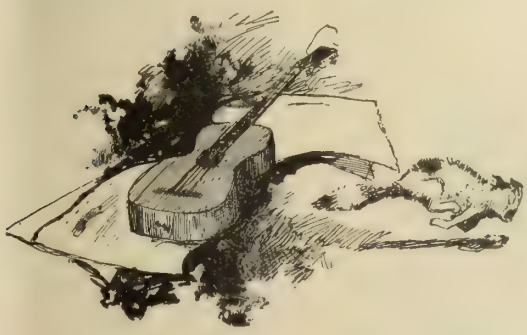
Dated San Francisco, July 20, 1899.

MILTON J. GREEN,
Referee in Bankruptcy.
In and for the City and County of San Francisco.

HEY DIDDLE DIDDLE

[The London Clarion prints this version of the well known nursery rhyme done into Whitmanese. The Literary Digest calls it a cruel stab at the fame of the "good gray poet."]

HERE is the poem of me, the entertainer of children.
See! a cat is passing through my poem;
See! it plays the fiddle rapturously;
It plays sonatas, fugues, rag-times, gavottes, gigues, minuets, romances, impromptus—it plays the tune that led to the defunction of the aged cow;
But most of all it plays nocturnes, and plays them pyrotechnically, as befits the night time.
See the moon shining in the pellucid sky;
See! the cow, inspired by the intoxicating strains of the Stradivarius, throws off her habitual languor, and leaps over the moon.
O me! O pulse of my life! O amazement of things!
Why so active thou cow?
Why so passive thou moon?
See the dog.
He grins and runs through the city
Seeing humor in his surroundings.
Have all dogs so keen a sense of humor?
See the dish maliciously meditative.
See, it takes advantage of the general confusion and absconds with the silver spoon.



Music World

THE MOST EXCELLENT signs of the musical status of a community is the fact that the residents encourage enthusiastically deserving talent. This encouragement should not only materialize in applause but should develop into a sentiment sufficiently generous to assist a meritorious artist financially. No better sacrifice can be offered on the altar of art than the sacrifice of gold, for it paves the way to success and fame far more rapidly than applause. Although the latter is necessary in the attainment of glory, money is the first factor, after which applause is an easy follower. So it is with a feeling of rejoicing that I hear that the Santa Cruz people appreciate and recognize the gifts hidden in Miss Maude Hohmann and have given her a concert, thanks to which she is enabled to seek broader education in the east. The young lady is surely deserving of this encouragement and will do honor to the confidence entertained by her appreciative townspeople. Last week the citizens of Santa Cruz flocked to a benefit concert given in honor of Miss Hohmann, who is a gifted young vocalist who is about to change the climate of the seaside city for the musical atmosphere of Boston. As I stated recently, Miss Hohmann possesses a dramatic soprano of exceedingly wide range and considerable timbre. It is one of those big voices that Wagner loved so mnch and with the proper training Miss Hohmann will develop into one of the most valuable sopranos now on the concert stage. Of course nowadays the concert stage is too easily abandoned for the operatic stage and thereby the former is often deprived of a brilliant acquisition and the latter gains an addition that may be praiseworthy from a musical standpoint but which is utterly lacking the dramatic temperament, a gift without which an opera singer is simply a failure. Of course I do not know how much dramatic ability there may be hidden in Miss Hohmann, but I do know that her magnificent voice will certainly make a name for her one of these days. Whether the Boston Conservatory of Music is sufficient to develop a fine voice is a question difficult to affirm; however as a foundation it may be of some benefit. But we have right here in San Francisco teachers who are much preferable to an education at the Boston conservatory. Furthermore a good voice needs all the care and training possible and therefore it is not always well to be one among many instead of being the only one. The citizens of Santa Cruz deserve great credit for encouraging Miss Hohmann and one of these days they will be glad to have done so.

Among the participants on the program was Will Jacobs of this city, who—according to the musical critic of the Sentinel—"possesses a fine voice which is capable of much power." Mr. Jacobs, I believe, has a baritone of considerable clearness and would surely make a fine vocalist if he but came under the direction of a good vocal teacher. He certainly possesses a good voice that should not be neglected. I notice that Mr. Jacobs sang For All Eternity, which "reminds me of a story:" Sometime last year while I was yet grinding away on the Sentinel, a concert was given for the benefit of the Red Cross society at the Santa Cruz opera-house. Among the participants announced to appear was Dr. Rottanzi, who at that time assisted in guarding the powder mill under the distinguished title of a captain; his selection was For All Eternity. The evening arrived and the concert was about to begin when it was discovered that Captain Rottanzi shone by his absence. The conjectures were many. Did he suffer from an attack of stage fright? Had his voice suddenly taken leave of absence? Or was he detained by some serious trouble at the camp? The question could not be answered positively, so all were expecting the announcement which needs had to precede the captain's nnmber. Ex-Lieutenant Governor W. T. Jeter was master of ceremonies on that occasion and upon his shoulders rested the responsibility of accounting for the doctor-captain-baritone's absence, and he did it right well.

WANTED

An Accompanist

Must read correctly at first sight; must be able to play religious and operatic music and must be able to keep up precise "tempo."

Persons unable to fulfill the above requirements need not apply. Apply to,

LOUIS CREPAUX,
Y. M. C. A. Building, 3:30 to 4:00 P. M.

This is what Mr. Jeter said: "Ladies and gentlemen! I am very sorry to announce that Captain Rottanzi was suddenly called away to San Francisco this afternoon, which necessitates the omission of his number. He was going to sing For All Eternity and in view of this fact it is perhaps lucky that he could not come. All those who desire to have their money returned because of the absence of Captain Rottanzi may do so by stopping at the box office on their way home." It might be well to add that the box-office was locked long before the performance was concluded.

¶ ¶

It also appears from the report of this concert that the program was under the direction of Professor George Hastings, who is really the musical Nestor of Santa Cruz. In Professor Hastings the music lovers of that popular seaside resort possess an exponent whose energy, intelligence and ability contributed immeasurably toward the gratifying musical appreciation now prevalent in Santa Cruz. Both as a man and a musician Mr. Hastings inspires respect. Another participant in that concert who shows signs of artistic facility was Miss Ida Wilson whose selections on the piano bespeak intelligence in technique, dainty touch and fine discriminative powers.

Miss Maude Hohmann

Last Tuesday it was finally settled that Hermann Genss was to be the conductor of the Harmonie singing society. This organization is composed of about one hundred and fifty male voices, each of which is imbued with power and clarity. West of Chicago it is assuredly the most efficient male chorus and as far as material is concerned is not far behind the Arion singing society of New York which created such a sensation during its European tour. You will no doubt ask: "If this society is so efficient, why have we not heard of it more frequently?" Well, the reason may be sought in the fact that hitherto the Harmonie was not blessed with a director who had the energy and ambition to develop its resources. Both Hinrichs and Scheel directed this chorus, but as soon as these gentlemen obtained more lucrative positions they deserted these vocalists for, what they thought, more remunerative enterprises. At last the Harmonie has discovered the right man, for Mr Genss is a thorough musician, full of enthusiasm for the art, and who will never betray the confidence of his well-wishers by deserting them when more remunerative positions seek him. Ere long the Harmonie will flourish under the experienced baton of Hermann Genss which furthermore will amply demonstrate the value of this distinguished musician.

¶ ¶

Otto Floersheim, the composer-critic whose caustic letters delight and instruct the many readers of the Musical Courier, concludes his report of a recital at the Klindworth Philharmonic conservatory at Berlin with these words: "Among those I heard I mention as the most advanced and seemingly also most gifted, the names of Wanda Flatow, Karl Kessler, Otto Kunitz from California." A notice like this from the pen of a critic who enjoys the distinction of being one of Germany's most prominent and severe musical journalists is very valuable, and the following remarks ensure the praise as absolutely justified: "Of the twenty pupils who played, the average were so agreeably surprising in their efforts that instead of the half hour I had intended staying, I spent nearly two hours at the examination. The performances showed such equality of touch, such rhythmic precision and such musical pregnancy that in many instances they would really have passed for concert performers with which word of praise I do not mean to carry the idea that at all concert performances the above qualities are met with."

Among the names mentioned in the above report permit me to single out that of Otto Kunitz, who hails from Santa Cruz. Mr. Kunitz is a friend of mine and many a time I advised him to hasten his departure for Europe which at that time seemed to be put off continuously. Of course the talent of the young man was known and as is the case with all accomplished musicians he was asked to play for charity performances. His developments as a soloist were beginning to stand still because he was forced to play accompaniments. So one day I took occasion to publish an article in which I emphasized the fact that Mr. Kunitz did not know anything about accompaniment, that he should drop this phase of pianism and devote all his time to his education as a soloist. I am glad to find that my prediction has again proved true.

¶ ¶

These successes of California talent abroad remind me of the negligence of which the local press is guilty in regard to music and musicians. Let us for a moment admit that the business office of a newspaper is justified in refusing space to musicians who do not advertise in its columns, nevertheless it appears that a daily paper enjoys besides an advertising patronage a subscription patronage which indirectly influences the the rates of advertisements. It does not make any difference in what way a man supports a newspaper; as long as he does support it he should be entitled to all benefits that may be derived from its columns. By this I do not mean to infer that music teachers should be entitled to free advance notices, but that the subscriber interested in music should receive that information which interests him and which is news to him. In other words a reader and a subscriber interested in music should be entitled to his news just the same as the man interested in prize fights and baseball is entitled to his. But as matters now stand music is totally neglected by the daily press and if there is a notice it is so scanty and devoid of literary merit that the musical reader becomes thoroughly disgusted. The Examiner, the only morning paper that has any musical department at all, does not treat its critic with that courtesy and consideration which he deserves or else his column would not be "crowded out" or "cut down." If any department in the Examiner should be "remodeled" it should be the dramatic department, which is now absurdly deficient. Why does the Chronicle not establish a musical department? I cannot understand how a paper that gives such reliable and meritorious service should omit to furnish its readers with a caustic musical column at least once a week. The musicians here are complaining constantly because of the fact that the daily papers do not furnish them with the news to which they are entitled. Why should they not be treated with consideration? The papers are eager enough to get their subscription money.

ALFRED METZGER.

SHERIFF'S SALE

SAN FRANCISCO PAVING COMPANY (a corporation) Plaintiff. vs. ANNIE C RINES, and THE GERMAN SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY (a corporation) Defendants.	No. 65,594. Superior Court Department No. 7. Order of Sale and Decree of Lien.

Under and by virtue of an Order of Sale and Decree of Lien issued out of the Superior Court, Department No. 7, of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on the 11th day of July A D 1899, in the above entitled action, wherein San Francisco Paving Company (a corporation), the above named plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of lien against Annie C. Rines, defendant, on the 21st day of February A. D. 1899, recorded in Judgment Book 47 of said Court, at page 253, I am commanded to sell all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a point upon the Northerly line of Sixteenth street distant thereon One hundred and eighty (180) feet Westerly of the Westerly line of Sanchezstreet, running thence Westerly upon the said Northerly line of Sixteenth street Fifty (50) feet, three (3) inches; thence at right angles Northerly Thirty-six (36) feet; thence Northeasterly parallel with the Southeasterly line of Market street, Eighty-two (82) feet, six and one-half (6½) inches; and thence Southerly in a straight line Eighty seven (87) feet, four and three-fourths (4¾) inches to the point of commencement. Being a subdivision of Mission Block One hundred and three (103) in said City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

Public notice is hereby given that on Monday the 14th day of August A. D. 1899, at twelve o'clock Noon, of that day, in front of the New City Hall, Larkin street wing, in the City and County of San Francisco, I will in obedience to said order of sale and decree of lien, sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to raise sufficient money to satisfy said judgment with interest, costs, etc., to the highest and best bidder, for lawful money of the United States.

HENRY S. MARTIN,
San Francisco, July 22nd A. D. 1899. Sheriff.

J. C. BATES, Attorney for Plaintiff,
434 California street, San Francisco.

SATISFACTORY TO THE EYE AND EAR
BYRON MAUZY PIANOS
308-314 POST ST
Sheet Music, Books, etc. Telephone Main 5261

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN has enjoyed a visit of several weeks at Shasta springs and while there conducted a concert on the thirteenth instant, the following program being rendered: Piano, Prelude, Chopin, Miss Katherine Bunnell; soprano, Au Printemps, Gounod, Miss Helen Mae Davis; mandolin, Intermezzo, Czibulka, Mr. Adelstein; recitation, Miss L. W. Moffitt; recitation, Creole Lover's Song, Buck, H. L. Taylor; mandolin, Nocturne, b flat, Chopin, Mr. Adelstein; recitation, The Raven, Mrs. Blewett; soprano, Serenade, Neidlinger, Miss Mae Davis; mandolin. Mazurka Russe, Czarovitch, Mr. Adelstein; recitation, The Courtship of Larry O'Dea, Miss M. B. Moffitt; tenor, Greeting, Hawley, Mr. Taylor; mandolin, Tarantelle, Mezzacapo, Mr. Adelstein. Mr. Adelstein will resume his classes at the beginning of August.

¶ ¶

Cyrus Brownlee Newton filled engagements at Pacific Grove on the eleventh and seventeenth instants. Mrs. Homer Tourjee has returned after a three months' trip to Japan where she was visiting her sister, Mrs. E. T. Osborne. Mrs. Tourjee speaks very brightly of the prospects for the coming season in the Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. The handsome new catalogue proclaims the faculty to be the best that can be obtained, an acquisition being Miss Jennie M. Long who will have charge of the department of elocution, oratory and dramatic art. She is an eastern lady of high standing and has been compared to Charlotte Cushman. The catalogue contains cuts of Dr. Tourjee, president of the Boston conservatory, and Homer Tourjee; of the reception rooms and piano department.

¶ ¶

Miss Emily Curtis of the California School of Oratory is in Stockton and may go later to San Jose.

Miss Alice Woods, violinist, has returned from Alabama to visit her parents. She filled a position in the Birmingham seminary but may remain here this season.

¶ ¶

Mr. and Mrs. Don Pardee Riggs have returned from Mill valley.

MARY FRANCES FRANCIS.

¶ ¶

Mario Roeckel has followed in the footsteps of his twin sister Marie, and made his debut by singing Annie Laurie last Tuesday night at the Womens' Educational Union. Both the twins have true voices, and beginning so young will never suffer from the stage fright that attacks older people.

¶ ¶

The Press club will assist in the program to be rendered at the farewell concert of Emil Steinegger on August tenth at Sherman-Clay hall.

TOWN TALK gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales.

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Miss Marion Bear, Concert Pianist, 927 Sutter St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, Vocalist, 1109 Post street.
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist, Oroville, Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . .

Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.

Specialist in the Development of the Voice

* * *

HOME STUDIO:

RECEPTION HOURS. 12 TO 2

912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .

Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu-El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,

Studio for Voice Culture Operatic Repertoire,
Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method

Engagements accepted for Concerts
Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.

Terms Moderate

Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

MR. PERCY A. R. DOW . .

PUPIL OF { VANNINI, FLORENCE
HENSCHEL, LONDON

Special Classes
for Study of the Voice

During June, July and August

Studio: 1654 Pacific Street.

RECEPTION HOURS:
2 to 3, Monday and Thursday

NEAR VAN NESS AVE.

MR. FRANCIS STUART

. . . Teacher of Singing

1615 Jackson St., near Polk

DR. H. J. STEWART . . . .

Organist of Trinity Church, and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .

has removed his

MUSIC STUDIO

to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine

Singing, Piano, Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music

E. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street

Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.

A thorough course for teaching. Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Under direction of For Voice Culture, Piano and Organ

Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck, Assisted by MISS CECILIA M. DECKER
Alto Soloist Central M. E. Church.

Operatic and Dramatic Department in charge of Mrs. Mary Fairweather
Piano Department in charge of Mr. Arthur Fickenscher
Assisted by Mrs. Fanny E. Buckland, (Virgil Practice Clavier Method) and Miss Estelle Davidson (Synthetic Method)
Languages: { MR. E. D. VENTURA, B. E. (French and Italian)
MISS ELSA PRIBER. (German.)
Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy.
Instructions in Physical Culture, Chorus and Sight Singing, Ensemble Playing, etc., etc. Advantages Unsurpassed Full particulars and terms upon application. 841 Fulton St., Bet. Webster and Fillmore,
Telephone West 223 San Francisco, Cal.

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use

BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE

It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.

PRICE $3.00

At music stores or by mail. Descriptive circulars sent upon application.

HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

At Cross Purposes

THE QUIET HUMDRUM LIFE nearly suffocated her. Often in the evenings the house seemed so small and close that she rose suddenly and walked up and down on the street in front because she could breathe more freely. It seemed then that her world was larger; that the sky was her roof and the width of her life hardly measured by the miles and miles to the distant mountains.

It had not always been like this. There had been days when the little home was the dearest spot on earth and its cares the light and happiness of life. Few of us can pass from the humdrum and, tasting of the sweets of the world, return into quiet, without longings or regrets, and it is a strong woman who holding those regrets can stifle them within herself until she no longer holds them.

She had been in the world of people enjoying the excitement of events, the life of change, and to come back to a quiet home where breakfast, luncheon and dinner were the most important affairs, where everlasting and never-ending house duties were the thoughts of the day, the haunting dreams of night—how dull, how deadly, deadly dull, it all was!

I cannot censure the beautiful woman who turns from an unappreciative home to the courtesy and admiration of others as flowers turn from a dark wall toward the light and warmth of the sun, but let her first be sure that the wall is not darkened by her own drooping shadow.

When I first saw the little home with its gardens' wealth of roses, its cool shady porches, its genuine atmosphere of home, I fancied the joy and happiness of life there and when I found her sullen, restless, fighting fate, I wandered if at some time punishment is not meted out to those who abuse the gifts and chances of happiness that they undervalue and ignore. And I, of the world wearied, was filled with such a yearning for the despised life that it choked the words in my throat and filled my eyes with tears.

I saw her again after two years, dissatisfied, going disconnectedly from one pursuit to another, apart from the quiet as much as possible, the home neglected, all chances of happiness there forever destroyed. And I, wandering yet, facing an unsettled future, found myself with the same longing more fervent than ever, to take up the thread of life there where it had been dropped and to pursue it to the end. That yearning, oh God! stronger than life and deeper than the foundations of my soul.

So it is that Life offers us its sweetest fruit just beyond the reach of our finger-tips, and we cannot turn from it and console ourselves with that which lies in our hands, because—well, because we are women.

FELICITA GORDON.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd

TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral. Voice Culture and the Art of Singing. First-class Engagements only accepted. Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave. Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Residence, 1622 Fell Street, near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE

SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakland, Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL

SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing. Begs to announce that she has returned from Europe and resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento street. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL

POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire. 130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS

CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches. Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER

TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY

TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St. Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH

PUPILS of Madame de la Grange Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

J. W. McKENZIE

VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX

PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A. Building Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30 Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL

VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue. Studio, 717 Sutter Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON

SINGING and Piano. Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK

PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 975. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH

PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory, Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M. 1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA

TEACHER OF PIANO. 2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER

TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays. 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony. 2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE

TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a. m to 1:30 p. m. Thursday excepted. Telephone Hyde 1491 825 Sutter Street, S.F.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE

PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street. Telephone Larkin 782.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.

ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.

PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies. Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON

CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher. Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA

TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN

TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.

TEACHER OF ZITHER. Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street. Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.

VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn. Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR

MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5. Will accept engagements for concerts.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano.
MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

Mixed Drinks in Summer

AT CASTLE CRAGS it's mighty quiet;
Plain egg-nogg, you might say,
With mountain air your staple diet,
A mail train twice a day.

And Coronado you might call a stone fence;
It's nice and all that, but rather slow.
Instead of dollars you begin to reckon pence,
And puzzle how to make the hours go.

Santa Cruz is a Tom and Jerry,
Hot Scotch and punch in one.
The climate there is warm; yes, very—
Not only in the sun!

Del Monte! ah, a champagne cobbler have we here!
Vin sec in one sense: in another, au contraire.
It's always high-priced wine and never small beer.
"We're swell or nothing's" in the air.

Pacific Grove—'tis rather hard to name,
The nearest is a port wine sangaree.
The fact is, Carmelo is mighty tame—
A corpse reviver's what it needs to see!

Capitola! Surely Jersey lightning's here,
They go so fast you haven't time to think.
Hot spiced rum, gin twist—they do not fear
To give you anything you want to drink.

A sherry cobbler Glenwood is in summer,
Cool at night: the days are very hot.
The mountains freeze at night, but are a hummer
At midday; then a slow roast is your lot.

American milk punch is San Rafael,
A nice, mild place where you must wield the racquet,
Or play at golf, if you would be thought swell
For otherwise your pose would lack it.

A brandy flip we might call Belvedere—
The elements so mixed you cannot tell
Where one comes in and other ends—it's queer,
But many say that Belvedere is—well!

Mint julep Sausalito is, to my mind,
Aristocratic and immensely smart.
Here elements well harmonized you find,
With warmth and good cheer at the heart.

A yard of flannel's what to term the Springs,
For go the round you find them all the same.
With invalids and groaners all in strings,
The blind, the halt, the mottled and the lame.

Lake Tahoe and Blue Lakes are jolly places,
Where you are sure to meet familiar faces.
Rum julep, soda cocktail, both would fit;
High-spiced or plain taste—but plenty of it.

A whisky punch comes nearest San Jose,
A dreamy place to while the hours away,
A sleeper San Jose is, you might say.

Menlo, Burlingame, Milbrae and surrounding places
All we class as one and so describe;
Where swelldom golfs and marks its paces—
Call Manhattan cocktail for the tribe.

THE GUZZLER.

The Oak and the Reed

WHEN MAYME WILLIS met Margie Norris for the first time, a queer feeling came over her. It was as if she were looking at herself; a pale shadow it is true, but still herself. They might have been twin sisters, only that Mayme was brighter, gayer-looking than the other. Her hair was more golden, her eyes more reflectant of the glory of the sky, than were Margie's.

Mayme was visiting her school chum, Daisy Harbourne, who lived in Silverville, a small town in the northern citrus belt. When Mrs. Harbourne had announced a caller, that afternoon, it was not a pleasing announcement to either of the two girls, who had planned a drive to the springs and dinner at the hotel, with a return by moonlight.

"If it were not Margie," said Daisy, "I would excuse us both—but Margie, well, she is not of the smart set and I would not hurt her feelings for the world."

And thus Mayme met Mrs. Lesley Norris, the Margie whom she always after denominated her Shadow.

There was a story at the bottom of those "hunted fawn" eyes, Mayme felt sure, and she was not wrong in her surmise. All Silverville knew the tale, or scraps of it. The principals were reticent and there were parts that would not fit. Mayme learned from her friend the main features of the romance. Margie Warden lived some miles out of Silverville. Her father was a rancher in a very small way. At the Silverville grammar school Margie had become acquainted with the judge's son, Lesley Norris. Nobody ever suspected an attachment between them; their social positions were too far asunder, apparently

Then Margie, who had left school and served an apprenticeship at dressmaking, went to San Francisco to ply her trade.

It was in the Californian metropolis that Margie fell in again with the judge's son, who was a reporter on one of the big morning journals. Nobody in Silverville ever found out the full particulars, but Margie and Lesley were married. A few months afterwards—nobody ever quite agreed on the exact number—there was a child. Then, shortly after that Margie came back without the child and took up her residence with her parents. Silverville tabbies had a toothsome bit of gossip which they masticated to its utmost extent. The friends of Mrs. Norris, senior, clawed the girl; they cut her to pieces, flayed her character until she had not a shred to cover her nakedness with. The judge's wife dubbed Margie Warden a designing woman and would never look upon her face again. The judge, who was above all earthly considerations a Christian, brought himself to the point of forgiveness, and greeted Margie pleasantly whenever he met her on his way to the post-office.

Daisy's mother was one of Margie's champions. She knew the girl's disposition, loving, sweet and trusting. Besides, she knew Lesley Norris well, as he had been the companion of her own son during several years of schooldays. She knew that Lesley was full of evil, that he had deceived even his own good mother. It was commonly reported upon high authority that Lesley had many nights been carried by his comrades to his door, when he could not have used his own means of locomotion by reason of "the spirit within." Mrs. Harbourne had been glad when Lesley Norris had shaken the dust of Silverville from off his shapely feet, avowedly forever, for her mother's heart had seen that Daisy was becoming interested in him.

The marriage had changed everything. Daisy was safe and the mother did not object when her brave daughter, disdaining the tongue of scandal that wagged throughout Silverville, went often to see Margie Norris after the latter's return, spoke to the girl in the street, openly, and upon more than one occasion invited her to lunch or dinner.

"Why did she leave her child?," questioned Mayme.

"Nobody is sure upon that point," answered Daisy. "Though I know that Margie told my mother that Lesley made her this proposition: 'Keep me or the child.' She must have chosen him, for the child is not here."

"And she is here without her husband. What a mystery!"

Miss Willis had always held strong opinions upon the subject of women who slipped from virtue's path, had asserted that no girl could do evil without thought, and had always stood up for the man as the tempted not the tempter. Yet now she found herself mixed up in her moralities. In Margie Norris she saw no designing woman, no Circe, only a patient, lovely, loving character. What Daisy told her of Lesley Norris did not help to solve the riddle. She could not imagine, if he were such a man as his description represented him, why he should have married the girl at all. He could have done as other evil youths do, have deceived, betrayed and forsaken.

"Lesley has the most wonderful fascination for a woman," said Daisy. "I have felt it myself. Then, think how easily he could wind that soft-hearted girl around his finger."

"But he cannot be wholly bad, for in a way he did his best to make all right."

"In a way?" scornfully queried Daisy, "Why, he deserted Margie and stole her baby from her arms."

Mayme had a passion for psychological researches. As she studied Margie, who was physically a shadowy duplicate of herself, she wondered how she, if placed within the same environments, subjected to a similar temptation, condemned to Silverville and labor all the days of her life, how she would have acted if pressed by such a man as Lesley Norris?

In time, she bade farewell to Daisy, to Margie and to Silverville and went away. It was in San Francisco, at a bohemian gathering where artists, poets, newspaper men and brains in general were congregated that her attention was attracted by a man whose face she dimly remembered having seen somewhere. As her memory traveled backward she was in Silverville again, listening to a minute description by Daisy Harbourne and studying a photograph she held in her hand.

It was Lesley Norris. Mayme started when she had established his identity in her mental cavity. It seemed such a curious circumstance, this meeting. The man started also, but quickly recovered his equanimity. He had noticed at once the extraordinary resemblance existing between this woman and his wife.

"Who is that blonde over there?", he asked his host. "I wish to know her."

Mayme was glad of the opportunity to study this other principal in the life story of her Shadow. Yet she failed to penetrate Lesley's character, successful as she had been in her study of his wife, his parents and his friends. Lesley was immensely clever, she found, and more magnetic than any person she had ever before met. His will struck her comprehension as being a paramount trait.

"I wish to know her," he had said to his host, and he had probed Mayme Willis' mind thoroughly before the evening was over. He stayed by her through it all and his eyes still followed her when she finally took her departure.

As for the girl herself, she seemed at a loss to know at what stage of her life she had met this man. She was more than interested in him; she could not wrest his image from her heart. He satisfied every portion of her being, filling her senses like the scent of an exquisite flower. She had not asked him to call nor had she given him her address. Yet he searched this out for himself, came to see her the following afternoon, and his temerity failed to offend her

She felt herself growing weak. Sometimes it came across her that she must be somebody else—her Shadow for instance. She had desired to know Lesley Norris, and had foolishly hoped to become the peacemaker that would restore him to his wife and persuade him to make known the whereabouts of the child. Yet she had now been acquainted with him for a month, had seen him nearly every day, and had never broached the subject uppermost in her thoughts.

It came to the point at last. He had sat for some minutes staring fiercely into the amber liquid she had poured for him. Neither had spoken. Then he broke forth, without any of the elegant phrases in which he was wont to disguise his feelings:

"I love you, Mayme."

The spoon with which she was about to stir the sweetness in her own tea-cup dropped to the ground. A reply that would have been but the echo of his simple statement was on her lips, but she stopped. Then she faltered—

"But you are married, Lesley."

"So you know that story."

He placed his cup gently upon the dainty stand beside her.

"Well, what of it? We live in the world of today. Besides, I shall be free in a short time."

She stared at him uncomprehendingly.

"Yes, I began divorce proceedings some weeks ago."

Answering the mute question in her eyes, he added: "Weeks ago, long before I knew you. There was some hitch, but it will go through all right."

As she still said nothing, he went on: "She never could be anything to me—"

"She loves you," interrupted Mayme and her courage arose as she made the plea for Margie, the plea that had been so long in abeyance but had now found voice. Mayme could never afterwards tell what she had said. Lesley Norris remained silent throughout the whole. Then he laughed bitterly:

"You have only one side of the story," he said.

Mayme looked up, timidly. Did he know his power over her? If he had defended himself she would have hated him.

A woman such as she might give her love to a man with a past, but to one who could enact the role of Adam—never.

Lesley was doubtless as black as the Silverville gossips painted him. Still, in his creed, a gentleman never speaks ill of a woman, be she the most fallen of her sex.

"I shall not tell you the other," he added. "God knows it was a wretched affair all through. I shall get my divorce, and then—"

The warm look of love that leaped into his dark eyes finished the sentence.

"Where is the child?", she asked.

Woman's pertinacity is proverbial and Mayme felt this question was owed to her Shadow, whom she had loved as a sister. By a revulsion of feeling hard to describe, she felt at this moment a repulsion towards Margie, yet she wished to be just.

"I do not know," returned the man; from the expression on his face she knew his answer was a falsehood.

He was always tenderly solicitous of Mayme. Not to disturb her serenity farther, he left her. And she knew that her heart was his forever and forever.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, direct importer of fine millinery goods. Exclusive styles.

From Daisy Harbourne came the next chapter in the story:

"Lesley Norris came back here on the quiet. He has been ill, I learn, but I did not see him. He would naturally avoid us, after all that has happened since he and Leonard used to chum together. I would give the world to see him, and to ask him what he thought of my friend Mayme, when he met her at the reception you wrote me about. Don't you know, Mayme, you forgot to tell me whether you ever met him since? He had filed a suit for divorce just about a fortnight before you saw him, I hear, and it seems such a queer thing that Margie made no reply to the proceedings. The judge had an interview with Mr. Warden, they say, and Margie met Lesley in the presence of the parents. I confess it is incomprehensible to me why she did not force him to the wall in the matter of the child."

A later letter contained the news that the divorce had been granted the plaintiff, on the grounds of his wife's desertion, no opposition plea being entered by the defendant.

"I saw Margie yesterday," wrote Daisy, "and she looks just the same. Yet she almost broke down when she was here last week, and confessed that she loves Lesley yet and would return to him in a moment if he desired it. So you see it is all a Chinese puzzle, one of those German anchor puzzles, rather, that would take a stronger head than mine to piece together"

Mayme had a book open on her lap. It seemed in the nature of a coincidence that two of the characters should be discussing divorce:

"You know," said Una, "I do not recognize the law that can sever husband and wife. Even the church has no such power. Whence can lay courts derive it? Free! No! better ten thousand times my present bondage than such tainted freedom."

Evelyn replied: " . . . It seems a hard and cruel thing that a bond should be indissoluble when its conditions are broken and yet one revolts from the idea of a second while the first husband or wife is living"

Una: " . . . That men should reconcile themselves to such a step is not strange; but women! They must have first lost all that is noblest and best in womanhood"

Mayme had started the novel for a pastime, to kill thought, as it were. The attempt was a miserable failure; "tainted freedom" were the words that kept repeating themselves in endless succession.

It was fully a month after the receipt of Daisy's letter that Lesley Norris entered Mayme's drawing-room. She had left San Francisco and was at her own home in Los Angeles. Yet Norris, with the unfailing instinct of a newspaper man, seemed always to know her whereabouts. His knowledge was invariably infinite when he desired an object.

"I have come, Mayme," he said, after the first fond greeting, "to tell you my love again. Nothing separates us now."

His beautiful, magnetic eyes seemed to draw her towards him.

She still hesitated.

"Come." Both hands were outstretched. "You love me. What, then, can be in the way?"

Ah, God! She had not known it would be so hard. Why were women given souls greater than their hearts?

Without touching his hands, still waiting dumbly to receive her own, and not daring to raise her eyes to his, which seemed burning themselves into her own, she said:

"You are right. I love you and shall love you always. But her face, Margie's face, the girl that reminds you of me and which resemblance first attracted you towards me, comes between us. It will always come between you and me."

Did she do wrong in sending him from her? Another woman did not disdain the gift of Lesley Norris' hand. Margie was not benefited by Mayme's sacrifice and Lesley's mother bemoans the fact that again her son has given her a daughter-in-law whom she cannot receive into her house. Silverville society is exclusive and Lesley's second wife was a déclassée.

Man cannot live alone, and Lesley Norris believed in taking what the gods provided.

Mayme Willis was left alone with the thoughts of her unavailing self-crucifixion to console her. Barren honor is said to be a unefficacious salve for wounded hearts. Still, après tout, it was one who thought he knew whereof he spoke who said:

'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all.

THE CHRONICLER.

FOR A PRETTY EFFECT IN STATIONERY nothing is so chaste as the Fleur-de-Lis Linen when stamped with monogram in silver. Messrs. Cooper & Co. have superior facilities in this line, and show a number of new ideas.

Dr. A. C. Moore

A regular graduate of the original A. T Still American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo.

Founded the Pacific Coast School at Los Angeles three years ago . .

Chronic Diseases and Deformities Successfully Treated . . . .

Address, 204 SUTTER STREET, S F.

TELEPHONE MAIN 100

Apropos Magazines

IT HAS become quite a fashion amongst the literary lights to sneer at the Home Journal. Nevertheless, it and kindred publications fill a field not reached by a different class of magazines. I know one busy woman who subscribes for the Journal for her thirteen-year-old daughter, though she rarely looks at it herself, because she is absolutely certain that there is nothing objectionable or questionable in it from year's beginning to year's end. In a late issue Dan Beard's suggestion of a club house on the water will be more apt to meet the approval of the boys than of their mothers. Dainty Desserts for the Summer Table should be appreciated in our land of fruit. The pictures are tempting enough to eat. There are but two California homes shown in the double page illustrations of floral porches and vine-covered cottages—probably because we are so used to public gardens that fewer photographs were offered. One of the amusing features of all floral departments is the minute and careful directions given for the care of callas, while here at the "jumping off place" it is commonly said that "you can't kill 'em."

The Cosmopolitan for July contains some good things. Some Americans who have Married Titles mentions a number of native daughters and of course is illustrated. I notice that in mentioning C. P. Huntington he is spoken of as "of New York." A South Sea Island Story, a vague sort of title, by Lloyd Osborne, is good. The Hero of the Regiment supplies the war flavor without which nothing is complete nowadays. Snowflake and Ishahari is another of John Luther Long's delightful Japanese tales, this one without the complication of a foreign element. Romance and Reality of a Single Life also has a war time flavor, as the single life is that of Frederick Funston. The organization of a home on $2.50 a day, by Charlotte W. Eastman, is a practical, sensible paper which does not attempt to prove the impossible and tell how one may keep two servants, dress in silk attire and move in society on fifteen dollars a week with a family of five to support. Tolstoi's Awakening continues, as does Walker's Building of an Empire, and there are several other timely papers.

The new Lippincott fulfills the promises made in its behalf. The complete novel, The Fox Woman, by John Luther Long, is one of the best, if not the best, ever published in this magazine. It can be briefly characterized as a longer and more incidental version of Kipling's poem, The Vampyre. The scene is located in Japan and most of the characters are Japanese. The Teller, the only other piece of fiction known to have been written by the author of David Harum, emphasizes the loss the literary world has suffered in the death of Edward Noyes Westcott. There is one other short story, The Cited, by Charles M. Skinner, which is also excellent in its way. Of immediate interest to San Francisco, in view of the project on foot to introduce auto-trucks and automobiles, is a paper on Self-propelling Street Vehicles, by George T. Varney. What are Women Striving For? by Sarah T. Stevenson, is an interesting article which deserves mention because it is so far removed from the usual ranting tone of new women papers. Other names which appear in the index are James Whitcomb Riley, Ernest Ingersoll and Ann Hollingswort Wharton. Next month we are promised a story by Israel Zangwill, Noah's Ark, as well as one by Mrs. Crowningshield and one by the "San Francisco Kipling," Dr. C. W. Doyle. Among the other good things there is also noted "Another remarkable poem from the far west, a passionate lyric entitled Two Must be Two, by Madge Morris Wagner, one of whose former poems created a few years ago almost as much discussion as the Man with the Hoe—for the whole west seemed to take active part in settling the question propounded by Ambrose Bierce, 'Does the coyote howl?'" The new Lippincott cover design is striking and artistic. It retains the distinctive feature, the name in white on a background of red so as to be easily distinguished upon a book counter.

Richard Le Gallienne is contemplating a magazine, the contents of which are to be written entirely by himself. The title under consideration is Personal Opinion. Clement K. Shorter has severed his connection with the London Sketch and the Illustrated News in order to establish a new illustrated weekly and the Harmsworths having withdrawn their Sunday edition of the Mail are now about to establish a penny illustrated weekly.

The Century for July is a fiction number. Most of the contents consist of stories among which are tales by Gelett Burgess, Chester Bailey Fernald, Jacob A. Riis, Seumas MacManus, Mary Hallack Foote, F. Marion Crawford and Frank R. Stockton. There are literary reminiscences of Bret Harte in California, George Eliot, Victor Hugo, Sir Walter Scott and Stevenson, besides the usual departments. In this number Noah Brooks relates the oft-told tale of the prim and proper proof reader of the Overland and Bret Harte's Luck of Roaring Camp. It would be a work of mercy to unearth her name. Some one ought to prevail upon Mr. Bridge to present an autographed portrait of so renowned a character.

For a frontispiece the Overland for July reproduces the painting by C. D. Robinson, A Slope on the Twin Peaks, San Francisco—"see Etc."—and when one turns to the Etc. one is reminded of the school boy couplet:

> If my name you wish to find
> Turn to page 49

And having turned to the designated page:

> If my name you cannot find
> Close the book and never mind.

Especially notable in the present number is Charles S. Greene's account of the Hearst Architectural Competition. Los Angeles and the Teachers is timely, and Jeffersonian Principles, by M. M. Estee, is a forcible and trenchant article. Jack London's contribution, without which the Overland would not be the Overland, is The Priestly Prerogative. The other stories are above the average, only one making any attempt to drag in the interminably tiresome Mexican greaser and in that one he is not allowed to speak even English. There is one noticeable peculiarity of the Overland, the pages are always trimmed so that it is the only magazine which is always "instantly available."

THE BOOKWORM.

ESTABLISHED 1863

GOLD
PEBBLE
SPECTACLES
EYE GLASSES
OPERA
FIELD AND MARINE
GLASSES

COMPLICATED
CASES OF DEFECTIVE
VISION
DIAGNOSED
FREE OF CHARGE

824 MARKET STREET, PHELAN BUILDING, Near Fourth

$100 Reward $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY, Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c

SHOES MADE TO ORDER
Hand Sewed, $5.50 Repairing Done Nicely
Machine Sewed, $3.50
Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold Cheap.
Telephone Polk 18 T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

LASH'S KIDNEY AND LIVER BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

World of Letters

THE Lady of the Flag-Flowers, by Florence Wilkinson, is a story full of charm, the idyl of a young girl—half French, half Indian (Huron)— of the village of La Jeurne Valette in Canada. The first part of the book is a poem and many of the descriptions are of exquisite beauty The chapters, The Danse Dramatique and On the St. Gabriel, the latter particularly, make one almost wish, even with all its fine interest, that the author had kept her story in its idealization. The young girl Yvonne is so exquisite a creature that she seems wafted down on the weird winds of her native waters to this modern telling The quaint air of the old village, the characters of Poléon and the old curé are so perfect, that the rare perfection of these chapters seem to make the others deteriorate when brought into the conventional ways of commonplace life. What it loses in the idyllic it gains, however, in incident and complex detail. It is in touches of nobility that Miss Wilkinson is at her best and the legend of La Jongleuse gives its coloring to the whole. La Jongleuse: "Her eyes are blue blue, like the flag-flowers she twines in her hair, and her lips are smiling always. She has many voices, like the wind in the firs, sighing, sighing; like the waters on the shore, gurgling, splashing; like the little frogs that pipe in the spring; like the grasshoppers, crackling, clapping; like the little crickets, lonely, chirping; and sometimes you can hear her moan around the gray eves of a house, when the dead trees break and fall on windy evenings, and the long mosses swing like an old man's beard from the decaying hemlocks." Such is the La Jongleuse. And the pretty little brown maiden Yvonne who loves all nature, who knows what the birds say and to whom the silent, tall, gloomy pines are truly living, intimate creatures of her own world. Little half-Indian Yvonne, who is so sweet in her own native forest, it seems cruel even for the story's sake to take her from her lovely setting in the quaint old village of La Jeurne Valette. The story loses in poetic intensity what it gains probably for the general reader in interest as other characters are crowded into the action. Take it altogether it is a charming story beautifully told. [The Herbert S. Stone Co., Chicago and New York.]

Three Normandy Inns, by Anna Bowman Dodd. How one longs in reading this book for just the same experience, to awaken in the early morn in the little village of Villerville listening to the chat upon the doorsteps, to wander down to the beach and watch the fisher folk with their boats. The illustrations make one more envious still, for what a picture are those old inns with their many historic pages as a background, the artistic "Chambre des Marmousets" (Dives) with its oldtime atmosphere. And how deftly the author has interwoven here and there bits of history, anecdotes of travel brought back from the early days of these picturesque old inns. To read this book is to have in spirit the delight of this summer jaunt into quaint Normandy. It is in a way a companion book to Cathedral Days already reviewed. [Little-Brown Co., Boston.]

The Market Place, by Harold Frederic This is a strong work and the latest one, by one who is looked upon by competent judges as one of the greatest authors of his day: "It is a story of finance and business schemes for men and of social struggles and English country life for women. It deals in part with a phase of English life that has no counterpart in this country and that was fully exposed in the Hooley scandals. It compares so closely with these disclosures that recently shocked London that it would seem almost as if the talented author had the gift of prophecy. Combined with the story of company flotation and financial magnates are descriptions of social life at the West End and English country life that make the book the most fascinating one that Mr. Frederic ever wrote." I quote this opinion because it is so true and must be the echo of every one's impression. In this work the character of Thorpe, well drawn as it is, is sometimes a puzzle to make one stop to ponder over and conjecture as to how much real good is in the man and how much his character is colored and made subjective to circumstances. The author discriminates to a nicety the fine, invisible reserve of the caste of Vere de Vere when in contact with the great man of means, the insidious air of condescension and covert patronage that is wasted on the man of large purposes. His will, his inherent mastership paves the way and even wins for him the Lady Cressage, the very exotic of an old aristocracy; in her is a finesse that renders her inexplicable enough to make her charmingly interesting. The best advice is to read the book and not depend upon little tastes of second hand enjoyment. One is amply repaid. [Frederick A. Stokes & Co. New York.] ANNA COX STEPHENS.

Maurice Hewlett's Forest Lovers is advertised by a local book firm as by Maurice Westcott. "A good name is better than great riches."

CURE ALL YOUR PAINS WITH

Pain-Killer.

A Medicine Chest in Itself.

Simple, Safe and Quick Cure for

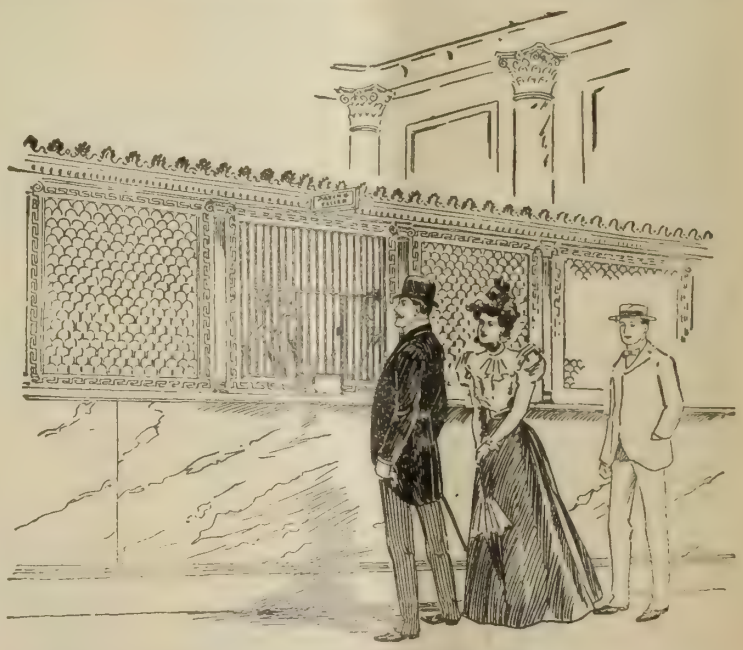
CRAMPS, DIARRHOEA, COUGHS, COLDS, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA.

25 and 50 cent Bottles.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

BUY ONLY THE GENUINE.

PERRY DAVIS'



I think every man I see uses R·I·P·A·N·S.

Mr. Barry, our manager, takes one after every meal and so does his father and sister. The old gentleman has rheumatism if he don't take R·I·P·A·N·S. They use twelve a day in that house.

About half the people I know carry one of those 5-cent cartons all the time in their vest pockets.

I was in the Bowery Savings Bank to draw some money, and while I was waiting in the line a clerk came up to the paying teller and said: "Give me a Ripans!" The teller took a carton out of his pocket and handed it to the clerk, who took out one of the Tabules and handed the carton back. Then I watched him and saw him go to the water cooler and swallow the Tabule with some water; I saw him tip his head back.

It's just wonderful how everybody takes them.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents. RIPANS TABULES may also be had of grocers, general storekeepers, news agents and at liquor stores and barber shops.

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

Wm. B. Hooper, Manager — San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA

.....1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer, First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY.

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

Pacific Carriage Co.

OLIVER HINKLEY, SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.

STANDS:

General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street

California Hotel — N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny — 48 Eighth Street

TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 — Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

A. D. Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty
Open Day and Night — Telephone Main 971

EDUCATIONAL

SELBORNE SCHOOL... FOR BOYS

SAN RAFAEL

The school will reopen on August 29th in the fine new buildings, heated by steam and lighted with electricity.

For catalogue apply to the Principal.

REV. CHARLES HITCHCOCK
SAN RAFAEL

TRINITY SCHOOL...

3300 WASHINGTON ST
SAN FRANCISCO

(FOUNDED 1876) Boarding and Day School for Young Men and Boys

Prepares for university and college

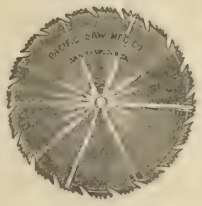
Accredited with the University of California and the Leland Stanford University. A faculty of eleven professors and teachers.

Boarders limited to thirty-five. Christmas term opens August 1st

REV. DR. E. B. SPALDING, Rector

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO



Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

—PRICE, $3.00—

Saws of every description made to order.
Planing and Currier Knives, Lace Leather, Emery Wheels, Saw Mandrels,
Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased,

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Joseph F. Byrne administrator of the estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said administrator at the office of his attorneys, Messrs. Lent and Humphrey, Rooms 54-55 Crocker Building, San Francisco, the same being his place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOSEPH F. BYRNE
Administrator of the estate of Thomas Byrne, Deceased

Dated at San Francisco, July 1, 1899.

LENT & HUMPHREY, Attorneys for Administrator,
Crocker Building, San Francisco.

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory

40 ELLIS ST., Rooms 1 and 2

SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00

Called for and delivered free — L. B. NORDLUND

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE

DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1029½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh.
Office Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND

DENTIST.
Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL

DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S. W. corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas."

BUSH AND SON

DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 206 Kearny St., S. F. Rooms 310-308-309. 'Phone Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN

VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone, 4118, San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street, Telephone 66. 1529 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

FRANCIS STUART

TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK

HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON

MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone. Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LOUIS CREPAUX

(Member Paris Grand Opera)

HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

PIERCE & TAYLOR

STORAGE WAREHOUSE, 735 Market Street-Opposite Grant avenue. Furniture, Pianos, Trunks, Paintings, Mirrors and other goods stored in clean, light dry lofts. Charges moderate. Telephone Black 311.

DECKELMAN BROS.

RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON

COAL and WOOD; wholesale and retail dealer 628 and 630 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts., San Francisco. Telephone East 12

LEGAL NOTICES

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

WHY REALTY SHOULD NOT BE MORTGAGED

In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE of HARRY I. THORNTON, Deceased. } Department No. 9, Probate. No. 15,715.

Upon reading and filing the verified petition of Bessie Thornton, praying that the executrix of the estate of Harry I Thornton, deceased, be authorized, empowered and directed to execute a note and to secure the payment of such note, to mortgage the real estate belonging to said estate, which is described as follows, to-wit:

All that certain tract of land situated in the County of Contra Costa, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at an ash tree 12 inches in diameter, marked S X S with two notches on the east and west sides from which a sycamore tree 20 inches in diameter bears north 9 degrees east 81 links distant; this corner is about 60 chains by a direct line down San Pablo Creek from the northeast corner of the McCoun Place; the said ash tree stands in the middle of a gulch on the west side of San Pablo Creek; thence west 147.88 chains to a stake forming the southwest corner hereof; thence north 100 chains (by true meridian) to the northwest corner hereof; thence east 65.88 chains to San Pablo Creek at an elder tree 16 inches in diameter in the bed of the Creek; marked S X S with two notches on the south and west sides the northeast corner; thence up center of creek with its meanderings to point of beginning; containing 1000 acres of land and no more; the said tract being a portion of the Sobrante, situate in Contra Costa County and on the west side of San Pablo Creek; in the Cruizita Valley:

All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Fresno, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

According to the official plats and system of surveys of the Government of the United States; in township 13 south range 19 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, of section 34 the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter, and the south half of the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter, containing 60 acres of land, more or less, and also all water, water rights and privileges in anywise appurtenant or belonging to said land or any part thereof:

The southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 5 in township 14 south of range 19 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Lots 7 and fractional southwest quarter of southeast quarter of section 27; lot 1 and south half of northwest quarter and west half of northeast quarter of section 34, in township 12 south of range 19 east of Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, and containing 255.05 acres, more or less, as per survey:

Lot numbered 2 of northwest quarter of section 34 in township 12 south of range 19 east of Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, containing 35.71 acres of land, according to the United States Government survey:

All those pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Kings, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a point on the north or west bank of Kings River where the north line of section 1, township 17 south range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, intersects said bank; running thence due west along said north line of said section 4055 feet more or less, to the northwest corner of said section, thence due south along west line of said section 1870 feet and 5 inches, more or less, to a point on the north bank of Cole Slough and thence along the north bank of Cole Slough and the north bank of Kings River following the meanderings thereon, to the point of beginning; the same being all of said section 1, lying north of Kings River and Cole Slough, and containing 87 acres, more or less:

Beginning at a point on the north bank of Cole Slough, where the westerly line of said section 1, township 17 south range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, intersects said bank, and running thence due north 1092 feet and 5 inches to a point; thence due west 1320 feet to a point; thence due south 582 feet to a point on the north bank of said Cole Slough; thence along the north bank of said Cole Slough following the meanderings thereof, to the point of beginning; containing 22.6 acres of land, and being a portion of the northeast quarter of section 2, township 17 south, range 22 east, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian:

Those certain parcels of land situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, more particularly described as follows, to-wit:

One undivided third part of that certain lot situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, particularly described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the intersection of the southeasterly line of Market street with the northerly line of Seventeenth street; thence easterly along the northerly line of Seventeenth street 109 feet 8 inches; thence at right angles northerly 93 feet 9 inches to the southeasterly line of Market street; thence southwesterly along said line of Market street 144 feet 3 ½ inches to the point of beginning; being a part of Mission Block No. 115 as delineated on the official map of the City and County of San Francisco;

All that certain lot or parcel of land situate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, particularly described as follows, to wit:

Commencing at a point on the east line of Castro street 180 feet south from the southerly line of Sixteenth street; thence south along the east line of Castro street 25 feet; thence at right angles east 94 feet 4½ inches; thence northeast 46 feet 2¾ inches; thence west 123 feet 7½ inches to the point of beginning:

IT IS ORDERED, that all persons interested in said Estate appear before the above-entitled Court on the 24th day of July, 1899, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., of that day, at the Court room of said Court, Department No. 9 thereof, at the New City Hall in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, then and there to show cause, if any they can, why the said real estate or some part thereof, should not be mortgaged for the amount mentioned in said petition, to-wit: Twelve thousand six hundred and forty-three and 54-100 ($12,643.54) Dollars, or such lesser amount as to the Court shall seem meet, as is more fully set forth in said petition, reference to which is hereby made for further particulars.

Dated June 21, 1899.

J. V. COFFEY,
Judge of the Superior Court.

Section 1578 C. C. P.

Endorsed.
Filed June 21, 1899.
WM. A. DEANE, Clerk.
By V. F. NORTHROP, Deputy Clerk.

TOWN TALK prints Briefs and Transcripts

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. 2

CHRISTINA JACOBY, Plaintiff vs. HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant } Action brought in the Superior Court City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff

The People of the State of California send Greeting to:

HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therin within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of Plaintiff since the 11th day of December A. D. 1897, and for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of defendant's willful neglect of said Plaintiff for more than one year last past; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Christina Penders, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

(SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT) Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

Department No. 2.

ANNA DE LAWCZYNSKI, Plaintiff vs. THEOPHILE F. DE LAWCZYNSKI, Defendant } Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA SEND GREETING TO:

Theophile F. de Lawczynski, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful neglect of plaintiff for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of Defendant's willful desertion of said Plaintiff since the 15th day of March, 1898; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Anna Fabry, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

(SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT) Wm A Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of JOHN O'BRIEN, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, John A. Drinkhouse, administrator of the Estate of JOHN O'BRIEN deceased, to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice to the said John A. Drinkhouse, administrator as aforesaid, at his offices, No. 402 Montgomery Street, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being his place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the said City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOHN A. DRINKHOUSE,
Administrator of the estate of
John O'Brien Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, June 24, 1899.

A. RUEF, Attorney for Administrator,
402 Montgomery Street.

Santa Fe Route

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St., Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway.
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street

Lake Tahoe

The Most Picturesque Mountain Lake on the Continent

Its Attractive Resorts

Tahoe City	Tallac
McKinney's	Lakeside House
Rubicon Park	Glenbrook
Emerald Bay	Deer Park Inn

Glen Alpine Springs

Afford fine hotels, home comforts and all modern conveniences at reasonable rates.

Endless opportunity for outdoor recreation, such as boating, bathing, steamer excursions around the lake, mountain climbing, sight seeing, hunting and fishing

The atmosphere is pure, dry and health giving. Absolutely no malaria and no insect pests. Nights cool and delightful. Holders of Ogden Route tickets with sufficient limit may be granted a stop-over at Truckee to visit the lake. Side trip including trip around the lake, $6.00.

ALL AGENTS OF THE

Southern Pacific Company

are supplied with handsomely illustrated folders for free distribution, giving full and complete information. Ask or send for one.

S. A. WHITE H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W. H. PORTER
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 SAN FRANCISCO

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.
DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF
PAPER
Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty
401-403 Sansome St.
SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence

Livery and Sale Stables

423 Post Street,

W. E. BRIDGE, Proprietor
Telephone No. 1323 San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY
Office, 1004 Market Street
TELEPHONE, SOUTH—420

TELEPHONE MAIN 240
George D. Graham
MANUFACTURER OF
Printing and Lithographic INKS
Printers' Rollers and Composition
Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials
529 COMMERCIAL ST.
Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.
Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.
609 Sacramento St.,
San Francisco, Cal.

W. SCHEPPLER
DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer of
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
Schillinger's Patent Sidewalk and Gardenwalk a specialty
Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

UNITED STATES BREWERY
311-313 FULTON STREET
CELEBRATED Steam Beer
ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS
EDWIN E. PARKER BENJ. L. TARBOX
The Reception
206 SUTTER ST., San Francisco.
Private Rooms for Ladies Music Room at
Oysters in Every Style. Disposal of Patrons
TELEPHONE MAIN 1231.

MAISON TORTONI
S. CONSTANTINI PROPRIETOR
French Rotisserie
Private Dining Rooms, Banquet Hall. 111 O'Farrell St.

A No. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton
JAS. P. DUNNE & CO. . . .
No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL . . .
Fourth and Market Sts.
Overcoats and Valises Checked Free
TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR
THE MANHATTAN . . .
25 Geary Street, S. F.
Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5611

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

Summer Resorts

Highland Springs

THE GREAT SANITARIUM OF THE WEST

* * *

Open every day in the year. New hotel elegantly furnished, Table unsurpassed. Lighted by electricity. Thousands cured by its waters. Finest swimming tank, bowling alley and dancing hall in Lake County, together with complete livery stable, gentle saddle-horses and ponies.

Over Thirty Kinds of Mineral Springs

Physician in attendance; superb climate; beautiful mountain scenery; trout, deer and small game plentiful; magnificent drives; baths in variety; lawn tennis and croquet.

Reached by the shortest stage route into Lake County. Round trip fare from San Francisco, via Hopland, $8; via Calistoga, $9.

Hotel and cottage rates, $10 to $14 per week.

Take the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad to Hopland or Southern Pacific Railroad to Calistoga.

For further information, address J. CRAIG, Highland Springs, Lake County, Cal., or see L. D. CRAIG, at 316 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

Highland Springs Mineral Waters on sale at the Oakland Pioneer Soda Water Company s, Thirteenth and Webster streets, Oakland, and by Ahrens, Pein & Bullwinkle, 620 Post street, San Francisco.

BLUE LAKES HOTEL

* * *

Conducted in a quiet home-like manner. The best of tables, fine fishing and hunting. Inclosure of 25x60 feet in shallow water for women and children. Rates $10 to $12 per week in hotel or cottages according to location. Ample accommodations. Round trip, good for six months, $9.50, via S.F and N. P. to Ukiah, thence by stage from Palace Hotel.

Address J. WILSON, Bertha P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

LAUREL DELL . . .

* * *

Increased facilities for comfort and pleasure. New dining room, 32x170 feet, overlooking lake. Driving, boating, bathing, fishing, bowling, etc. Lighted by gas.

H. WAMBOLD, Bertha P. O., Lake Co.

ANDERSON SPRINGS . . .

* * * Lake County

Natural Steam, Hot Sulphur and Iron Baths. Rates, $8 to $14 a week; telephone. Round trip, $8. Write for particulars.

J. ANDERSON, Proprietor,

Anderson Springs, Middletown P. O.

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging

Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room, telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5.50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

GLENBROOK . . .

Lake County, California

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish, If you want to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation, If you want pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an exhilarating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O. W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

HOTEL EL PASO DE ROBLES

The California Missions were founded in the healthiest part of the State. San Miguel Mission was located in the beautiful Salinas Valley, not far from Paso Robles Hot Springs and Hotel. The climate is dry, warm and invigorating. Hot, Mineral, Mud and Sulphur Springs bubble up in abundance to heal the sick—to keep the hale and hearty always so.

OTTO E. NEVER, PASO ROBLES, CAL. CITY OFFICE, 636 MARKET ST.

...Cypress Lawn...

FRUIT FARM; PLEASANT HOME good table; mountain water; free rides terms reasonable.

MRS. T. H. EPLEY, Napa, Cal

Howard Springs . . .

Lake County, (Putah P. O.)

* *

Hot and cold mineral springs; hot steam and plunge baths of great healing power—will cure rheumatism, nervous diseases kidney troubles, etc. Terms $10 and $12 per week. Special rates to families. Postoffice and telephone. Round trip tickets $10 at Southern Pacific office.

Address MRS. R. J. BEEBY.

Bonanza Springs . . .

Lake County, Cal.

* *

A NATURAL camping ground; five different mineral springs. We cater to campers only, and invite all who want good water pure air, fishing and hunting, to come. Hot and cold mineral baths. Cottages neatly furnished to rent from $1.50 per week. Provisions, hay, grain etc., can be purchased on the grounds. Teams meet stage at Seiglers.

Address R. F. DOCKERY, Bonanza Spgs., Putah P. O., Lake Co.

Parker Vineyard Summer Resort

Situated in the most pleasant spot of Cloverdale the Eden of Sonoma County.

Natural attractions without limit, pleasant walks through canyons, fishing, hunting, etc. Plenty of fresh vegetables, fruits, butter, milk and eggs.

Large, new dining-room, shade and all comforts. Rates, $7.00 per week, children under twelve, $3.50. Free conveyance to and from all trains, when notified.

J. D. WINTER, Prop., Cloverdale, Cal.

Agua Caliente Springs Hotel, SONOMA VALLEY

* *

Two hours from San Francisco, via Tiburon Ferry. Warm mineral swimming and tub baths. Water, gas, electric bells. Rates, $10 to 12 per week, $2 per day.

Address AGUA CALIENTE SPRINGS,

Agua Caliente, Sonoma Co., Cal

Hotel Benvenue and Cottages

LAKEPORT, CALA.

Situated on the shore of Clear Lake. Special facilities for families and children; home cooking, boating bathing, billiards and shuffle board, hunting and fishing. Pavilion on the lake, containing bowling alley and large dance hall for use of guests only. Acetylene gas used.

FRANK & A. M. SCALES, Proprietors.

FULTON
LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY
246 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.
Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons; Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 561c

TELEPHONE MAIN 400
MOISE KLINKNER CO.
RED RUBBER STAMPS, STENCILS
BOX & BURNING BRANDS
MEDALS, BADGES, CHECKS, DIES.
320 SANSOME ST. SAN FRANCISCO.
MOISE'S EASY SHINE. MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

"TOWN TALK"
Moise's
ARTISTIC
RAISED LETTER
SIGNS

To Chicago in 3½ Days
To New York in 4½ Days
VIA
Chicago Union Pacific
AND
Northwestern Line
Through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Buffet-Library Cars with Barber daily . . .
All Meals Served a la Carte in Dining Cars
For full information address
R. R. Ritchie, General Agent
PACIFIC COAST
No. 2 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco
PALACE HOTEL

Recreation Park
Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets
BASE-BALL
EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY
Oakland vs. San Francisco
July 22d and 23d

"PIONEER LIMITED"
BETWEEN
St. Paul and Chicago
CHICAGO MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY
Finest and most complete train on Earth
C. L. CANFIELD, General Agent,
636 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

San Francisco Sanitarium
Telephone Main 1240
MENTAL AND NERVOUS DISEASES A SPECIALTY
LOCATION, Reasonable Terms to Physicians
Former residence of Peter Donohue, Esq.
Cor. Second and Bryant and Stanley Place, Mrs. Reeves Atkinson
SAN FRANCISCO MATRON

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO, SHELTERED FROM OCEAN WINDS AND FOGS. VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE; EASY TERMS. AMERICAN LAND AND TRUST CO., 132 MARKET STREET, S. F.

LARKSPUR

Is destined to be the metropolis of Marin County and is San Francisco's most popular suburb. It is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mount Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially, Eminent physicians pronounce it a great sanitarium.

A Great Sanitarium
Many attractions are offered—such as sea bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks snd drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations; for, Larkspur is building up more rapidly than any other town on the N. P. C. R. R. Large esidences and cottages for sale on installment payments. Do not pay rent when the same money will purchase a beautiful home. Cottages for rent; property exchanged.
AMERICAN LAND and TRUST CO.
132 MARKET STREET

GERMEA

THE

KING

OF

BREAKFAST

FOODS

Mont Rouge Vineyard

Livermore Valley California

CHAUCHÉ & BON, PROPRIETORS

Office and Depot, 17 First St.

Telephone Main 1514 SAN FRANCISCO.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .

Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,

Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States

Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,

San Francisco.

Prices Hammered 25 to 50 per cent. DOWN SAVED

CLEARANCE SALE

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 MARKET STREET, S. F.

'Phone, Main 1659

Town Talk Prints Menus

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY

This Paper not to be taken from the Library.

PACIFIC TOWN TALK

LITERATURE · SOCIETY · MUSIC · STAGE · POLITICS

San Francisco, July 29, 1899 Vol. 7—No. 361 Price, 10 Cents

WATER——LIGHT

Water works and electric light plants for country clubs and residences Contracts taken for complete installations, and all work fully guaranteed. Only the best class of work solicited. No steam, heat, or danger.

HERCULES GAS ENGINE WORKS, [Inc.]

305 Market St., S. F.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teaches { Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS: 3:30 TO 4:30

You should ride a

STEARNS

Cushion Frame Bicycle

Safe Deposit Vaults

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

N. W. corner of Bush and Sansome Streets.

STORES Trunks for one dollar a month.

RENTS Safes for $5 a year, furnishing the most perfect security for valuables of all descriptions.

Office hours, 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS

AT HOME

Call and see

The Thermal Bath Cabinet

Baldwin Pharmacy

119-121 Ellis Street

Mme. De Pasquali

Prima Donna Soprano

An American Beauty whose Brilliant Future is Predicted to Rival that of Melba

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,187,617.90
Capital actually paid up in cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1899	27,656,513 03

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier, William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, July 1, 1899	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital	1,000,000
Reserve Fund	205,215
Contingent Fund	442,763

E. B POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER, ROBERT WATT, THOMAS MAGEE, DANIEL E. MARTIN, GEORGE C. BOARDMAN, W. C. B. DE FREMERY, ALBERT MILLER, GEO. TASHEIRA, E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

Mutual Savings Bank of San Francisco

33 POST STREET, below Kearny

MECHANICS INSTITUTE BLDG

Guaranteed Capital - - $1,000,000 — Paid-up Capital - - $300,000

JAMES D. PHELAN, President — S. G. MURPHY, Vice President
GEO. A. STORY, Cashier — JOHN A. HOOPER, Vice-President
C. B. HOBSON, Assistant Cashier

Directors—James D. Phelan, L. P. Drexler, John A. Hooper, C. G Hooker, James Moffitt, S. G. Murphy, Frank J. Sullivan, Robert McElroy and Joseph D. Grant.

Interest paid on Deposits. Loans on approved securities

Deposits may be sent by postal order, Wells, Fargo & Co., or Exchange on City Banks. When opening accounts send signature.

The S. S. Australia

Sails for Honolulu Wednsday, Aug. 23 at 2 p. m.

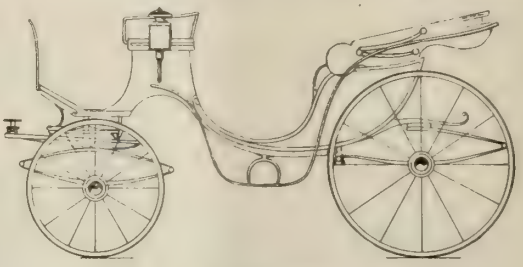
The S. S. MOANA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, Aug 9, at 10 p.m.

Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.

FREIGHT OFFICE—327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855.

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A. N. Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S. Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart. H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.

You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, July 29, 1899

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL SAN FRANCISCO

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

REVEREND WALTER E. BENTLEY, secretary of the Actors' Church Alliance, thinks it would be well if women of the churches throughout the land were appointed to visit actresses and welcome them to their homes and social gatherings. In other words he would like to see the good women of church circles doing missionary work among the mummers, diverting them from the gayeties and frivolities that lead to temptation, encouraging them to cultivate a taste for the refinement and charm of home circles and thereby dissuade them from indulgence in the follies that are supposed to be so alluring to women of the stage. That sort of missionary work would probably be very effective if the actresses would accept the invitations but it is scarcely probable that they would. Those actresses who are women of culture and refinement would not be likely to encourage attention of the kind that would imply the belief that they were in need of rescue from moral destruction. To be made the object of such courtesies as the Reverend Mr. Bentley suggests might be resented by women who feel that they are as well equipped for intercourse with the world as the average representative of their sex. Moreover if the Reverend Mr. Bentley's plan were adopted and the invitations were accepted would it not be very likely that the little missionary circles would be resolved into private entertainments at which the actresses would be expected to perform for the delectation of the guests? Then again is it likely that the good church women would condescend to invite to their homes those actresses that are most in need of rescue? There are actresses, of course, who have a lofty contempt for the restrictions of the moral code and in whose behalf church influences might be exercised to good advantage but the average wife and mother would hesitate long enough to enable the company to finish its engagement and get to the next town before issuing the invitation that might bring the frisky soubrette in contact with son or husband. These are minor details that the Reverend Mr. Bentley probably overlooked but they are of considerable importance.

LEOPOLD COHEN, superintendent of the Christian mission among the Jews in New York, has petitioned to have "Ivanhoe" and "The Merchant of Venice" removed from the list of supplementary reading matter for schools. He thinks the characters of Shylock and Isaac of York tend to give false and degrading ideas of his co-religionists. It is hardly probable that his request will be complied with. Books written with the deliberate design of ridiculing any religious belief neither have nor should have any place in school libraries but once permit this dictation merely because an offensive caricature incidentally happens to be represented as Jew, Quaker or agnostic and there is hardly a book in the world's literature which could not be found objectionable. A big row was raised in our own school department a few years ago because of the introduction of a text book in history which contained deliberate distortion of facts tending to cast discredit on the Catholic church. That sort of thing of course is decidedly objectionable but fake history is one thing and standard fiction another. There is probably no work within the wide range of literature more offensive to the dignitaries of the Catholic church than "The Wandering Jew," yet it has a place in school libraries where it is read by students capable of appreciating its merits. The Jews are probably less sensitive about such matters than the people of any other religion despite their steadfastness in their faith. "The Merchant of Venice" was intended as a deliberate insult to the Jews and it surely does hold the Hebrew money lender up to scorn but the play never fails to draw copiously from the Jewish population.

THAT the æsthetic and fashionable game of golf is not, to use a sporting term, "all that it is cracked up to be" by its languid exponents and votaries has been made evident by the circumstance of an American winning the championship in a contest in which there were many imported competitors. Golf is a comparative athletic novelty in this country and there is probably not a single American who has been addicted to the pastime since childhood. If it were as subtle a game as it has been represented to be a home bred champion would not be due for at least five years. An athletic game whose intricacies can be mastered within a few years does not call for either great skill or remarkable mental powers. Experts in such games as tennis, handball and baseball are never of mushroom growth. Ordinary proficiency can be acquired by years of practice but the expert that plays in championship form mastered the rudiments in childhood. There is a knack involved in nearly every athletic game which the boy acquires easily but which is always Greek to the man. Golf is a pastime that serves no other purpose than that of encouraging people of sedentary habits to temporarily abandon their chairs and take to the fields where they can enjoy fresh air and a walk. It appeals to the aged and infirm but not to the sturdy young athlete unless he sees in it an opportunity to enjoy a tête-à-tête with a charming woman. For of course golf has its advantages for those who are eager for an excuse to enjoy seclusion. It is of course a healthful diversion and so is croquet, and among other things it encourages the sale of golf stockings and the employment of small boys. It is therefore not entirely devoid of merit.

POOR McKINLEY! What a sorry spectacle he is making of himself and all on account of his environment. He was the creature of corrupt influences in Washington before his election to the presidency and those same influences secured for him the nomination from the republican national convention and have since shaped the policy of his administration. The selection of Elihu Root, the New York corporation lawyer, to succeed the despicable Alger as secretary of war is another instance of the president's complete subservience to the predatory rich. Root goes into the war department with a reputation a trifle worse than that with which Mr. Alger made his exit. He has been prostituting his magnificent talents at the New York bar for years, his specialty being the distortion of law in the interest of corporations that were willing to pay for the privilege of evading responsibilities imposed in the interest of good government. Instead of having only one secretary of war to apologize for, McKinley will now have two and he cannot offer as an excuse that good men were hard to find. There are men eminently fitted for the position both by education and experience who were overlooked while Root had nothing to commend him beyond his legal talents and his allegiance to trusts. He is wanted in the cabinet not because he is able to render any assistance to the war department but to lend his subtle aid to the solution of difficult problems in statecraft. The delicate touch of his fine Italian hand will frequently be felt during the remainder of McKinley's term.

THIS IS THE WAY the New York Sun takes a fling at our theatre-goers: "San Francisco boasts of uncommon independence in theatrical judgment. Nevertheless Blanche Bates, who acted two seasons in that city without creating much ado, now returns to play a starring engagement simply because in the meantime she has engaged New York attention." The Sun is of course in error. Blanche Bates' talents have always been recognized by San Francisco theatre-goers. She is Californian actress and is only one of many Californian contributions to the dramatic profession. That she was appreciated at home was evident from the fact that she played here almost continuously for several years She was not starred because she played under the management of a man who sought to emulate in a measure the example of Augustin Daly. Blanche Bates was to the Frawley company what Ada Rehan was to Daly's. San Franciscan theatre-goers were not surprised over her success in New York but they were pleased to have their judgment confirmed as it has frequently been before. But her New York triumph was in the nature of an advertisement which her manager has shrewdly taken advantage of by heralding her as the star of his new combination. The theatre-goers of San Francisco have long since learned that the judgment of New York in matters theatrical is not sound. A success in New York is quite often a failure in San Francisco and hence it is that we are sometimes called "jay" by the Steve Brodie stars of the metropolis. We possess the egotism to prompt the self-flattery that we can discriminate between the counterfeit and the genuine article and even the matinee idol of the Rialto who comes hither for the first time expecting to be received with open arms may find himself in a congealed atmosphere.

MUNSEY'S for July has some vinegarish remarks upon the lack of literary criticism in this land of the free. "This country, which can boast of the greatest reading population in the world, does not, at the present, support a single high class weekly, devoted exclusively to literature, whereas the kingdom of Great Britain supports a dozen or more, including two or three of worldwide influence." We have nothing that can compare in any way to the London Athenæum or Saturday Review." Munsey goes on to account for this by saying it is probably owing to the circumstance that we have not one great literary critic in the country. "And it is owing to this dearth of great critics—though nearly every publication boasts of its literary editor—that what ought to be criticism has degenerated into insincere praise of both the just and the unjust, varied with commonplaces about books and writers prepared in a style which reminds us of the local items in a village newspaper." The dearth of great critics which Munsey deplores is probably owing to the fact that there is no office for them to fill. In these days of universal education, no man's ipse dixit is looked upon as the first commandment. There was a time, when "literature" was first added to the school curriculum, the course in "literature" consisted of memorizing a brief biographical account of various authors, plentifully besprinkled with the dates of birth, graduation, visits to foreign countries and other events of like importance, the names of books and a "characterization," which latter was the biographer's opinion of the style and finish of the author's writings, or in lieu of that the teacher's view. In those days critics flourished, but now every man decides for himself and the oracle is dumb because no one heeds him. "It is difficult to think of anything more nauseating than personal allusions to authors, framed after the style of those employed to celebrate the wholesome geniality of the hotel clerk, or the scholarly instincts of the theatrical doorkeeper, who, wise in his generation! never fails to 'recognize the press'!" The authors are not of this opinion, however; with them, as with the theatrical profession, it is "Speak well of my love, speak ill of my love, but aye be speaking of him." The various clipping bureaus of this country have reported a clientele of fifty thousand which, we may be sure has its due proportion of the inky fraternity. Tennyson, who is supposed to have been the personification of modest humility, upon being passed in the road without attention, growled "They don't even know who I am," and Tolstoi, with his theatrical assumption of the peasant costume and surroundings, never misses an opportunity to grant interviews and give opinions upon any and all questions, knowing full well that they are designed for publication, and no doubt taking good care to have himself furnished with copies. Joaquin Miller is another modest violet and yet who can forget the edition de luxe of his poems issued some years ago and plentifully embellished with illustrations of Joaquin Miller under every possibly conceivable condition? There is a great deal of nonsense published, of course, but Clement K. Shorter, who is one of these very world-famed critics, is of the opinion that personal paragraphs do more for the sale of books and the popularity of authors than do the learned and long drawn-out reviews and criticisms. Munsey is certainly right in its scathing remarks upon the "Authors at Home," and "How Great Authors Live and Work," a subject with which we have been persecuted of late years. No one can possibly care whether an author writes at a carved desk of ancient mahogany or on the corner of a kitchen table or whether he uses the latest invention in fountain pens inlaid with pearls and diamonds, or common steel pens at a nickel a dozen, nor whether his wife adores pugs above poodles or devotes her affection to cats. The reading public is interested in knowing what is being written or published; the foundation, in fact, of an author's works and other items concerning his writings. It cares nothing whatever for photographic views of his back yard, or his domestic arrangements and dinner hour. More personal dignity in regard to furnishing such information or allowing the publication to go unchallenged would be creditable to writers in general.

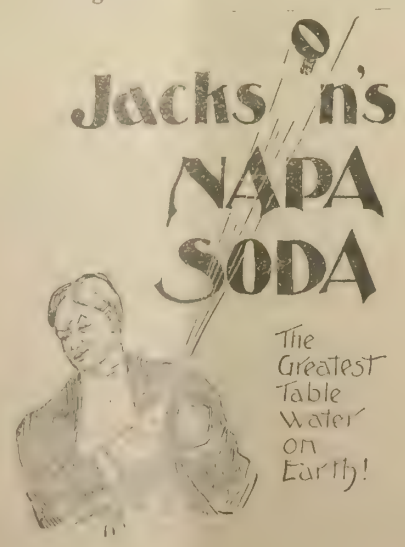
WE HAVE OFTEN wondered why certain orthodox church people objected to Sunday amusements. It was difficult for us to understand how the Sabbath could be desecrated by innocent recreation which was beneficial to both mind and body, and we have been inclined to doubt the sincerity of these good Christians who were in the habit of throwing up their hands in holy horror when they heard of people enjoying a boat-ride, or a ball-game on Sunday. While we felt that all Christians should respect the Sabbath and comply with church laws which enjoined proper observance of the day, we could not believe that it was sinful to indulge in innocent and healthful recreation. We knew that some years ago it was regarded as damnable frivolity which insured the penalty of hell fire for a man to kiss his wife on Sunday, but we also knew that that inhibition had been withdrawn, and that Sunday osculation of the domestic brand had long since ceased to be a minor misdemeanor even in Connecticut. In view of the removal of that restriction we hoped that the soul-savers of the country would in the course of time cease to inveigh against some of those other pastimes that relieve monotony without leading to gross Sabbath desecration. So, when we learned a short time ago that Reverend Mr. Suter of Winchester, Mass., who is a great advocate of physical development, favored a mild game of golf on a Sunday afternoon, we felt like congratulating him upon being the avant courier of a new and enlightened movement. But now we learn that the Reverend Mr. Suter denies the impeachment. He hastens to explain that walking, driving, riding and rowing, being individual affairs, are all right, but that golf is a community matter and therefore wrong. He makes some concession in favor of athletics, but it is so small that it is hardly worth speaking about. The Reverend Mr. Suter, like many other men of the cloth who lack the courage of their convictions and who make themselves ridiculous, concedes that it is possible to remember the Sabbath and keep it holy even though you take to a row-boat for exercise and pleasure or exhibit yourself in the park behind a spanking team, but he contends that to be strictly within the laws of the church you must confine yourself to games of solitaire. It would be interesting to know upon what authority the Reverend Mr. Suter bases his argument. It is too amusing to be taken seriously. It is not surprising that there should be objection to Sunday recreation when men who are willing to advance such ideas as those of the gentleman of Winchester, Mass., are permitted to pose as theologians.



A PERSIAN PARABLE

FAIR CHANCE held fast is merit.
A certain king
Of Persia had a jewel in a ring.
He set it on the dome of Azud high:
And, when they saw it flashing in the sky,
Made proclamation to his royal troop,
That who should send an arrow through the hoop
That held the gem, should have the ring to wear.

It happened that four hundred archers were
In the king's company about the king.

A boy, at play upon the terraced roof
Of a near building, bent his bow aloof
At random, and behold the morning breeze
His little arrow caught, and bore with ease
Right thro' the circlet of the gem!
The king,
Well pleased, unto the boy assigned the ring.
Then the boy burnt his arrows and his bow.
The king, astonished, said, "Why dost thou so?
Seeing thy first shot hath had great success."
He answered, "Lest my second make that less."

B. WELWYN ASHLEY.

The Saunterer

CARD-PLAYING is on the increase in private houses. It is a habit that I think should be condemned. I have no objection to whist parties or any kind of card games for prizes, but I think it is wrong to invite people to dinner for the purpose of inveigling them into a poker game. Poker is all right at the club but it is all wrong for a host to propose the game in his own home to people who did not know that they would be expected to gamble. Yet there has been a steady increase in poker playing among the smart people of society, and the stakes are sometimes as high in the home circle as they are at the club. Women are the most enthusiastic players and they are the most unsatisfactory losers, for very often they prefer to owe than to pay. There is something repugnant in the thought of winning money from a woman even at poker, and that is one reason why it is disagreeable to be invited to engage in a game after dinner. I know a young man of good family and slender purse who lost seventy-five dollars in a game on Pacific Heights one night a few weeks ago. He had to borrow the money at the table to settle up and the next day he was obliged to overdraw his salary. He told me that he could not afford to lose that amount and that he would have kept out of the house if he had known that there was to be any gambling. A few nights later he accepted a dinner invitation and was again pressed into a poker game. He won twenty dollars but he left the house with no more money in his pocket than when he entered. A very charming young married woman owed him just the amount that he had won, and she laughingly promised to give him her note.

Jones: I understand that Brown employs a very expensive chef and lives on the fat of the land.

Smith: You're wrong; he lives off the guests that play doker at his house every night.

I am surprised that none of the dailies succeeded in following up the story of the suicide of Edith Fuller, which came up on the last steamer from Honolulu. They failed to give any information concerning the identity of the woman or of Henry N. Almy, the man who was with her on the debauch that ended in her tragic death. Yet both are well known in certain circles and Almy is a man of aristocratic connections in Philadelphia, whence he hails. His father was a wealthy rug and carpet manufacturer of the Quaker city and his grand-uncle was Admiral Almy of the United States navy. He was a member of the Rittenhouse club of Philadelphia, which is the swell organization of that city, and he has a brother who is a member of the Union club of New York. Henry Almy was the black sheep of the family, being afflicted with an inordinate thirst and a predilection for the companionship of soubrettes and paint-bedaubed damsels. He was married shortly after leaving college to a society belle of Philadelphia with whom he lived happily but a very short time. His dissipations were not conducive to domestic harmony. A divorce was the natural consequence and after that Almy accelerated his pace along the primrose path. Within a few years he spent the quarter of a million dollars which he received from his father's estate, and after that he lived off an annuity which the foresight of his parent prompted him to make provision for in his will.

About four years ago the gay Philadelphian came to this city. He came around the Horn on a sailing vessel and soon fell in with the fast set. He was introduced in club circles by Charley Stedman of Boston and, being a thorough bohemian and good fellow, he soon had many friends. But his thirst asserted itself periodically and then a protracted spree was the result.

Finally he went off to Oroville with a view to getting away from temptation and there he devoted himself to olive raising. When his friends in this city heard from him again he was going through insolvency in Oroville. Olive raising was a failure. Back to San Francisco he came and through the restaurants of the tenderloin he whirled with all the enthusiasm of a bacchanal. The companion of his orgies was the mysterious Edith who was found dead by his side in Honolulu. Her most intimate friend was Marian Nolan, the young woman with the prize figure who posed in the altogether for a world's fair statue. When Almy went to the islands it was as the agent of a patent gas burner, which, I understand, he has handled with great success. The island trip was suggested by one of the MacFarlanes with whom he was quite friendly. Almy has a son who is now in his second year at Annapolis.

"I am exploring the polar regions," said the barber giving Mr. Baldhead a shampoo.

It is not surprising to learn of the success of Mrs. Charles J. Dickman abroad. Mrs. Dickman, whose professional appellation is Madame Moré, has just returned to Paris, preparatory to a tour through the British isles. It took a long time for Mrs. Dickman to make up her mind to embrace a stage career, though her friends here were always urging such a course upon her. Her great beauty, of the natural blonde order, and her undoubted ability as an actress were added inducements for the adoption of the profession but somehow Mrs. Dickman could not make up her mind to leave private life for the glare of the footlights. With her husband—who, if he had not decided to be an artist, might have won fame as a rival of De Wolf Hopper and Francis Wilson—she took a prominent role in "Bluff King Hal" when the Stewart–O'Connell opera had its first production. Only amateurs appeared in the cast and of these no one made a greater hit than did Mrs. Dickman, though her part was by no means commensurate in importance with her talents. It was then that the manager of the Bostonians heard that glorious contralto and it was only the question of a few hours before he made a bid for its addition to his company. I understand that Mrs. Dickman more than half made up her mind to go east with the Bostonians and then, on second thoughts, she decided to remain in San Francisco and continue her concert and church-choir work. Her decision was a disappointment to her friends, who had hoped to see her a co-star with Jessie Bartlett Davis. Then, when Charlie Dickman decided to go to Paris to pursue his art studies, and his wife decided to accompany him and continue her musical studies under a foreign master, the friends of the contralto became resigned to her absence, for they knew that now their desires would some day be gratified, to see Mrs. Dickman in grand opera.

Following close by upon the announcement of the San Francisco contralto's success abroad comes the news from New York that Miss Josephine Patterson of Alameda has been appointed contralto soloist of Gilmore's military band. There is evidently luck in the name of Patterson, for Mrs. Dickman was Grace Patterson before she married the popular Bohemian club man. The Alamedan, also, has a sister Grace but the two Graces are not in any degree related to each other. Miss Josephine Patterson went east last year to study in New York and though her friends predicted great things for her future, no one breathed of such speedy good fortune coming her way. She was one among a long list of applicants for the position and she sang in a large hall before strict judges and musical critics. Such a success is really in the nature of a triumph. Miss Patterson is the second daughter of Captain Martin Patterson, of the Emperor of China's steamship service.

When love and ambition take part in a wrestling match it is usually love that wins the victory. At least so it proved in the case of Miss Marion Delanoy (Marion Eddy), Judge Delanoy's pretty and clever daughter, who was lately wedded to Dr. Ivan August Eichwaldt. The bride is an Alameda girl who has written several bright plays, to one of which—"It's Contagious," lately produced across the bay by a company of amateurs—I devoted considerable space at the time of its production. Marion Eddy, as the young playwright called herself professionally, had also won some fame as an actress and was looking forward to a starring tour that would take in an eastern circuit, when her marriage changed her plans. Love is said to laugh at locksmiths, but it must simply split its sides laughing when it comes in fighting contact with ambition.

There was a rude awakening from love's young dream in Benicia the other day. It was a case of smallpox coming in through the door and love levanting through the window. The characters in the little romance are an official of the Valley road and the daughter of a well-known passenger steamship captain. The railroad man has been an ardent suitor for the young woman's hand and it was understood that they were to be married as soon as an objectionable wife could be side-tracked. When the admission as to the existence of a wife was made, it was represented that she had long been separated from her husband and that a divorce would soon be obtained. A short time ago when the ardent suitor was visiting his lady-love he complained of being ill. When it was time for him to take his departure his condition had become so serious that a physician was summoned. The case was diagnosed as one of smallpox and the doctor declared that the consequences might be serious if the patient were removed. His fiancée was very much alarmed but she insisted that he should remain so that he could be properly nursed. The house was quarantined and the sick man was nursed and doctored most carefully, but owing to the seriousness of his condition it was deemed advisable to notify his brother who lives in Alameda, and the latter at once notified the railroad man's wife, who also lives across the bay. The dénouement was most startling, for of course, when the wife reached her husband's side, disclosures followed. They had never been separated and the wife never knew that her husband was in any way dissatisfied with his domestic lot. It was a serious predicament for a man to be in, but as he has recovered from an attack of smallpox, he has something to congratulate himself upon.

There are lots of 'A. A.' brands of whisky, but only one Jesse Moore 'A A

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco

JOHN CAFFREY, Pacific Coast Representative

There is one of the younger members of the swim, a pretty blonde who likes to consider herself up to date on the masculine question, who acknowledges herself beaten in pre-analysis of the character of one man. He is a Boston youth who has lately been initiated into society as she is seen in this part of the world. The blonde went to the theatre with the Boston man one night last week and afterwards he asked her if she felt like "taking something." Of course she thought he meant the usual bite après-theâtre and assented. When he steered her into a candy store and called for two ice cream sodas she began to fancy that her mind was wandering and that she had just been attending a matinee with a girl chum. But that was not all. As they paused by a show-case while he settled his check, he turned to his fair companion and said:

"Would you like some candy?"

"Certainly," she answered with a smile, for there is never a girl in the swim or out of it who is so far advanced as to refuse sweets when offered.

"Well, how much shall I get?"

The question was a new one to the little blonde and she had some doubts as to whether it was not propounded as a joke. Concluding that it was, she replied in what she imagined was the same spirit:

"I guess a nickel's worth will do."

And the Bostonese very gravely repeated the order to the girl behind the counter, and laid down his nickel.

A recent article of local authorship referring to the portrait of Rosa Bonheur, by the artist Anna Klumpke, mentioned the latter as also an eminent mathematician. If I am not greatly mistaken the honor belongs to her sister Dorothea, while Barbara, who is no longer Klumpke, is as distinguished in the medical fraternity. She made a specialty of the study of cancer and was the first woman admitted to practice in the Paris hospital. San Francisco has more reason to be proud of these women than of the whole snobbish army who have captured counts of no account or floated on the highest wave of Newport surf and yet how rarely are they mentioned in the home papers. We are expected to go into raptures over the bathing suits and pug dogs of millionairesses, and to wade through columns of gush over their dinners and dances to say nothing of their undergarments, but for women of worth and worthiness—well, the Klumpkes did not live on Nob hill nor go to fashionable private schools.

The friends here of Mrs. Thorne, who used to enjoy the hospitality dispensed by the lady and her husband when the latter was in charge of the Grand hotel, have been wondering whether she ever intends to return to this city. I have heard that Mrs. Thorne is in Carrollton, Illinois, the old home of the Sharons. Mrs. Thorne, it will be remembered, is a niece of the late Senator Sharon and consequently a cousin of Lady Thomas Hesketh. She went to Carrollton after her husband resigned from his position at the Grand, and he went in a different direction, I am told. Her people in Illinois were informed that Thorne had joined the army, but it is now so long since she went east that the Carrollton gossips are wondering whether the separation of husband and wife is to be a permanent affair. Mrs. Thorne was always fond of gayety and in California she used to make the round of the resorts in summer, becoming well known for her fine appearance and array of gowns. She still has a predilection for social pleasures, I am informed, and part of last winter she spent in Chicago where rumors wafted homeward that she was of the gayest in the city's whirl. A story is told me that some time ago a large function was given in Carrollton and among those invited was Mrs. Thorne. At the time the affair came off Mrs. Thorne was in the agonies of an attack of measles, nevertheless she could not bear to forego the delight of attending the reception. Therefore, though her face was of the boiled owl appearance that is the usual accompaniment of measles, she went to the function. Curious to state, no evil effects followed the invalid's rash exposure to cold and draughts.

The trolley party which has so long been a feature of the social program of eastern cities has at last reached San Francisco and promises to become as popular a form of amusement here as it is there. Everybody down town last Saturday night saw the moonlight trolley party, eighteen cars being filled and every man and woman was out for a good time. The affair was under the auspices of the Independent Order of Foresters and James S. Hurry, the popular real estate man and secretary of Court Golden Era, had charge of a front car. This was beautifully decorated with flowers and bunting and was supplied with an abundance of fireworks and colored lights for the entertainment of Mr. Hurry's guests. Among the number in this particular car were Dr. and Mrs. Mercer, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Conrad, Mr. and Mrs. H. Huffschmidt, Dr. Worchorst, Ex-Assemblyman Louis Walmser the German politician, and Carl Erb, the well known tenor. As the streets were crowded all along the route, the last three gentlemen thought it a fitting time to boom Mr. Hurry, who aspires to political honors, so during a blockade at one of the corners the people became quite enthused after hearing his name repeated so often in the usual terms, "Three cheers for J. S. Hurry!" and "What's the matter with Hurry?" "He is all right!" etc. After Mr. Hurry had made a neat speech from the platform of his car the procession moved on.. Before reaching the Cliff the proceedings were enlivened by Mr. Huffschmidt's reciting "Hoch der Kaiser," and Mr. Erb's singing "I'm getting a big boy now." After a dance in the pavilion the party returned to town about midnight. It is likely that more than one of these affairs will enliven the social mill during the midsummer months.

Life at the Sea Beach hotel in Santa Cruz was very dull this summer until the arrival of Miss Lorena Barbier with a chaperon and a maid. Miss Barbier, it will be remembered, is the handsome young woman who inherited a fortune from her sister and subsequently had a fight over it with her brother-in-law, Harry Emeric. Miss Barbier is arrayed in much purple and fine linen at Santa Cruz and she is dazzling the natives with a plethora of gems that scintillate from every finger. That sort of thing always makes a hit at Santa Cruz and Miss Barbier is invited everywhere. I understand that she caught the eye of Baron

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, direct importer of fine millinery goods. Exclusive styles.

Engraved . . . ✱
Wedding Announcements
and Invitations . . . ✱

ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

Von Hiller as soon as she began to sparkle at the Sea Beach and that he showered his attentions on her with, however, a barren result, for Miss Barbier has no fondness for the representatives of an effete nobility. Next in point of interest to the lady with the gems and gaudy costumes is her maid, who has made a great hit with half a dozen youths at the hotel.

Another interesting character at the Sea Beach is young Bulkeley, the love-stricken youth of good family who was intercepted a couple of weeks ago in the act of eloping with a pretty Jewess who works in a factory. The notoriety which Bulkeley achieved through the affair has served to make him a hero at the seashore where the male biped is a rara avis. That he is an eccentric youth and that his disjointed love affair has not affected his appetite was made evident the other night by an incident that took place in the Sea Beach dining-room. Bulkeley made a wager with another young fellow which involved the capacity of their respective stomachs. They agreed to eat everything on the bill of fare and that if either eschewed one dish in a single course, he would have to take a double dose in the next course. Bulkeley won in a walk. The bill of fare was a long one but he went through the barrier at the soup and went under the wire at the black coffee. His opponent halted at the roast. The guests at the hotel enjoyed the swine contest very much.

Horatio Alger, well known to the last generation as a writer of boys' stories, died in Natick, Mass., on the eighteenth instant. Alger, Oliver Optic and Captain Mayne Reid were the popular writers of juveniles in the days when a special literature for childhood was in its infancy and their books were literally devoured by their clientele. A school library in those days consisted of a set of the Abbott histories, the "Rollo" books, Hans Anderson, Dickens' "Little Folks," a few works on natural history, and Optic, Kingston, Alger, Reid and Elijah Kellogg. There was nothing else to choose from. My recollection is that Reid was the favorite as he gave much more of adventure than the others. I remember one boy's criticism on Optic whose books the late Louise May Alcott called "optical delusions":

"I had to take that because there wasn't anything else in, but the fellows only do one thing in each book. They are always fighting with their teachers and they always come out ahead, but that ain't the way it works for us."

I wonder if there is any improvement in the country school libraries, which used to be made up of Bancroft, "Native Races of the Pacific Coast", twenty-seven volumes if I am not mistaken, and a lot of shop-worn and unsalable trash the refuse of some bookstore in the county town. The Bancrofts sent their agents through the country and succeeded in having the trustees of nearly every district in the state contract for their complete history. It was an outrage and clearly illegal, and in many cases the library fund was garnished for years ahead. One little district in Tulare county where there were but seven regular attendants at school, only two of whom could speak English, was outfitted with "Native Races," a colored chart for teaching ancient history—which might have had some value to a metropolitan high school or a Bible class—and a dissected map of the United States, all worse than useless, while half a dozen bright colored picture books which could have been furnished for twenty-five cents, all that could have been made useful, were unobtainable for lack of funds.

A story of a wedding that was nearly interrupted has lately come my way. The bride lived in San Jose and the bridegroom was a resident of this city. They will probably take pleasure in reading the story, which I do not believe has ever been in print. Upon the morning preceding his marriage the expectant bridegroom took the train for San Jose. Absorbed in pleasing imagination of the delights in store, the train reached Redwood city before he remembered that he had forgotten to check his trunk and the receptacle of his wedding garments at that moment reposed in the baggage room at San Francisco where the transfer man had deposited it. The young man hastily jumped from the train and rushed to the telephone office at Redwood. Alas! it was locked and nobody in sight, inquiry revealing the fact that the telephone employes were all off on a picnic. It was a holiday and when he sought the telegraph office upon the same errand he found the same condition of affairs prevailing. All was quiet in Redwood city. His next thought was to take the train north, but what was his disgust to find none returning to San Francisco until half-past two in the afternoon. So, for about four hours and a half he tried to murder time in the San Mateo county town, while his thoughts hovered about the garden city and he pictured to himself the dismay of the bride's brother when train after train should come in with the expected one not on board. His nerves were so shaken that he did not even think how easily a telephone message to the brother would explain everything. And there was the wedding rehearsal to come off that evening!

When the train finally hove in sight and he was speeding on his way back to the city he almost regretted the fact that he was to be married. All the pleasing imaginative thoughts had been banished by the intruding worries of the forgotten luggage. Then when he reached town, the luggage room was closed and locked and the hangers-on told him it would not be opened until five o'clock. He was mad enough to kill somebody when he finally met a transfer man who agreed to fix the baggage question for him and see that his marriage togs reached the San Jose hotel in safety. But when at last he stepped off the train at San Jose late that evening, I believe he found no one to meet him and he had to go up alone to his hotel and send a message to the girl's house. It seems she was nearly insane at the non-arrival of the bridegroom-elect, for he was known to be a most punctual man and she could not imagine what had happened.

An excellent remedy for insomnia will be found in the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky taken at bed-time. Your druggist has it.

Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST
TEL. MAIN 5[illegible]

3253 FILLMORE ST.
TEL. WEST 15[illegible]

The Tom Watsons are still doing Europe and there is no likelihood of their returning home before next year. The genial broker wrote to a friend in this city a week ago. The letter was dated July second at Maxhof, Marienbad, where they were staying a few days. He stated that they intended to go up the Rhine to Ostend and thence to Dover after which they will tour the south of England by "drag."

"After the south of England," he continued, "we have as yet no plans but if business runs as I hope it will and we find a nice home we may settle down to English country life, though we will return to San Francisco some time next year but only for a few weeks." In describing the trip through Germany he wrote: "All the German towns that I have seen are delightful gardens. It would be well for America if her cities were beautified in a similar way. It would keep men away from the liquor saloons and refine the most degenerated hoodlums and chippies. Austria is not to be compared to Germany. Of the working (?) classes the men are idle loafers and 'tip' beggars and the poor women are the beasts of burden." That he was in a humorous mood when writing the letter is evident from the following: "Our good friend, the Prince of Wales, comes here next month but I wrote him that I could not possibly wait any longer for him and he cannot get away from his engagements earlier than August; so sorry, as we have not met for quite a number of years."

FROM "THE LITTLE MINISTER."

"Love, it is said, is blind, but love is not blind. It is an extra eye, which shows us what is most worthy of regard. To see the best is to see most clearly and it is the lover's privilege."

R. Barrett Fithian of Santa Barbara is now the owner of a yacht that was formerly numbered among the possessions of the Alaska Commercial company. When the craft was a Sloss property it was known as the schooner Baranoff, but I have not heard what the new owner has decided to christen her. Commodore I. Gutte bought the Baranoff but speedily parted with his purchase, at presumably an advanced figure, to Mr. Fithian. The Santa Barbaran turned the schooner over to Mr. Turner who guaranteed to fit her up into a first class pleasure boat. The tastes of southern Californians run toward nautical enjoyments and in summer may be seen nearly every resident of Santa Barbara and Los Angeles, who can afford the luxury, cruising about Catalina.

After reading the morning dailies on the subject of Bob Ingersoll's death I was puzzled to know whether the great agnostic died as he wanted to or contrary to his wishes. The Examiner represented that he was disappointed, it having always been his wish to join the innumerable caravan slowly so that he could analyze the strange sensations attending his departure hence. According to the Call his taking off was just as he always desired it should be—with his boots on and without a word of warning. The Chronicle failed to enlighten its readers on the subject. I suppose that in the years to come good Christians will refer to the death of Ingersoll as an instance of the sort of retribution that is meted out to the scoffer, while those who have the same views of religion as the famous agnostic will contend that he died as he wished and that there could be no siguificance in the manner of his demise. There is one thing certain, however, and that is that as his death was of the sudden variety it will be difficult for the ready liar of the future to convince anybody that at the last moment Ingersoll had a change of heart and appealed for the ministrations of a doctor of divinity.

"Are you on speaking terms with Mrs. Chatterbox?"
"Call it listening terms and you'll be nearer right."

And now it seems that the most objectionable features of the Blue and Gold—the personal paragraphs reflecting upon the female students of the University of California and the photograph of the basket ball team—were contributed by young ladies; another instance of the elevating and refining influence of the fair sex. To those who have not had the advantages of a college education it would suggest itself as a desirable plan, either not to adopt a costume which is in itself objectionable, or not to be photographed while wearing it. From the alacrity with which the various basket ball teams of the state pose before the camera and furnish photographs for publication and the utter lack of conventionality in the positions assumed, it is evident that the girls of the present generation have not been brought up under the daily iteration of the text so familiar to their grandmothers: "The Queen of Spain has no legs." Those good ladies were supposed to be blissfully unconscious of anything more gross than ankles and under the press of direst necessity only were they permitted to mention even limbs. The granddaughters of the basket ball team, on the contrary, so far from being troubled by any question of modesty, whether real or false, seem anxious to make as much of a display as possible.

Just the thing to take camping, a bottle of Chapin and Gore's old Reserve Bourbon.

The Laxative Liver Lozenge

PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable

PRICE 25 CENTS
CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, · 139 Powell St
W. W. STOCKER.

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison Oak and all Skin Diseases. It has been used successfully for the last twenty years and thousands will testify to its curative quality. It is a specific for Poison Oak. AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Utica Cleansing Compound and Utica Compound Paste.....

TRADE MARK TIACU

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society, 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

This compound is made of pure and unadulterated drugs
Used for Baths and Shampoo it will make the skin soft and white.

For Swollen and Painful Feet it is unrivaled.

For Poison Oak and Prickly Heat it is a sure remedy.

Suitable for cleansing anything.

SAMUEL SEYMOUR,
21 SPEAR ST., S. F. Pacific Coast Agent

A very pretty wedding was that of Miss Annie Mabel McKay and Charles C. Y. Williamson, on Tuesday evening at St. John's Presbyterian church. The Reverend George Eldridge performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of the relatives and friends of the young couple. The church was picturesquely decorated and the ceremony—which was a happy Anglo-American alliance—was performed beneath the folds of the British and American flags. The ushers—Messrs. Horan, Craig, Bernzott and La Faille—led the bridal procession, followed by the little ring-bearer, Freddie McKay, and the maid-of-honor, Miss Ruth Colby. The bridesmaids—Misses Emma and Kate McKay—were daintily gowned in white organdie over pink silk. Two little flower-girls strewed the aisle with roses and then the bride followed on the arm of her father. She wore a lovely gown of white satin and carried a bouquet of white roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Hunter as best man, and Mr. Talsk. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents and after the wedding supper had been served and congratulations received Mr. and Mrs. Williamson left for Santa Cruz, where the honeymoon will be passed. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McKay and the bridegroom is the son of Colonel R. Williamson of the Fifth Northumberland Fusiliers. Mr. Williamson expects to settle in San Francisco. The happy pair will reside at 714 Pine street when they return from their wedding tour.

Miss Hayseed: What do you do when you wish to discourage a man's attentions?

Miss Society: Oh, I give him the cold shoulder, politely.

Miss Hayseed: But supposing it is at a ball, where there are lots of people around, commenting?

Miss Society: Turn him the cold shoulder still—upon second thoughts, it might be well to have the shoulder well powdered.

There are no matinee idols in town just now, with the exception of White Whittlesey and Thomas H. Persse. Henry Miller is getting too far on in years now to pose as a matinee favorite and Henry Miller with his face clean-shaven is not half so good-looking as Henry Miller with his moustache. Timothy Daniel Frawley, too, at the other theatre is not material for the gushing schoolgirl's dreams to fatten upon. And in neither of the companies playing at the California and the Columbia is there a man who in his person combines the attributes neceesary to win adoration from susceptible femininity. Mr. Frawley has brought no one with him to take the place filled last season by the modish Honolulan, William Lewers. Guy Standing of the Miller company is a physical beauty but it is not only regular features and a fine figure that go to make the matinee idol. He must know how to make love. It is because of his original style of love-making that Frank Worthing still occupies his niche in the San Francisco girl's heart. Ernest Hastings had an immense following and White Whittlesey's matinees are largely frequented by the gay and emotional high school students. Mr. Persse ought to fill every requirement necessary for the object of a matinee audience's admiration but alas! he is married. He is the husband of Edith Mason, soprano of the same opera company in which he shines as tenor.

I find that the matinee girl nowadays is just as apt to go into ecstasies over an actress as an actor and the leading woman of a visiting theatrical company is quite as often the object of admiring attention from the feminine auditors as are the men in the organization. Blanche Bates, for instance, is idolized by a large contingent of matinee-goers while Margaret Anglin also has an enormous following. Miss Bates is beloved, perhaps, not solely for her beauty but because she is "ours." She may have been born in Australia but she was educated here and she grew up among us; therefore she is our own. She is not so good an actress as Mr. Miller's leading woman, and she lacks the delicate polish of manner and the graceful carriage that are Miss Anglin's, but Blanche Bates is so frank, so natural, that we forgive her for not having fulfilled our expectation in regard to her acting because she rings so true. This sincerity seems to be a Californian characteristic, by the way, for it is Denis O'Sullivan's chief charm, and we find it in Carrie Roma and nearly all the other now well known singers and players who originally hailed from this state.

A shower-bath was one of the features of the amusement program at the Bohemian club's midsummer jinks held at the club's camp at Meeker's grove last Saturday night. The person intending to try the shower was placed beneath it and when the string was pulled instead of the expected dash of cold water a signboard fell down bearing the legend "The drinks are on me." Then a horn was winded and all the Bohemians within hearing distance lined up to the bar and enjoyed liquid refreshments at the expense of the victim of the shower-bath. I hear that the funeral pyre of dull Care was in danger of non-conflagration this year, owing to the previousness of the leading hoosier who was to apply the match and the dilatoriness of the procession. The funeral parade was all ready to begin operations but it had to wait until a new pyre of redwood shavings was erected before the ceremonial could proceed.

On Thursday evening of last week Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Epley of Cypress Lawn, in Napa county, celebrated by the usual delightful party the fifteenth anniversary of the opening of their beautiful home to summer visitors. Gathered about the genial host and hostess was the same jolly crowd which looks forward yearly to this happy outing season in the lovely Napa valley. Under the able supervision of Miss Belle A. Goldman a most entertaining program of vocal selections was given by Miss M. Higgins, Mrs. M. L. Goodwin, Stuart Saunders and others, together with a cake walk by Miss Agnes Higgins and Miss Lauretta Archibald, Miss Irene Mervy and Miss Harriet E. Lichtenstein. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Epley, Mrs. L. Allison, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Archibald, Mrs. Keiner, Mrs. Goodwin, Mrs. Saunders, the Misses Maunder, Mervy, Lichtenstein, Higgins, Archibald, Berg, Keiner, Goldman, McCreery, Messrs. Wilson, Meagher, Pacco, Saunders, Smith, Keyes, McDermott, Rule, Lane and Cooper.

A great attraction at present for mothers is the window display of suits for small boys and their bigger brothers at J. J. O'Brien & Co's establishment, corner of Market and Jones streets. This new department which has recently been added to the O'Brien store, is under the able management of Mr. James A. Haran, who is also superintendent of the Gentlemen's Furnishing Department, and it is to his efficient and enterprising efforts that it owes its rapid advancement in popularity. Mr. Haran is not alone a capable, energetic and successful dry goods man but is also a gentleman of refined and cultivated manners with a prominent standing in literary and artistic circles.

Two of the morning dailies were not lacking in interest this week. The Examiner's excoriation of Chris Buck and his bums was a most vivid rehash of ancient history, but a revival of reminiscences is always refreshing when apropos. And the Call's publication of the paretic politician's rampant ravings was a delightful contribution to the gayety of the metropolis at this stage of the silly season. The picture that Buck drew of himself in the act of repudiating the Hearst sack was almost as good as the Examiner's cartoon of the gold-brick boss with the dollar mark optics. Chris has an acute sense of humor and he knew that when he represented himself as having refused to accept coin of the realm he would excite the risibles of his followers. Although the Examiner's biography of the erstwhile democratic leaders was not a news item it served a good purpose. It struck terror to the hearts of some of his followers who pose in the community as reputable citizens. They have been lurking in the shadow of the degraded wretch for some time, pretending that they had no love for Buckley but were opposed to the tactics of the Committee of One Hundred. They have been intent upon restoring his lost power in the hope of becoming prominent once more in the organization. There is scarcely one of them that has not at some time in his career been involved in a crooked transaction, and none of them relishes the prospect of having his record published. I therefore look for an early scattering of the soiled coterie known in political circles by the euphonious title of "Buck's Bums."

W. D. Cole of Battery "O" Third Artillery, U.S.A., a South Carolinan who enlisted in a Tennessee regiment because the captain was his school chum, has a little story to tell of an experience with a dog, which may or may not have a romantic sequel. Cole is now in the north, buying horses for government use, but on his way he related to a friend the tale of the canine. Last Friday, there was a dress parade of the Oregon men out at the Presidio and an immense crowd was in attendance. Cole was obliged to leave before the end of the review, as he had to catch the Oregon express with view to fulfilling his mission as purchasing officer. On the dummy of the car, beside him, sat a lady and as the car moved off a large and vicious dog made its appearance from some unknown quarter and made a snap at the lady's foot. Cole hastily interposed his own foot to stay the canine's attack. The lady's shoe leather was saved but the animal bit clear through the young officer's boot. Fortunately the boot was a misfit and about an inch too long for its wearer's foot, else blood would have been drawn. As it was, no harm was the result. Of course the lady was very grateful and overwhelmed her saviour with thanks. Then a conversation ensued in the course of which Cole discovered that his tête-à-tête was the mother of two children who were exceedingly anxious to own some Spanish bullets.

"Why, I have a lot of them in my tent," said the officer. "I'll be back from the north in a few weeks and then you come out to the reservation and I will give you some."

He accompanied the remark with his card.

The lady seemed delighted, my informant tells me, and said she would surely call for the Spanish bullets. And now Cole is wondering if, when he returns to the Presidio, whether she will really come.

I hear that the next move of the gay and dashing Colonel Theodore C. Marceau is to be on to Paris. The colonel, who has for some time past been established in Indianapolis, has disposed of his interests there and has announced his intention of eventually settling in chèr Paree.

On Monday a charming wedding was celebrated in Alameda, when Miss Helen Isabella Hinchman was united to Walter Herbert Cook of the auditing department, Southern Pacific company. Reverend Dr. Lacey of Christ Episcopal church performed the ceremony, which was witnessed only by relatives and intimate friends of both families. The bride's sister attended her as maid-of-honor, her two nieces being the bridesmaids, and her brother was the groom's best man. Upon their return from the north Mr. and Mrs. Cook will reside at 1556 Everett street, Alameda, the home of the bride's mother.

The latest church scandal is that resulting from the exposure of the infamy of Father Gloria, the ex-parish priest of West Oakland, who with ingenious deliberation seduced a young girl and for several years thereafter performed the functions of his holy office beneath a mask of vile hypocrisy. Lecherous wretches of the Gloria type have worn the sacred vestments of priesthood before and they were responsible for the impetus that was given to a character of fiction that appealed to carnal minds and encouraged the scoffers who contended that lewdness was the sequence of celibacy. Fortunately the safeguards that are thrown around the approach to the Catholic ministry render it difficult for men who are not fitted for the holy calling to pass the novitiate period, and hence it is that scandals such as that which Father Gloria is responsible for are of extremely rare occurrence.

"Impecune is a perfect crank on baths."

"Yes, I understand he even extends the fad to his possessions."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, his watch and evening suit are in soak."

I was told a story the other day of Captain Clark of the Oregon which illustrates the impetuosity of the daring commander. The incident occurred when the Oregon was lying in a South American port after rounding the horn, waiting for orders. It was supposed that Cervera's fleet was somewhere along the coast waiting for a chance to sink the big battle-ship. Captain Clark was growing more impatient every day. He wanted to continue the voyage and longed for a mix-up with the Spaniards. One day when he was engaged in a game of whist a cipher dispatch from Washington arrived. He stopped the game to have the dispatch deciphered. It was a long dispatch and it could not be deciphered in less than an hour or two. The first word worked out was "Proceed."

"Get up steam at once," shouted Captain Clark, and then he returned to the card game.

It has been discovered that a strong resemblance exists between Miss Mary Van Buren of the Frawley company and Miss Bernice Drown of the social swim. It is not merely a similarity of feature but of expression that has caused the attention of Miss Drown's friends to be called to the resemblance. It is not so long ago that everybody in the inner circle was commenting upon the fact that Miss Ethel Keeney is the picture of Anna Held. Miss Van Buren is a tall, graceful and strikingly handsome woman and the possession of a resemblance to such an actress may certainly be regarded as a compliment.

to Mrs. Joseph Austin the first. However, in the course of time his work received its proper recognition and today it occupies a prominent position in the field of journalism.

I believe it was to "Romey" Hart that San Francisco's reading world owes its first taste of "paraphraphs," the short, vivacious comments upon the day's fads and follies which are now a component part of all journals. Before Peter Robertson was writing "Undertones" for the Chronicle and before Tom Flynn started his humorous collection of paragraphs for the same paper, Hart had introduced the paragraphic style of literature into the Argonaut. Later, the department was discontinued but it had become popular and made the literary weekly talked about, especially in the club circles of Gotham.

The marriage of Jerome A. Hart makes the third in the list of local weekly newspaper editors who have taken unto themselves wives within the past twelvemonth. Mr. Hart's bride, Miss Alice Ann Clark—better known by her second baptismal appellation—is one of the best business women in the state. While the daily scribes have dealt largely upon the fact of the bride's business ability and her skill as a swimmer and equestrienne, they have not given space to the fact that she is one of the expert tennis players of the coast. In the annals of the California club Miss Ann Clark's name is written as a champion on the court. She is one of the wealthiest women in this part of the world and is the eldest of five sisters, daughters of the late W. S. Clark, the Santa Clara county plutocrat.

Del Monte will be very gay in August. There will be pony-racing under the auspices of the Del Monte Pony Racing and Steeplechase association, a golf tournament and yacht races. It should be ideal golfing weather at Monterey in August and the field promises to be both large and good. There will be eight pony races, at various distances and entries have already been made by the San Mateo and Burlingame hunt clubs. But it will be the yacht races that will be the crowning point of the Del Monte fun, as it is five years since a regatta of such importance has been held in Californian waters. A silver cup is to be carried off by the winner. It is only the big boats that are to compete for the cup.

"Are we going to play at Santa Cruz this summer?" queried the gay soubrette.

"Not on your tin-type," replied the manager of the burlesque company. "We couldn't show the people at the seashore anything new."

Miss Ethel M. Wickes, the young Californian artist, has returned from two and a half years' study abroad. In Paris she worked at Colarossi's and also at the Julian school where she studied under Bouguereau and Ferrier. Last summer she spent in an extended sketching tour in Holland, England and Ireland. A painting "Nine Miles from Cork," one of the results of this trip, is now on exhibition at Kennedy's in this city and Morris has another little Irish scene full of atmosphere and warmth. Other paintings of hers are at Macbeth's and at Clausen's, the well known picture dealers in Fifth avenue, New York.

Was it an Awakening?

WHEN SINGLETON brought his wife to Mrs. Cameron's reception, I felt sure he had made a mistake.

Not that Mrs. Cameron was a bad woman, far from that. It was only that the odor of sanctity was wanting at her receptions. It was more the odor of stale cigarettes and strong perfume, Cox said. But then Cox was always perpetrating poor apologies for epigrams.

Mrs. Cameron was "all right." She was of good family and people went to her receptions. I mean people of prominence, not merely bohemians and persons careless of where they went so long as the hostess gave them something fit to eat and drink, mixed with good music and clever conversation. Because there was always a celebrated musician or actor or author among Mrs. Cameron's guests, the solid citizens and citizenesses were glad to be seen there also.

But it is not Mrs. Cameron who is the story. She just happened to be the instrument of fate in this instance. God grant she may never know it, for she is a kind-hearted creature and the knowledge might cause her some sorrow.

Singleton had never, in my remembrance, missed one of Mrs. Cameron's receptions, but this was the first time he had brought his wife with him. She was a glorious woman, big and fair and altogether feminine. There was nothing "up to date" about her. She was just a nice woman, as Cox said—and he has had experience with all kinds.

I caught Marvin's eyes wandering in Mrs. Singleton's direction more than once during the progress of the program Mrs. Cameron had arranged for her guests' pleasure. However, Marvin made no move towards an introduction, which was something out of the common with him when a new feminine was in the atmosphere.

"Cox," I heard him say later in the dining-room where we all stood helping ourselves to the good things on the buffet, "I wonder if Mrs. Singleton loves her husband?"

I had heard Marvin ask that question before, of other women, and he usually followed up his query with a personal investigation of the subject, often disastrous in its results to the woman in the case—or her husband, whichever way you choose to look at it.

"Lord! how can I tell?", leering over his third whisky and soda, "They have three children and have been married six years; that's all I know about it."

Later, I saw Marvin talking earnestly to Mrs. Singleton, à deux, in a corner far away from the noisy crowd of revelers into which the staid guests of the earlier hours had been transformed.

Once or twice I saw Mrs. Cameron look, rather nervously I thought, at that part of the room where Marvin and his companion were ensconced. Mrs. Cameron knew Marvin's proclivities—but then Mrs. Singleton was a devoted wife and the mother of three children.

Nevertheless, I felt sure that Singleton had made a mistake in bringing his wife to Mrs. Cameron's reception.

About a month later, I met Marvin and Singleton at the club. They had never been especially good friends, therefore it surprised me to see them together. I expressed my astonishment to Cox.

"Wake up, old man!," he said, "why, it's the talk of the town that Marvin is ami de maison at the Singletons."

I saw Mrs. Singleton at the park a few days later, walking with her three children. She stopped to exchange a few words and it seemed to me that I noticed something in her face that was not there when I met her at Mrs. Cameron's reception. Her countenance was not so placid. It looked brighter, warmer, and her eyes were less cow-like in their limpid depths. Something new was added to her beauty. Perhaps it was a suggestion of voluptuousness. I could not explain just where it lay or what it was, but it was there—something that suggested an arousing to the roses and raptures.

I was telling Cox at the club that night of my latest impression regarding Mrs. Singleton.

"Marvin could explain to you the reason, perhaps, better than I," said Cox.

"Marvin? Do you mean—?"

"Not at all, not at all," said Cox, hastily. "But—well, you heard Marvin ask me once if Mrs. Singleton loved her husband. I could not say then; now, I am sure she loves—"

"Her husband?"

THE GOSSIP.

World of Law

WHAT IS THE Bar association going to do about the case of Harvey Brown and Isaac N. Thorne? These two gentlemen are members of the honorable profession of the law, and they have been accused of complicity in a shameful swindle. They have pleaded not guilty to the charge but I hope that they will be given an opportunity to establish their innocence beyond the shadow of a doubt. And I wish to suggest to the Bar association, which is in a measure charged with the duty of keeping the skirts of the legal profession clean, that it should awake from its lethargy and take judicial cognizance, as it were, of the scandals that are constantly bobbing up among lawyers. There are scores of practicing attorneys in this city who have been involved in crooked transactions from time to time and no effort has ever been made to oust them from the profession. In many instances the prominence and influence of the rascals awed their brother attorneys and protected them from prosecution. The ethics of the profession are openly violated every day but one seldom hears of anything more serious than the arousing of the virtuous indignation of the Bar association.

I believe that if the officers of the Bar association were really solicitous for the reputation of their profession they would have taken a hand in the Fair case. The acts of certain prominent lawyers in that case were most suspiciously peculiar and during its progress all sorts of crimination and recrimination were bandied between opposing counsel. I must confess that I am not familiar with the ethics of the legal profession, but nevertheless I have come to the conclusion that those ethics are extremely elastic.

A great deal of the scandal in the profession is due to the circumstance of a rumored partnership between certain judges and certain lawyers. There may be absolutely no foundation for the suspicion that a partnership exists, but it is nevertheless strongly intrenched. In consequence of this suspicion the hiring of counsel in important litigation depends quite often upon the court to which the case is assigned. Lawyers who were scarcely able to pay their office rent prior to an election have grown prosperous during the term of a friend on the bench. In many instances the mediocrity of the fortunate practitioner was so well known that when he was hired as counsel in an important case a broad smile would spread over the entire profession.

There is not a lawyer in San Francisco who prates about the honor and dignity of the legal profession, who is not aware of the chicanery and charlatanism that are resorted to in the courts of this state. Some attorneys have prospered through the popularly supposed intimacy that existed between them and certain judges and others have scored successes through their reputation for skill in the manipulation of juries. Not many years ago an attorney advertised the fact that for a quarter of a century he was in partnership with the superior judge of Department Blank. I never heard of the judge of Department Blank interposing an objection to the character of the ad. and as the Bar association never demurred I presume it was in harmony with the ethics of the profession.

The jury hypnotist has ever been in great demand and his fees are always large. A lawyer now deceased, who was regarded as the most eminent practitioner of his day, had the reputation of being a most accomplished hypnotist. The story is told of him that one day when he was engaged in the trial of a jury case that involved half a million dollars, a juror followed him to his office during the noon recess and secured a private interview with him. The clerks in the office were suddenly aroused by hearing the lawyer talking in loud and fierce tones. Presently the door opened, and the juror looking extremely frightened hurriedly left the office while the attorney hurled execrations after him. As soon as he was gone the attorney summoned his chief clerk and gave him these instructions: "Rush after that d—— scoundrel. He wants to be bribed so don't let him get away. We need his vote and must have it; make the best terms that you can."

Crit Thornton permitted his warm southern blood to reach a high temperature the other day, and he assaulted Attorney George D. Collins in open court. There was no serious infraction of the ethics of the legal profession in that incident, but Thornton's conduct was surely in conflict with the code duello as well as the rules laid down by the distinguished Blackstone of the prize ring—the Marquis of Queensberry. Mr. Thornton struck Collins while the latter was seated in a chair. That was an undue advantage which no southern gentleman should be guilty of. I think that Mr. Thornton owes Mr. Collins an apology.

Charles A. Lee and John Coughlin, who were newspaper reporters for several years, and who were admitted to practice some months ago, have opened a law office in the Parrott building, and are already in a fair way to do a brisk legal business. They had a great deal of experience as newspaper reporters in the courts at the city hall and were in a measure familiar with the practice of law long before they began the study of its fundamental principles. Before coming to this state Lee was a reporter in the oil-fields of Ohio, and he knows all there is worth knowing about the oil industry. A short time ago he secured a location for oil-wells near Fresno, and he has organized a corporation which will soon begin operations. I believe that George A. Knight and Charles Heggerty are interested in the corporation, and that all those connected with the concern are expecting big results.

THE COURT REPORTER.

THREE STAKES THIS WEEK

Three stakes will be decided at Union Park this week. Two are for saplings, while the other is an open stake, in which such star performers as Hugh Lynch's Lottie M., J. Dean's Connemara and Gladiator and other speedy dogs are entered. The prizes total $1150. The first train for the park will leave Third and Townsend streets today at 10:15 a. m. The Laddies' and Lassies' stakes will be run down twice and the open stake will be run down once. This will conclude the day's sport.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

Two Noted Resorts both under one management, noted for its efficiency. Representing the mountain interior and seaside of Central California.

Hotel del Monte, MONTEREY, CAL.

"The queen of American watering places." Only 3½ hours from San Francisco by express trains of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY. OPEN ALL THE YEAR.

RATES MODERATE.

The Tavern of Castle Crag and Soda Springs

320 miles from San Francisco, on the famous SHASTA ROUTE within sight of MOUNT SHASTA and the wonderful CASTLE CRAGS, altitude 2,100 feet.

Rates: by the day, $2, $2.50, $3. By the week, $14 to $17.50. Bath rooms extra.

Season, June to September

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION ADDRESS GEO SCHONEWALD, MANAGER
Hotel del Monte, Monterey, Cal., or Tavern of Castle Crag, Castle Crag, Cal.

My Lady

MY LADY'S fair and tall and slim,
And graceful formed as Cupid's bow,
Her voice is pictured music dim
Heard in the ages long ago,
So silvery and low.

Around her head (a sculptured gem
For which a Phidias would die),
The black locks of a child of Shem,
Untrammeled by a ribboned tie,
To hide her forehead try.

Her eyes are deep as darkling pool
Hid by the jealous foliage—
Such eyes the heart of man as rule.
I know she scorns my wild love-rage,
Yet I'm her humble page.

Her love-bowed lips, her cheeks of rose,
That she can grandly love agree,
Often I tell her of my woes;
My lady laughs—ah! can it be
My lady laughs at me?

THE LOVER.

Dramatic World

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "Heartsease"—a charming play, acted by artists.

CALIFORNIA. "Madame Sans Gene"—Americanized version.

ALCAZAR. "Faust"—spectacularly great.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "Faust"—scenically all right.

TIVOLI. "Wang"—Stevens' farewell.

ORPHEUM. Vaudeville—Laura Joyce Bell is a hummer.

PANORAMA BUILDING. "Battle of Manila"—realistic and worth seeing.

LOOKING AT IT from a literary standpoint Madame Sans Gene is a strong dramatic story surrounded by that literary pomp so characteristic of the Napoleonic era and scented with that piquant fragrance of conversational freedom that tickles the literary palate of the Frenchman. But it should be borne in mind that this enchanting piquancy is prevalent only in the glittering array of the French mode of conversation and when disguised in the cloak of translation becomes at times repulsively coarse. Blanche Bates takes quite a liberty in portraying the character of Madame Sans Gene. The author intended to present to the public a character from the days of Napoleon, a typical woman of the people, one of those products of the revolution who were just as willing to pick up a pike and march alongside the army as to pursue their daily vocation, a woman who regarded her liberty social as well as political and did not confine her behavior within the narrow limits of conventionality. On the other hand the author succeeds in showing us the same woman, impelled by the same free instincts, showing the same disregard for moral restriction; but a woman who understands how to hide her true character beneath the cloak of conventionality. In other words M. Sardou introduces us to the "fisherwoman" type on one side and the aristocracy on the other, and shows how that period created the same vulgarity in the higher classes of society as it did in the lower. Miss Bates, however, does not present Madame Sans Gene as a French character of the Empire period—a masculine hoyden, ever ready to compete with the rough soldiery in the use of forceful epigrams and not showing any compunction in relating a scandal in the presence of male listeners. But Miss Bates takes for her example an American type of a woman who might have sprung from a correspondingly low class—from the demi-monde, for instance. It is an original conception and Miss Bates executes it masterfully. But it is not the correct conception, because the actions, seeming character and nobility of soul conflict with the behavior and language of Madame Sans Gene. You may argue that this is just the character, but it is not. While her manners and language may have shown little cultivation, the real Madame Sans Gene, instead of acting in tomboy fashion, could have behaved less offensively during the "dress rehearsal" and dancing lesson. One must also remember that Catherine Hulscher did not parade her charms before prying male eyes, but simply did not think it any harm to appear natural. No one ever taught her the rudiments of conventionality. She did not know any better. But had Miss Bates adhered to this mode of French characterization she could not have been so successful as she is now. While not the traditional Madame Sans Gene Miss Bates' portrayal of the character is intensely artistic. She invests the role with an easy abandon and good-fellow-like touch that pleases her audience. In emotional scenes Miss Bates is really great and may vie with any of her contemporaries. In Madame Sans Gene she has a most awkward disadvantage to overcome—the translation. Diable in French does not sound half so bold as "the devil" in English and the same may be said of other unconventional language used by the characters. This Americanizing of Madame Sans Gene becomes especially prominent when she confronts the court ladies and tells them in a spirited way what she thinks of them, ending with:

"Put that in your pipe and smoke it."

But besides an American trait, the subtleness of a Carmen frequently creeps through the character. In fact what was intended by the playwright to be the coarseness of a French ex-blanchisseuse develops in Miss Bates' characterization into the voluptuousness of a Carmen. And the American spirit is still more prominent in the scene with the Emperor where Miss Bates mistakes affection and reverence for the hero for familiarity and good-fellowship. Madame Sans Gene may have regarded the Emperor like other men but she fought for him, attended his battles and carried a deep respect for his power in her heart. However, Miss Bates may be right to present Madame Sans Gene in a manner best understood by an American audience. A French fisherwoman on the stage would be a riddle difficult to solve and a French fisherwoman who speaks English is an impossibility. The dialect used by that class of people cannot be translated and the only way to give an idea of

Mary Van Buren, at the California

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, direct importer of fine millinery goods Exclusive styles.

the character as the author desires to reveal it is to adapt it, and in this Miss Bates has admirably succeeded. Besides admiring her ability to act one must concede to Miss Bates the ability to make herself ravishingly beautiful at all times. Augustus Cook's Napoleon inspires about the best impression one can receive of the Emperor, his appearance, his cutting and quick mode of speech, his commanding tone, his fierce persistency in having his own will, his keen sense of justice, his appreciation of female beauty and his love for the army. In order to appreciate Mr. Cook better it should be remembered that the lines of the author alone do not aid one much in defining the great monarch's character. There is not sufficient material to permit such a definition. All is left to the exponent of the part, who must have made a thorough study of the character in order to essay it. Mr. Cook proves that he is well fitted for the part and that he has made a serious study of his role. Mr. Frawley cuts a sorry figure as De Neipperg but then it is not Mr. Frawley's fault that he was not blessed with the fire and dash of an Austrian officer. After his exit a young woman, evidently possessing acute critical discrimination, exclaimed with a sigh:

"Thank goodness that he is gone."

With a calcimined face in a white uniform no one looks appetizing, not even Mr. Frawley. However he executes the assassination scene very well. Taking it all in all the presentation of Madame Sans Gene is excellent and no one who has witnessed the performance has reason to complain. Next week the company will present One of Our Girls, by Bronson Howard, when Miss Bates will have a particularly fine opportunity to show her talent.

Grand Opera House

WHILE THE AUDIENCES that attend the Grand are mighty lavish in their applause, one cannot deny the fact that this applause is bestowed only upon one or two of the principals. Morosco's company of clever artists is exceptionally good in comic opera but in grand opera it loses its magnetism and vivacity. But Mr. Morosco is not the only one who will soon have found out that it is unwise to permit a comic opera company to present grand opera; there are many who repent today the same error. The company now appearing at the Grand was announced as Southwell's comic opera company and as such it is an ideal organization. No one will dispute that their production of The Black Hussar, The Gypsy Baron, The Beggar Student and The Chimes of Normandy were bright, artistic and satisfactory performances. Why should a company, so rich in resources regarding comic opera be forced to play grand opera, when in the latter it is impossible to show the fine capabilities of those who compose the organization? Mr. Woolf, for instance, as a comedian is brilliant and versatile, yet his Mephisto in Faust is a caricature of the worst kind. In fact his Mephisto is nothing less than Coquelicot in disguise. And no one can blame Mr. Woolf. There is not an actor on the stage today who can play Coquelicot in Olivette one week and Mephisto the other. To attempt it is sheer folly and must either spring from an overdose of conceit or foolhardiness. Mr. Woolf possesses a basso of much volume and carrying quality but because he can sing Coquelicot intelligently this does not prove that he can sing Mephisto—neither can he. A lava eruption from his fingers and an electric sprinkling from his sword does not improve the dignity of his Satanic Majesty. When one considers Mr. Woolf's duck-like walk and his irresistible habit of folding his hands gracefully over his well rounded stomach, we again come to the conclusion that Mr. Woolf's conception of Mephisto is far-fetched. Miss Mason as Marguerite is one of the two or three who are honestly entitled to applause. In appearance and deportment she is an ideal Gretchen and her clear, attractive soprano has ample opportunity to demonstrate the fact that Miss Mason is fully capable of playing the role with dignity. Mr. Persse, who is heard in the role of Faust, is an excellent actor and brings the dramatic situations into bold relief, but Mr. Persse knows as well as the writer that his voice is being taxed too much of late. Even a De Reszke or Tomagno would show signs of fatigue if compelled to sing Don Jose eight times one week and Faust eight times another. It is not Mr. Persse's fault that his voice is fatigued; there should be another tenor. There are enough here who would be glad to act as substitutes for Mr. Persse. Winfred Goff's Valentine is the most meritorious piece of work of the performance. The music of Valentine's role is exactly within the range of Mr. Goff's resonant baritone—neither too low nor too high—and thus it is with satisfaction that one concedes to Mr. Goff the honor of carrying off (together with Miss Mason) the palm of the evening. The orchestra on the evening the writer attended was simply miserable, especially the horns and the bassoon. The chorus was somewhat insecure and uncertain, evidently owing to the fact that most of its members are foreign to grand opera. It would be wrong to refer to those discrepancies—especially when one considers the small price of admission—but when a company is so efficient and so exemplary in the production of comic opera, it is wrong to let them present grand operas in which they are deficient. Mr. Morosco deserves the credit for giving the public an ideal comic opera for a reasonable admission fee, but he should never consent to give the public cheap grand opera—it never pays. The stage management is as usual flawless and the price paid to be admitted into the Grand small enough for such stage setting. The mounting of the piece alone amply repays you for your outlay and that portion of our public whose musical ear is not so sensitive will admit surely that the performance is an exceedingly meritorious one and will crowd the house this afternoon, evening and tomorrow evening. Next week the company will return to comic opera and present Boccaccio. Miss Mason will be a sublime Boccaccio. Georgie Cooper will appear at the Grand as Isabella next week and her many admirers will no doubt be there in full force to give her a royal reception.

Great bargains this week in elegant "dress hats," stylish outing hats and dainty little bonnets.—Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street

---

Columbia

HEARTSEASE is what the writer has often termed it, one of the most charming plays ever written, and Henry Miller's Eric Temple deserves to be recorded in dramatic history as an artistic masterpiece. It is absurd to term the members of the Miller company mere society mummers; their work in Heartsease shows them to be capable of the most ambitious forms of dramatic work. The double-quartet that renders the incidental vocal music of the piece, the product of Eric Temple's muse, adds very materially to the artistic success of Heartsease. Next week will be given Heartsease, on account of the great take of seats. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and at a special matinee on Wednesday Heartsease will be the bill. This will necessitate the postponing of the revival of Hamlet, but only until Thursday night. Monday night's presentation of Heartsease will be the fiftieth performance of the Miller season at the Columbia and the management has arranged to commemorate the event by making it a souvenir night. An autographed photo of Mr. Miller will be presented to every lady in attendance at that performance. The first production in America of the great London Garrick theatre success, Brother Officers, will be staged by Henry Miller at the Columbia on the evening of August seventh. Edwin Stevens will be in the cast.

Orpheum

VAUDEVILLE continues to please the jaded appetite of local amusement lovers and the variety offered on this week's program at the Orpheum should be sufficient to entertain the most captious auditors. Laura Joyce Bell has a pleasant little comedy in which she has the support of Miss Menday and Messrs. Lansdale and Carlton. As a vaudeville star the deep-voiced Laura makes a distinct hit. When she first came here with Digby Bell as contralto of the Duff opera company and later with the Hoosier Doctor company, nobody ever imagined that Laura Joyce Bell would ever enter vaudeville ranks. But she has, and the move is an excellent addition to "circuit" attractions. Minnie Palmer is as great a favorite as she was last week. La Fafalla, the latest in spectacular danseuses, is warmly greeted every night and the agile Phoites win their share of hearty applause. The rest of the bill, particularly that portion contributed in song and story by the feminine monologuist, Elizabeth Murray, is full of interest. Next week will come four new attractions: Cotton and Long, in a new comedietta, Managerial Troubles; Dave Meier, who calls himself the champion bag puncher of the world; Joseph Adelman, the xylophone player, and Herr G. Von Palm, who will give an exhibition of lightning oil painting. Cotton and Long are both San Franciscans. Idalene Cotton has been known in the local theatrical world ever since she was a baby. She was only seven years of age when she essayed her first part at the Bush street theatre with her father, Ben Cotton. She was for three years a favorite member of the Alcazar stock company. She went east with Crane and is coming back to San Francisco covered with newly won laurels. Nick Long is one of San Francisco's pet comedians and his return here with his wife (Idalene Cotton) should be celebrated in real welcome home style by his friends.

Henry Miller will head the company which is to play in The Only Way at the Herald Square theatre at the beginning of next season. The Only Way, which has been favorably received in England, is Freeman Wills' dramatization of Dickens' Tale of Two Cities. The Bookbuyer recently gave the title of this play as The Old Way. Which is correct? Neither appears to be very appropriate if the dramatic version follows closely after the lines of the novel, but there seems to be some logic in The Only Way,

LEE D. CRAIG
NOTARY PUBLIC AND COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS
316 MONTGOMERY STREET, Bet. Pine and California
San Francisco, Cal.

Alcazar FAUST has been given in San Francisco by Lewis Morrison and his company too many times to require even a word of criticism. As a spectacular production Morrison's Faust has probably never been equalled and dramatically all the parts are worthy of praise. Mr. Morrison will now rest and recuperate, while Miss Roberts will carry out the rest of the season as scheduled in the spring advance notices for the Alcazar. Romeo and Juliet will be given next week. We have had many Juliets but it is expected that Miss Roberts will prove one of the most charming exponents of the character. Her beauty should shine with added luster in the costumes of the period in which the scenes of the play are laid. Mr. Whittlesey as Romeo will no doubt crack many matinee girls' hearts.

After all, San Francisco is not to have the pleasure of seeing Eleanor Kent (Mabel Love) this season. Miss Kent is for the summer season prima donna of the Aborn opera company, a strong combination that is producing E. E. Rice's burlesques throughout the east. The company is now in Atlantic city, New Jersey. Press opinions say that Miss Kent is one of the "daintiest and best dressed women on the stage," and speak of her "beautiful appearance, fresh, sweet voice and graceful acting." Her prospects for the fall are very bright and it is to be hoped Miss Kent will accept the best offer, one that will give her San Francisco friends a chance to see her on the stage.

It will only be about a fortnight now before Oliver Morosco will leave for Los Angeles, where he will have the management of his father's latest acquisition, the Burbank theatre. "Ollie" will be missed here, for there is not a more popular man in the theatrical profession, but he is the right sort of a representative to send away from home and one easily grants the fact that what is San Francisco's loss will be Los Angeles' gain.

Absinthe, which is to be placed on the boards shortly, is Gilbert Faust's dramatization of Marie Corelli's novel, Wormwood. Absinthe and wormwood may be essentially the same thing, but the two words are far from conveying the same idea. Absinthe brings up visions of gay Paree, short skirts and champagne, while wormwood, even without the conjunction of Marie Corelli, is quite at the other end of the line.

Phil Hastings is on deck again attending to his various amusement enterprises. His trip to Lake county did him no end of good and he is looking as hale and hearty at is possible to a man of his build.

Our modern circus dates back to 1770, in which year Philip Astley, a discharged soldier, gave exhibitions of horsemanship in an improvised ring at Lambeth.

It is said that in numbering the rows of seats in Washington theatres the letter J is omitted because patrons positively refuse to be seated in the "jay row."

Handsome hats and stylish bonnets at your own price this week—Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street.

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Next Monday Night Souvenir Event. 50th performance of the HENRY MILLER Season.

Continued Success. Last times,

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Special Matinee Wednesday.

"HEARTSEASE"

IMPORTANT EVENT—

Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday Matinee, Charles Frohman presents his second great Shakespearean revival,

"HAMLET"

Henry Miller in the title role. August 7th, "BROTHER OFFICERS."

Grand Opera House

Morosco Amusement Co., Inc. Lessees. Telephone, Main 532.

Last Performances of "FAUST"

Next Monday, July 31st, 1899, Grand Production of

"BOCCACCIO"

Our Prices—Orchestra floor, 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

Matinee Saturday. Best seat in the house, 25 cents

☞ Branch Ticket Office just inside main entrance of Emporium.

Alcazar

FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor
MARK THALL, Manager

'Phone Main 254

Week of July 31st,

Elaborate Scenic Production of Shakespeare's Greatest Play Delineating the Power of Love,

"ROMEO AND JULIET"

FLORENCE ROBERTS as Juliet: WHITE WHITTLESEY as Romeo.

Supported by the pick of the Alcazar company.

Our Prices—15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

In preparation—"THE LADY OF LYONS"

Orpheum

O'Farrell between Stockton and Powell Streets.

Week Commencing Sunday Matinee, July 30th.

IDALENE COTTON and NICK LONG.
DAVE MEIER.
LAURA JOYCE BELL & CO.
ELIZABETH MURRAY.
THE ELDRIDGES.
JOSEPH ADELMAN.
HERR G. VON PALM.
LA FAFALLA.
PHOITES Pantomime.

Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c

Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday

Farewell Concert

OF

Emil Steinegger, Pianist

ASSISTED BY THE

Press Club Quartette

Prior to his departure for Vienna

At Sherman-Clay Hall, 223 Sutter St.

On THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 10, 1899, at 8:15 o'clock.

Tickets can be had at Sherman, Clay & Co's, at 618 Fell St., or of any of Mr. Steinegger's pupils

Admission 50 Cents Including Reserved Seat

Seats can be reserved on Aug. 9th at Sherman, Clay & Co's

California Theatre

S. H. FRIEDLANDER, Manager. Tel. Main 173.

Never before in the history of Mr. Frawley's entree into the Dramatic Field in this city, has his organization met with such flattering reception, as on this occasion.

House packed at every performance Curtain calls nightly. Delighted audiences. Perfect productions.

Commencing with Monday evening, July 31st,
MISS BLANCHE BATES and HER SUPERB COMPANY
Will present Brouson Howard's greatest Comedy Drama,

"ONE OF OUR GIRLS"

New Scenery, New Costumes, New Stage Effects, for every play.

Reserved Seats, 25, 50, 75, and 1.00. Matinee, 25, 50, and 75.

Battle of Manila Bay

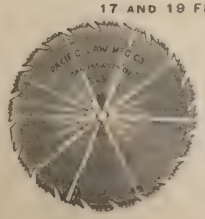
This Grand Historical Panorama is now on exhibition . . .

Lectures every half hour by the eminent orator, PROF. W. G. ROLLINS

Admission, 50 Cents
Children, 25 Cents.

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO



Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

—PRICE, $3.00—

Saws of every description made to order.
Planing and Currier Knives Lace Leather, Emery Wheels, Saw Mandrels,
Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

THE LOVE CHASE

THYRSIS, a youth of the inspired train,
Fair Sacharissa lov'd, but lov'd in vain:
Like Phœbus sung the no less amorous boy;
Like Daphne she, as lovely, and as coy!
With numbers he the flying nymph pursues;
With numbers, such as Phoebus' self might use!
Such is the chase, when Love and Fancy leads,
O'er craggy mountains, and through flowery meads;
Invok'd to testify the lover's care,
Or form some image of his cruel fair.
Urg'd with his fury, like a wounded deer,
O'er these he fled; and now, approaching near,
Had reach'd the nymph with his harmonious lay,
Whom all his charms could not incline to stay.
Yet, what he sung in his immortal strain,
Though unsuccessful, was not sung in vain:
All, but the nymph that should redress his wrong,
Attend his passion, and approve his song.
Like Phœbus thus, acquiring unsought praise,
He catch'd at love, and fill'd his arms with bays.

WALLER.

Music World

AMONG THOSE LETTERS in the New York Musical Courier that bespeak the efficiency of their writers, those of Mrs. Florence French of Chicago may be regarded as belonging to the most efficient. Furthermore it is evident that her criticisms are always just and based upon that broad platform of "fairness to all" without regard to personal likes or dislikes. In the Courier of February twenty-second I find in the Chicago correspondence the following remarks: "Madame De Pasquali is one of my ideal sopranos. * * * Madame De Pasquali would be a valuable member of our biggest opera organizations. In voice, style, musicianship and appearance she is infinitely preferable to many worn-out prima donnas." This honest praise from a critic like Mrs. French is of so much more interest to us now, as Madame De Pasquali has but lately appeared here as Marguerite, Leonora and Santuzza, gaining such a tremendous success that the audiences that listened to her were lavish in bestowing their approval upon her performance. The main charm in Madame De Pasquali's voice may be sought in a peculiar softness, enchanting in its grace and very like that which forms such a striking characteristic in Melba's wonderful soprano. But Madame De Pasquali is fortunate enough to possess a quality that Melba cannot boast of, namely, dramatic temperament. As a rule a dramatic soprano sounds somewhat harsh at times, especially when it is obliged to express intense passion. But Madame De Pasquali's voice never becomes harsh. It retains ever that mellow character which caresses your musical ear.

SIGNOR M. DE PASQUALI

¶ ¶

Repeatedly I have emphasized the fact that a singer's most valuable equipment is a clean diction. How many vocalists would escape the humiliation of an adverse criticism if they but adhered to this rule — clean diction. Madame De Pasquali seems to have solved this problem also. Every word flows out distinctly, sharply and accurately from her lips. Thus the text and music are amalgamated into a tone mass of dazzling beauty. Madame De Pasquali gives evidence of having undergone a thorough training. Her trills are dainty and well shaped, her staccato is spirited and exhilarating and her legato is carefully and clearly executed. When we therefore consider that Madame De Pasquali possesses a dramatic soprano imbued with mellowness and flexibility, used in connection with excellent diction and containing a fine technical equipment, we must concede that this efficient vocalist must reach the top of the ladder of fame. What is still more encouraging is the fact that Madame De Pasquali, besides being a vocalist of considerable merit, possesses histrionic accomplishments of superior quality. And thus the advantage of dramatic temperament, denied to a Melba, will strengthen Madame De Pasquali's position as the coming American prima donna soprano. Young as she is this highly gifted vocalist has already gained a flattering reputation and the American press is lavish in its praise and predicts a brilliant future for her even to the extent of comparing her favorably with Melba. Madame De Pasquali was a member of the Scalchi grand opera company. She is a native of Boston and is a graduate of the National Conservatory of Music in New York city where she studied with Oscar Saenger.

¶ ¶

While speaking of Madame De Pasquali I must not omit to call attention to Signor De Pasquali, whose elegant lyric tenor forms a worthy companion to his wife's brilliant soprano. De Pasquali's tenor is a pure lyric voice of graceful flexibility, agreeable clearness and some dramatic characteristics. His method is exquisite and his technical knowledge vast. Two such artists, whose scientific musical intelligence has created favorable comment throughout this country, form a strong attraction. De Pasquali was formerly tenor of the Royal Theatre Bellini, of Palermo, Italy. For seven years he was a close student under Bertini at the Royal conservatory, Palermo, where during four successive seasons he obtained the highest possible honors. His debut was made at the Royal Theatre Bellini of that town with the renowned Lamiraux and his success was instantaneous. His first appearance in the United

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

TEACHES { Tone Production
Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone production

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Bldg.

Reception Hours:
3:30 to 4:30

States was with the Damrosch symphony orchestra (the same which was admired here with the Ellis opera company) in New York. Since then he was heard with such organizations as the Hinrichs grand opera company, the Tavari grand opera company, the Schirmer-Mapleson company and others.

¶ ¶

The San Jose musical contingent was well represented in this city last week. Mrs. Mary Weaver McCauley, who has just completed a successful engagement at the summer school of music in Pacific Grove, was here. Mrs. McCauley gave a very interesting lecture on Interpretation and Song Forms at the summer school and was much complimented on her able elucidations. She illustrated her lecture with several vocal selections which were ably accompanied on the piano by Miss Ada May Churchill, a prominent pianist of San Jose, who also paid this city a visit this week. Miss Mary E. Webster, a gifted contralto of much artistic value, is spending her vacation here. Miss Webster is an enthusiastic musician and is a favorite in the garden city. Miss Lena Voltz, the gifted soprano, who is not a stranger in San Francisco, is also spending a few days here. Mrs. McCauley's class in Santa Cruz seems to grow gradually. I understand that Mrs. J. R. Williamson has joined the class. Mrs. Williamson has a mezzo-soprano of a mellow quality and is fortunate in being gifted with a fine power of discrimination regarding emotional passages. The lady is energetic and ambitious and is certainly a valuable acquisition to any musical circle.

¶ ¶

Last week I made mention of the fact that Will Jacobs, who took part in a concert at Santa Cruz recently, should be given into the care of a good teacher. This remark was made because I understood that the young man did not take any lessons at all. It seems, however, that this comment was misconstrued into an attack upon the teacher of the young man and the attack is ascribed to personal motive. As far as I am personally concerned, I do not care a rap for misconstruction or the underlying of invented motives, but I desire to announce that I have never made myself guilty of spite-work nor shall I ever do so. When persons are unworthy of notice they are ignored; that's all. Again I emphasize the fact that I had no idea that Mr. Jacobs took lessons, much less did I know the name of his teacher.

¶ ¶

Apropos of Mr. Genss, permit me to quote from the Potzdamer Intelligenzblatt: "The eleventh Philharmonic concert brought a highly interesting program together with excellent orchestral achievements. * * * " The program on that occasion included an overture by Handel; Aus Boehmens Hain und Flur by Smetana; Zorohayda by Sevendson and Tannhauser overture. The critic comments on the execution of these works as follows: "The conception and execution of these works under Professor Genss' direction was simply complete and the audience was compelled to applaud enthusiastically after the rendition of the Tannhauser overture. If we are not mistaken we heard this overture by the Philharmonic society a year ago. We must confess that Professor Genss brought the orchestra upon a highly artistic basis despite its peculiar formation and few rehearsals.

¶ ¶

Arthur M. Abell, the clever editor of the violin column in the Musical Courier, has the following to say about somebody on this coast: "I have received a circular from a foreign violinist now teaching in small cities on the Pacific coast. The circular contains some startling statements. Although the violinist's name is quite unknown in the musical world, he claims to have a method combining the best qualities of the 'Joachim, Lauret, (?) Belgian and French schools. 'Will save you a trip to Europe.' His price is very modest, considering that he is unknown and teaches in small towns—only five dollars a lesson. But the following is the best of all his announcements:

GREATEST LIVING VIOLINIST IN THE WORLD.

This is altogether too modest. He should at least have written: 'Greatest living and dead violinist in the world, also greatest dead violinist in hell and heaven; reduced rates to skeletons and mummies.'" Wonder to which of the "great" violinists Mr. Abell refers?

¶ ¶

And now we shall have another grand opera season, to commence next week. Surely our musical people have no reason to complain of being neglected, except perhaps by the daily press who seem to consider music as an unimportant topic. I cannot understand why literature, the drama, sports and other topics are dealt with in special departments of certain papers and music is scantily treated. The reason may be found in the fact that the musicians are too good natured to resent such negligence. The coming musical season promises to be an especially brilliant one and there is no doubt that the interest in music is increasing.

¶ ¶

Eddie Marshuts left recently for Kern county, where he will inspect some oil fields in which he is interested, and which according to reports yield handsome proceeds. Mr. Marshuts is a rising tenor—he rises very early—and oil seems to be his mascot. His voice is as smooth as oil and if the oil in the field will develop as quickly as the oil in his voice Eddie Marshuts will become a millionaire ere the year is over. But seriously, people interested in music to the extent of Mr. Marshuts' ambition are potent factors in the advancement of musical science and if energy and talent go for anything Mr. Marshuts will some day march in the front ranks of victorious vocalists.

¶ ¶

Professor James Hamilton Howe is very successful with his summer school of music at Pacific Grove. In fact the enterprise proved such a worthy one that Mr. Howe has decided to stay over until September. There are reports of quite a romantic nature reaching me about Mr. Howe. It seems that he is very much engaged in the summer school, as well as out of it. I understand that Mr. Howe rejoices in the possession of the title of Musical Bachelor, but he will soon change this title to Musical Benedict. It's the same thing—M. B.

¶ ¶

W. W. Gilchrist, the late conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, has resigned his position. The latest reports show that Fritz Scheel is mapped out for his successor. This directs the eyes of our musical public towards Hermann Genss who is really the very man who could successfully fill Scheel's position here, having had considerable experience in Germany.

¶ ¶

Miss Charlotte Voorsanger, the very talented piano pupil of Professer E. S. Bonelli, will leave for New York about the middle of next month in order to enter the National Conservatory of Music. It is expected that despite a premeditated concert tour Joseffy will fulfill his duties in the conservatory and in that case Miss Voorsanger will have an opportunity to gain instruction from the very source she desires.

¶ ¶

I hear that Miss Grace Carroll of Oakland, whose contralto has found many admirers here as well as across the bay, will join the Bostonians next season. I do not know how much credence to put in this report but I know that last year the Bostonians did not have a contralto that could in any way compare with Miss Carroll's voice and in view of this fact it woul be well for the Bostonians to get some good material.

¶ ¶

As an example of the inefficiency of an orchestra that which accompanied the double-quartet in Heartsease is entitled to first honors. Of all the discords and unequal tempos I ever had the misfortune to hear this was certainly the worst. It is too bad that an exemplary quartet should be marred by a weak accompaniment.

¶ ¶

Emil Steinegger's concert on the evening of August tenth at Sherman-Clay hall promises to be one of the most interesting musical events of the season. It is practically the opening event, for as yet no other concerts have been announced.

¶ ¶

Irwin Eveleth Hassell, who recently left for Germany in order to pursue his studies, arrived safely in Bremen last Thursday and by this time he will be under the protection of the Kaiserstadt, Berlin.

¶ ¶

Henry Weiss will give a concert on August third. Mr. Weiss is a baritone of much breadth and clarity and will no doubt earn considerable applause from his many friends and well wishers.

¶ ¶

William B. King, a prominent organist of Oakland, has returned after an extended visit to Paris. For three years Mr. King studied under Widor.

ALFRED METZGER.

FOR A PRETTY EFFECT IN STATIONERY nothing is so chaste as the Fleur-de-Lis Linen when stamped with monogram in silver. Messrs. Cooper & Co. have superior facilities in this line, and show a number of new ideas.

SOHMER PIANOS BYRON MAUZY
Agent 308--314 Post Street, San Francisco
Sheet Music, Books, etc. Tel. Main 5261

Minor Notes ON THURSDAY EVENING of last week the McKenzie musical society gave its eighteenth concert, in Odd Fellows' hall, which was so crowded that many failed to gain admission. The society has profited by a recent criticism regarding the lack of attention and discipline of the chorus and there was an improvement in that respect, the director being more closely followed, but owing to the absence from town of several members the chorous was not so strong as usual. The writer noticed a number of gentlemen in the audience who should have been in their accustomed places upon the stage. As members they owe a duty to the society and one or two dismissals for such want of interest in the success of a public meeting would insure a full attendance and a realization of the duties assumed as members. There was an improvement in time and better attack but as usual a little carelessness in shading. On the Day that Dewey Comes Home, (Lee Johnson) opened the program A male quartet, H. N. Callender, J. P. Faivre, Hall Slocumb and C. W. Betts, rendered several selections. The quartet is a new one and as yet the voices fail in modulation and balance, a fault that further practice will improve. At times Mr Callender's voice was far too strong for the rest and again the bass had it all his own way. There is is nothing more beneficial than to hear other singers of longer experience and to mark the beauty of time and expression and artistic effect. The society has several good male voices and there is room for more among the boys. Master George Kruger sang The Sword of Bunker Hill and Little Southside Queen. The little fellow is quite a favorite but is receiving rather more flattery than is good for him and little tricks that are now laughed at and called "cute" will be a positive detriment to him when he has outgrown his childhood and more is expected of him. Waiting Love for Thee (arranged by J. W. McKenzie from the Remember Me gavotte of S. Seiler, a favorite local composer) was a pleasing number by the society, the music being decidedly pretty and taking well with the audience. Ave Maria, arranged from intermezzo Cavalleria Rusticana, was sung by Freda Nipgen and the society. The number was a disappointment as the soloist was in poor voice upon this occasion; her tones were decidedly unsteady and could scarcely be heard. Again the writer desires to praise Miss Nipgen for remembering a hint about stage mannerism. It is to be hoped that she will have regained her strength and confidence by next concert. Prescilla Davies rendered Jamie Dear (Bischoff) This young singer has a rather good voice which, however, is not pleasing from the fact that soul seems to play no part in her music. Her expression is monotonous at present and, while her enunciation was a virtue, Beware, her encore, shared the same fate as her first effort. The Erminie lullaby and Mexican Dance (Manzanillo) were given by the society and Misses Nipgen, Ewing, McShane and Boyer. The ladies' quartet has the same faults as the male quartet, want of balance and modulation, and the strong alto quite puts in the shade the rather tremulous tones of the soprano. The best numbers of the society were Narcissus (Nevin) and Sousa's On Dress Parade (Double Eagle march), more spirit being shown in these selections. Hugh N. Callender rendered M' Appari (Martha) His voice is well suited to operatic work but is not yet sufficiently even and smooth. He is dramatic and has plenty of fire but has a bad habit of chopping off his tones in the most unexpected places. Legato should be his watchword. His encore was Bring Back My Boy to Me, a pretty ballad by Mr. McKenzie, but wholly unsuited to Mr. Callender's style. He sang without any apparent interest and his voice lost its clearness. I should like to hear Mr. Braiton sing this at the September concert and Mr. Callender only in operatic work.

MARY FRANCES FRANCIS.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . .

Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.

Specialist in the Development of the Voice

* * * HOME STUDIO:

RECEPTION HOURS, 12 TO 2 912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .

Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu-El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,

Studio for Voice Culture Operatic Repertoire,
Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method.

Engagements accepted for Concerts
Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.

Terms Moderate

Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

MR. FRANCIS STUART

. . . Teacher of Singing

1615 Jackson St., near Polk

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Miss Marion Bear, Concert Pianist, 927 Sutter St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, Vocalist, 1109 Post street.
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist, Oroville, Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

DR. H. J. STEWART . . . .

Organist of Trinity Church, and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .

has removed his

MUSIC STUDIO

to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine

Singing, Piano Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music

E. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street

Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.

A thorough course for teaching. Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Under direction of For Voice Culture, Piano and Organ

Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck, Assisted by MISS CECILIA M. DECKER
Alto Soloist Central M. E. Church.

Operatic and Dramatic Department in charge of Mrs Mary Fairweather
Piano Department in charge of Mr. Arthur Fickenscher
Assisted by Mrs. Fanny E. Buckland, (Virgil Practice Clavier Method) and Miss Estelle Davidson (Synthetic Method)
Languages: MR. L. D. VENTURA, B. H. (French and Italian)
MISS ELSA PRIBER. (German.)
Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy
Instructions in Physical Culture, Chorus and Sight Singing, Ensemble Playing, etc., etc. Advantages Unsurpassed Full particulars and terms upon application. 831 Fulton St., Bet. Webster and Fillmore,
Telephone West 223 San Francisco, Cal.

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use

BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE

It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.

PRICE $3.00

At music stores or by mail. Descriptive circulars sent upon application.

HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Miss Elizabeth Westgate of Alameda announces that she will resume teaching on July thirty-first. Cantor E. J. Stark has returned from the southern part of the state, where he sought rest from his work during the season in recreation. If any man was deserving of rest it was Mr. Stark, whose duties are vast and responsible. Mr. Stark is now preparing an elaborate musical program for the Jewish holidays at Temple Emanu-El, and judging from former occasions Mr. Stark's efforts will be crowned with success. Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck will return next week from Larkspur where she has been spending the summer season. During this time she had an opportunity to ponder over improvements that may be added to her well known school of music. The school will re-open with additional forces and departments on August first. Special stress should be laid upon the fact that Mr. L. D. Ventura has been secured as teacher of French and Italian. W. C. McCoy of Oakland has returned from his vacation and will resume work in the beginning of August. Mary Linck, the brilliant prima donna contralto whose work during late grand opera seasons was so much admired here and who made such a success with the Castle Square opera company, returned last week to delight our local music lovers again with her excellent music. Ella Prosnitz, a protégé of the Milan musical public and a favorite at the Berlin Royal opera for three years, arrived here last Friday in order to fill an engagement, when she may show whether her fame is merited. Miss Mabel Merrill and Miss Ruth Merrill of Santa Cruz were here last week to spend part of their vacation. These young ladies are prominent members of the Santa Cruz musical cult and have contributed considerably toward the establishment of musical appreciation in the seaside city. Miss Ruth Merrill is one of the most efficient educators in that place, occupying the worthy position of teacher of Latin in the high school. Julian Bernheim of Santa Cruz, a clever young piano student who is at present visiting friends there, returned last week and will enter into his last year at the Dental college next month. C.H. Randall has returned from a camping tour in Santa Clara county and will resume his teaching on August 1st. Byron Mauzy has returned from an extended trip to Napa, Electric springs, St Helena and Skaggs springs. He is now in harness again and has his hands full to tell his friends all about the good time he has had.

¶ ¶

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Campbell are spending their vacation at Lake Tahoe. After having fully enjoyed the beauty of this resort and thoroughly rested from the work of the season, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will leave for San Mateo where they intend to remain for about a month. Mrs. Campbell will be here in August in time to resume her duties as one of our most efficient vocal teachers. Mrs. J. E. Birmingham, whose contralto has elated our musicians, has accepted an offer to enter the choir of Calvary church on August first. The choir will then consist of the following members: Mrs. Susie Hert-Mark, soprano; Mrs. J. E. Birmingham, contralto; D. M. Lawrence, tenor; W. C. Campbell, basso and director; R. M. Burness, organist. With such an organization the musical portion of the services at Calvary church will not lack any artistic finish.

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd
TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral
Voice Culture and the Art of Singing
First-class Engagements only accepted.
Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing.
Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave.
Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing.
Residence, 1622 Fell Street,
near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE
SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakland, Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL
SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing. Begs to announce that she has returned from Europe and resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento street. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL
POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire.
130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS
CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches.
Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE
TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER
TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY
TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St.
Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH
PUPILS of Madame de la Grange Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

J. W. McKENZIE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX
PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A Building Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30. Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL
VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue. Studio, 717 Sutter Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON
SINGING and Piano.
Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

HELEN M. ANDERSON, A. C. M.
TEACHER OF PIANO Refers to Mr. Louis Lisser, Dr. Wm. Mason and Albert Ross Parsons. Synthetic Method and "Touch and Technic" a special course for teachers.
31 Guerrero St.

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK
PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 575. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH
PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory, Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE.
Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M.
1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA
TEACHER OF PIANO.
2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER
TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays. 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony.
2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE
TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a. m to 1:30 p. m. Thursday excepted.
Telephone Hyde 1491 825 Sutter Street, S.F.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE
PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street.
Telephone Larkin 782.

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.
ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F.

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.
PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies.
Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m
Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON
CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher.
Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin
Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA
TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St
Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. GERTRUDE JUDD
WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN
TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.
TEACHER OF ZITHER.
Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street.
Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.
VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn.
Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR
MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5. Will accept engagements for concerts.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano.
MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

An Innocent Escapade

MRS. JACK WILSON had been married only a year and the novelty of matrimony had already worn off. She had always been a spirited and vivacious little woman and when she married Jack Wilson she felt that their lives would be blended in a whirl of gayety. She knew that he was a man of the world who had trod all the gilded avenues to pleasure and she believed that as his companion she would enjoy a full measure of delightful experiences.

But the matrimonial drama in which she expected to figure so congenially failed to come up to her expectations. Jack Wilson married was quite different from Jack Wilson single. Being surfeited with the stale and unprofitable diversions sodear to the heart of the man-about-town, when he arose from his farewell bachelor dinner it was with the virtuous resolve to "settle down" and become a model husband.

How different from what his handsome wife looked forward to with all the eagerness of a convent graduate emerging from her alma mater!

How often in that first year of her wedded life did she find herself soliloquizing upon what might have been had her first lover—rollicking Lee Horton--never taken that trip to Paris to perfect himself in his art studies. These soliloquies invariably ended in a flush of indignation at the thought of her own fickleness for after all she loved her husband dearly, though her ebullient spirits sometime rebelled at the restraint put upon them.

She could not help feeling that her love would be stronger if Jack would occasionally forget that they were married and plunge with her into the mad dissipations of which she had but a faint conception.

Social functions of the conventional order were wearisome and a tame husband was a bore to dashing Mrs. Jack Wilson. She often thought that if he would occasionally spend an evening at the club and permit her to find a little excitement, life would not be so monotonous, but Jack was a model husband and his devotion grew as the days passed by.

But at last her wish was to be gratified. Jack Wilson was obliged to go to Fresno on business. When he made the announcement his wife almost gave vent to an ejaculation of joy. He thought it was to be a protest and stifled it with a kiss, at the same time assuring her that only one night would separate them.

She was grateful for that one. As soon as he departed she began to devise ways and means of getting a little excitement. She curled herself up in a cushioned chair and with her pretty face in her slender hands she meditated. Presently her big brown eyes lighted up. The name of the artist Horton was on her lips. She sprang to her feet. Her plans were outlined.

Late that afternoon Mrs. Jack Wilson was among the throng of shoppers in Post street. To a casual observer it might seem that the show windows engrossed her attention, but her mind was occupied with something other than dress patterns, furs and millinery, That something materialized in the person of Lee Horton, leisurely sauntering towards the Bohemian club.

Mrs. Jack Wilson's lithe and graceful figure cast a shadow across his path; he looked up and smiled. Her big, brown eyes were expressive of great surprise when they met his gaze. She was a clever actress, was Mrs Jack Wilson. If Lee Horton had been the very last man on earth she was longing for and expecting to meet she could not have manifested greater astonishment.

After the first greetings were over he asked her why she was down town so late. The question gave her the opportunity she wanted.

"I am a grass widow," she replied.

Horton started as though he had been struck. Then he smiled.

"Joking as usual," he said.

"No, I am in earnest. Jack has deserted me for a day. He has gone to Fresno and will not return until tomorrow."

Horton thought he detected an emphasis upon the last two words

"And I suppose you are playing truant in his absence?" he said. "It must be lonesome at home without him."

There was a suggestion of sarcasm in his tone.

"Not exactly lonesome," she calmly replied, "but you know I always liked company and I thought I would come down town for dinner just for the novelty of the thing. I've heard so much about those sumptuous down town restaurants and, do you know, I've never been in one?"

"You surely wouldn't dare to enter one alone," he said.

"Dare!" she exclaimed. "You surely never knew me to be afraid!"

That evening Mrs. Jack Wilson and Lee Horton sat tête-à tête in the seclusion of an upper apartment in O'Farrell street It was a novel experience for Mrs. Jack Wilson. As she sipped her first glass of sauterne her hand trembled with excitement. She tried to affect an air of ease and composure in the presence of the waiter for she wanted him to understand that she was accustomed to that sort of thing. She felt that her spirits had never been so buoyant before but when the meal was about half over it suddenly dawned upon her that her companion was cold and reticient.

She had been doing all the talking, trying to engage him in conversation, but she could not draw him out. She told him how monotonous her married life was because of Jack's dislike for excitement.

"But Jack is a dear fellow," she said, "and when he comes home I'll make him take me here to dinner at least once a week. I'm going to rouse him up and then I know I'll be happy."

"You love him," observed Horton, in a low tone as though in soliloquy.

"Oh, yes," she replied, "Jack is the dearest fellow on earth. Of course I love him."

Sparkling wine followed the sauterne and Mrs. Jack Wilson rambled on in her talk about her husband. Presently she noticed that Horton had become very morose. She placed her hand on his and pressed it warmly. He returned the pressure and then refilled her glass with the effervescent liquid.

"So you like this sort of excitement," he said.

"It's glorious," was the enthusiastic reply.

She raised the glass to her lips and he noticed that her eyes were moist. He moved his chair closer and seized her hand.

"I wish Jack were here," exclaimed Mrs. Jack Wilson, and Horton dropped her hand so violently that it almost upset a dish.

Once more he fell into taciturnity and after that all efforts to arouse his interest were in vain.

But Mrs. Jack Wilson prattled away in a most exuberant fashion. She had never looked prettier and her conversation was never more spirited.

When they parted at the coupé door Mrs. Jack Wilson told Lee Horton that it was the most enjoyable evening she had spent in years.

"But," she added, "if only Jack had been with us!"

And then the door closed with a bang.

THE MORALIST

A LEGEND OF LONG AGO

MORE than a hundred years ago
It was, in London town;
A gin distill was under way,
And in the vat was down.
Old Tom, a feline soft and sleek,
Into the vat leaned o'er to peek,
And into it he fell!
"Come out of that!"
"It is a cat
Within the vat!"—
Came other cries as well.
They fished the fated feline out,
But he was dead beyond a doubt.
His name still lives and, in glass case,
His carcass, stuffed, is said to grace
A London store. While "Old Tom Gin" we know;
The local agents, Meinecke & Co.

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY
12 years old before being bottled

Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers

412 Front St., S. F.
Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

SHOES MADE TO ORDER
Hand Sewed, $5.50 Repairing Done Nicely
Machine Sewed, $3.50
Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold Cheap.
Telephone Folk 28 T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

You never have a head in the morning from drinking Jesse Moore "A. A." Whisky.

Katy Did

"KATY DID! Oh, Katy didn't!"
Swells the chorus on the breeze.
Katy's lover, keeping measure,
Swings her hammock 'neath the trees.

"Katy did! Oh Katy didn't!"
Stars are peeping from the sky,
Though the lovely sunset's glory
Lingers in its crimson dye.

"Katy did! Oh Katy didn't!"
How they chant the chorus over.
Lowing cows are coming homeward
From the fields of fragrant clover.

"Katy did! Oh Katy didn't!"
"Will you kiss me ere I go?"
Eagerly the voice is pleading,
Saucy Katy answers "No!"

"Katy did! Oh Katy didn't!"
Hammock swinging very slow;
Like the rhythm of sweet music,
Swaying softly to and fro

"Katy did! Oh Katy didn't!"
Now the chorus rises higher.
Slyly stealing, slowly bending,
Roguish lips are drawing nigher.

"Katy did! Oh Katy didn't!"
Brown moustache is very near,
Sunny curls brush o'er his shoulder,
"Katy did!" Oh dear! Oh dear!

ANNA E. SAMUEL

A Roving Duck

Here comes a duck a-roving, a-roving, a-roving
Here comes a duck a-roving, a-rancy-tancy-tee!
And what is your good-will, sir, good-will sir, good-will, sir,
And what is your good-will, sir, a-rancy-tancy-tee!
Oh, my good-will is to marry, to marry, to marry,
Oh, my good-will is to marry, a-rancy-tancy-tee!
And won't you take one of us sir, of us sir, of us, sir,
And won't you take one of us, sir, a-rancy-tancy-tee!
You're all too proud and ugly, and ugly, and ugly,
You're all too proud and ugly a-rancy-tancy tee!
Well, won't you take the prettiest one, the prettiest one, the prettiest one,
Well, won't you take the prettiest one, a-rancy-tancy-tee!
Well, then I'll take the prettiest one, the prettiest one, the prettiest one,
Well, then I'll take the prettiest one, so come along with me.

BROWN SAID it reminded him of the old game his little sisters used to play, when he alighted from the stage at Camp Sailor and saw the girls gathered on the porch. There was an immense group of them, about forty he was sure, and they all rubber-necked in great shape when he stepped down from his seat by the driver and gave his bag to the porter.

Brown, though he did not know it then, was the only man at Camp Sailor. There was a boy of fifteen staying at the hotel but, after Brown came, Ted Lane did not count.

Each of the twenty girls—there were only twenty when Brown started to count—made a dead set at Brown, of course. If you have never tried it, you do not know what a good time the only man at a summer resort can have. Two men are sometimes two too many but one man has matters all his own way. He can have several distinct and delightful flirtations. If he is married, he can keep the fact dark—if his wife is staying at some other resort—and if he is single, he is not in for anything serious. Nobody expects matrimony to result from a summer engagement.

So Brown just gave himself up to the pleasures of the hour. He classified the girls into lots of four each and bunched the practical and sentimental types, blondes and brunettes, rich and poor. The school teachers he put by themselves because he meant to give them the best time they ever had in their lives—it is so rarely the school-ma'am sees a real man.

Then he took them one by one and flirted with them. The practical ones he took out on the river and talked to them while they wielded the oars He talked books and babies, problems and puddings—and then he gave each a nice squeeze and, in one instance, a kiss—and left them all happy as queens.

The sentimental ones he took out walking, sometimes by moonlight and sometimes to see the sun rise over the mountain tops. He took along with him pocket editions of Byron, Swinburne and the modern erotic school of poets—and the kisses Brown distributed among this branch of the summer resorters were of the warm and languishing order.

The blondes, one and all, he compared to Venus and Lillian Russell: the brunettes, he declared, were fac similes of Anna Held.

But it was in teaching the school-teachers the tender arts of love that Brown almost forgot the fact that he was forty and the father of five children. He really outdid himself in his efforts to make an impression upon their susceptible hearts. He had too much tact to mention pedagogy in their hearing. So they did not even suspect that he knew their calling—and it was so pleasant not to be shunned but to be treated as if they were just common ordinary summer girls

The twenty had a great time and—practical, sentimental, blonde, brunette and professorein—all voted the day that Brown bade them farewell as the saddest in their calendar

He arranged his timepiece so that each fond good-bye took place when no others were around. The kisses were chaste and breathed regret on both sides

When Brown mounted the box-seat of the stage on Monday morning, each of the twenty who stood on the veranda waving him au revoir and bon voyage took his smile and the kiss he blew from his finger-tips for herself

But, afterwards, when they compared notes ———

The weather record says the thermometer rose several degrees on the afternoon of the day that Brown left Camp Sailor.

THE JOSHER.

HAPPY DAYS

IT IS the finest sport on earth to enjoy a spin on a wheel through the park and along the boulevard to the Cliff on a summer's day. But to make sure that the spin will be enjoyable the cyclist must see that he is provided with the best make of a wheel. If he chooses a Stearns he is sure to be all right. The Stearns cushion-frame bicycle is a hummer and no mistake.

Dr. A. C. Moore

A regular graduate of the original A. T. Still American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo.

Founded the Pacific Coast School at Los Angeles three years ago . .

Chronic Diseases and Deformities Successfully Treated . . .

Address, 204 SUTTER STREET, S F.

TELEPHONE MAIN 100

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

LASH'S BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

World of Letters

THE QUEEN OF THE SWAMP: Under this title we have a series of short stories by Mary Hartwell Catherwood; rather, one should say, a set of bold, clear etchings giving us the ways and moods and manners of the people in different sections of Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois, showing how environment and circumstances mold the character and engrave upon the countenance the sign of boundary relationship. So great is this as to make of them a people of almost other nationality. These stories are for the most part clear and finished: others are more vaguely limned leaving the outlines to be filled in by the reader's intuition. They are delightful reading and have been republished from the various publications in which they first appeared. Another interesting volume at hand is Tiverton Tales, by Alice Brown. This is a set of tales of one village and its contiguous surroundings. Certain events or small epochs have served the author as the framework of description and probing the idiosyncrasies of a population whose conditions have grown apart from outside influences, showing how little peculiarities will rivet the personality of this person or that in a narrow community, making it a curious study and a wondering of what these same people would develop in different environment. The author snatches some special event from which she analyses it so closely as to individualize each soul that speaks out for itself despite the dumb ways and physical conditions of their lives. The latent spirit is there in each, awaiting its awakening from the torpid everyday life that counts little things of great moment in the universal flight of time. These stories repay one for the reading and show us no matter how dull outwardly, real life and tragic events are everywere, silenced by the commonplace. [Houghton Mifflin Co. New York.]

Vacation Days in Hawaii and Japan, by Charles M. Taylor. This book is a delight to look upon and a pleasure pure and simple to read. The style of the writing is clear, direct and explicit with little attempt at poetic gush over love scenes. However one knows thers is felt here and there a gleam of humor over a ludicrous position, but all along we are pursuing this delightful journey with the air of being a fellow traveler, for we are taken into the author's confidence throughout, in his manner of speaking directly to us en personne of the many events which make up the trip. [Geo. W. Jacobs & Co., Philadelphia.]

A June Romance, by Norman Gale. This little book is now issued in a new edition and is a simple joy from cover to cover, the love story which grows up between the well born tutor and the young daughter of a retired officer. The thirty days' dream of love is entered in the tutor's diary and so we are in intimacy with the various phases and distractions of this charming idyllic romance. Norman Gale's style is peculiar and individual; it is quaint, with litt'e affectations here and there pardoned for their naiveté, but one is somewhat puzzled when a lovely young girl is described as having a "rippling" nose. If it were tears rippling down it might be tenderly effective, but to class noses as Greek or Roman! In a rippling nose behold a type discovered by this lover alone. One must not carp critically at little things when the whole has flowered so charmingly that it carries with it the sweet flavor and fragrance of young love's dream. [Hubert S. Stone Co., Chicago.]

Fighting in Cuban Waters, one of the Old Glory series by Edward Stratmeyer. This work is up to date and the excitement is all at first hand, a book for boys, young and old, to revel in, the interest enhanced by well chosen illustrations. These stories are enough to fire the young enthusiasm and many a young fellow must thrill as he reads of the other boy's glorious chances to see the world and cover himself it only with reflected glory, sharing the same sun with the greater heroes. In this one of three books of the set the young adventurer makes his way to Boston and finally enlists in the navy where he is assigned to the Brooklyn. The chapters that follow tell of Schley and how he is idolized by his men, the routine of the Jackies' daily life, of the blockade and discovery of Cervera's fleet, followed by the remarkable conflict on July third. The interest must not be spoiled by telling too much of a book that I am sure the boys would prefer reading for themselves. [Lee and Shephard, Boston.]

ANNA COX STEPHENS.

Forest and Stream has discovered that Kipling does not know how to fish. Next! Kipling, en passant, is plaintiff in twenty-three lawsuits with regard to his writings.

Mrs. Hodgson Burnett's drama, A Lady of Quality, has not met with success in England but a six-penny edition of the novel appears to be well received.

In the July number of the Forum is an interesting paper by Truxton Beale on the subject of The White Race in the Tropics

ALWAYS KEEP ON HAND

Pain-Killer

THERE IS NO KIND OF PAIN OR ACHE, INTERNAL OR EXTERNAL, THAT PAIN-KILLER WILL NOT RELIEVE.

LOOK OUT FOR IMITATIONS AND SUBSTITUTES. THE GENUINE BOTTLE BEARS THE NAME,

PERRY DAVIS & SON.

A tonic is something that restores strength and vigor to the entire system. Ripans Tabules are a tonic in the sense that they correct digestive disorders and help in the proper assimilation of food. When the organs of the stomach are in perfect working order the whole system is benefited. A society woman of New York City suffered from an attack of bronchitis each year as winter approached, and was often unable to go out of doors for days. When the last attack came on she took a Ripans Tabule each evening and was greatly benefited, having less soreness in her throat and very little tendency to cough. As a result, she had better general health that season than for years. The Tabules, she states, acted in her case as a tonic and imparted renewed strength to her system. If she omitted to take one at night, she would notice that she was not so well the next day.

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

A DRUMMER'S MAXIM

ON THE cocktail route, Chapin & Gore's old Reserve Bourbon and Rye whiskies are growing in popularity. These whiskies are handled by the firm of Wreden, Kohlmoos & Co., which was formerly the firm of William Wolff & Co. The infusion of new blood into the firm through the advent of Herman Kohlmoos, a very popular young man, has proved decidedly advantageous, but, as the drummers say, when you are handling the right kind of goods it is easy to push them along.

A NEW BUSINESS FIRM

HARRISON HOUSEWORTH, who was for many years chief accountant for Lücke's shoe house, has lately been receiving the congratulations of his friends upon having acquired an interest in the firm. Mr. Houseworth is deserving of success and there is no doubt but that Lücke's shoes will be more popular than ever. Very few men have such a wide acquaintanceship as have Harrison Houseworth and Ben Lücke, and their association in business should prove a fortunate business stroke for both.

A benedict in town has a hard time convincing his spouse that he travels only the narrow path of rectitude when he is out late. The other night he went out to "talk up a business deal" with a man. Wife was suspicious when he came home with a breath. But hubby stoutly maintained that he hadn't opened his mouth since he went out.

"Why, you went to talk, I thought. How could you talk without opening your mouth?" said she.

"Oh," said he, serenely, "I always talk through my hat."

$100 Reward $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY, Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c

Handsome hats and stylish bonnets at your own price this week—Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street.

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

Wm. B. Hooper, Manager — San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA

1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer, First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY.

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

EDUCATIONAL

SELBORNE SCHOOL... FOR BOYS

....SAN RAFAEL....

The school will reopen on August 29th in the fine new buildings, heated by steam and lighted with electricity.

For catalogue apply to the Principal,
REV. CHARLES HITCHCOCK,
SAN RAFAEL

TRINITY SCHOOL... 3300 WASHINGTON ST SAN FRANCISCO.

(FOUNDED 1876) Boarding and Day School for Young Men and Boys

Prepares for university and college.

Accredited with the University of California and the Leland Stanford University. A faculty of eleven professors and teachers.

Boarders limited to thirty-five. Christmas term opens August 1st.

REV. DR. E. B. SPALDING, Rector.

Pacific Carriage Co. OLIVER HINKLEY SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.

STANDS:

General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street

California Hotel N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny 48 Eighth Street

TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE

DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1029½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh.
Office Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND

DENTIST.
Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL

DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S W. corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas."

BUSH AND SON

DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 206 Kearny St., S. F. Rooms 310-308-309. 'Phone Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN

VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone, 4118, San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street, Telephone 66. 1529 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

FRANCIS STUART

TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK

HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON

MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone, Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LOUIS CREPAUX
(Member Paris Grand Opera)

HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

PIERCE & TAYLOR

STORAGE WAREHOUSE, 735 Market Street-Opposite Grant avenue. Furniture, Pianos, Trunks, Paintings, Mirrors and other goods stored in clean, light dry lofts. Charges moderate. Telephone Black 311.

DECKELMAN BROS.

RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON

COAL and WOOD; wholesale and retail dealer 628 and 630 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts., San Francisco. Telephone East 15

LEGAL NOTICES

SHERIFF'S SALE

SAN FRANCISCO PAVING COMPANY (a corporation) Plaintiff
vs.
ANNIE C. RINES and FIRE MAN'S SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY (a corporation) Defendants.

No. 65,594. Superior Court Department No. 7. Order of Sale and Decree of Lien.

Under and by virtue of an Order of Sale and Decree of Lien issued out of the Superior Court, Department No. 7, of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on the 11th day of July A. D. 1899, in the above entitled action wherein San Francisco Paving Company (a corporation), the above named plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of lien against Annie C. Rines, defendant, on the 21st day of February A. D. 1899, recorded in Judgment Book 47 of said Court, at page 253 I am commanded to sell all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a point upon the Northerly line of Sixteenth street distant thereon One hundred and eighty (180) feet Westerly of the Westerly line of Sanchezstreet, running thence Westerly upon the said Northerly line of Sixteenth street Fifty (50) feet, three (3) inches; thence at right angles Northerly Thirty-six (36) feet; thence Northeasterly parallel with the Southeasterly line of Market street, Eighty-two (82) feet six and one-half (6½) inches; and thence Southerly in a straight line Eighty seven (87) feet, four and three-fourths (4¾) inches to the point of commencement. Being a subdivision of Mission Block One hundred and three (103) in said City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

Public notice is hereby given that on Monday the 14th day of August A. D. 1899, at twelve o'clock Noon, of that day, in front of the New City Hall, Larkin street wing, in the City and County of San Francisco, I will in obedience to said order of sale and decree of lien, sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to raise sufficient money to satisfy said judgment with interest costs, etc., to the highest and best bidder, for lawful money of the United States

HENRY S. MARTIN,
Sheriff.

San Francisco, July 22nd A. D. 1899.

J. C. BATES, Attorney for Plaintiff,
434 California street, San Francisco.

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

Department No. 2.

ANNA DE LAWCZYNSKI Plaintiff
vs
THEOPHILE F. DE LAWCZYNSKI Defendant

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA SEND GREETING TO:

Theophile F. de Lawczynski, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful neglect of plaintiff for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of Defendant's willful desertion of said Plaintiff since the 15th day of March, 1898; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Anna Fabry, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT. Wm. A. Deane, Clerk.
By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of ROGER PRENDERGAST Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, executors of the last will and testament of ROGER PRENDERGAST deceased, to the creditors, of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executors at the law office of J. J. Dwyer at the Mills Building, Seventh Floor, Room 38, northeast corner of Bush and Montgomery streets in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Fraucisco, State of California.

PETER J. DUNNE and CHARLES HIRSHFELD,
Executors of the last will and testament of
Roger Prendergast Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 22, 1899.

J. J. DWYER, Mills Building,
Attorney for Executors.

TOWN TALK prints Briefs and Transcripts

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. 2

CHRISTINA JACOBY Plaintiff
vs
HERMAN JACOBY Defendant

Action brought in the SuperiorCourt City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff

The People of the State of California send Greeting to:

HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therin within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of Plaintiff since the 11th day of December A. D. 1897, and for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of defendant's willful neglect of said Plaintiff for more than one year last past; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Christina Penders, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT. Wm. A. Deane, Clerk.
By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased,

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Joseph F. Byrne administrator of the estate of THOMAS BYRNE, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said administrator at the office of his attorneys, Messrs. Lent and Humphrey, Rooms 54-55 Crocker Building, San Francisco, the same being his place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOSEPH F. BYRNE
Administrator of the estate of Thomas Byrne, Deceased

Dated at San Francisco, July 1, 1899.

LENT & HUMPHREY, Attorneys for Administrator,
Crocker Building San Francisco

ESTABLISHED 1863

GOLD
PEBBLE
SPECTACLES
EYE GLASSES
OPERA
FIELD AND MARINE
GLASSES

COMPLICATED
CASES OF DEFECTIVE
VISION
DIAGNOSED
FREE OF CHARGE

824 MARKET STREET, PHELAN BUILDING, Near Fourth

A. F. Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty
Open Day and Night — Telephone Main 971

Santa Fe Route

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St., Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street

Lake Tahoe

The Most Picturesque Mountain Lake on the Continent

Its Attractive Resorts

Tahoe City	Tallac
McKinney's	Lakeside House
Rubicon Park	Glenbrook
Emerald Bay	Deer Park Inn

Glen Alpine Springs

Afford fine hotels, home comforts and all modern conveniences at reasonable rates.

Endless opportunity for outdoor recreation, such as boating, bathing, steamer excursions around the lake, mountain climbing, sight seeing, hunting and fishing.

The atmosphere is pure, dry and health giving. Absolutely no malaria and no insect pests. Nights cool and delightful. Holders of Ogden Route tickets with sufficient limit may be granted a stop-over at Truckee to visit the lake. Side trip including trip around the lake, $5.00.

ALL AGENTS OF THE

Southern Pacific Company

are supplied with handsomely illustrated folders, for free distribution, giving full and complete information. Ask or send for one.

S. A. WHITE — H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W. H. Porter
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 — San Francisco

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.
DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF
PAPER
Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty
401-403 Sansome St.
SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence
Livery and Sale Stables
423 Post Street,
W. E. BRIDGE, Proprietor
Telephone No. 1323 — San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY
Office, 1004 Market Street
TELEPHONE, SOUTH 320
TELEPHONE MAIN 249

George D. Graham
MANUFACTURER OF
Printing and Lithographic INKS
Printers' Rollers and Composition
Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials
529 COMMERCIAL ST
Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.
Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.
609 Sacramento St.,
San Francisco, Cal.

W. SCHEPPLER
DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer
of
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
Sidewalks Patent Sidewalk and Curbing a specialty
Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

UNITED STATES BREWERY
311-313 FULTON STREET
CELEBRATED Steam Beer
ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS

EDWIN F. PARKER — BENJ. L. TARBOX
The Reception
206 SUTTER ST., San Francisco.
Private Rooms for Ladies — Music Room at Disposal of Patrons
Oysters in Every Style.
TELEPHONE MAIN 1231

MAISON TORTONI
S. CONSTANTINI
PROPRIETOR
French Rotisserie
Private Dining Rooms, Banquet Hall
111 O'Farrell St.

A No. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton
JAS. P. DUNNE & CO. . .
No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL . . .
Fourth and Market Sts.
Overcoats and Valises Checked Free
TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW
Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR
THE MANHATTAN . . .
25 Geary Street, S. F.
Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5011

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

Summer Resorts

BLUE LAKES HOTEL

* * *

Conducted in a quiet home-like manner. The best of tables, fine fishing and hunting. Inclosure of 25x60 feet in shallow water for women and children. Rates $10 to $12 per week in hotel or cottages according to location. Ample accommodations. Round trip good for six months, $9 50, via S.F and N. P. to Ukiah, thence by stage from Palace Hotel.

Address J. WILSON, Bertha P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

LAUREL DELL . . .

* * *

Increased facilities for comfort and pleasure. New dining room, 32x170 feet, overlooking lake. Driving, boating, bathing, fishing, bowling, etc. Lighted by gas.

H. WAMBOLD, Bertha P. O., Lake Co.

ANDERSON SPRINGS . . .

* * * Lake County

Natural Steam, Hot Sulphur and Iron Baths. Rates, $8 to $14 a week; telephone. Round trip, $8. Write for particulars.

J. ANDERSON, Proprietor,

Anderson Springs, Middletown P. O.

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging

Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room, telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5.50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References, any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

GLENBROOK . . . Lake County, California . .

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish, you wwnt to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation, yx: eiqant pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an Ifoularating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O. W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

Agua Caliente Springs Hotel, SONOMA VALLEY

* *

Two hours from San Francisco, via Tiburon Ferry. Warm mineral swimming and tub baths. Water, gas, electric bells. Rates, $10 to 12 per week, $2 per day.

Address AGUA CALIENTE SPRINGS,

Agua Caliente, Sonoma Co., Cal

Howard Springs . . . Lake County, (Putah P. O.)

* *

Hot and cold mineral springs; hot steam and plunge baths of great healing power—will cure rheumatism, nervous diseases kidney troubles, etc. Terms $10 and $12 per week. Special rates to families. Postoffice and telephone. Round trip tickets $10 at Southern Pacific office.

Address MRS. R. J. BFEBY.

Bonanza Springs . . . Lake County, Cal.

* *

A NATURAL camping ground; five different mineral springs. We cater to campers only, and invite all who want good water pure air, fishing and hunting, to come. Hot and cold mineral baths. Cottages neatly furnished to rent from $1.50 per week. Provisions, hay, grain etc., can be purchased on the grounds. Teams meet stage at Seiglers.

Address R. F. DOCKERY, Bonanza Spgs., Putah P. O., Lake Co.

HOTEL EL PASO DE ROBLES

The California Missions were founded in the healthiest part of the State. San Miguel Mission was located in the beautiful Salinas Valley, not far from Paso Robles Hot Springs and Hotel. The climate is dry, warm and invigorating. Hot, Mineral, Mud and Sulphur Springs bubble up in abundance to heal the sick—to keep the hale and hearty always so.

OTTO E. NEVER, PASO ROBLES, CAL. CITY OFFICE, 636 MARKET ST.

GERMEA

THE

KING

OF

BREAKFAST

FOODS

Recreation Park

* *

Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets

BASE-BALL

EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Santa Cruz vs. San Francisco

July 29th and 30th

FULTON
LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY
246 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.
Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons; Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 561c

TELEPHONE MAIN 400
MOISE KLINKNER CO.
RED RUBBER STAMPS, STENCILS
BOX & BURNING BRANDS
MEDALS, BADGES, CHECKS, DIES.
320 SANSOME ST. SAN FRANCISCO
MOISE'S EASY SHINE. MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

"TOWN TALK"
Moise's
ARTISTIC
RAISED LETTER
SIGNS

To Chicago in 3½ Days
To New York in 4½ Days
VIA
Chicago Union Pacific
AND
Northwestern Line
Through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Buffet-Library Cars with Barber daily . . .
All Meals Served a la Carte in Dining Cars
For full information address
R. R. Ritchie, General Agent
PACIFIC COAST
No. 2 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco
PALACE HOTEL

"PIONEER LIMITED"
BETWEEN
St. Paul and Chicago
CHICAGO MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY
Finest and most complete train on Earth
C. L. CANFIELD, General Agent,
636 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

DO YOU KNOW
A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT
Send or Sample Copy of the
OAKLAND TRIBUNE
and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco
Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory
40 ELLIS ST., Rooms 1 and 2
SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00
Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO, SHELTERED FROM OCEAN WINDS AND FOGS. VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE; EASY TERMS. AMERICAN LAND AND TRUST CO., 132 MARKET STREET, S. F.

LARKSPUR

Is destined to be the metropolis of Marin County and is San Francisco's most popular suburb. It is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mount Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially, Eminent physicians pronounce it a great sanitarium.

A Great Sanitarium Many attractions are offered—such as sea bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks snd drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations; for, Larkspur is building up more rapidly than any other town on the N. P. C. R. R. Large esidences and cottages for sale on installment payments. Do not pay rent when the same money will purchase a beautiful home. Cottages for rent; property exchanged.

AMERICAN LAND and TRUST CO.
132 MARKET STREET

SING FAT & CO.

(ESTABLISHED 1866)

Chinese AND Japanese Bazaar

CHINESE EMPEROR
TRADE MARK.

614 DUPONT STREET, next to St. Mary's Church

Beware of Firms Infringing Upon Our Name.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .

Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,

Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States

Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,

San Francisco.

Prices Hammered 25 to 50 per cent. DOWN SAVED

CLEARANCE SALE

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 MARKET STREET, S. F.

'Phone, Main 1659

Mont Rouge Vineyard

Livermore Valley California

CHAUCHÉ & BON,

PROPRIETORS

Office and Depot, 17 First St.

Telephone Main 1514 SAN FRANCISCO.

Town Talk Prints Menus

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

This Paper not to be taken from the Library.

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY

TOWN TALK

PACIFIC LITERATURE SOCIETY MUSIC STAGE POLITICS

San Francisco, August 5, 1899 Vol. 7—No. 362 Price, 10 Cents

WATER——LIGHT

Water works and electric light plants for country clubs and residences Contracts taken for complete installations, and all work fully guaranteed. Only the best class of work solicited. No steam, heat, or danger.

HERCULES GAS ENGINE WORKS, [Inc.]

305 Market St., S. F.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teaches {Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS: 3:30 TO 4:30

You should ride a

STEARNS

Cushion Frame Bicycle

Safe Deposit Vaults

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

N. W. corner of Bush and Sansome Streets.

STORES Trunks for one dollar a month.

RENTS Safes for $5 a year, furnishing the most dreadful [illegible] for valuables of all descriptions.

and his namesake of [illegible] 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS

AT HOME

Call and see

The Thermal Bath Cabinet

Baldwin Pharmacy

119-121 Ellis Street

FRL. ELLA PROSSNITZ

PRIMA DONNA

Tivoli Grand Opera Company

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,187,617.90
Capital actually paid up in cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1899	27,656,513.03

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier, William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, July 1, 1899,	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital,	1,000,000
Reserve Fund.	205,215
Contingent Fund,	442,763

E. B. POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER ROBERT WATT THOMAS MAGEE DANIEL E. MARTIN
GEORGE C. BOARDMAN W. C. B. DE FREMERY ALBERT MILLER
GEO. TASHEIRA E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO
WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

Mutual Savings Bank of San Francisco

33 POST STREET, below Kearny

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE BLDG.

Guaranteed Capital - - $1,000,000 Paid-up Capital - - - $300,000

JAMES D. PHELAN, President S. G. MURPHY, Vice President
GEO. A. STORY, Cashier JOHN A. HOOPER, Vice-President
C. B. HOBSON, Assistant Cashier

Directors—James D. Phelan, L. P. Drexler, John A. Hooper, C. G Hooker James Moffitt, S. G. Murphy, Frank J. Sullivan, Robert McElroy and Joseph D. Grant.

Interest paid on Deposits. Loans on approved securities.

Deposits may be sent by postal order, Wells, Fargo & Co., or Exchange on City Banks. When opening accounts send signature.

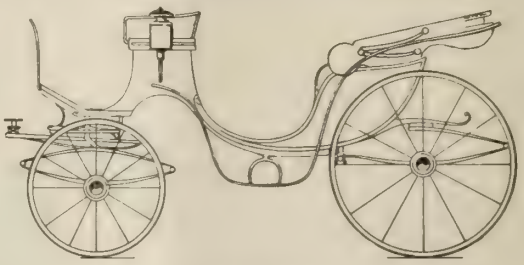
OCEANIC Steamship Company

The S. S. Australia

Sails for Honolulu Wedn'sday, Aug. 23, at 2 p. m.
The S. S. MOANA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, Aug. 9, at 10 p.m.
Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.
FREIGHT OFFICE—327 Market Street PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855.

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A. N Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S. Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart, H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

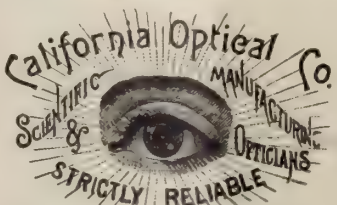
Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.



You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold
Where you will be served be purchased same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, August 5, 1899

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

THE MOTHERS' CLUBS of the State of New York are mightily exercised over Mother Goose. There has been a simultaneous uprising in New York, Syracuse, Oswego and Rome. A Mrs. Arthur J. Wells has discovered that the rhymes so dear to generations of infants contain "no wit, much vulgarity and bad grammar." Mother Goose also encourages cruelty to animals and probably, if we were to probe sufficiently into the matter, we might discover that therein lies the cause of divorce, the foundation of trusts, the discontent of the farmer and the demonetization of silver. "Children ' say these wise mothers, "know nothing of animal life except what you teach them," and they seem to be of the opinion that the babies accept "Hey diddle-diddle" and "Sing a song of sixpence" as literal facts quite uncontradicted by experience or observation. Of the bad grammar and vulgarity there might be more said, but Mother Goose is enjoyed only by children who are too young to read so that the jingles which are questionable may be omitted; and the little ones are quite as apt to learn ungrammatical expressions from an uneducated nursemaid as from Mother Goose. But not Mother Goose only is under the ban. The dreadful fairy tales must go. Jack the Giant Killer aud his namesake of the Beanstalk are pronounced quite too sanguinary for these latter day infants and one mother happened to take up the Arabian Nights, of which she reported: "I was horrified, upon reading the time-honored Arabian Nights, to find it such an undesirable book for any child." If the good woman had never in her own childhood read that "time-honored" book one can only wonder what was substituted for it. Perhaps it was an unexpurgated edition. Luckily, children are neither so wise nor so foolish as their elders and when the redoubtable Jack makes an end to the giants, they do not complete the picture with headless bodies, distorted features and oceans of gore. The average child knows nothing of surgical operations or of fatal accidents or encounters, except such as occur to their dolls and toys. It does not concern them in the least that a favorite hero meets a variety of ends. They probably would reason, if they considered the matter at all, that having further use for his head or arm, it was "stuck on again," very much after the manner in which the broken toys mysteriously become whole during the night. The good mother who expressed so much horror over the Arabian Nights might, if she should commit such an indiscretion as to open a Bible or a copy of Shakespeare, experience just such another shock. Granted that there is much unfit for the minds of children, it is also to be remembered that at the fairy tale stage of development they are unable to comprehend these other matters and either omit entirely, or skim lightly over the "stupid stuff," which has nothing to do with fairies and genii, and which, had they anything to say about the compiling of the tales, would be rigorously blue-penciled. Children love to make believe, but they are perfectly well aware that it is make believe. Johnnie and Bessie, ship-wrecked in the rocking-chair or cast away on the desert island of a yard square rug and reduced to the verge of starvation, will minutely subdivide their last cracker and keep a sharp lookout for the vessel that is to rescue them at the last moment, but who imagines those children are really suffering, or that their play gives them any idea of the hardships of a genuine shipwreck? That is, who but mothers who turn their children over to nurses and kindergartens, while they go to Women's Congresses and mothers' meetings to take lessons in child study? Those unfortunate youngsters whose mothers are taken up with the new fad are to be crammed with Mother Truths instead of Mother Goose, nice little verses about flowers and animals, and it is to be hoped they will like the change. For years the primary reading books have been full of prim little addresses by impossibly good little girls who bade their sewing good night, addressed lengthy discourses to cows and sheep, or indulged in philosophical musings upon death, sleep and other subjects they had no business with, but no one ever met such prigs outside of the books. Tennyson once took one of his relatives for a walk and pointed out to the child a fairy ring. Master Learned immediately informed him that there were no fairies and explained the formation of the so-called ring, much to the disgust of the poet, who probably found some other companion for future walks and thus deprived the good little boy of the opportunity of boring magazine readers by a series of articles on Walks with Tennyson. Hereafter the two-year-old who speaks a piece will substitute for Jack and Jill that doleful ditty:

My bird is dead, said Nancy Ray,
My bird is dead. I cannot play, etc.,

the "Child's Alphabet of Animals" with which the Century has been allowing Oliver Hereford to spoil its pages and those hideously impossible "illustrations" can now be put to use. The Golden Era, in the days when the earth was new, printed some rhymes on this same subject—a substitute for Mother Goose—only one of which can now be recalled. It ran thus:

The lion is an animal,
The hen, it is a fowl,
The horse, it is a quadruped,
The wisest bird's an owl.

DR. C. M. SHELDON, one of the innumerable horde of fool-preachers, recently conducted at Topeka, Kansas, what he is pleased to term a "question-box" and invited people to propound conundrums for him to solve, from the standpoint of "What Jesus Would Do." Here are some samples of the character of sacrilegious rot that came out of the box:

"If Jesus were in my place would he wear a trained dress on the streets and sweep up microbes?"

"If he were overlooked by a street car conductor what would he do?"

"Would he take a fall out of a fresh waiter?"

It has often occurred to us that the professors of religion and righteousness, the God-fearing exhorters and pulpiteers that preach the horror of hell fire, do not stagger at blasphemies which would give pause to hardened sinners. The ministers themselves have been guilty of far too much irreverence in propounding idle and silly queries as to what Christ would do under such and such circumstances. When at a loss for a sensational theme for a sermon they never hesitate to ring the changes on the question as to what Jesus would do. To a mind possessed of reverence for things sacred, this practice savors too much of the circus. Why ask what Christ would do when we have his teachings in the New Testament to enlighten us? Is it not making a mockery of religion to encourage the asking of such a question as to whether Christ, if he were a woman, would wear skirts and sweep up microbes?

SEVERAL DAYS AGO the New York Herald reported on the authority of one of its high salaried foreign fabricators of fat-witted fiction that Admiral Dewey had asserted that our next war would be with Germany and that it was inevitable. The contradiction of such a fatuous falsehood was superfluous. Its absurdity was its own contradiction. Within the past year we have become so thoroughly acquainted with Admiral Dewey and so familiar with his mental calibre, that it requires more subtle misrepresentation than that of which a Creelman or one of his ilk is capable, to effect deception. Is it not about time for the newspaper proprietors of the country to realize that the sort of journalism which they are fostering by the employment of Creelmanesque correspondents does not benefit them? If the purpose of newspapers is to publish the news and if unreliability inspires distrust, weakens the influence of the press and leads to loss of circulation, it should be the aim of proprietors to discourage such faking as that which is indulged in by those correspondents that revel in retractions of their own romances. The average so-called newspaper commissioner that fakes interviews with crowned heads and other distinguished personages, and plasters the horizon with war clouds, is not a trained newspaper man. The newspaper man that has served an apprenticeship as a police reporter and risen by easy stages in his profession, learned early in his career that reliability was essential to success. In late years magazine romancers have been lured into daily newspaperdom for advertising purposes. It is the theory of proprietors of yellow journals that people like to read articles signed by men who have the reputation of being "fine writers," and that the employment of these men implied enterprise and prosperity. The capacity of the "fine writers" as news-gatherers is not taken into consideration. It was in consequence of this new theory that the New York Journal with a lot of silk-shirted magazine heroes in Cuban waters, was badly beaten at the beginning of the late war by those of its contemporaries that were represented at the front by one or two ex-police reporters. It is in consequence of this same theory that many of the foreign dispatches of today are contradictions of those of yesterday.

John Brisben Walker, editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, is about to bring a suit for $100,000 damages against Count Tolstoi's agents for breach of contract in regard to the novel, "The Awakening," which has been appearing as a serial in that magazine. Owing to the difficulties which have arisen no further installments of the novel will appear in the Cosmopolitan. The case promises to be a cause celebre in literature. Expurgation and editing of the story was necessary, Mr. Walker says, to permit of its being allowed to go through the mails in the Cosmopolitan, and this excision caused Count Tolstoi to forbid further publication. Mr. Walker claims many breaches of contract on the part of the Count's representatives.

Of course Mr. Walker has no expectation of recovering pecuniary damages as Count Tolstoi prudently made over all his possessions to his wife before announcing his adherence to the doctrine that a man has no right to own property, so that for practical purposes he is as judgment proof as the average dead-beat. What seems the real funny part of all this fuss over "The Awakening" is that Brunnetiere would not accept it for the Revue des Deux Mondes as he regarded it as too bald for publication in that journal. The Cosmopolitan edited and expurgated the story, while in England it is published in full, and yet the good Victorian dames throw up their hands in horror at France and America and affect to regard those two countries as the abiding place of all that is objectionable. Someone once said, "Most of the modesty in this world will look at anything provided it can be seen through a crack," and the crack of a translation seems to answer every purpose. The Cosmopolitan will find no difficulty in filling the space heretofore occupied by Tolstoi's novel, and, if one may judge by comments made by its readers, there will be few who care enough for the story to go to any particular pains about obtaining the rest of it.

SAN FRANCISCO is a very active city just now. It has been converted into a garrison town of unusual importance. Thousands of soldiers are coming and going every week and thousands are constantly in camp on the military reservation. We are the host of Uncle Sam's soldiery and while we are kept busy extending the glad hand to the veterans of the Manila campaign we are making elaborate preparations for a royal reception to our own Californian regiment. We are so enthusiastically sustaining the reputation of the state for hospitality that it is somewhat difficult for us to find time to devote to the ordinary humdrum affairs of life, but at present we are on the eve of the most important primary election that has ever been held in this state. That primary is to have an important influence upon the future of the city government. Much will depend upon the character of the men who are elected to inaugurate the new system of government provided for by the charter ratified at the last session of the legislature. The primary will be conducted under a law enacted for the purpose of enabling the voters of the city to elect a convention for the selection of candidates for office. Primaries of the past have been mere farces controlled entirely by corrupt bosses, but under the existing law the people are guaranteed the enforcement of the expression of their preferences. It therefore behooves every man who is interested in the welfare of the city to perform his duty as a citizen on Tuesday next.

THERE ARE several small towns in this state in any one of which if Christopher A. Buckley were to attempt to repeat himself as he is now doing in San Francisco, the authorities would find it somewhat difficult to protect him from the wrath of indignant citizens. Some years ago Buckley was the dictator of the local democracy. At the same time he was the associate of thugs, the middle-man for jury bribers, and the disbursing agent of all corporations that deemed it expedient to corrupt judges and supervisors. He fattened off infamy until the pride of prosperity prompted him to grow bolder in his nefarious enterprises, and with recklessness born of insatiate cupidity he accomplished a deal involving the sale of his party and for this act of treachery he was repudiated and driven into obscurity. Subsequently in self-sought exile he eluded justice, and in obscure quarters in a remote part of Canada the wretched fugitive trembled in fear at the sound of every footstep. And now with brazen effrontery this vile blackleg of the slums, not satisfied with the plethoric pickings of the past, seeks to intrench himself once more in the hope of adding to his plunder. What a humiliating commentary on the apathy of the community that such a political pirate should flaunt his black flag in our faces without fear of being suspended at the yard-arm. Christopher A. Buckley is maneuvering for the capture of the next democratic municipal convention and despite his infamous record, his duplicity and treachery, he is receiving encouragement from men that pose as honest, law abiding citizens. Their only excuse for associating with him is that they have not been invited by the Committee of One Hundred to sit in the councils of the party. They insist upon being given prominence. They are not concerned for the welfare of the city. They can see nothing at stake except jobs at the city hall. Those are the people that intend to vote at the primary election for the restoration of Buckleyism. Fortunately the people that have no interests in the prospects of job-seeker Bill Jones of the twenty-eighth district or job-seeker Tom Smith of the forty-first district are in a large majority, and they are not to be influenced by the whims and caprices of political soreheads. Their assistance is needed at the primary election to put the quietus on Buckley and his push, and they should not fail to respond.

Theo. F. Bonnet.

NOW that Secretary Alger is out of office his friends are saying that he is a very much abused man. They are actively spreading the report that his fealty to the president prompted him to shoulder the blame that should have been cast upon McKinley for many of the scandals that grew out of the war. They declare that Alger was ignored by the president and that it was the latter's acts that caused so much dissatisfaction. In other words Alger permitted himself to be used as a shield to break the force of the shafts of hot criticism hurled against the administration. Mr. Alger is now a candidate for a seat in the United States Senate, and hence the solicitude of his friends. It will not avail, however, to contend that he was the victim of a designing president. Public opinion cannot be changed by the mere assertion of a coterie of politicians interested in a scheme to foist the ex-secretary of war upon the Senate. The charges made against him in the press have received strong circumstantial corroboration that cannot be rebutted by the oral testimony of the defendant's constituents in Michigan. Moreover by representing him as a complacent figure-head in the cabinet they are not likely to raise him in the estimation of the public. But his election to the United States Senate is not very improbable. He is a very rich man and he controls great interests in Michigan where he has already opened his barrel. His money was freely used in preparations for an ovation and when he returned home there was much hired enthusiasm designed to create a false impression as to his popularity. Those of his neighbors and fellow citizens whose endorsement and approval are subject to monetary influences may be depended upon to give the late Secretary of War a rousing welcome, and when the legislature convenes Colonel Mazuma will clank his golden spurs in the capitol.

ON TOCALOMA'S HEIGHTS

SLOWLY o'er each rounded hill
The tender dawn is lightly breaking;
Chilly breath of passing night
The sleeping flowers are wakening.
The misty sky shows rosier tints above
Awake O love! Awake heart's love
The misty sky and woods shew rosy tints, dear love!

But still and cold in death's long sleep;
In patient waiting lies 'till that bright dawn,
Stay of my soul; my far-off love!
Sleeping flowers that dawn awakened
Withered and wind-strewn, lie—
Darkening skies, long shadows streaming.
Cover up the worn-out day,
And softly, sweetly sleeps my love.

—B. Welwyn Ashley

The Saunterer

PLATONIC LOVE, about which there is so much prattle nowadays, and a misconception of whose application seems to have increased the divorce evil, is a much misconstrued term. Reading Plato in the original, or even in its proper translation, one finds nothing that could lead to the idea that Plato believed in the so-called "platonic love" between man and woman of which he is said to have been the instigator. The relation Plato wrote of was in reality friendship, of man to man. I am led to these observations by the prevalence of the "soul relation" topic among the married women who find their chief pleasure at the summer resorts in flirting with the stray youths that are able to enjoy an entire week's vacation, while the husbands can only leave town from Saturday till Monday. There is no harm in these mild flirtations: they are simply to pass the time. Nevertheless, I often wonder how the youths' brains can stand all this poppycock about elective affinities, moving in the same psychic circle, and other horoscopic nonsense, on days when the mercury touches ninety-nine in the shade and an iced julep is the only possible drink.

Speaking of summer resorts, what lots of food for gossip is given by the simple announcements published in the daily papers of arrivals at the resorts. In looking over the San Francisco papers a friend of madame, who is in New York visiting her parents, sees the arrival of Miss Blank noted at one of the summer hotels. Looking farther down in the same list, she spies the name of madame's husband. How very easy to put two and two together, for it is well known that madame has cherished a sneaking feeling of jealousy for monsieur's expressed liking for "that jolly Miss Blank." The truth of the matter may have been that monsieur and Miss Blank enjoyed a drive and a luncheon à deux at the summer hotel, a perfectly harmless diversion, but madame's friend is sure to put the worst construction on the close proximity of the two names in the hotel register. And, before you can turn around almost, madame has returned home in a hurry and has instituted divorce proceedings. This is not a fairy story.

I hear that the marriage will shortly be celebrated of the wealthy widow, Mrs. Bandmann, and Lieutenant Brandt, who rumor says is several years the lady's junior. Mrs. Bandmann, however, is a very young looking woman for her years, is sprightly and vivacious, and would make a remarkably congenial companion for any man. She is building a magnificent residence at the corner of Union street and Van Ness avenue and it is understood that when the house is finished the marriage of the widow and her lieutenant will take place. The contemplated wedding of Mrs. Bandmann recalls memories of her beautiful daughter, Tonie, who died soon after her marriage to Percy Rothwell, the milling man. Tonie was considered one of the most fascinating girls of her set and her early death was an occurrence of much regret. She was a jolly good fellow long before such a characterization for a genial-tempered feminine came into fashion and the many parties that her mother gave in her honor after she made her début in society were such happy occasions that invitations to them were eagerly sought after. And a face always to be seen at these receptions was that of Miss Carrie C. Platt.

Miss Platt deserves a paragraph to herself as, since the days when she officiated as chief magnet at the Bandmann parties, she has become a celebrity in another circle. At the time she was Tonie Bandmann's chum, it was said that her friend's mother used to invite her to the receptions at the Lombard street residence because she was such a potent drawing-card to the masculines. However that may be, Miss Platt was certainly always a belle though she did not manage to capture a rich husband. There are those who believe that the metamorphosis of Gertrude Atherton's heroine, Hermia Suydam, from a dark-skinned, scrawny girl into a ravishingly beautiful woman was an impossibility. Yet nearly a fac simile of such a transformation was effected in the case of Carrie Platt. She was

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco.

JOHN CAFFREY, Pacific Coast Representative.

a most unattractive, freckle-faced little school-girl, dull and uninteresting, yet now at a few years beyond thirty she is one of the striking beauties of her sphere. Some complexion tonics and a dash of chemical to her dark brown hair were partial mediums to effect the change and as she has a finely rounded figure and an inborn good taste in dress she is easily ranked a winner, to use an apropos sporting term. She is, I believe, at present in the east but I have heard of no split in the friendship that has existed for a number of years between Miss Platt and a local clubman. His residence is at the Pacific-Union club but it is well known that he has, or did have, an interest in a well appointed flat near Nob hill. Those who have wondered why the scion of one our oldest families—whose name is still carried by one of the city's landmarks—has forborne to marry in his set and raise a family to inherit his immense fortune find the explanation in the love he bears for the fair San Franciscan some of whose attractions are here recorded.

Having had occasion to comment unfavorably upon school and college journals in general, it behooves me to say a word in commendation of the Porcupine, the organ of the Santa Rosa high school. Though much less pretentious than the average amateur publication the matter is better selected and a recent number contains a story under the title "The Moorish Treasure," which is not behind much of the fiction contained in the lighter monthly magazines. The articles are signed only by initials and "E. R. 02" gives no clew to the author who is probably one of the pupils of the school. It is the matter of personalities and exchanges that I wished particularly to note. There is a complete absence of the offensive flippancy and smart Aleck style of comment which usually characterizes these publications and where names are used they are so carefully elided as to tell no tales out of school. In appearance the Porcupine could be improved. The pages bristle with typographical errors and the selection of initials and the make-up are not creditable to the printing firm which undertakes to get the paper out. While on this subject, "The Whittier Monthly" also deserves its share of praise and in this case there is nothing to criticise in appearance and make-up. The work is done by the printing class in the state school at Whittier, and challenges comparison with that of the average publishing establishment. Naturally a large part of the contents is made up of personal comment but the tone is so uniformly dignified and gentlemanly (or ladylike) that one cannot help but wish the editors of the college Red and Yellows might have the advantage of a few years at Whittier. If the school is as successful in other respects as it is in this the state will have reason to take pride in the pupils.

I. W. Lees, the veteran police functionary, has grown tired of throwing himself into hacks and he has asked the supervisors to equip the police department with automobiles. There was a time when Chief Lees was very fond of hacks. A hack invariably played a leading role in every sensational capture made by the local Vidocq. It was his custom whenever he made an important arrest to summon the police reporters of the dailies to the "upper office," as his headquarters have always been known, and then tell the whole story from the beginning. He is a very skillful romancer, is the old chief, and when he tells the reporters how he captured a daring safe-cracker or a clever forger or how he hunted down the clews to the mysterious murder, he always begins at the beginning, after the style of Old Sleuth and recites each chapter with all its sidelights of details until the dénouement is reached. And invariably he pictures himself in at least one chapter in the act of hurling himself into a hack. If the hack were omitted the story would be incomplete. But the chief is strictly up to date and he evidently feels that it behooves him to have an automobile for future hurling operations. I wonder if he could capture a lottery ticket agent with an automobile?

No other than Chester Bailey Fernald was chosen by Mrs. Cora Urquhart Potter to make the adaptation from Herman Heyermans' "The Ghetto," which is to be the chief attraction of the Potter-Bellew repertory next season. It is a tale of Jewish life and it is said to be intensely interesting, Heyermans' being one of the most powerful of the German writers. Mr. Fernald's adaptation of his own story, "The Cat and the Cherub," was a great success in London and its leading interpreter, Holbrook Blinn, is today one of the most popular character actors in the great metropolis, I hear.

He (enthusiastically): Miss Swell is a jolly girl, a regular bird.

She (coldly): I have heard it said that she is fly.

The provincial aristocracy of Bakersfield is very much exercised over TOWN TALK's gossip concerning some of its members. Those that my correspondent does not deem of sufficient importance to mention are very wroth, but try to solace themselves with the notion that the correspondent is one who has never penetrated the real gilt-edged inner circles. The Daily Californian of Bakersfield has been trying to pour oil on the troubled waters and in a recent issue of that interesting and influential journal it was stated anent the speculation aroused over the authorship of a certain article that a resident of Bakersfield received some time ago from TOWN TALK a form containing questions together with the request that they be answered. "He argues," says the Californian, "that he having received this form, others did also, some of whom returned it filled out. TOWN TALK thus having a mass of material at hand selected that deemed best and faked up a column of correspondence." What an ingenious explanation! If the individual that concocted it expected it to suffice and to receive the congratulations of his friends for having solved the mystery, I must bid him smoke up and awake from his pipe dream. Having become fully aroused, I desire to stigmatize this Bakersfieldian a san unconscionable liar. He never received a form from TOWN TALK containing questions to be answered. I have never issued such a form nor have I ever solicited correspondence, and it is a rule of TOWN TALK that all anonymous communications shall go into the waste basket.

There isn't an ounce of headache in a barrel of it—Jesse Moore "A. A" Whisky.

Engraved . . .
Wedding Announcements and Invitations . . .

ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

The old country place that belongs to the estate of the late Mrs. Kate Johnson, renowned for her art treasures and her collection of blooded felines, is now a summer resort. It is one of the finest properties in Sonoma county, the comfortable residence surrounded by beautiful grounds and well cultivated acres of nursery and farming land, and is at present occupied by the Gottenbergs. It is a pleasant summer resort and one of the chief attractions of the place to the summer girl is the son of the house, Dr. J. Gottenberg. He is a young man of fine physical and mental attributes and as he enjoys the distinction of being the only dentist in Sonoma, it may easily be understood that he ranks high as an eligible. He is an enthusiastic camera artist, an authority on horse flesh and a devoted cycler. What the girls enjoying Buena Vista's hospitality this summer would have done without Dr. Gottenberg I do not know, as he has made himself useful in all the various pleasing ways in which masculine attentions can be displayed.

At Buena Vista among the other guests are the Misses Nelson, very charming girls who go in for all sorts of athletic sports with eagerness and especially enjoy pedestrianism. It is well known that in no other county are more interesting walks than are found in Sonoma, so many different "springs" to visit and such inspiriting mountain climbs. I understand that Colonel Boyce considers his place the crack springs in Sonoma county. One of the diversions of the guests at the summer hotels is to go to church in Sonoma on Sunday and an especially favored sanctuary is that of the Congregational sect. Here they have an admirable choir of which Miss Claire Hope is the soprano and upon a recent Sabbath the quartet was strengthened by the addition of Roy Smith of San Francisco, who rendered a tenor solo. The visiting summer girls have a powerful rival in the prettiest of Sonoma's many well-favored feminine residents, Miss Bertha Campbell. There are others who may dispute the title but the writer contends that Miss Campbell carries away the palm for general attractiveness.

"Why, Mr. Blazay," she asked, "have you never married?"

"Because," he replied, "no girl that I have fancied has ever fancied me."

She believed that he was an egotist and had expected to elicit a reply that would enable her to indulge in sarcasm, but she decided to pursue the subject no further.

Private sanitariums are institutions in which I have never had much confidence. They are so easily converted into private prisons and inducements to that end are so frequently offered that I think they should be prohibited. There is a private sanitarium near Livermore and if there is but a morceau of truth in some of the stories that I have heard concerning the management, an investigation should prove productive of interesting and perhaps sensational revelations. People living in the neighborhood of this sanitarium tell of suicides that are hushed up and of the cruel treatment of patients. These stories may be exaggerated but I am inclined to believe that the management of the sanitarium is not any better than that of other institutions conducted upon a similar basis. As it is an invasion of the constitutional rights of an individual to deprive him of his liberty without due process of law, I should like to know by what authority people are confined in private sanitariums. A person cannot be committed to a public insane asylum without having been adjudged insane by a court of competent jurisdiction, yet people are being sent everyday to private insane asylums that are referred to in a delicate way as sanitariums.

The Detroit Free Press recently devoted three or four columns of its front page to a rather facetious bit of writing by one Kenneth Hereford, the subject being "Gelett Burgess in Chelsea." This Kenneth Hereford has much to say of " 'Jelly' as they call him over here." Jelly! And Bailey Millard was aggrieved because Burgess had dropped the other prenomen, Frank. Jelly! surely the score is evened now, whatever was at the bottom of the matter. Gelett Burgess and the Detroit Free Press make an uncertain combination, the more so that Kenneth Hereford is an unknown quantity to me and against the following extract I can only set the positive assurance of Mr. Doxey, publisher of the Lark as well as the two volumes of Yone Noguchi's poems, that the latter are unquestionably the work of the young Japanese:

By and by the critics began to gape. Among them they prophesied the birth of either a genius or an ass—it's a bit hard for a critic to distinguish the one from the other at first glance. Just as they had about decided that Burgess was a moulting genius, lo and behold, there appeared upon the western horizon a more amazing figure still. He was a young Japanese and wrote poetry in which he was supposed to be letting his oriental soul fly about on occidental pinions. Jelly Burgess discovered Yone Noguchi and the world stepped back with wonder. What marvelous poetry Yone did write. The eastern editors began to print it, essayists wrote essays upon it and dull college professors and academic pedagogues scanned it. To make it all the better, a cloud of mystery enshrouded Yone. It leaked out that Jelly had turned him over to the ministering care of Joaquin Miller, who took him in and provided for him on the Heights at Oakland. The magazines printed portraits of Yone. And then Jelly Burgess, his discoverer, fled to England where today he sits in a Chelsea attic, laughing at the critics of the world whom he had hocus-pocused in the belief that such a person as Yone really were alive. It was a good joke, that writing of idiotic tommyrot that a Sanscrit scholar would not understand, and palming it off on America and England as the soul-outpouring of a clever Japanese. But Jelly will never be forgiven by the critics. A man is not likely to forgive at once a man who proves he is an ass. Jelly tells his friends now that if the discerning critics found anything in Yone's lines they did more than he could ever do, and he wrote all the verses ascribed to the Jap himself.

Hereford thinks this is a great advertisement for Burgess, who is described in one sentence as riding the topmost wave of popularity in England and, in another, as living in a garret six stories from the street and wondering why he ever left San Francisco. If I remember rightly, there was no particular haste about Burgess' "flight." It was well known in this city that he intended to go east and he tarried awhile on the Atlantic seaboard, where we have it on the authority of Bailey Millard that he was the idol of the pink tea coterie. Some months ago, very soon after "Jelly" took up his residence in London, the Bookman reproduced a most amusing drawing by Burgess, wherein he was shown in a shabby attic room ruefully contemplating by the light of a guttered and expiring candle his bill for lodgings, while on the top of his file was

Engraved . . . ✱
Wedding Announcements
and Invitations . . . ✱

ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

his receipt for literary work far below the cost of his living. Perhaps Mr. Hereford had that picture and a powerful imagination to aid him.

"The news we get from Rome
Is all made up at home,
It's my conviction;
And that, you see, will account
For the terrible amount
Of contradiction."

If Mr. Burgess did write the Yone Noguchi poems, it is hard to comprehend how a man of Mr. Doxey's experience and ability could have published both of those volumes and the Lark without discovering the identity, and if the matter were a trade secret, he could have no reason for concealment when Mr. Burgess has spoken. In view of the fact that Vance Thompson published a similar statement in the Musical Courier last winter, one would like to see something explicit about the matter over the signature of both Yone Noguchi and Gelett Burgess. Anyway, the poetry is quite as good as Stephen Crane's—or for that matter, much of Walt Whitman's.

The many friends of Mrs. M. M. Fitzgerald—and they are legion—are happy over her election to the vice-principalship of the Denman school. Mrs. Fitzgerald is one of the most thoroughly cultured instructors on the Pacific coast and cleverness such as she possesses cannot but bring to its owner the best of laurels. Mrs. Fitzgerald combines a delightful personality with her genius, her ready wit never permitting a dark moment to enter where she is present. And, while not essential to success as a pedagogue, it is worthy of mention that she is a very fine-looking woman and her crowning glory, as her girl pupils will have it, is her hair which is of the rare auburn hue that fairly sparkles with gold when in the sun.

Mrs. E. M Baumgardner, who has just resigned from her position as vice-principal of the Denman, is one of the old time members of the local school department and in her class—the highest grammar grade—has been numbered a succession of pupils from the representative families of the city. Few teachers can have such pleasant memories of their classes as can Mrs. Baumgardner, as she gazes down the list of graduates from her grammar grade. Charlotte Thompson, now doing such admirable critical work on the Call, once studied under Mrs. Baumgardner and among others enjoying her tuition in times past were many who are now shining lights in the world of art, society and letters.

The Musical Age says that New Yorkers who spend the most money in entertaining are never so lavish as the London hosts who provide music at their houses. "It was an American who paid Paderewski five thousand dollars for appearing at two musicales," says the Age, "but he lives in London and was only endeavoring to compete with others in the set he desires to move in. Madame Melba now gets two thousand dollars for singing in London drawing rooms and is said to have had eleven engagements during the season at that price. This demand for their services at private houses makes the London opera a matter of secondary importance to the singers who are popular in drawing rooms. No such prices are paid for their services here. The highest sum ever paid here was given last winter to Madame Sembrich. This was two thousand dollars for a musicale in a private house." In San Francisco singers would find it very difficult to obtain anything at all approaching a fair price for singing in private houses. I believe that the De Youngs are the only people who are liberal in this matter. A local millionaire would think he was being bled of his beloved dollars if anybody suggested that he should give a function and pay a great vocal or instrumental star to entertain his guests. When singers or players of merely local reputation appear at receptions or musicales it is rarely that they receive anything, I am told, beyond thanks from the hostess. The guests' applause is supposed to be sufficient remuneration.

"I say, ma'am, you've got a big rip in the back of your skirt," said the small boy to the fat woman who was lumbering down the sands from the bath-house at Santa Cruz.

Being self-possessed she did not blush. And being a woman of resources she shifted her patent adjustable skirt so that the rent faced the water, and she continued on her way into the surf.

That the so-called exclusive set of Newport is not very particular about the character of people that it entertains has once more been evidenced by the prominence that Baron Oppenheimer has received there. He is the guest of Mrs. Astor and is cutting a wide swath. Baron Oppenheimer is a Parisian fortune-hunter of the Castellane type. He is a pensioner upon the bounty of his uncle, an honored and honorable banker of the same name. For years, I have heard, he has been pursuing American women with the object of capturing an heiress but his efforts have been in vain. He is not admitted into society at home but he is always conspicuous on the Avenue des Acacias in the Bois by reason of the circumstance of his being accompanied by a groom who paints his face and uses peroxide on his hair. That sort of evidence of effeminacy attracts attention even in Paris.

Dr. A. C. Moore

A regular graduate of the original A. T. Still American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo.

Founded the Pacific Coast School at Los Angeles three years ago . .

Chronic Diseases and Deformities Successfully Treated . . . .

Address, 204 SUTTER STREET, S F.

TELEPHONE MAIN 100

The Laxative Liver Lozenge

PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable

PRICE 25 CENTS

CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WESTERN HOŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, 139 Powell St

W. W. STOCKER.

Utica Cleansing Compound and Utica Compound Paste.....

TIACU TRADE MARK

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society, 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

This compound is made of pure and unadulterated drugs
Used for Baths and Shampoo it will make the skin soft and white.

For Swollen and Painful Feet it is unrivaled.

For Poison Oak and Prickly Heat it is a sure remedy.

Suitable for cleansing anything.

SAMUEL SEYMOUR,
Pacific Coast Agent.

21 SPEAR ST. S. F.

The warmth with which a certain out of town democratic politician defended the "good" name of Chris Buckley reminds me of an occasion, many years ago, when that orator had hardly reached the threshold of his career as either attorney or politician. He was to try his powers of persuasion and flattery upon the benighted residents of an obscure mining camp and was presented to his audience as "the son of the most illustrated Irishman in the country." This of course, was long before the Klondike discoveries, and another attorney who afterward attained considerable prominence in state politics and who joined the great majority several years ago, took occasion, at the same meeting, to score the republican party for wasting the people's money in purchasing the barren "island of Alaska," much to the delight of the schoolboys who formed an appreciative part of the "large and enthusiastic audience."

Some of the eastern papers are hard at work on a genealogy and pedigree for the Grant family which will make Miss Julia as much of a descendant as her prince with the unspeakable name. The Grants are now traced back through American, English, Scotch and Scandinavian forbears as far as the year 600 and coats, crests and mottoes are as plentiful as royalty can have any desire for. Two generations from now the Grants—if there are any so unfortunate as still to bear the name—will have difficulty in persuading themselves that the obscure tanner who was something in the army and held some kind of a position under government can have been anything more than a namesake.

"So you married me to excite the jealousy of Algernon Lycurgus Smith!" ejaculated the indignant husband.

For reply she scrutinized her finger-nails closely after the style of the heroine in the society play.

"Well," he continued with an air of hauteur that seemed frost-bitten, "I married you through spite, for I loved the fair Marie Corelli Brown."

"What an amusing coincidence," remarked little Edith as she smiled upon her parents.

Which shows that even the offspring of a mismated pair may be precocious.

John Pease Norton, a son of John H. Norton of Los Angeles, was graduated from Yale university, valedictorian of a class of three hundred. During his four years' course, he gained ten prizes and scholarships, probably the largest number ever won by a student in the same time. Who outside of his own family ever heard of him? Now had John Pease Norton devoted himself to the legitimate pursuits of a college career and excelled in football, bicycle racing, jumps, runs, etc., he would have been famous from east to west, his picture in every permissible form of dress and undress would have been published, and his weight and measurements chronicled abroad. Foolish young man to imagine a college course means anything but athletics!

The amusement we find in curious expression of "foreign English" is never in the least adulterated by the circumstance that we make equally poor work of our attempts at other languages, for like the good British matron traveling on the continent and overhearing a reference to her party as foreigners, we are apt, mentally, at least to "Beg pardon, but it is you who are the foreigners. We are English." This is the latest story. An American who was not a fluent Italian scholar happened to be in Venice when Cervera's fleet was destroyed. Eager to learn the full particulars, he carried his paper to a professor of languages for translation. It took him more than a minute or two to recognize the United States of the sentence "And the band played 'The flag with the stars on it,' and 'It will be very warm in the city this evening.'" Possibly President Harper of the Chicago university may withdraw his objection to the familiar Hot Time if the Italian paraphrase is adopted.

If there is one summer resort in this state where the male biped has not been scarce this season it is in Ross valley. The cheapness of a summer outing in the valley and the circumstance of its being easily accessible to residents of this city have made it a popular resort, and it is crowded with young men. Nevertheless there is one young woman in the valley who has been lonesome. I do not know whether this lonesomeness has been due to her failure to interest any of the numerous young men, or whether it has resulted from her inability to appreciate their society. At any rate in this beautiful valley thronged with male summer sojourners, a young, good looking woman longed for the society of a man. She is an heiress, too, having obtained quite a tidy sum from the estate of her father who was in the broom manufacturing business, and she is therefore not lacking in charms. About a fortnight ago she shocked the young men of the valley by 'phoning to Sausalito for a man. The message was sent from Mira Monte where the young woman is living, and of course she was overheard and the whole valley knew about it in a very short time. The message was in the nature of an appeal. And what an earnest appeal it was! "Come and stay a few days," she said, "and I'll pay all your expenses." How is that for generosity? And he came too—an Englishman, tall and distingué. He is a clerk in the bank of British Columbia and he lives in Sausalito. He remained at Mira Monte as the guest of the young woman for two days, notwithstanding the efforts of a couple of practical jokers to rout him out the first night. They dumped him out of bed and hurt his feelings—but he stayed.

Not everybody knows that Henry Miller, who is considered a representative American actor, was in reality born on the other side of the pond. He came over from England, however, at an early age and his home during the greater part of his youth was in Toronto, in which city he made his dramatic début. I am told that Mr. Miller points with pride to the fact that he gained his first training in stage work from C. W. Couldock, the veteran of Effie Ellsler's "Hazel Kirke" company.

There are lots of 'A. A.' brands of whisky, but only one Jesse Moore 'A A

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY
12 years old before being bottled

Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers
412 Front St., S. F.
Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

SHOES MADE TO ORDER
Hand Sewed, $5.50
Repairing Done Nicely
Machine Sewed, $3.50
Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold Cheap.
Telephone Polk 18
T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

Bakersfield, writes my correspondent, is deadly dull just now and there is a dearth of topics of conversation. All we have to fall back upon as a subject for chat over our iced lemonade is Lord Brooke. I omitted, by the way, to include this gentleman among the prominent residents mentioned in a former letter, yet he is one of the principal members of our aristocracy. He affords entertainment for itinerants including Bakersfield in their route, by reason of his strictly English attire, the carefully creased ducks and the Seymour jackets that he affects. He is a Chumley without whiskers, a reproduction in fact of the blond-moustached Briton who figures in American dramas of the "Aristocracy" and "The Henrietta" order. I cannot recount all the Christian names of Lord Brooke but they cover considerable alphabetical area and Chappelle is the name to which he most frequently answers. He is under thirty years of age and is so susceptible to feminine charms that he will not let a day pass without an introduction to each new arrival of the feminine gender. He is a beau of very different pattern from Mr. Pope, whom I lately described, but is not less interesting. He has not been doing anything unusual of late to propel him into publicity but the dearth of social news leads me to give Lord Brooke's pen portrait in lieu of other matter. He is an eligible and in San Francisco I could fancy him the idol of the swim, for he is a genuine society type. He lives on his income which, judging from his manner of dress, is a liberal one; his home is at the smartest hotel Bakersfield can boast of. Quite a long time ago, the story goes, Lord Brooke went to St. Louis with intent to start a bank there, but he did not like the Missouri metropolis and returned here, since when he has seemed highly satisfied with his lot as a gentleman of leisure. He has a penchant for dogs, an English trait of character that is now becoming noticeable in America.

Upon any fine day one may meet Lord Brooke, generally in Chester avenue, which is his pet premenade, or else sipping a cool drink in the principal drug-store of the place. He is often joined by one of his chums, a jolly matron of the smart set whom I have referred to before as "the doctor's wife." She is a lively woman, masculine in her tastes and is considered a boon companion by most of the gay young men here, who call her "Ma." I must not forget to mention that one of Brooke's greatest adorations was Miss Maud Morrell of the Modjeska company who not long ago was spending her vacation with her sister here. Miss Morrell is a most attractive girl, as her Oakland and San Francisco friends will vouch for, and she made as big a hit in Bakersfield social circles as she has accomplished on the stage. Lord Brooke was her preux cavalier during her stay and used to get up moonlight drives and all manner of pleasures for her entertainment. I have no doubt his heart was at least chipped at the corners, if not broken outright, when she went away.

Apropos of the Bakersfield Woman's club, I hear that it is in the throes of impending dissolution. The club, you must understand, has been cogitating for some time past the subject of building, a grand structure that would rival Mr. Tevis' creation for the young men being one of the air-castles erected by the fair club women. At a meeting held last month one of the members, the wife of a well known lawyer, arose and said:

"Ladies, I have been told by a lawyer in whom I have every confidence"—no doubt her husband, but she did not say so—"that it will not be possible for our club to build unless we first incorporate."

This lady is thought to have cherished designs on the presidential chair for many months and her voiced legal knowledge was suspected, I understand, to have a bearing on the attainment of her ambition. However, the incorporation idea caused a wordy squabble and as a preliminary gauntlet thrown to the enemy, Mrs. Stevens, the president, said:

"I resign."

We have lost one of our musical population, Mr. Walter Manchester having left us for England, and it is not thought he will return to Bakersfield for many years, if ever. Incidentally it may be mentioned that Mr. Manchester is now a benedict, having been married on July twelfth. His bride was Miss Sade Burr of Berkeley who, I have heard, is a very pretty young woman of the English type. It was a church wedding but a quiet affair, only relatives and intimate friends being present. Mr. and Mrs. Manchester will go to Brussels after visiting the relatives of both in England and the former will continue his violin studies abroad.

An important engagement just announced in San Diego, writes my correspondent, is that of Miss Bessie Lewis, sister of Mrs. George Garrettson, and J. S. Akerman. Mrs. H. S. Richards, who has for some years been prominent in social and musical circles of San Diego, left this week for Oregon where she will hereafter reside. Quite a social event of last week was the musicale given by Mrs. Fred Baker and Miss Guelma Baker. Modjeska will arrive next week to begin rehearsing for her next season's tour. Cecil Hum-

$100 Reward $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY, Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

Dr. CARL DEHMEL
(formerly of Berlin)
Surgeon Chiropodist and Masseur . . .
Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe Nails a Specialty
CONSULTATION FREE
EMPORIUM and GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR
Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

A delightful hot drink may be made with the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky and the usual hot water, sugar and a little lemon skin.

phreys, son of Captain Humphreys, has gone to Port Harford to live. For years Cecil fancied he was destined to become great as a vocalist. A few weeks ago he sang the leading role in an amateur operatic production and found out what his friends had known for many moons—that he was mistaken. I know that the discovery was superlatively painful to Cecil but I can scarcely credit the rumor that Port Harford is to be as a cloister where he can find comfort in complete quiet. If Cecil were in quest of soundless solitude, of uttermost isolation, why did he not stay in San Diego?

The scarcity of eligible young men in San Diego often occasions the bitterest feuds among the innumerable young ladies who have been out for a season or so. A few months ago a youth, bearing the best credentials, showed an inclination to be sociable. At once he was deluged with invitations and, almost before he could realize it, was up to his neck in the swim. Naturally, he chose one from the bewildering bevy of beauty and proceeded to spend his money on her. Then the other girls got mad and tried in vain to spoil the snap for the favorite. A short time ago one of the girls, I am told, devised a scheme to disrupt the twain. She and her "dearest friend" and the dearest friend's fiancé arranged a moonlight drive to Ocean Beach and the fiancé telephoned an invitation to the eligible young man. He, believing of course that his sweetheart would be of the party, accepted. Picture his horror, then, when he took his place in the carriage to find only the trio who had planned the drive! But what could the poor boy do? He couldn't possibly be rude, so he went. The next day the girls made an early call on the favored young woman and managed adroitly to give her the particulars of the drive. But her adorer had already confessed all by telephone, therefore the ruse failed. Now the story is out and the poor girl finds herself in a most uncomfortable position. She is wisely thinking I hear, of spending a few months with friends out of town until memories of the "josh" have faded away.

"Do you smoke?" asked the poet as he proffered a heliotrope scented Russian to his fair visitor.

"I am sorry to say I do not," she returned with an illy-concealed shudder, "I am not sufficiently advanced."

Returning the cigarettes to their silver-mounted case, the poet remarked: "Advanced? You mistake the term. You should have said degenerate."

Benicia, writes my correspondent, is still talking about the case of Captain Remington's daughter and the Valley road official, of which TOWN TALK gave a brief outline last week. It was not small pox, however, that caused love to leap out of the window but scarlet fever. The railroad man is now in St. Luke's hospital, and I hear that he is likely to lose the use of his lower limbs owing to the change of climate at a critical stage of his disease. Miss Remington's people are still much exercised in spirit over the deception of which she was the victim. Nevertheless the Benecia people say that she should not grieve very deeply, as few women in this part of the state have ever been blessed with such liberal admirers as was the Valley road man during the days of his courtship. He presented his fiancée with a valuable watch and chatelaine, a sealskin sacque, an expensive hat from a metropolitan milliner and a horse and phaeton. In the meantime, while he splurged in Benicia on his two hundred and fifty dollars a month, his wife and children in Alameda were struggling along in the most poverty-stricken fashion. He sent his wife forty dollars a month and to eke out her scanty existence she was obliged to take in washing. When she made her appearance here, with her two little ones, at the Remington residence where her husband lay ill with the scarlet fever, the poverty of her attire was the first thing noticed by those who admitted her. The whole affair was exceedingly sad.

Probably the story would never have been permitted to come to such a dramatic climax had it not been for the scarcity of men in Benicia. When a masculine with money enough to make matrimony possible comes this way, every girl in the place looks out for an opportunity to grab him up. For instance, not long ago, three old maids—here everything feminine over twenty-five is an old maid—gave a party and the legend went about town that at the function they had a rope stretched across the hall. When the reason of this was inquired the answer was:

"To catch a man."

The finest house in Benicia belongs to Mr. Hastings, who is rolling in wealth and who had his new home built with the thickness of three walls — nobody knows why.

EDUCATIONAL

SELBORNE SCHOOL... FOR BOYS

SAN RAFAEL

* *

The school will reopen on August 29th in the fine new buildings, heated by steam and lighted with electricity.

For catalogue apply to the Principal,

REV. CHARLES HITCHCOCK,

SAN RAFAEL

TRINITY SCHOOL... 3300 WASHINGTON ST. SAN FRANCISCO

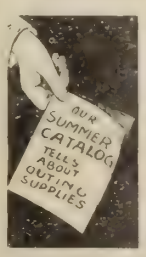
(FOUNDED 1876) Boarding and Day School for Young Men and Boys

Prepares for university and college

Accredited with the University of California and the Leland Stanford University. A faculty of eleven professors and teachers.

Boarders limited to thirty-five. Christmas term opens August 1st.

REV. DR. E. B. SPALDING, Rector.



Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST TEL. MAIN 5522.

3253 FILLMORE ST. TEL. WEST 152

LEE D. CRAIG

NOTARY PUBLIC AND COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS

316 MONTGOMERY STREET, Bet. Pine and California

San Francisco, Cal

Just the thing to take camping, a bottle of Chapin and Gore's old Reserve Bourbon.

The story of the sale of the Bulletin to William R. Hearst has traveled to Los Angeles where it was published, yet the yarn is absolutely without foundation. I have no doubt but that Mr. Hearst would like to add the Bulletin to his newspaper properties but I know that if he does contemplate publishing an evening paper in this city he will not be able to secure the journal, which is now controlled by Mr. Crothers. The Bulletin is not for sale. It was not very long ago that Mr. Crothers was approached by a gentleman who desired to invest his money in an evening paper. The latter asked the Bulletin proprietor what sum he would take for the paper. The reply was:

"The Bulletin is not for sale."

The lecture season has fairly opened. One of the most interesting ever given in the Camera club series was that on "The Rhine in History and Legend," last Friday evening. W. S. Stevenson was the speaker and his discourse contained not a dull word. The views illustrating the lecture were many of them of rare beauty. Mrs. Mary Fairweather has outlined a delightful series of lectures for the coming season, the life and works of various poets, authors and musicians being numbered among the topics to be covered in the course.

She looked very warm and dejected as she dropped into the big chair in her boudoir.

"I'll never go walking again on an empty stomach," she said.

"I wouldn't if I were you," said her unsympathetic husband. "Not, at any rate, until after legs go out of fashion."

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Demas C. Babin has been brightened by the advent of a little daughter. The little one made its arrival on the day upon which its paternal grandfather, Landry C. Babin the well known real estate man, was celebrating the anniversary of his birth, the same day being the wedding anniversary of his elder daughter, so it can easily be understood that a triple jubilation was in progress. The mother of the newly arrived infant—Marie Craig that was—is the daughter of Colonel H. A. Craig of the custom house and is a remarkably beautiful young woman of the demi-brunette type. Her marriage to Demas Babin, four years ago, was a society event solemnized at the French church of Notre Dame des Victoires. Mrs. Babin is a warm friend of Mrs. Wilbur Gleason Zeigler, formerly of this city but now a resident of New York, to whose home a few weeks ago came a little boy, and I understand the young mothers are already arranging a prospective alliance between the heir of the house of Zeigler and the heiress of the house of Babin.

When Dr. and Mrs. John Gallwey arrived in New York they were agreeably surprised to find their friends, Dr. John Gallagher, Frank McGlynn of the Daly company and Peter Dufficy all awaiting their arrival. These Californians have a cosy flat in West Twenty-second street where all San Franciscans are received in true Californian style. Dr. Gallwey and his friends have planned many short excursions in and about New York for the next week and then the doctor and his wife will take an Atlantic liner for Europe. They expect to remain abroad some months until Dr. Gallwey has fully recovered his health. Dr. Gallagher will shortly follow his friends to the continent, with intent to complete his medical course in the colleges of Vienna and London.

There is a combination of the grotesque, the humorous and the pathetic in the story of the elopement of Mrs. Billy Hynes and Matt Grennan, meagre details of which were handled by the dailies. What could be more grotesque than the elopement of a thirty-six year old mother of three children, weighing about two hundred pounds, with a twenty-three year old featherweight consumptive, whose physician prohibited him from playing the cornet on account of his weak lungs? It is almost as lugubriously droll as the undertaker in "A Milk White Flag." And somewhat humorous was the banqueting of Grennan by the duped husband only a few days before the cornetist started for Honolulu. I have been told that Billy Hynes had the highest regard for Matt Grennan and sympathized deeply with him in his illness. Grennan had been directed by his physician to take a sea voyags on a sailing vessel, and Hynes entertained him at hie Ashbury Heights' residence with a farewell dinner. Pathetic indeed is the plight of the deceived husband and his deserted children. Hynes cannot realize that he was so cruelly treated by the mother of his children and he is confident that she will return. The Hynes' were very popular in certain musical circles and the numerous friends of the affable husband have the most sincere pity for him while they execrate the faithless wife and mother. I have been told that the pair did not go to Honolulu separately but that they both departed on the same sailing vessel. Grennan's mother and sisters accompanied him to the wharf to bid him farewell and Mrs. Hynes was already aboard and in seclusion. She carried an abundance of jewels and money with her but her lover had only a small treasure-box.

While there has been a dearth of men at most of the summer resorts, the society youth has been largely in evidence and in his element. The absence of full-grown men has created a demand for the youth with all the latest summer togs, flannels and duck suits, golf and driving outfits. He is the lion of the hour at Monterey, Santa Cruz, Capitola and San Jose. What would the dinners and dances, picnics and drives be without the summer youth, who having finished his college exams started out to break hearts, and to acquire the knack of making himself a regular devil among the women? Age has nothing to do with his success. He is invited here, there and everywhere and is surprised at his own popularity while his father and more mature brother have to plod and try to make money in town. And the Californian society youth, be it known, is no very slow individual. Age cuts no ice with him either. He has the same appreciation for matronly beauty as has his elder brother, a fact to which a very charming woman summering in Santa Cruz can give interesting testimony.

Great bargains this week in elegant "dress hats," stylish outing hats and dainty little bonnets.—Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street

Oh, the days were dull and dreary,
I was growing sad and weary
In a wilderness of women in my hammock by the sea;
When I spied a gay youth thrumming
On his banjo and a-humming
A ragtime ditty that appealed most forcibly to me.

Soon the days became less dreary,
And I no longer felt aweary
In my hammock with the gay youth thrumming ragtime on the sly.
He was frolicsome and witty
Was this summer youth, and pretty,
And he knew a thing or two for he was charmingly blasé and fly

Both the Bar association and University club are all agog over the dismemberment of the law firm of Page, McCutcheon & Eells. Nothing that has happened in club or legal circles for some time has caused half as much commotion as the announcement that this aristocratic law firm has been dissolved. The dissolution of a firm of lawyers ordinarily occasions little comment. Lawyers join hands every day for the promotion of mutual interest without causing the slightest disturbance and they separate, too, without provoking inquiry as to the why or wherefore of the change. But within a short time after the news of the disorganization of the firm of Page, McCutcheon & Eells, and the establishment of the new firm of Page & McCutcheon was bruited about, along came rumors of sharp practice and other things with harsh sounding names. An undercurrent of gossip anent the new deal in legal circles was pregnant with insinuations expressed by such idiomatic phrases as "a case of freeze-out" and "raw work." The dailies referred to the dissolution of the firm and also to the rumor that the death of Lloyd Tevis had some bearing upon it. This rumor was promptly and emphatically denied. But the gossip continued. Members of the bar winked the other eye when they discussed the matter and up at the University club, over which Charley Eells presides and of which Page and McCutcheon are members, they talked about it in whispers.

I can readily understand why there has been so much talk over the disruption of the firm followed by the establishment of the more exclusive combination of Page & McCutcheon. Long before Page & Eells ever heard of E. J. McCutcheon they practiced law together in this city. The firm of Page & Eells existed for nearly twenty years. It handled a great deal of important commercial litigation and numbered among its clients many English firms that had business interests in this city. Charles Eells was a director of the Central Pacific railroad company and his connection with that corporation brought railroad business to the office. Several years ago E. J. McCutcheon, a young lawyer of considerable ability who was at one time in partnership with M. M. Estee and also with Ramon Wilson, was admitted into the firm of Page & Eells. He was the attorney for Haggin & Tevis, from whom he received a retainer of something like seven hundred dollars a month. He had other wealthy clients and when he joined hands with Page & Eells it was to establish a law firm on a very large scale with big offices and an extensive library. The firm included besides the three gentlemen whose names appeared, M. F. Michael and R. T Harding. It was generally supposed that perfect harmony existed among these learned gentlemen and that their practice was sufficiently plethoric to keep them together for a life-time, but Lloyd Tevis was scarcely cold in his grave when the split occurred.

Now Mr. McCutcheon may deny until he is black in the face that the Tevis estate had anything to do with the dissolution but he will never be able to convince members of the bar of that fact unless a similar denial is made by Messrs Eells and Michael. These gentleman, I believe, were never more surprised in their lives than they were when they learned that the firm had been dissolved. Mr. Michael was off enjoying his vacation when he received a very brief letter from his partner, Mr. McCutcheon, informing him that they were no longer practicing together. Mr. Eells was told about it in the privacy of his office. He was doubtless more surprised than anybody to learn that his lifelong friend, Charles Page, had left him and entered into a combination with McCutcheon. Mr. Page has long enjoyed the reputation of being one of the immaculate members of the bar. He is a stickler for compliance with the ethics of the profession and he would never do anything that could be construed as irregular. Of course Mr. McCutcheon expects to handle the Tevis estate plum and it would have to be cut up into small slices if the old firm remained intact but knowing that Mr. McCutcheon and Mr. Page are men of high standing in the profession I cannot believe that the prospect of a big fee to come had any bearing upon their action. Yet it is unfortunate that there should have been such a coincidence as the death of Tevis and the dissolution of the firm. Messrs Page and McCutcheon are now associated with Sam Knight, who, being a son-in-law of Charles Holbrook, should in the course of time be able to bring to the firm treasury fully as much as he will get out of the Tevis estate.

That jealousy has not gone out of fashion is proved by a story that has come my way. Some time ago an advertisement appeared in the daily papers to the effect that one hundred thousand gallons of California

Mrs S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, popular new fall hats "Musketeer" "Troubadour" and "Rough Rider

LADIES ARE COMMENTING

about the magnificent line of switches I carry and the very moderate prices I charge.

In fact, no store in town gives such values or shows such an array of hair ornaments.

G. LEDERER
123 Stockton St.

Recreation Park
Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets

BASE-BALL
EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Oakland vs. Watsonville
August 5th and 6th

wine were desired, the ad. being signed by a person staying at the Palace hotel. It was a plutocratic Englishman who was visiting San Francisco accompanied by his wife. The notice was read by a young woman whose father had recently died leaving as part of an extensive estate about fifty thousand gallons of native wine. His daughter thought at once that here was an excellent opportunity to dispose of the liquid property. Therefore with a woman friend to act as encouragement, she went down to the Palace and sent word to the Englishman whose wish was to buy wine by the wholesale that two ladies desired to see him on business. The bell boy soon returned with the query:

"Is it Mr. or Mrs. you would like to see?"

"Mr.," answered the San Franciscan.

"Will you please give me your card?," was his second request.

She complied with the pasteboards of herself and her companion. The boy was absent about fifteen minutes when he returned wearing a very puzzled look and said:

"Will you please tell me again whether it is Mr. or Mrs. you wish to see?"

The young woman began to grow impatient and she hastily returned:

"Mr., of course."

Again the boy went away and this time when he returned he said, triumphantly:

"I've brought her."

She was a tall Englishwoman and her attitude was uncompromisingly stiff as she inquired what was the reason of the young women's call. This was explained but no doubt the offer was not satisfactory to the Englishman as from that day to this the owner of the fifty thousand gallons of wine has heard nothing regarding their sale. She sometimes wonders whether the Englishman's wife ever told him of the offer, or whether she had misgivings as to the character of the two ladies who had insisted on seeing "Mr."

A writer in an English periodical says: "The appearance of conceit in a man is frequently the mask donned to hide the furiously blushing face of modesty."

A young chap in town whose employment keeps him up all night stops on his way home at six o'clock in the morning and wakes an old gentleman who rooms alone in an office building. When asked the other day why the old recluse desired to be called at that unearthly hour, he naively replied:

"Well, you see it's this way; if he answers me he knows he's all right, and if he don't answer he knows he's dead."

The finest collection of wigs owned by any actress is that numbered among the belongings of Mrs. Lewis Morrison, the Florence Roberts of the dramatic world. Mrs. Morrison has been collecting the wigs for years and I am told every shade of hair is included in the collection. At each city where the actress is to play an engagement of lengthy duration the wigs are handed over to a hairdresser upon arrival and the artist in coiffures is importuned to take the best of care of them.

Two negroes were lynched in Georgia the other day for the crime which is responsible for the reduction of the colored vote in the south. Those two negroes intimidated a white man by pointing a pistol at him. They outraged his wife in his presence, his fear of the pistol restraining him from attempting to interfere with the black brutes. I am surprised that in Georgia, the state that has boasted so persistently of the chivalry of its sons, the lynching party should have overlooked the faint-hearted white man whose esteem of his own worthless carcass prompted him to remain quiescent while he was being made the victim of the grossest dishonor. The incident suggests the thought that perhaps that volcanic southern blood of which I have heard so much is growing cooler in Georgia.

Daniel Cole
Was a critical soul—
A fastidious taste had he;
He called for a bevy
Of beauty —a levy
On blonde and brunette to be.
And every woman of every tint,
If handsome, was given a "sit" in the Mint.

Jesse Titus has sold his interest in the Golden Eagle hotel at Sacramento and has gone east. Titus conducted the noted hostelry for sixteen years. It is unfortunate that he could not take the house with him. There is no town in the state so badly in need of a hotel as is Sacramento. As the capital of the state it should have at least one house for the suitable accommodation of visitors, but it is utterly devoid of such a luxury and there is not a man in town with sufficient enterprise to fill the long felt want. If ever Sacramento ceases to be the capital of the state it will be due to the animosity against the town occasioned by the lack of accommodations for people who are compelled to go there on business. Every time there is a convention held in Sacramento the delegates swear by all that's holy that they will never go to the dodblasted place again, but they are lured back by sugar-coated assurances about what the natives propose to provide in the way of entertainment and sumptuous hospitality. As the prices at the Golden Eagle have always been in inverse ratio to the character of the things charged for, I have no doubt but that Jesse Titus can well afford to enjoy a protracted period of leisure. Years ago he was a Southern Pacific engineer but being a shrewd man he saw the financial possibilities of a Sacramento hotel business and when he had an opportunity to get hold of the Golden Eagle he seized it with avidity. During the sixteen years of his connection with the house he has witnessed many political battles and he could tell many interesting stories of combinations that were made and broken, of secret deals affected by scheming bosses and of slates that were prepared and jobs put up to defeat legislation. He has seen governors come and go and he has watched the rise and fall of lobbyists and bosses.

Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Moore of the Osteopathic Institute are entertaining at their residence, 204 Sutter street, W. T. Baird, president of the First National bank of Kirksville, Mo,, and W. B. Dobson, president of the State Normal school, also of Kirksville. This is the first vacation, I understand, that Mr. Baird has taken in thirteen years and he is naturally enjoying every minute of it. Kirksville, it will be remembered, is the place that was visited by a cyclone a short time ago and between fifty and one hundred thousand dollars were raised for the sufferers. The town has been rebuilt and is now in a flourishing condition. Mr. Baird and Mr. Dobson will leave this evening for their eastern home.

---

Mrs S. R Hall, 10 Kearny street, new Velvet Roses in beautiful shades and tints for fall wear.

A special attraction in the large show windows of J. J. O'Brien & Co. is the display of Ladies' Muslin Shirt Waists ranging in price from 25 cents to $2.00 apiece. Many thousands of these goods have been sold during the past week, and the entire stock which was bought in bulk by this enterprising firm (from a manufacturer who desired to clean up his warerooms and who cut the prices accordingly) will be sold out within a few days.

The son of a wealthy capitalist is one of the latest converts to platonic love, I understand, and it is also said that his papa does not approve of the conversion but would like his son to go to work and woo and wed a maid in the good old-fashioned way. Père, en passant, is said to like widows himself better than the virgin article and goes directly contrary to the advice of Weller senior to his son Sam. Last summer all Belvedere was interested in the attentions the capitalist bestowed upon a widow of southern birth, the mother of three daughters but whose blonde beauty still retains all the freshness of youth. The widow and her daughters occupied a cottage on the hill not far from the capitalist's habitation and whenever the elderly gentleman took his walks abroad the Belvedereans surmised that he was going a-courting. But whether the buxom widow frowned on his suit or whether the thought of three step-daughters was too much for the elderly gentleman when he came to think over solid financial facts, there were no announcements in the marriage columns of the daily papers to put the pleasing finale to the summer romance.

The son's platonic affection is the talk of Belvedere, I understand, but Belvedere is one of the greatest gossip centres in Marin country. The lady in the case is remarkable for the possession of silver hair above a pair of fine black eyes; she is not of advanced years but is prematurely gray. She is married, her husband having been a widower, and he is very many years the better of her in point of age, my informant tells me. The husband does not object to his wife's accepting the attentions of the wealthy capitalist's son and the three go about in an harmonious trio evidently serenely unconscious of the interest their doings excite in the breasts of on-looking Belvedereans.

Miss Emilia Kalisher, who has lately returned from her studies in Paris and Munich, is now settled in her studio in the Rose building, Sutter street. Miss Kalisher intends to make portraiture her principal work but she is also, I hear, forming a class in painting and drawing. She may always be found in her studio on Saturday afternoons and it is then that her friends and former schoolmates embrace the opportunity to call and talk over "old times," beside enjoying peeps at Miss Kalisher's sketches.

The bright particular stars at Wambold's this summer have been, of course, Mrs. Monroe Salisbury and her two daughters, Kate and Margaret. There was a young man in their train last week and he made up in a manner for the lack of other masculine attendance. I understand that croquet is the amusement par excellence at Blue Lakes this season, sharing favor with the usual boating and fishing diversions. Croquet, in my opinion, is good but for one thing, to show off a well-arched foot. In this respect the young woman who is of marriageable age should play that foot for all it is worth.

Mrs. J. N. Gillette is down from Eureka visiting her mother, Mrs. Katherine Erzgraber, at the latter's residence in Golden Gate avenue. The marriage of Isabelle Erzgraber and Senator Gillette of Humboldt county was one of last year's events and during the late session of the legislature at Sacramento Mrs. Gillette was considered one of the handsomest young women of the legislative swim. She is a sister of Mrs. Frank S. Johnson of San Rafael, who is also noted for her beauty. Ervin Erzgraber, late secretary of the Merchant's club, is Mrs. Gillette's brother.

Some years ago when Charles Dana Gibson used to draw the illustrations for Richard Harding Davis' stories in the magazines, the author appeared several times as his own hero. Both artist and author were so generally ridiculed for their mutual admiration that Mr. Davis ceased to use his face for the illustration of his own stories. But he appears to have taken his conceit from the ice once more, for in the July number of Scribner's his story "The Lion and the Unicorn" was accompanied by the familiar figure. Mr. Davis is the gentleman who was sent to Cuba by a New York daily to report the opening battle of the war, and who after the battle of San Juan pleaded with an Associated Press reporter to mention that he (Davis) was "among those present" when the Rough Riders made their gallant charge.

Two Noted Resorts both under one management, noted for its efficiency. Representing the mountain interior and seaside of Central California.

THE . . . CELEBRATED Hotel del Monte, MONTEREY, . . . CAL.

"The queen of American watering places." Only 3½ hours from San Francisco by express trains of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY. OPEN ALL THE YEAR.

RATES MODERATE.

The Tavern of Castle Crag and Soda Springs

320 miles from San Francisco, on the famous SHASTA ROUTE within sight of MOUNT SHASTA and the wonderful CASTLE CRAGS, altitude 2,100 feet.

Rates: by the day, $2, $2.50, $3.
By the week, $14 to $17.50.
Bath rooms extra.

Season, June to September

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION ADDRESS GEO SCHONEWALD, MANAGER
Hotel del Monte, Monterey, Cal., or Tavern of Castle Crag, Castle Crag, Cal

World of Law

Social Item; 'Among the fashionable arrivals at Del Monte is Mr. Garret W. McEnerney, the well known San Francisco lawyer. Mr. McEnerney takes daily exercise upon his wheel."

"WHAT IS IT shakes the air, my son, and makes the leaves to fall?
"Not thunder, no; nor earthquake; nor yet a sudden squall,
"Yet, feel, the earth is trembling, there's a rushing sound like rain;
"The flyer's just gone by, or else I'd swear it was a train."

"My father, is it possible you do not know the cause?
"'Tis nothing that's accountable to aught of nature's laws;
"Ah no, 'tis yet more wonderful; ye never saw the like;
"'Tis Garret McEnerney galivanting on a bike!

"He's a San Francisco lawyer, as doubtless you've been told,
"And yearly he accumulates a goodly stack of gold;
"His honesty's unquestioned, his ability's as great
"As any's that have practiced in our famous golden state.

"An expression grave and solemn sits upon each judge's face
"As he sees G. McEnerney, Esquire, rise up in his place;
"With expansive chest thrown forward and a squareness of the jaw,
"The mighty counsel pounds and pounds and thus expounds the law.

"But to burn the midnight oil too long, though by ambition spurred,
"Will wreck the strongest of physiques; and so it was I've heard,
"That McEnerney packed his grip and hied him to the grove
"Where mighty ocean rolls and roars and the green trees softly move.

"One of the loveliest spots on earth, and the mighty lawyer swelled
"With honest pride and thankfulness, as its splendor he beheld;
"Proud to be born a native son of the state that gave it birth,
"Thankful that youth was left him to enjoy its wondrous worth.

"For days G. McEnerney walked by sea and leafy grove;
"Round by the distant headland, full seventeen miles, he drove;
"He basked in glorious sunshine, he dozed in dreamy shade,
"Cast envious eyes at golf and wished the game he'd earlier played.

"But the lawyer's soul grew restless, and he longed for sterner play
"Than the tame, society-fashioned games he'd watched through many a day.
"So, one glorious, fateful morning, in his oldest garments clad,
"He appeared at the breakfast table, with a face that was far from sad,

"For it beamed with manly purpose, with the light of fixed resolve
"As he thought of a silver-plated bike whose wheels should soon revolve
"At lightning speed o'er dusty roads and gravelled walks alike,
"For he'd quite made up his mind to go a-sporting on a bike.

"It was a glorious morning, and the sun shone from on high;
"No speck of fleecy cloudlet marred the azure of the sky;
"The trees rose up in grandeur as though with a new life fed,
"And the little birds were twittering in the branches overhead.

"His breakfast done, the lawyer said good-bye to all he knew,
"And some they turned their backs, while others tearfully withdrew;
"But they cheered him up with hopeful words: 'Don't stay out after five:
"'We'll see you at the clubhouse.' 'I'll be there, if I'm alive!'

"One lady was a dreamer and confided to a friend
"How the previous night a vision dark her aching brain did rend.
"'Twas on such another day as this, and the hour was striking five,
"'And with beauty, wealth and fashion the clubhouse was alive,

"'And I heard them all discussing how a gentleman from town,
"'A lawyer, too, had suddenly so fond of biking grown
"'That though he'd ne'er bestridden wheel, he'd gone to try his luck
"'With naught of skill, but confidence and a world of Irish pluck.

"'Just then, the clubhouse trembled, 'mid a rushing sound like rain,
"'The flyer'd just gone by, or I'd 'a' sworn it was a train;
"'"'Tis he!" they cried, with one accord, as to the porch they ran;
"'It seemed to me their friend must be a wondrous heavy man.

"'I dreamt I followed them, and there I saw a misty sight
"'Of mighty head and arms and legs, all struggling in their might
"'As nearer, nearer, up the drive from side to side they rolled
"'A man I recognized at once as McEnerney bold.

"'The ladies thought they'd welcome him, so they raised a mighty cheer;
"'Alas, my friend, that graceful little tribute cost him dear!
"'He heard the noise, looked up and saw the crowd with smiles aglow,
"'Lost his head completely and —My God!—he tried to bow!

"'Crash! And the treach'rous bicycle had thrown him o'er its head
"'A grinding sound, a cloud of dust, and all those ladies fled—
"'But I, although I knew him not, remained behind to aid
"'The man who by his thoughtless friends had foully been betrayed.

"'A yawning chasm in the ground, the air was choked with dust;
"'The bicycle resembled an umbrella on a bust;
"'Mid all this chaos saw I (Dear, I'm telling you no jokes)
"'Three hundred pounds of McEnerney mingled with the spokes!

"'I saw at once his course was run, his spirit passed away
"'To the place where harps, not bicycles, are instruments of play,
"'I knelt upon the ground and wept for his poor, bereaved folk,
"'It proved too much for me. Just then, I shrieked aloud and—woke!

"'But the memory of that awful vision haunts me, darling, sti
"'And I fear to McEnerney it must sure forbode some ill;
"'So though I'll at the clubhouse join the giddy throng at five,
"'I fear me we shall never see our lawyer friend alive.'

* * * * *

"But the unexpected happens, as you know, my father, well,
"And dreams have oft been proven to be nothing but a sell;
"So as you saw just now, our McEnerney's still alive,
"And the clubhouse rang with laughter on that evening after five.

"For the lawyer rode away all right, and rode with perfect ease
"Though his trousers had a knack of working up beyond his knees;
"And when arrived they cheered him and his face was all aglow,
"But wisely he dismounted before he made his bow.

"For many days I watched him, his coat-tails in the air,
"The wind a-playing havoc with his football head of hair:
"The lake, the park, the ocean-drive are visited in turn,
"He's wondrous energetic, is that Garret McEnern.

"And now when something strikes the air and the leaves begin to fall,
"Think not of thunder, earthquake, nor yet of sudden squall,
"But if you'll hear your son speak, just collect your senses, Mike,
"An'look for McEnerney galivanting on a bike.

The End. THE COURT REPORTER.

Dramatic World

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "Hamlet"—with Miller as the melancholy Dane.

CALIFORNIA. "One of Our Girls"—followed at the close of the week by "Sans Gene" in response to popular demand.

ALCAZAR. "Romeo and Juliet"—with Miss Roberts as the fair Capulet.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "Boccaccio"—with brand new scenery and a chorus that has captured the town.

TIVOLI. Grand Opera—by a new company of talented artists.

ORPHEUM. Vaudeville—A hodgepodge of mimicry, pantomime and melody.

PANORAMA BUILDING. "Battle of Manila"—realistic and worth seeing.

GRAND OPERA ONCE MORE rules supreme in San Francisco and once more it may be safely asserted that the works of the masters are not injured by the presentations given them. The production of Aida at the Tivoli this week was in every respect in accord with the demand of this excessively ambitious operatic work. In order to invest this opera with the necessary grandeur and magnificence soloists, chorus and orchestra must work hand in hand and as soon as one or the other lacks in furnishing the proper support the performance becomes deficient. It is most gratifying to find the performance at the Tivoli a model in every respect. Considerable anxiety was entertained for the appearance of Miss Ella Prossnitz who reaped many laurels in Milan last season. Despite an affection of the throat caused by a cold it could be seen that Miss Prossnitz possesses a dramatic soprano of much force and a great range. There rings through it a dramatic timbre which thrills you and withal the voice is clothed in a coat of velvet exceedingly caressing. All this could be heard despite Miss Prossnitz' indisposition. The question remains: how does the young lady sing when in good condition? There is surely a great treat in store for the music lovers of this city. Besides being a vocalist of rare talent Miss Prossnitz is an actress intensely versatile. In appearance as well as deportment her Aida was a vivid picture. She controls that southern temperament which manifests itself in intense dramatic action. A more ideal Rhadames than that of Avedano could hardly be imagined. His extensive rolbust tenor is penetrating and at the same time stirring. He possesses a knack of swelling his tone that never fails to arouse enthusiasm of the most superlative degree. His method is exquisite and his diction faultless No wonder that the audiences rave over him Again and again the writer heard the remark:

"Salassa is the best baritone I have ever heard."

And judging from his Amonasro this remark does not seem to be erected on an insecure basis. It is gracefully flexible, as soft as silk and yet at times breaking forth in passionate force. One could hardly imagine a superior baritone. Both these artists know so well how to sing. They are so exact and accurate in everything. Each note is uttered with accuracy and their attack is clean and positive. If any one doubts the value of Mary Linck as an operatic contralto let him listen to her Amneris and be ashamed of his doubts. Miss Linck's dramatic voice thrills and a fine characteristic of her work is the complete abandon which she bestows upon her characrerization. She positively immerses herself into the character she portrays and invests it with reality. She takes her character with that seriousness which every earnest artist should bestow it and it is because of this seriousness and zeal, coupled with a peaceful and bell-like voice, that Miss Linck is an important factor in the success of Aida. Mr. Wanrell reappeared as Ramphis. He has that clean, resonant and soothing bass which becomes a thorough delight when handled with care. That Mr. Wanrell knows how to use his voice no one capable of judgment will deny, for it is an indisputable fact that he is a well trained and intelligent vocalist. His Ramphis gave plenty of evidence to back this assertion. William Schuster as the king and Vincenzo Fomari as the messenger sustained these roles exceedingly well. Chorus and orchestra, thanks to the circumspection and efficiency of Max Hirschfeld, did some excellent work and the mounting was elegant and brilliant, which must be credited to George Lask, the Tivoli's energetic stage manager.

In Lucia Anna Lichter had an opportunity to strengthen her many admirers in their belief that as a colorature singer this capable vocalist has reached a prominent position. Her mad scene was an achievement the artistic facility of which must be admired. She overcame the technical difficulties of this brilliant aria with the ease of the experienced singer and not a tone or phrase could be picked out that lacked in accuracy. It was a true delight to find her the recipient of five curtain calls. A striking sign of Miss Lichter's unselfishness was her appreciation of the splendid flute obligato with which Louis Newbauer enhanced the effect of the scene. She came forward amid thunderous applause and grasped the flutist by the hand, thanking him for his assistance. It was nobly done and Mr. Newbauer was certainly entitled to it. The artistic tenor of Baron Berthald was heard to great advantage in the role of Lord Edgar. One can easily see that Berthald is used to appear in an atmosphere where strict attention is paid to accurate rendition. Judging from his refined and polished tenor he must make even a more ideal Faust than Lord Edgar. He is an artist par excellence and can only be appreciated when appearing in more responsible roles than the one he essayed in Lucia, where the composer seems to endow the soprano with all the glory. Somehow it seems to the writer that Berthald is just cut out for a Faust, always adding of course his Wagnerian roles in which he achieved such success in Europe. His stage presence is imposing. What may be said of Berthald's tenor fits also Mertens' bass. It is a big, resonant organ used without effort and listened to with comfort and a confidence in the vocalist that convinces one that Mertens could never commit an error no matter how difficult the scene. The sextet was rendered exemplarily. Schuster had a fine opportunity to show that he is better fit for grand than for comic opera. His light bass sounds exceedingly well. Euphemia McNeil and Arthur Mesmer fill the inferior parts satisfactorily. Next week Il Trovatore and Faust will be presented.

Mrs. S. R Hall, 10 Kearny street, early fall pattern hats

Grand Opera House

IN MOST gratifying contrast to the production of Faust is the performance of Boccaccio, and thus the contention that Morosco's clever company cannot be surpassed in comic operatic work has again been borne out. Boccaccio is given with vim and dash and the comic features are made very prominent by Mr. Woolf and Mr. Wooley. The latter is especially clever and his well executed Cooper's song brings him three enthusiastic encores. Considerable stress should be laid on the make-up of Messrs Woolf, Wooley and Goff; it is irresistible. Miss Mason sings the leading role with that vivacity that characterizes all her work and Mr. Persse is given a chance to breathe a little and he already shows signs of having enjoyed a slight respite. This proves that his tenor was only tired out and with proper care will soon have reached its former brilliancy. But no more grand opera, Mr. Persse, for a few weeks! Miss Cotte's light soprano is pleasant to hear and she sings with taste and intelligence. Georgie Cooper looks pretty as Isabella and acts splendidly, but, poor girl! she cannot sing. Fortunately it does not however require a particularly great voice to sing Isabella and so Miss Cooper is a success. Mr. Goff has not much to do but what he does is well done. Miss Dreyfuss is developing a fine soprano of much strength and one of these days she will surprise her friends. An elaborate production of Falka is mapped out for next week. The long lapse of time since the last production of this opera here makes it rather new and interesting. Add thereto that Frank King, the clever eastern scenic artist, painted special scenery for this occasion and that particular attention has been paid to the splendor of the costumes, there is more than sufficient cause to expect crowded houses next week.

Alcazar

FOR YEARS we have been crying for a youthful Juliet and at last we have found her. Dramatically no other Juliet has been able to reach Margaret Mather: physically, Florence Roberts is the nearest to the real Shakespearean heroine. She is absolutely charming in her youthful innocence, which yet holds within itself the wonderful intensity and passion of the Italian character. One expected Miss Roberts would give an intelligent reading of her lines, but no one anticipated such an admirable conception of the character. Mr. Whittlesey, also, is a delightful Romeo, the ardent, passionate lover to the life. There have been no mistakes in casting the other characters, the company being very well fitted to its various roles Mr. Denithorne, Mr. Belasco, Miss Leary. Mr. Webster, Mr. Howell and the others are all worthy of mention. But it is the stage settings and the costumes that merit unlimited praise, for nothing has been spared to make them perfect. Miss Roberts appears in the most sumptuous costumes ever worn by a Juliet upon a San Francisco stage and Romeo's costumes are not less elegant. The balcony scene is made especially effective by the real roses climbing up the pillars, and all the scenes are mounted with equally realistic touches. Romeo and Juliet could easily run another week at the Alcazar, bnt The Lady of Lyons is to be put on next Monday. This old romantic play never fails of interest and Miss Roberts will be an interesting Pauline. Article 47 and Under Two Flags will be given during Miss Roberts' season It is a long time since the Ouida drama has had production here, but one can imagine the matinee girl going into raptures over Bertie Cecil as portrayed by White Whittlesey.

Fred Belasco will shortly make a business trip to New York. Mark Thall has returned from the east and during his stay in New York city he secured several new people, among them Eugene Ormonde, formerly of the Lyceum Theatre, New York, who will be the new leading man of the Alcazar stock company.

Manager Mark Thall has brought along with him a list of plays that should not fail to sustain the Alcazar's reputation of producing the very best plays that can possibly be obtained. The list includes Darkest Russia, Sowing the Wind, Lady Windermere's Fan, The New South, Friends, Carmen, My Friend from India, Mother's Earth, Too Much Johnson, The Masked Ball and Charley's Aunt. There are altogether sixty-six plays, each of which is a top-notcher. The company engaged for next season will in every way meet the requirements of first-class productions. The Alcazar is heading for a prosperous season.

Columbia

TOO LATE in the week for criticism here was Henry Miller's production of Hamlet. It will be given this afternoon and evening and Monday, the last week but one of the Miller season, will be devoted to the premier in America of Brother Officers, a play by Trevor, the clever English dramatist. Edwin Stevens, who made his debut at the Columbia this week in Hamlet, will have a more important role in Brother Officers. The play deals with army life among the English Lancers. The character played by Mr. Miller is that of Lieutenant John Hinds, a rough diamond promoted from the ranks to the regiment for bravery on the field. His previous acts of bravery included one which called for daredevil daring and in carrying it out he saves the life of an officer of the regiment which he has come to join. The story has to do in main with the efforts of this officer to teach Hinds how to be a gentleman, for as the latter expresses it he had been in the wilds of India so long that his ability to be quite the proper thing in the smartest regiments in the service is somewhat lacking. The complication arising from Hinds' endeavors to follow his friend's advice to be genial and easy form a splendid comedy element which is interspersed with dramatic situations telling of the officer's troubles with a gambler who held notes over his head for a large sum of money and which threaten to bring disgrace upon him. This time he is saved by Hinds, not from death but from money troubles, and in other ways the brave lieutenant arranges matters for his brother officer so that he wins his sweetheart and is still received as an honored member of the First Lancers. During the play it transpires that Hinds has himself fallen in love with the baroness, but in the concluding act, after smoothing things over for Officer Pleydell, he resigns from the regiment and goes back again for active work in India, leaving the two lovers to their happiness, a very natural and proper ending.

Clay Clement in A Southern Gentlemen will follow the Miller combination at the Columbia.

The Bostonians will visit San Francisco in September.

Orpheum

THE NICK LONGS constitute the star attraction at the Orpheum this week, and Mrs. Nick Long is the feature of this new vaudeville team. Mrs. Nick Long is none other than Idalene Cotton, daughter of the famous old-time minstrel Ben Cotton, who was a great favorite among theatregoers of a few generations ago. It was only a few years ago that Idalene Cotton played juvenile roles at the minor theatres in this city. She is now a tall, sprightly woman with a fund of talent of the kind that invariably makes a hit on the vaudeville stage. She is an artistic mimic and her impersonations of French music-hall singers are particularly clever. Nick Long is the same Nick that made the hit in The Private Secretary at the Baldwin some years inside of a quarter of a century ago. He is old enough to wear a toupee but he does not look a day older than he did twenty years ago, and he renders valuable assistance to his talented wife in their very amusing sketch. There are other clever people at the Orpheum this week and the performance on the whole is very entertaining. Next week Mademoiselle Alexandra Dagmar, the famous Russian songstress, will make her appearance. In addition to being one of the handsomest women on the stage she is also a Tyrolean warbler and is a high salaried artist. The Deonze brothers, trick barrel jumpers, Harry Linton and Leila McIntyre, sketch artists, are also among the newcomers.

California

THIS WEEK has been occupied by One of Our Girls and Madame Sans-Gène, both of which performances have attracted large audiences. Miss Bates is in her element in the leading role of both plays and her vivacity, versatility and penetrative ability had especial opportunity to assert themselves in the Bronson Howard comedy. Madame Sans-Gène will be presented this afternoon and evening, also tomorrow evening. Next Monday Clinton Stewart's comedy The Fairy Godmother will be presented. Miss Bates will assume the guise of a sprightly young lady of the reign of Louis the Fourteenth. The heroine, who is under the tutelage of Madam de Maintinon, serves as the instrument of the gods, the dea ex machina of an interesting masquerade, and while concerning herself with the happiness of others she does not neglect her own. The play will be well worth seeing.

AN EIGHTY DOG STAKE

THE program at the Union coursing park for today and tomorrow will be an eighty-dog stake. The total prize money for this stake will be $725, the winner getting $110. The sport should be of unusual interest as some of the cream of greyhounds on the coast are entered in the stake. Today there will be forty courses and tomorrow the sport should be very exciting as the races get down to the finals. James Dean's Mialmo should win the long end of the purse if the hound is in good condition. Lawrence, Petronius. Rollicking Airs and Gladiator will not be overlooked by the talent should they make a good performance in the run down.

AT BONANZA

THE arrivals at Bonanza springs for the last week in July were Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Ott and Miss Ott of Berkeley, Mr. and Mrs. C. Barr of Woodland, Misses Grace and Stella, Paul and Leonard Mitchell, and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Nielson and three children, all of Lower Lake.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, elegant new bird and wing effects.

Evolution

[A revised version of Louis A. Robertson's poem Evolution, which was read before the Academy of sciences a few years ago. It was afterwards published in a number of the leading literary magazines of England. It has never before appeared in revised form.]

MYSTICAL DREAM of creation!
Problem of dark evolution!
Tell us the world's early story,
Life's hidden secret unfold;
Vain is each wild speculation,
Groping in gloom for solution;
Enough that from darkness sprang glory,
Sunrise in crimson and gold.

Mounting the stream of the ages,
Up to its sources of mystery,
Threading its channels uncertain,
What, after all, have we won?
Blank were the world's early pages,
Buried in myth was its history,
Long after earth's misty curtain
Glowed with the light of the sun.

Still in the quarried tradition,
Still in the ice-graven story,
Still in the rock-written fable,
Linger the throes of thy birth;
Marking thy growth and transition,
Back in the centuries hoary,
Legends that teach and enable
Thy children to know thee, O Earth!

Nebulous waif of obscurity,
On through immensity stealing,
Wandering child of the forces,
Dropped from the matrix of night;
Fashioning thyself to maturity,
Sphering and fusing, annealing,
Through the dark centuries' courses,
Drifting along to the light.

Chaos all order confounding,
Yet ever silently speeding,
On with instinctive elusion,
Steadily holding thy way;
Darkness primeval abounding,
Down through the æons unheeding,
Still amid murky confusion,
Blundering on to the day.

Thundered a mandate through heaven,
"Let there be light" and the vapors
Losing themselves in the ocean,
Mingled again with the deep;
Then followed morning and even,
Night lit her pale distant tapers,
Order was born of commotion,
Earth was awakened from sleep.

Laboring in primal gestation,
Life in its forms multifarious,
Eager to meet the sun's kisses,
Leaped in her womb with delight;
Weary of long nidulation,
Up from their wallows lutarious,
Up from their darksome abysses
Swarmed the strange brood of the night.

Life in fantastic variety,
Breeding and battling and dying,
Struggling for very existence,
Rending with fang and with nail;
Death never gorged with satiety,
Over the massacre flying,
Blind to the light in the distance,
Deaf to the song in the gale.

Type against type for survival,
Through the long ages contending,
All for supremacy striving,
Man as the master they own;
Brute of the brutes, without rival,
Up from the conflict ascending,
Scheming, coercing, contriving,
Building the steps to his throne.

Fatuous child of mortality,
Swaddled in dark superstition,
Groping thy way through obscurity,
Stumbling, but stumbling to rise;
Casting aside animality,
Girding thyself with ambition,
Fearless facing futurity,
Scaling the steeps of the skies.

Race against race for domin'on,
Creed against creed for conviction,
Throne against throne for subversion,
Moving like puppets at play;
Battling to force an opinion,
Bleeding to follow a fiction,
Dying with instant reversion
To mingle again in the fray.

Many a crimson libation,
Poured on barbarian altars,
Freer and faster than water,
Purples thy triumph with shame;
Many a lurid oblation,
Smoking to priest-prated psalters,
Many a monster of slaughter
Fiddling a kingdom to flame.

Many a Moloch of cruelty,
Many a Tophet infernal,
Hope, after gory baptism,
Flung to the funeral pyre;
But with death-scorning credulity,
Pluming its pinions eternal,
Up from the murderous abysm,
Springing like phœnix from fire.

Dross of the brute disappearing,
Lost in the burning purgation,
Leaving the spirit less weighted,
Less overburdened with clay;
On to the light ever faring,
Toiling in endless gradation,
Lower to higher translated,
Rising from darkness to day.

Many a sacred Thermopylæ
Hurling defiance at slavery,
Many a crucified martyr
Dying for love of his kind;
Tyranny, kingcraft, monopoly
Yielding to justice and bravery,
Liberty's blood-blazoned charter
Many a despot hath signed.

Many a conquest of science
Shaming the warrior's sabre,
Many a triumph of morals,
Wisdom and Mercy and Love;
Many a blade of defiance
Forged to the plowshare of labor,
Many a chaplet of laurels
Wreathed with the olive above.

Height after height thou hast taken,
Yet there are others remaining.
Far in the pure empyrean
Truth's shining battlements rise;
Scale them with courage unshaken,
Death and disaster disdaining,
Storm them with jubilant pæan,
Capture the gates of the skies.

Then shall all ills of mortality
Unto thy wisdom surrender,
Knowledge supreme and supernal,
Leaving no summit to scale;
Truth, in her white-robed reality,
Opening her portals of splendor,
Yielding her treasures eternal,
Lifting obscurity's veil.

A BIG EVENT.

NEVER in its history has the Southern Pacific company announced so many delightful excursions to points of interest in the state than has been the case this year. But the crown of the outings for the season of 1899 will be the annual excursion to Hotel Del Monte and Pacific Grove, on Sunday, September third. Last year more than two thousand people went on the excursion and this year there will likely be an increase of that number. William H. Menton, excursionist passenger agent of the company, will personally supervise all the details of the excursion. Great preparations are being made by the Monterey people to present an attractive program of events that will interest the excursionists. The excursion will leave at eight o'clock in the morning, Third and Townsend street dépot, and will run through without stops; returning will leave Monterey at a quarter before five o'clock p. m. The rate for the outing has been set at two dollars, round trip, and the tickets will soon be placed on sale.

FALL MILLINERY.

THE HATS this year are to be even more swagger than in the past, the combinations of color being original and striking. Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, announces the first importation of autumn millinery, the newest European and eastern styles. It is worthy of note that Mrs. Hall not only shows the swellest goods, but her exhibition of fall millinery will be the first in this city.

It is related that a French opera manager was in despair at the prospect of having to produce L'Africaine with white negroes in the ballet, because the dancers refused to black their faces for fear it would injure their complexions. He issued an order, however, that all the young and pretty girls must color their faces, because it would do them no harm, while the old and plain ones would be allowed to appear without black faces because they had more need to take care of their looks. The result was that every blessed one of the girls tried to get on more black than any of the others, and when the ballet was on the stage a half dozen extra calciums had to be used to keep the audience from thinking the lights had all gone out.

Mrs. J. W. McKenzie left this week for a visit to Sonoma Walter Sabin and his sister have returned after a charming visit to friends in Whatcom (Washington), Victoria and Vancouver (British Columbia) where they enjoyed among other pleasant pastimes yachting and fishing Mr Sabin has resumed his classes and is in splendid trim for a busy season. Samuel Adelstein has also begun work and expects a prosperous winter after his enjoyable trip in northern California.

LASH'S BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Beginning Next Monday .....9th week of
HENRY MILLER
And a Special Company
First Production in America of the London Garrick Theatre Success
"BROTHER OFFICERS"
A Comedy Drama in Three Acts
Aug 14th, Last Week of the Henry Miller Season

Grand Opera House Morosco Amusement Co., Inc. Lessees. Telephone, Main 532.
Last Nights of "Boccaccio"
Commencing Monday, August 7th,
Magnificent and elaborate production of "FALKA"
as never before seen in this city
Our Prices—Orchestra floor, 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.
Matinee Saturday. Best reserved seat in the theatre, 25 cents
Branch Ticket Office just inside main entrance of Emporium.

Alcazar FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor MARK THALL, Manager
'Phone Main 254
Week of August 7th
FLORENCE ROBERTS supported by WHITE WHITTLESEY
In a production of artistic splendor
"THE LADY OF LYONS"
Gowned to the period and embellished with the wealth of modern stage technic
Our Prices—15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Orpheum O'Farrell between Stockton and Powell Streets.
Week Commencing Sunday Matinee, August 6th.
World Famous Warbler and noted Russian Beauty, MLLE. ALEXANDRA DAGMAR.
THE DEENZES.
LINTON and McINTYRE.
BOB ALDEN and STRAP HILL.
The Biograph, with war pictures.
IDALENE COTTON and NICK LONG, JOS. ADELMAN, DAVE MEIER, THE PHOITES
Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c
Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday

Farewell Concert
OF
Emil Steinegger, Pianist
Prior to his departure for Vienna
ASSISTED BY THE
Press Club Quartette
At Sherman-Clay Hall, 223 Sutter St.
On THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 10, 1899, at 8:15 o'clock.
Tickets can be had at Sherman, Clay & Co's, at 618 Fell St., or of any of Mr. Steinegger's pupils
Admission 50 Cents Including Reserved Seat
Seats can be reserved on Aug. 9th at Sherman, Clay & Co's

California Theatre S. H. FRIEDLANDER, Manager. Tel. Main 1737.
The Record-Breaking Business Continues
The biggest hit yet made by
MISS BLANCHE BATES and HER SUPERB COMPANY
Presented by T. Daniel Frawley
Commencing with Monday evening, August 7th
First production upon any stage of a beautiful, fantastic comedy, by CLINTON STUART, Esq., entitled
"THE FAIRY GOD MOTHER"
Last week, commencing Monday, August 14th magnificent production of "THE GREAT RUBY"
Reserved Seats, 25, 50, 75, and 1.00. Matinee, 25, 50, and 75.

Tivoli Opera House ERNESTINE KRELING, Prop. and Mgr.
Regular Season of Grand Opera.
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY Evenings,
"IL TROVATORE"
TUESDAY, THURSDAY and SUNDAY Evenings, SATURDAY MATINEE,
"FAUST"
Popular Prices, 25 and 50 cents.

Battle of Manila Bay
This Grand Historical Panorama is now on exhibition . . .
Lectures every half hour by the eminent orator, PROF. W. G. ROLLINS
Admission, 50 Cents
Children, 25 Cents.

A FICKLE LOVE

YE SHEPHERDS, give ear to my lay,
And take no more heed of my sheep;
They have nothing to do but to stray;
I have nothing to do but to weep.
Yet do not my folly reprove;
She was fair—and my passion begun;
She smil'd—and I could not but love;
She is faithless—and I am undone.

Perhaps I was void of all thought:
Perhaps it was plain to foresee,
That a nymph so complete would be sought
By a swain more engaging than me.
Ah! love every hope can inspire;
It banishes wisdom the while;
And the lip of the nymph we admire
Seems forever adorn'd with a smile.

She is faithless, and I am undone;
Ye that witness the woes I endure,
Let reason instruct you to shun
What it cannot instruct you to cure.
Beware how you loiter in vain
Amid nymphs of a higher degree:
It is not for me to explain
How fair, and how fickle, they be.

Alas! from the day that we met,
What hope of an end to my woes?
When I cannot endure to forget
The glance that undid my repose.
Yet time may diminish the pain:
The flower, and the shrub and the tree,
Which I rear'd for her pleasure in vain,
In time may have comfort for me.

The sweets of the dew-sprinkled rose,
The sound of a murmuring stream,
The peace which from solitude flows,
Henceforth shall be Corydon's theme.
High transports are shown to the sight,
But we're not to find them our own;
Fate never bestow'd such delight,
As I with my Phyllis had known.

O ye woods, spread your branches apace;
To your deepest recesses I fly;
I would hide with the beasts of the chase;
I would vanish from every eye.
Yet my reed shall resound through the grove
With the same sad complaint it begun;
How she smil'd—and I could not but love;
Was faithless—and I am undone.

SHENSTONE.

Two Silhouettes

IT WAS AN EVENING IN THE early winter season of California. The sky was black with lowering clouds and the warm, vapor-laden atmosphere was oppressive. All Market street from the ferry to the Pavilion was a glare of light, a confusion of noises. Bonfires burned on the street corners, and impatient people stood on the edges of the walks eager for some coming excitement. Once in a while a stalwart but inefficient policeman warned then back but as soon as he had passed on they crowded forward again.

At last a glare of red fire and the blatant music of a brass band announced the long-waited for procession. Slowly it crept out Market street at a walk, while the people cheered and shouted. They were hailing a favorite son, the successful man of the hour, whose name just now was on every tongue and whose face might be seen on the front page of every newspaper. The man whom the people delighted to honor sat in a barouche drawn by four horses. He was stout and bald, past middle age, with a bored look on his face, and he smiled and bowed right and left in a perfunctory way as though all this homage was beginning to pall upon him.

The procession stopped just before it turned the corner of Larkin street, where the press was thickest. A woman who stood on the sidewalk made her way to the front of the crowd and looked straight into the eyes of the successful man. His bored look disappeared. A flash of recognition, followed by a mask of hardness succeeded it for an instant only, and were gone.

But his mind was wide awake. What was she doing here in this his hour of triumph? If she were going to play Nemesis and to give him any trouble with her damned tricks, by God! he had power to stop her and would use it.

Then the march was resumed, a cannon boomed, the multitude shouted, and he was borne into the Pavilion almost on the shoulders of men.

The shouting died away and the glare of red fire faded into blackness. The bonfires burned down to their beds of ruddy coals. The clouds grew darker and dropped lower. Large drops of warm rain began to fall.

The woman lingered for a while, half dazed. She walked down Market street following the retreating crowds. She was dressed in shabby finery and her face was pale and swollen. She bore the marks of dissipation and ill usage. Lost in recollection she heeded nobody and did not feel the rain which was beginning to fall more heavily. Her thoughts had gone back into the past and she was unconscious of the present. She was once more a girl in the little mountain village where she was born. She thought of her father's death; of her mother's, shortly after.

She could recall her entry into the great city where distant relatives were to put her into the way of earning her living. What a strange place if had seemed and how those long streets stretched away with their files of lamp posts on each side! Where did they stop and how far did they go? And what was that rumble of noises that went on day and night? The city was a harsh stepmother to her. It taught her how unwelcome she was and how little anybody wanted her.

Then she met him and in her hunger for sympathy and appreciation gave up everything for him, for he was the only one who was kind to her. She was so young, so lonely and such a fool. She smiled bitterly as she remembered his winning tongue, his lies.

And he grew tired of her, naturally, and threw her off. A rich girl had fallen in love with h m and he was going to marry her.

A fiend awoke in the soul of the mountain child. She attacked her false lover with a horsewhip the day before he was to deliver a Fourth of July oration and left great welts on his face. He could not appear in public and his friend, the fat colonel, had to invent an explanation, poison oak, caught where he had been rusticating But somehow the papers found out the joke and it was the talk of the town for days.

It had not harmed him, however, and had utterly ruined her. The fat colonel sought her out and tried to pacify her with money which she flung at him, and then crushed her with threats of having her put into the insane asylum.

So the marriage took place, he rose h gher and higher, she sank down into the depths. Once in awhile she saw him with his well-dressed wife and two beautiful children, daughters. Her child had been a girl, too, but it died, thank Heaven! God was cruel to women, anyhow. She was sick and destitute. There was just a dime in her pocket. She gave another bitter laugh and continued her walk till she reached the ferry.

The hands of the great clock showed that it was nearly ten. She approached the window and asked for an Oakland ticket.

"Return?" queried the clerk.

"No."

She went on board and seeking the upper deck crouched in a sheltered corner near the paddle-wheel.

It was late when the favorite son awoke next morning. He called for the papers. The speech of the night before had wearied him greatly, and all these people were really beginning to bore him, but——. Then his eye lighted on the following paragraph:

ANOTHER SUICIDE FROM THE PIEDMONT.

Last night on the ten o'clock trip of the Piedmont from this city an unknown woman jumped off the upper deck just as the steamer was opposite Goat island. All efforts to save her were unavailing. The body was not recovered, and there appears to be no clue to her identity.

"If I had my way I would let all such cranks drown themselves if they wanted to," was his comment. Then he asked for his coffee.

IRENE CONNELL.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

FOR A PRETTY EFFECT IN STATIONERY nothing is so chaste as the Fleur-de-Lis Linen when stamped with monogram in silver. Messrs. Cooper & Co. have superior facilities in this line, and show a number of new ideas.

"Seeing She Could Never Know Why"

ON THE VERANDA OF THE old-fashioned ranch house a man sat, heavy with drink, and read stupidly: "I wronged you, dear Jim, but by the time this shall reach you, I shall be dead. You would not forgive me. I did not deserve forgiveness, but now I know that we can love only once and I love you. Let my children forget."

So James Boulder learned that his wife was dead and as he drank another glass of cognac the only thought of which he was capable was that he was glad of it. Death had anticipated the courts in ridding him of the woman—that was all.

It was only a year before that Mrs. James Boulder, for whose fate he now showed so little care, had welcomed his sister from the east with all the hospitable warmth that is the birthright of those of Spanish blood.

The love of a youthful marriage was still aglow, though six years had passed since the pretty little senorita and her tall cortejo had come from the church man and wife. Dolores was a proud wife and, as the time went by, became a happy mother content with her husband's lot as he was, himself, for the ranch was his and prospered. Then his sister came out of the east and, only a few short months—well, the Americans said sententiously "Mixed marriages," while the pious relatives of Dolores and her Mexican friends murmured, "Sea como Dios quiera," or something like it.

They have a great way of placing everything on "Dios," have the Mexicanos, but there was one who saw, and does blood guiltiness rest on him who saw yet spoke not or on the woman who whil'st she spoke, knew not what she was doing?

Tall, pale and with an artificial air of ennui, the fruit of a long course of Byron, Ouida and the novels of the decadent school, Boulder's sister was not the woman a man cares for. As every other woman does, who is self-nurtured on such literary pap, she wrote, of course, and she believes herself to be a philosopher while trying to be in imagination a Meredith's "Madame."

Poor little Dolores, rich in her husband and her babies and pretty and sweet-tempered, with such a fanciful education as the sisters had given her at the convent, knew nothing of this world of books in which her sister-in-law seemed so easily at home. To her much that Miss Boulder said was incomprehensible, and with the wondering admiration of one who does not understand she listened to this wonderful representative of her sex, this woman whose reflections on life and on man seemed to the inexperienced little matron so original and daring.

As day by day she listened, dissatisfaction with her lot slowly crept into Dolores' passionate heart, born only for home and tenderness.

It is not in her race to think deeply, so she only felt unhappiness coming over her and its cause was too vague for her to conjecture. But if Dolores lacked the power of deep thought, the other woman lacked it, too, and the one who saw it all and knows has told that the light which seemed to shine from a cultured face was but a sham, a pale will-o'-the-wisp floating amidst the miasma of misty recollections of Balzac and Gauthier. There was nothing tangible, nothing original.

Too cold, too selfish to realize even the meaning of her own words, this product of the period, pleased to find a listener, prated of soul-affinities and the higher life of women; and Dolores listened with the same guilty pleasure that moves a child to do something forbidden.

"No woman really loves one man all her life," said Miss Boulder.

Frigid, spiritless product of books whose thoughts her very temperament prevented her from grasping, "love" on her lips was a frequently used word, though to her it had no meaning and could have none. But the ears of Dolores heard and she chided herself at this superior being's sayings, mortified to think that here she had imagined all these years that it was right to love only her husband

The husband, poor man, could not understand the change in the home atmosphere. It was not pleasant, however, he knew; so business was made to take him to Los Angeles more often than had been his wont and his absences from the ranch were of longer duration.

His sister, while he was away, babbled on of women and their trammels—their grand souls that need only the meeting with the affinity to awaken and to bloom into all that is left to earth of divinity. Little Mrs. Boulder's blood was warm and she could not know that this insidious flow of decadent thought from the lips of the pale woman before her was nothing but words, words, words.

"No woman really loves one man all her life," kept floating through Dolores' brain, and to her this love, that to her mentor meant nothing, had in her experience been real and inspiring.

Then the husband's sister went away to her eastern home, but the shadow in the household darkened and grew always darker, till it became a black cloud.

Dolores fled with one of Spanish name. Desertion, then death and her career was ended.

"Quite a tragedy. I did not know it was in her to die for love," said Miss Boulder when she heard of it. "James should have given her some companions. I tried to cheer her up myself when I was there but it was very dull on the ranch."

THE WOMAN HATER.

PURE AND UNADULTERATED

THE FIRST PRIZE Royal Agricultural Society, 1899, in Sydney, New South Wales, was worthily bestowed upon the Utica Cleansing Compound and Utica Compound Paste. The Compound is guaranted to contain only pure and unadulterated drugs and therefore it can be used without fear by possessors of the most tender skins. It will cleanse anything except the conscience. Used in shampoo and bath it softens and whitens the skin and those who suffer from swollen feet in warm weather will find the Utica Compound a great healer. It is also unrivaled as a remedy for poison oak and prickly heat. Samuel Seymour, 21 Spear street, is the Pacific Coast agent.

A NECESSITY

NO LONGER a luxury but a necessity in every home is a piano, but it must be a good piano. An inferior make of instrument is never worth the money spent upon it, or the time wasted in keeping it in order. Far better it is to pay a larger price and buy a standard make of piano. The Sohmer piano, of which Byron Mauzy is the local agent, at 308-314 Post street, has a world-wide reputation for general excellence. To own a Sohmer is to own a first-class instrument.

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE

DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1029½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh.
Office Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND

DENTIST.
Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL

DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S W. corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas."

BUSH AND SON

DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 206 Kearny St, S. F. Rooms 310-308-309. 'Phone Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN

VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone, 4118, San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street, Telephone 66. 1529 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

FRANCIS STUART

TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK

HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON

MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone, Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LOUIS CREPAUX
(Member Paris Grand Opera)

HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

PIERCE & TAYLOR

STORAGE WAREHOUSE, 735 Market Street-Opposite Grant avenue. Furniture, Pianos, Trunks, Paintings, Mirrors and other goods stored in clean, light, dry lofts. Charges moderate. Telephone Black 311.

DECKELMAN BROS.

RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON

Wholesale and retail dealer in Coal and Wood 670 and 672 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts, San Francisco. Telephone East 152

Music World

CUPID AND PSYCHE

THE LIFE of Cupid is in vain,
For he can never love again.
The kiss of Psyche killed the spark,
And made the lad's life chill and dark,
And filled his longing soul with pain.

Yet there was light for him at last,
For when the clouds of pain were past,
Back from the grave came Psyche fair,
Bringing with her lease from care,
And hope then held them hard and fast.

Smile on the pair, O Venus high,—
Once through thy hate did Psyche die.
Lend her thy girdle and thine arts,—
She will not tear, but pity, hearts,
And, 'mongst the pitied, perhaps am I.

THE LOVER.

REPEATEDLY I HAVE BEEN approached to encourage movements whose purpose it would be to educate the masses to an appreciation of good music. The only suggested means to accomplish this feat is a reduction of admission prices. I shall always maintain that this alone will never serve the purpose, nor is now the time to acquire good material at a sufficiently low rate to make a small admission price profitable. It is all very well to speak of art for art's sake but it has been ordained that a man must eat in order to live—even a musician, although the latter sometimes educates himself to interrupt his eating spells frequently. So it may easily be seen that this cheapening of admission has its drawbacks. San Francisco is not in a condition at present to support "popular concerts" In the first place it requires good material to give good concerts. Superior talent demands and earns, of course, equally good remuneration. In order to meet these expenses the receipts in the treasury must exceed the disbursements. Hence the admission price must be fixed upon a basis wherefrom it is possible to gain financial benefits. The admission price to chamber music concerts, for instance, was suggested to me should not exceed twenty-five cents and fifty cents. The people who support music in San Francisco do not comprise a sufficiently large number to enable any management to bring a series of good concerts to a successful end with these prices. It is an impossibility. Besides it seems to me that good music is worthy of a reasonable admission price. The prices charged for the symphony concerts, for instance, are perfectly reasonable. Everyone has an opportunity to attend them, and there is not an active musician here who could not produce sufficient money to attend a symphony concert. Should the demand for reduced prices be so large as to make it profitable even at a low rate, then one or two popular concerts could be given. But a twenty-five and fifty cent rate for a symphony concert would be utter folly. Apropos of the symphony concerts, the season is approaching and no arrangements have as yet been made. These events have become a milestone in the musical life-path of this city and must not be discontinued. They are necessary for the progress of music on this coast This is August and the concerts usually begin at the end of September or the beginning of October, It is therefore time to ascertain two things: first, will Fritz Scheel return to San Francisco or not? And if he does not intend to return—which is most likely the case—whom shall we have as his successor? It is not wise to defer the reply to these questions. Should Scheel accept the position of the Philadelphia symphony orchestra, which stands at his disposal, the San Francisco symphony orchestra will be minus a conductor. The selection and appointment of a director is surrounded with various changes that require time to be put in proper shape. The new director must glance over his field, music has to be acquired and rehearsals have to be announced. It is never advisable to delay these things. Now is the time for the Symphony society to look around and decide as to the course to be taken next season, and the longer this matter is delayed the greater will be the haste in the end, and haste is never conducive to efficiency.

¶ ¶

The concert which will be given next Thursday evening at Sherman-Clay hall by Emil Steinegger will be the pianist's farewell to San Francisco, as he will shortly leave for Vienna, to study with Paderewski's teacher, Leschetizky. Mr. Steinegger will be greatly missed by his large class of piano pupils and by a large circle of friends. He is very popular here and belongs to one of our old families, being a son of Henry Steinegger, a well known and respected pioneer of 1850, who was a former partner in the firm of Britton & Rey. Mr. Steinegger Sr. was the originator and one of the incorporators of the Champion mine (the old Hibernian) of Nevada city, California, and is at present one of the heaviest shareholders in the now famous mine. The indications regarding Thursday evening's concert are that Mr. Steinegger will have a crowded house to bid him au revoir.

¶ ¶

And now we have a complete list of the artists that will comprise the cast at the Metropolitan opera house, New York, next season. Sopranos, Calvé, Sembrich, Ternina, Nordica, Adams and Susan Strong; contraltos, Schumann-Hink, Mantelli, Olitzka, Van Canteren and Broadfoot; tenors, Van Dyck, Saleza, Alvarez, Dippel, Salignac, Bars and Vanni; baritones, Van Rooy, Bertram, Campanari, Albers, Scotti, Muhlmann, Dufriche, Menx and Pini-Corse; bassos, Edouard de Reszke, Plancon, De Vries and Pringle; conductors, Mansinelli, Hinrichs and Paur. The Pacific coast engagement of the Grau opera company having been canceled Mr. Grau has decided to tour Canada instead. I notice that the reason given for the cancellation of the Grau engagement here is that Calvé refused to visit the coast. Pooh! what a flimsy reason. I am surprised that the agents of Mr. Grau could not invent a more plausible excuse. They will lose their reputation if they keep on that way. The fact of the matter is that Grau could not get the Grand opera house cheap enough for him.

¶ ¶

Mr. Dellepiane, president of the Musicians' union, has returned from a summer visit to Fresno. He says that they are making things very warm for their guests down that way and that the atmosphere of San Francisco is very refreshing. Alois F. Lejeal has returned from a vacation trip to Mendocino county. His mass, which was to have been sung at St. Dominic's church tomorrow, has been laid over until October first. Mr. Palmer, the new organist, will take great pains in giving a creditable rendition of the work, which has real merit. Apropos of Mr. Lejeal, he was the fortunate recipient of the first prize in a competition of composers under the auspices of the Musicians' club. The prize consisted of a gold medal and was awarded for a string quartet in A minor. Charles E. Pemberton of Los Angeles received the second prize, consisting of a silver medal, for a string quartet in D minor. Arthur Foote of Boston, the well known composer, awarded the prizes. The competition was for compositions for string quartet only.

¶ ¶

Baron Berthald and William Mertens arrived from Germany last week in order to assume their duties at the Tivoli. Berthald was primo tenor at the opera house in Wiesbaden, the most aristocratic resort in Germany, where he was fortunate enough to gain the good will and approval of the Emperor, who frequently visits Wiesbaden. He has accepted an engagement offered by Mr. Savage to sing with the Castle Square opera company next season. His main triumphs were earned in Lohengrin and Tannhauser. Mertens comes straight from the royal opera in Berlin, where his big, resonant voice gained him many admirers. Miss Mary Howe, who has achieved such great success at Wiesbaden, where she sang in the same company with Baron Berthald, will return to America next season. Miss Howe is a cousin of James Hamilton Howe of this city and the wife of Mr. Lavin who sang tenor with the Bostonians last season. She possesses a fine colorature soprano.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

TEACHES: Tone Production
Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone production

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Bldg.

Reception Hours:
3:30 to 4:30

The San Francisco Philharmonic orchestra is being thoroughly reorganized for its second season. Five concerts have been arranged for the beginning. The strings, which did good service during the last season, will be greatly strengthened. They will consist of eight first violins, eight second violins, four violas, four violoncellos and four contra basses. The brass, which showed some improvement at the final concert of the first season, will be in still better form. The wood wind will also be hauled over. The many friends of Mrs. Charlotte Gruenhagen-Gwynn will be pleased to hear of her engagement as concert master. Mrs. Gwynn was for a long time concert master of the Saturday Morning orchestra. The conductor will again be James Hamilton Howe.

¶ ¶

Mr. Rosner, whose efforts and ability as director of the Orpheum orchestra constantly receive words of praise, is haunted by a number of people who are anxious to know why he puts a cloth on the keys of the organ. He positively pledges his word that there is nothing mysterious about this matter but that the cloth is put there for the purpose of keeping the dust out of the instrument and thus retaining the clarity of the tone. The other day a young man who claims to be a musician asked me whether the cloth is put there for the purpose of "softening" the tone. I thought at the time that the young man wore his hat for the purpose of softening the brain.

¶ ¶

The Temple Emanu-El choir, under the direction of Cantor E. J. Stark, is ardently at work rehearsing the music for the approaching festival services. The additional soloists engaged for this occasion are: Mme. Bernardi, Mrs. Taaffe, Miss Denny, Miss Ryan, Miss Murphy, Miss Rosyn, Mrs. Ettinger; Messrs. Rowan, Tilton, Fletcher, Sandy and Basford. W. Sabin will as usual be the organist.

¶ ¶

The Bayreuth festival performances opened on July twenty-second with Rheingold. Siegfried Wagner, who monopolizes everything of late, conducted. According to reports the attendance of American and English visitors is decreasing. It seems that the mutual admiration society consisting of Fran Cosima Wagner and her beloved son Siegfried is losing its grip. A glance at the list of artists shows a sad decrease in excellent material. The Queen of Wurtemberg attended the opening performance. Van Roolf sang Wotan and the prima donna was Frau Schumann-Heink.

¶ ¶

Hermann Genss is now safely installed as director of the Harmonie singing society and commenced with rehearsals last week. Members of the society inform me that the change in the chorus, even after a few rehearsals, is astonishing and that one could hardly recognize it now. The trouble seems to have been a lack of ability in former conductors who did not understand how to place a voice. Mr. Genss is thoroughly efficient to instruct the singers in these essential points.

¶ ¶

A valuable booklet just received is the American Musical Club Directory. It contains a large list of musical clubs in America and California is also included. Unforthnately the publisher was not able to get all musical societies of San Francisco owing to the lack of interest shown by those who

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . -

Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.

Specialist in the Development of the Voice

* * *

HOME STUDIO:

RECEPTION HOURS, 12 TO 2

912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .

Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu-El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,

Studio for Voice Culture Operatic Repertoire,
Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method.

Engagements accepted for Concerts
Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.

Terms Moderate

Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

MR. FRANCIS STUART

. . . Teacher of Singing

1615 Jackson St., near Polk

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Miss Marion Bear, Concert Pianist, 927 Sutter St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, Vocalist, 1109 Post street.
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist, Oroville, Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

DR. H. J. STEWART....

Organist of Trinity Church, and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .

has removed his
MUSIC STUDIO
to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine

Singing, Piano, Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music

E. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street

Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.

A thorough course for teaching. Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Under direction of For Voice Culture, Piano and Organ
Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck, Assisted by MISS CECILIA M. DECKER
Alto Soloist Central M. E. Church.

Operatic and Dramatic Department in charge of Mrs. Mary Fairweather
Piano Department in charge of Mr. Arthur Fickenscher
Assisted by Mrs. Fanny E. Buckland, (Virgil Practice Clavier Method) and Miss Estelle Davidson (Synthetic Method)
Languages: MR. L. D. VENTURA, B. E. (French and Italian)
MISS ELSA PRIBER (German.)
Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy
Instructions in Physical Culture, Chorus and Sight Singing, Ensemble Playing, etc., etc. Advantages Unsurpassed Full particulars and terms upon application. 841 Fulton St, Bet. Webster and Fillmore,
Telephone West 223 San Francisco, Cal.

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use

BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE

It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.

PRICE $3.00

At music stores or by mail Descriptive circulars sent upon application.

HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

were addressed to furnish information. Surely a little courtesy would harm no one especially when we need considerable press notice regarding the musical progress of California. So I thought it very strange that the Symphony society was not represented. The book is of considerable value to any musician and especially musical managers.

¶ ¶

I have before me a lullaby composed by Mrs. Grisella McAuliffe of Oakland. Both words and music are of that romantic nature that characterizes this class of songs. Under romantic must not be understood sentimental. These latter songs simply float on the market and are worse than worthless but romantic music is seldom heard and the fact that Mrs. McAuliffe has succeeded in applying that romantic tinge that makes a lullaby really "lulling" should assure a large sale for her work.

¶ ¶

From the Musical Courier I glean the following: "It is said that Franz Kaltenborn, the violinist and conductor of the St. Nicholas Garden concerts has purchased the Stradivarius of the late Eduard Remenyi for the sum of six thousand dollars The lawyer of the estate of the Hungarian virtuoso declares that he will have something to say in the matter."

¶ ¶

A dispatch from Rome reads as follows: "A hymn which Pietro Mascagni wrote in honor of Admiral Dewey was performed for the first time in Pesaro tonight. The audience numbered two thousand persons. The work, which is a panegyric of American victories, is generally considered very fine.

¶ ¶

A letter from Sir Henry Heyman states that he is now safely lodged in Alaska. He is in St. Michaels and enjoys his vacation thoroughly. He claims that the scenery is simply magnificent and that considerable excitement prevails over the new gold discoveries at Cape Nome. The violinist will return on August fifteenth to resume his work.

¶ ¶

Laura Jackson, the talented American violinist, was presented by the Queen of England with a jeweled star bearing the royal monogram, while she played at Windsor castle. Miss Jackson will be heard here in concert next season and may come out to this coast.

¶ ¶

Sousa and his band will tour Europe next season and will finish their Trans-Atlantic trip with an engagement at the Paris exposition.

ALFRED METZGER.

SATISFACTORY TO THE EYE AND EAR
BYRON MAUZY PIANOS
308-314 POST ST
Sheet Music, Books, etc. Telephone Main 5261

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd
TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral
Voice Culture and the Art of Singing
First-class Engagements only accepted.
Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing.
Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave.
Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing.
Residence, 1622 Fell Street.
near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE
SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakland, Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL
SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing. Begs to announce that she has returned from Europe and resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento street. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL
POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire.
130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS
CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches.
Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE
TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER
TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY
TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St.
Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH
PUPILS of Madame de la Grange Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

J. W. McKENZIE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX
PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A Building Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30 Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL
VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue Studio, 717 Sutter Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON
SINGING and Piano.
Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK
PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 575. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

HELEN M ANDERSON, A. C. M.
TEACHER OF PIANO Refers to Mr. Louis Lisser, Dr. Wm. Mason and Albert Ross Parsons. Synthetic Method and "Touch and Technic" a special course for teachers.
31 Guerrero St.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH
PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory, Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music.
Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE.
Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M.
1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA
TEACHER OF PIANO.
2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER
TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays. 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony.
2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE
TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a m to 1:30 p. m. Thursday excepted.
Telephone Hyde 1491 825 Sutter Street, S.F.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE
PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street.
Telephone Larkin 782.

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.
ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F.

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.
PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies.
Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m
Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON
CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher.
Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin
Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA
TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St
Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. GERTRUDE JUDD
WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published.

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN
TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.
TEACHER OF ZITHER.
Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street.
Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.
VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn.
Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR
MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5. Will accept engagements for concerts.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano.
MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

World of Letters

PYSCHOLOGY of Woman by a Woman, by Laura Marholm, translated into English by Georgia Etchison: This is an important and significant book, coming as it does from the pen of a woman. The author says she has tried to create preliminary conditions, that of purely sexual psychology, and that she has studied woman and her functions from the standpoint of social conditions. She draws a distinct difference between Protestant and Catholic women, the former the free-thinking woman in her inner and outer life, and the fact that the development of the time has carried them along all too quickly and torn them out of their roots. Of the Catholic, that she still possesses today the connection with nature and the power of emotional expansion, both of which are indispensable to woman. In her three generations of woman she finds that in the swarm of women from various lands and circles and classes, that all alike were unsatisfied, many who called themselves happy yet chased around the world as if possessed and could compose themselves to nothing. * * * "Wherever one looked in civilized lands and 'cultured classes'—dissatisfaction with man and dissatisfaction without man." Whence came this? Was it merely a reflection of the restless hurrying, seeking and pursuing which affects man in this closing century? Was it simply the joylessness which so stamps the life of our time, imprinted upon the sensitive, imitative soul of woman even more than of man? * * Was it the same passion for life without the life vigor, the same pursuit of pleasure without pleasure, the same enjoyment without the ability to enjoy, which make our festivals so impersonal, our society so empty, our intercourse so tiresome? Or was it something else, something at the same time more or less than these, something essentially feminine, a discontent differing from the discontent of man, arising from another organic basis than his? "She goes on and puts these stupendous questions to herself. She proceeds to hunt reasons, to search out the great fundamental Why? that underlies the unanswerable, the eternal mystery of the feminine which sphinx-like refuses all rational answer to so blunt an attack as a direct questioning. In her chapters on The Women of Today, there is une détraquée, this one is artifically developed by stupid concealment and repression. * * * " The representative of this type flutters covetously from man to man, unable to settle to rest beside anyone of them, finds nothing but disappointment in the final satisfaction of her wants, undervalues her husband, converts marriage into torture, and strange as it may seem, in spite of her eternal circling about it, rarely comprehends the physical basis of the relation between man and woman or enjoys spontaneously the relation itself. This is what the French mean by the irreplaceable word une détraquée. In her many faceted characteristics this femme détraquée is the one who zealously reserves her entire capital for the great bliss of an undividualized, self-abandoning love for the one man destined for her." * * * Women who have the value of their worth, an instinctive delicacy in the deeper phases of love; women of rich, beautiful blood, which longs to gather itself for the loving germination of healthy children. * * * Natures that play for high stakes. Then another type is the grande amoureuse, representing a high intensification of woman nature, she has always, from the day of occidental culture, detached herself from time to time from the mass. She not only embodies the growing ardor of womanly devotion, but represents in the highest degree refined nature, culture which has become nature. * * * The grande amoureuse has an excellent mind. She is the flower of feminine intelligence and moral refinement of her time. That which distinguishes the love of the grande amoureuse from that of the détraquée is the absence of hysteria. A third type still, which the writer says, stands in the vanguard of the phalanx of women in many places today, a type harder, she says, to define than the other two, for it is a variable, marked and yet indefinite, pronounced yet incomprehensible; on the one hand verging toward masculinity, on the other hand toward the unripeness of a clever precocious child. It has qualities which partake of the essential characteristics of the grande amoureuse, but these very qualities develop sexlessness. This type is the cérébrale. * * * The cérébrale is a very different type among "intellectual" women. She is the clever, cool, irreproachable wife, with an atmosphere of distinction about her. She is the young girl with the intellectual expression and frank, open, friendly features. She is the widow who after the death of her husband grows younger, brighter and more graceful, and yet does not take a step beyond the limits of widowhood. She is the ripe maiden with the mute glance which does not reciprocate and lips which speak good, sensible, unprejudiced things. So, under various headings this author delves into the secret recesses of woman's nature and in every line and lineament, every expression of glance or voice, every movement, either of long, slow elegance or the staccato tripping over the byways and highways of life according to the fashion of women, there is no spot in her existence so sacred a secret but this author has looked into with keen, ruthless eye from which there is no escaping. Chapter after chapter does this cool, calculating, divining and exposing go on with such wonderful penetration, selecting her examples here and there and giving the devil (female) her due in regardless fashion. The sex is only a differentiation, with the ring of many accidental notes—false and true.

ANNA COX STEPHENS.

A tonic is something that restores strength and vigor to the entire system. Ripans Tabules are a tonic in the sense that they correct digestive disorders and help in the proper assimilation of food. When the organs of the stomach are in perfect working order the whole system is benefited. A society woman of New York City suffered from an attack of bronchitis each year as winter approached, and was often unable to go out of doors for days. When the last attack came on she took a Ripans Tabule each evening and was greatly benefited, having less soreness in her throat and very little tendency to cough. As a result, she had better general health that season than for years. The Tabules, she states, acted in her case as a tonic and imparted renewed strength to her system. If she omitted to take one at night, she would notice that she was not so well the next day.

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

LEGAL NOTICES

SHERIFF'S SALE

SAN FRANCISCO PAVING COMPANY (a corporation) Plaintiff vs. ANNIE C RINES, and THE GERMAN SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY (a corporation) Defendants.	No. 65,594. Superior Court Department No. 7. Order of Sale and Decree of Lien.

Under and by virtue of an Order of Sale and Decree of Lien issued out of the Superior Court, Department No. 7, of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on the 11th day of July A D. 1899, in the above entitled action, wherein San Francisco Paving Company (a corporation), the above named plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of lien against Annie C Rines, defendant, on the 21st day of February A. D. 1899, recorded in Judgment Book 47 of said Court, at page 253, I am commanded to sell all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a point upon the Northerly line of Sixteenth street distant thereon One hundred and eighty (180) feet Westerly of the Westerly line of Sanchezstreet, running thence Westerly upon the said Northerly line of Sixteenth street Fifty (50) feet, three (3) inches; thence at right angles Northerly Thirty-six (36) feet; thence Northeasterly parallel with the Southeasterly line of Market street, Eighty-two (82) feet, six and one-half (6½) inches; and thence Southerly in a straight line Eighty seven (57) feet, four and three-fourths (4¾) inches to the point of commencement. Being a subdivision of Mission Block One hundred aud three (103) in said City and County of San Francisco, State of California

Public notice is hereby given that on Monday the 14th day of August A. D. 1899, at twelve o'clock Noon, of that day, in front of the New City Hall, Larkin street wing, in the City and County of San Francisco, I will in obedience to said order of sale and decree of lien, sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to raise sufficient money to satisfy said judgment with interest, costs, etc, to the highest and best bidder, for lawful money of the United States

HENRY S. MARTIN,
San Francisco, July 22nd A. D. 1899. Sheriff.

J. C. BATES, Attorney for Plaintiff,
434 California street, San Francisco.

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

Department No. 2.

ANNA DE LAWCZYNSKI Plaintiff vs. THEOPHILE F. DE LAWCZYNSKI Defendant	Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA SEND GREETING TO:

Theophile F. de Lawczynski, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful neglect of plaintiff for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of Defendant's willful desertion of said Plaintiff since the 15th day of March, 1898; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Anna Fabry, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT.	Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of ROGER PRENDERGAST Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, executors of the last will and testament of ROGER PRENDERGAST deceased, to the creditors, of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executors at the law office of J. J. Dwyer at the Mills Building, Seventh Floor, Room 38, northeast corner of Bush and Montgomery streets in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

PETER J. DUNNE and CHARLES HIRSHFELD,
Executors of the last will and testament of
Roger Prendergast Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 22, 1899.

J. J. DWYER, Mills Building,
Attorney for Executors.

TOWN TALK prints Briefs and Transcripts

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. 2

CHRISTINA JACOBY Plaintiff vs HERMAN JACOBY Defendant	Action brought in the SuperiorCourt City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff

The People of the State of California send Greeting to:

HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therin within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of Plaintiff since the 11th day of December A. D. 1897, and for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of defendant's willful neglect of said Plaintiff for more than one year last past; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Christina Penders, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT.	Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

—PRICE, $3.00—

Saws of every description made to order.
Planing and Currier Knives, Lace Leather, Emery Wheels, Saw Mandrels,
Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

ESTABLISHED 1863

GOLD
PEBBLE
SPECTACLES
EYE GLASSES
OPERA
FIELD AND MARINE
GLASSES

COMPLICATED
CASES OF DEFECTIVE
VISION
DIAGNOSED
FREE OF CHARGE

824 MARKET STREET, PHELAN BUILDING, Near Fourth

A D. Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty
Open Day and Night — Telephone Main 971

Santa Fe Route

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market-street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St., Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway.
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street.

Lake Tahoe

The Most Picturesque Mountain Lake on the Continent

Its Attractive Resorts

Tahoe City	Tallac
McKinney's	Lakeside House
Rubicon Park	Glenbrook
Emerald Bay	Deer Park Inn

Glen Alpine Springs

Afford fine hotels, home comforts and all modern conveniences at reasonable rates.

Endless opportunity for outdoor recreation, such as boating, bathing, steamer excursions around the lake, mountain climbing, sight seeing, hunting and fishing

The atmosphere is pure, dry and health giving. Absolutely no malaria and no insect pests. Nights cool and delightful. Holders of Ogden Route tickets with sufficient limit may be granted a stop-over at Truckee to visit the lake. Side trip including trip around the lake, $6.00.

ALL AGENTS OF THE

Southern Pacific Company

are supplied with handsomely illustrated folders, for free distribution, giving full and complete information. Ask or send for one.

S. A. WHITE H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W. H. PORTER
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 SAN FRANCISCO

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.
DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF
PAPER
Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty
401-403 Sansome St.
SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence
Livery and Sale Stables
423 Post Street,
W. E. BRIDGE, Proprietor
Telephone No. 1323 San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY
Office, 1004 Market Street
TELEPHONE, SOUTH—420

TELEPHONE MAIN 240
George D. Graham
MANUFACTURER OF
Printing and Lithographic INKS
Printers' Rollers and Composition
Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials
529 COMMERCIAL ST.
Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.
Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking
609 Sacramento St.,
San Francisco, Cal.

W. SCHEPPLER
DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street San Francisco, Cal

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer
. . of . .
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
Schillinger's Patent Sidewalk and Gardenwalk a specialty
Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

UNITED STATES BREWERY
311-313 FULTON STREET
CELEBRATED Steam Beer
ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS
EDWIN E. PARKER BENJ. L. TARBOX
The Reception
206 SUTTER ST., San Francisco.
Private Rooms for Ladies Music Room at
Oysters in Every Style. Disposal of Patrons
TELEPHONE MAIN 1231.

MAISON TORTONI
* * S. CONSTANTINI PROPRIETOR.
French Rotisserie
Private Dining Rooms, Banquet Hall. 111 O'Farrell St.

A No. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton
JAS. P. DUNNE & CO. . .
* *
No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL . . .
* *
Fourth and Market Sts.
Overcoats and Valises Checked Free
TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR
THE MANHATTAN . . .
* *
25 Geary Street, S. F.
Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5611

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free. A valuable book for men.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

Summer Resorts

BLUE LAKES HOTEL

* * *

Conducted in a quiet home-like manner. The best of tables, fine fishing and hunting. Inclosure of 25x60 feet in shallow water for women and children. Rates $10 to $12 per week in hotel or cottages according to location. Ample accommodations. Round trip, good for six months, $9 50, via S.F and N. P. to Ukiah, thence by stage from Palace Hotel.

Address J. WILSON, Bertha P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

LAUREL DELL . . .

* * *

Increased facilities for comfort and pleasure. New dining room, 32x170 feet, overlooking lake. Driving, boating, bathing, fishing, bowling, etc. Lighted by gas.

H. WAMBOLD, Bertha P. O , Lake Co.

ANDERSON SPRINGS . . .

* * * Lake County

Natural Steam, Hot Sulphur and Iron Baths. Rates, $8 to $14 a week; telephone. Round trip, $8. Write for particulars.

J. ANDERSON, Proprietor,
Anderson Springs, Middletown P. O.

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging.

Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5 50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

GLENBROOK . . . Lake County, California

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish, you wwnt to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation, yxe eiquant pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an Ifoularating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O. W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

Agua Caliente Springs Hotel, SONOMA VALLEY

* *

Two hours from San Francisco, via Tiburon Ferry. Warm mineral swimming and tub baths. Water, gas, electric bells. Rates, $10 to 12 per week, $2 per day.

Address AGUA CALIENTE SPRINGS,
Agua Caliente, Sonoma Co., Cal

Howard Springs . . . Lake County, (Putah P. O.)

* *

Hot and cold mineral springs; hot steam and plunge baths of great healing power—will cure rheumatism, nervous diseases kidney troubles, etc. Terms $10 and $12 per week. Special rates to families. Postoffice and telephone. Round trip tickets $10 at Southern Pacific office.

Address MRS. R. J. BEEBY.

Bonanza Springs . . . Lake County, Cal.

* *

A NATURAL camping ground; five different mineral springs. We cater to campers only, and invite all who want good water pure air, fishing and hunting, to come. Hot and cold mineral baths. Cottages neatly furnished to rent from $1.50 per week. Provisions, hay, grain etc., can be purchased on the grounds. Teams meet stages at Seigler's.

Address R. F. DOCKERY, Bonanza Spgs., Putah P. O., Lake Co.

HOTEL EL PASO DE ROBLES

The California Missions were founded in the healthiest part of the State. San Miguel Mission was located in the beautiful Salinas Valley, not far from Paso Robles Hot Springs and Hotel. The climate is dry, warm and invigorating. Hot, Mineral, Mud and Sulphur Springs bubble up in abundance to heal the sick—to keep the hale and hearty always so.

OTTO E. NEVER, PASO ROBLES, CAL. — CITY OFFICE, 636 MARKET ST.

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

WM. B. HOOPER, Manager — San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA

1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer, First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY.

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

Pacific Carriage Co.

OLIVER HINKLEY, SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.

STANDS:

General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street

California Hotel — N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny — 48 Eighth Street

TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 — Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

Town Talk does Printing of all Kinds

—— FULTON ——
LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY
246 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.
Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons; Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 561c

TELEPHONE MAIN 400
MOISE KLINKNER CO.
LEADER DING MANUFACTURERS
RED RUBBER STAMPS, STENCILS
BOX & BURNING BRANDS
MEDALS, BADGES, CHECKS, DIES.
320 SANSOME ST. SAN FRANCISCO.
MOISE'S EASY SHINE. MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

"TOWN TALK"
Moise's
ARTISTIC
RAISED LETTER
SIGNS

To Chicago in 3½ Days
To New York in 4½ Days
VIA
Chicago Union Pacific
AND
Northwestern Line
Through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Buffet-Library Cars with Barber daily . . .
All Meals Served a la Carte in Dining Cars
For full information address
R. R. Ritchie, General Agent
PACIFIC COAST
No. 2 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco
PALACE HOTEL

"PIONEER LIMITED"
BETWEEN
St. Paul and Chicago
CHICAGO MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY
Finest and most complete train on Earth
C. L. CANFIELD, General Agent,
636 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

DO YOU KNOW
A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT
Send or Sample Copy of the
OAKLAND TRIBUNE
and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco
Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory
40 ELLIS ST., Rooms 1 and 2
SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00
Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO, SHELTERED FROM OCEAN WINDS AND FOGS. VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE; EASY TERMS. AMERICAN LAND AND TRUST CO., 132 MARKET STREET, S. F.

LARKSPUR

Is destined to be the metropolis of Marin County and is San Francisco's most popular suburb. It is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mount Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially, Eminent physicians pronounce it a great sanitarium.

A Great Sanitarium Many attractions are offered—such as sea bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks snd drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations; for, Larkspur is building up more rapidly than any other town on the N. P. C. R. R. Large esidences and cottages for sale on installment payments. Do not pay rent when the same money will purchase a beautiful home. Cottages for rent; property exchanged.

AMERICAN LAND and TRUST CO.
132 MARKET STREET

Mont Rouge Vineyard

Livermore Valley California

CHAUCHÉ & BON,

PROPRIETORS

Office and Depot, 17 First St.

Telephone Main 1514 SAN FRANCISCO.

GERMEA

THE

KING

OF

BREAKFAST

FOODS

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .

Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,

Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States

Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,

San Francisco.

Prices Hammered 25 to 50 per cent. DOWN SAVED

CLEARANCE SALE

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 MARKET STREET, S. F.

'Phone, Main 1659

Town Talk Prints Menus

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

PACIFIC TOWN TALK

LITERATURE · SOCIETY · MUSIC · STAGE · POLITICS

San Francisco, August 12, 1899 | Vol. 7—No. 363 | Price, 10 Cents

This Paper not to be taken from the Library

WATER——LIGHT

Water works and electric light plants for country clubs and residences Contracts taken for complete installations, and all work fully guaranteed. Only the best class of work solicited. No steam, heat, or danger.

HERCULES GAS ENGINE WORKS, [Inc.]

305 Market St., S. F.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teaches { Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS: 3:30 TO 4:30

You should ride a

STEARNS

Cushion Frame Bicycle

Safe Deposit Vaults

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

N. W. corner of Bush and Sansome Streets.

STORES Trunks for one dollar a month.

RENTS Safes for $5 a year, furnishing the most perfect security for valuables of all descriptions.

Office hours, 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS

AT HOME

Call and see

The Thermal Bath Cabinet

Baldwin Pharmacy

119-121 Ellis Street

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY

W. I. STERETT

Proprietor Sterett Show Printing Co.

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,187,617.90
Capital actually paid up in cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1899	27,656,613.03

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier, William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, July 1, 1899	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital	1,000,000
Reserve Fund	205,215
Contingent Fund	442,763

E. B. POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER, ROBERT WATT, THOMAS MAGEE, DANIEL E. MARTIN, GEORGE C. BOARDMAN, W. C. B. DE FREMERY, ALBERT MILLER, GEO. TASHEIRA, E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

Mutual Savings Bank of San Francisco

33 POST STREET, below Kearny

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE BLDG.

Guaranteed Capital - $1,000,000 — Paid-up Capital - - - $300,000

JAMES D. PHELAN, President — S. G. MURPHY, Vice President
GEO. A. STORY, Cashier — JOHN A. HOOPER, Vice-President
C. B. HOBSON, Assistant Cashier

"Rate of interest on loans secured by improved San Francisco real estate six per cent."

Interest paid on Deposits. ∴ Loans on approved securities.

Deposits may be sent by postal order, Wells, Fargo & Co., or Exchange on City Banks. When opening accounts send signature.

OCEANIC Steamship Company

The S. S. Australia

Sails for Honolulu Wednesday, Aug 23 at 2 p. m

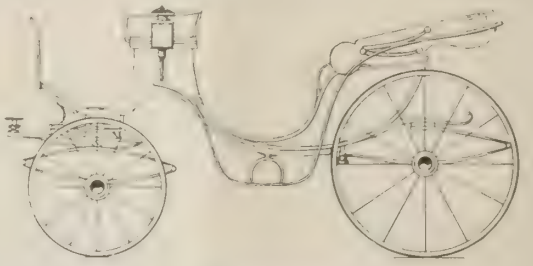
The S. S. ALAMEDA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, Sept 6, at 10 p.m.

Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.

FREIGHT OFFICE - 327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A N Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S. Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart, H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co, New Haven Conn.

The Call

Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.

You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., — Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, August 12, 1899

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

THE APPELLATE TERM of the Supreme court in New York has laid down a rule in an opinion written by Presiding Justice Freedman, which will no doubt be read with great pleasure by all married men who wish to escape legal liability for new gowns and other articles of personal adornment purchased on credit by their wives. The beneficent rule is stated in this language:

> If a husband allows his wife to wear articles in his presence and with his knowledge which he would ordinarily be liable to pay for as necessaries and he makes no objection, he will be liable to pay for them, for his permission to her to retain and enjoy them without objection is equivalent to ratification of the purchase.

Such being the rule the matrimonial dead-beat should find it expedient to be entirely ignorant of what dresses are in his wife's wardrobe. He may find it somewhat difficult to refrain from the usual felicitations upon the stylishness and beauty of a new frock, but how delightful will his position be when he can swear by way of defense to a dressmaker's suit that he never knew that his wife owned such a gown. If his wife insist, however, that he express admiration for the taste which she displayed in the selection of some particular pattern, he may do so providing he subsequently interposes a violent protest against the purchase. In other words let him always be on the alert to manufacture a defense to a suit for goods sold and delivered and he will find under the ruling of Justice Freedman that it is no trick to defraud a tradesman.

An excellent remedy for insomnia will be found in the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky taken at bed-time. Your druggist has it.

IN THE COURSE of the trial of one of the all too numerous Chinese slave cases last week an attorney took occasion to ask why there was such an eternal to-do over the orientals while there is apparently no notice taken of the large number of white girls in tenderloin dens. One might extend inquiry on the same line, and ask why there are so many missions, retreats, refuges and homes for women who have made themselves socially outcast while there is not one where a self-respecting working woman, out of work and with an empty pocket, may obtain a day's victuals or a night's lodging in exchange for service. When a movement toward closing dens and dives is made, why does "society" interest itself to find employment for the barmaids and waitresses who will be thrown out of work, while when wire-stretchers and linotypes displaced book-sewers and compositors, or when a modification of fashion throws out feather curlers, artifical flower makers and fringe and button workers, "society" is blissfully unconscious of their hardships? Why is it that a man seeking honest work may walk the streets day and night in search of something to earn a meal or a bed, without success, but when driven to desperation and on the verge of insanity he commits some petty misdemeanor in order to share the city's hospitality to its criminals, the good people and benevolent associations come forward with offers of assistance, whereas twelve hours before they could not spare time to listen to his story? Why is it that Salvation armies and Volunteer armies of the Lord are so ostentatiously bent upon reforming the drunkard that they have nothing for the man who is sober? When Prison Gate societies and Helping Hands are ready to look out for the ex-convict, who is worrying about the disemployed workman who has not been in the penitentiary? In these days, when every avenue of employment is overcrowded there is an actual premium upon law breaking.

A CONTEMPORARY in discussing the subject of the enforcement of the compulsory education law sees trouble ahead. When all the truants and incorrigibles who now roam at large are forced into the school room, the poor teachers will suffer, and the influence that these young Arabs will exert over the Little Lord Fauntleroys and Lady Gladys's of previously angelic association will be most harmful. The same contemporary applies some severe strictures to the daily papers which "poke fun" at police officers who arrest "baby brigands" and "chubby burglars" as well as to judges who dismiss the juvenile offenders with merely a reprimand. While there most certainly is serious need of some means whereby children can be checked of their unlawful tendencies, it has been remarked before that no judge or jury will convict children from seven to ten years of age of such crimes as burglary, highway robbery, train wrecking or an assault to commit murder, with a penalty of long confinement in the State prison. Though the babies may be technically guilty it is nonsense to suppose that they are morally responsible for anything worse than trespass or malicious mischief. In a vast majority of instances a sound spanking administered by the parent and the making good of the actual damage will do far more to restrain the youngsters and prevent a repetition, especially if the parents are wise enough to withhold pocket money or garnishee earnings until the fine is made up, than will an arrest and trial, which must result in an acquittal and the return of the offender as a hero among his mates. A generation or two ago when a mischievous boy held a solemn interview with his father in the woodshed, and the girl of unruly tendencies made acquaintance with a slipper sole in the privacy of her bed chamber—when there was no "cruelty man" to be appealed to by some officious neighbor who knew nothing of the matter under judication, and parents were not warned and threatened by that official, it was considered a lasting disgrace to the whole family to have had one of its members under arrest. In those days there was a well established belief in the doctrines of free will and personal responsibility, and the theories of hereditary tendency, alcoholized brain cells and irresistible impulse had not taken hold. Sensitive nervous organization is a polite euphemism for what used to be called "pure cussedness," and much of what is now practically encouraged was then literally whipped out. No doubt the corporal chastisement was often overdone and much of the spanking was ill-advised and unnecessary, but now that we have swung to the opposite end, is the result any more satisfactory? A French physician, M. Bérillon, advocates the hypnotizing of these "degenerates" and incipient criminals. He thinks laziness, idleness, ill-temper, kleptomania, etc, as well as nail-biting, thumb-sucking and such habits can all be eradicated by suggestion. He says eight out of ten children are subject to this influence in a profound degree after a second trial, and is sanguine as to its effectiveness in regard to inattention, cowardliness, selfishness, and in fact the whole list of human shortcomings. As to the thumb-sucking and nail-biting our grandmothers who knew nothing of germ theories and degeneration were wont to regard such tricks as the natural habit of infants and when they were not speedily outgrown, those good dames were known to resort to such cruel practices as tying the hands into woolen mittens or tipping the fingers with aloes or some other bitter drug which acted as a stimulant to short memories. Kleptomania is a very peculiar disease. It appears to be confined to females of fairly good social and financial standing with an "uncontrollable impulse" to become possessed of articles of personal adornment or house decoration which are just beyond the limit of their pocket-books. People of a lower social strata, or more straitened in means, whose impulse leads them to take possession of a loaf of bread or a pair of shoes for the baby find their misdemeanor called in plain Anglo-Saxon, theft and shop lifting, and when they are taken to a sanitarium for treatment, the institution is one often irreverently spoken of as "the stone jug." The doctrine of "can't help it" is a very convenient one, but down under it all, there is a pretty well defined certainty that with the exertion of will, other habits are as much within the control of the individual as that of gum-chewing.

ONCE MORE BUCKLEYISM has been repudiated by the people of San Francisco and James D. Phelan is again victorious. The result of the first election held under the new primary law settled all doubt as to the impotency of the push in municipal poiltics. The administration of Mayor Phelan has whetted the appetite of the people for honest government. His aggressive and uncompromising policy has received the unqualified endorsement of honest citizens, and it has been demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that there is a preponderance of decency in this community. It has been the theory of phlegmatic pessimists who have contemplated with churlish indifference the maladministration of affairs by corrupt city officials that the people of San Francisco were not misrepresented at the city hall. They contended that the degeneracy of the community was mirrored in the personnel of its officials, and that reform in the city government could not be effected until integrity, honesty and decency predominated in the civic body. That this view of the situation was unwarranted has been made evident by recent events. The election of the freeholders was the first expression of popular desire for honest government, and the election last Tuesday was most eloquent testimony of the sentiment which has been crystallizing ever since the crusade against the bosses was inaugurated by James D. Phelan. Heretofore the people have been held in restraint by corrupt bosses under a system that made it difficult for them to assert their rights and wishes. They were misrepresented by officials because they had no voice in the selection of their so-called representatives. It was James D. Phelan that pointed out to them the means by which they could throw off the shackles and they have followed him with faithful and unerring footsteps. Attempts have been made to mislead them by the slanders of a partisan press but fortunately the puerile pretensions of pestiferous personal organs have failed to deceive the public. It was James D. Phelan who secured a charter for the city, and it was the reform crusade of James D. Phelan that secured for the city the primary law which enabled the people of San Francisco for the first time in their lives to elect their own representatives to municipal conventions. The victory over the bosses last Tuesday was a Phelan victory. The Committee of One Hundred deserves credit for its management of the fight, but to Phelan belongs the glory. The people are now assured that the provisions of the charter will have a fair test under the supervision of men who will be selected for their ability to enforce them strictly and honestly.

MIRIAM MICHAELSON, who is capable of better things, wasted a whole page of a recent Sunday Bulletin in the exploitation of Jewell Flint, the flinty jewel being set forth as a "boy convict who is now a poet." "He killed his sweetheart in Sacramento but has now repented and would lead a good life if pardoned." This precious rascal, whose picture in embroidered collar and big bow occupies the centre of the page, is "only twenty-five years old and one-fourth of the sum of his years on earth has been spent in prison." Of course he is expecting a pardon and, of course, he is one of the innocent victims of society, more sinned against than sinning, ad nauseum. The plain straightforward statement of the whole case lies in a nutshell. Jewell Flint was one of a family in comfortable circumstances. At the age of nineteen he was already a drunkard. He had been making calf-love to a schoolmate of his own age and because the girl refused to accept his escort when he was intoxicated, he shot her dead. Now, what is there in that which calls for sympathy and why should the young scoundrel be turned loose on the community simply because he has taken to writing rhymes which he sentimentally dedicates to his mother? The poetry, en passant, is quite as much of a crime as the murder and it alone ought to earn him life imprisonment. Miss Michaelson runs the gamut of "mad with a boy's hot-headed love, with jealousy and drink," "liquor crazed brain," "dazed," "no recollection of it all," and so on, and quotes the case of Rosser, the Tennessee soldier who was acquitted of a cold-blooded murder in this city. But the Rosser case is no argument. That mephitic jury still smells to heaven and the whole affair from first to last was a flagrant miscarriage of "justice." The precious Jewell Flint should have been used as an argument of precedent for Rosser's punishment and the newspapers will do vastly better in not giving over their columns to making heroes of murderers. Intoxication, instead of being regarded as a mitigating circumstance, should be looked upon as an aggravation of the offense and boys of nineteen who fill themselves with liquor and go armed are a menace to a community. It is not a question of whether "this boy has learned all the good San Quentin has to teach," but whether society is prepared to have other young girls killed because they exercise a right to decline the attentions of young men who have not the grace to maintain a decent outward appearance of respectability. Criminals are imprisoned for the same reason that savage dogs are kept chained, not for their good but for the protection of the community. Let us take a side glance at the way these things are managed in England. It is a good many years since Mrs. Maybrick was convicted of the murder of her husband and sentenced to imprisonment for life. There is not an influence on this terrestrial globe which has not been exerted to gain a pardon for her. More than one secretary of state has been appealed to; books have been written and clubs established; political battles have been lost and won; petitions have been circulated and lectures delivered; her beauty and accomplishments, her sickness and sufferings, her already long imprisonment and the alleged persecution of an American woman, have been worked for all they are worth but she is still in prison. There was no doubt of Mrs. Maybrick's guilt and there is equally little doubt but that she will pay the full penalty. Nothing in this state ever acted as a deterrent to women with a penchant for using pistols more than the sentence of one martial female to the penitentiary for twenty-five years. What is needed for these "poor fellows" is not columns of sentimental gush, but certainty of punishment. The "poor mother" argument rightly belongs to the family of the victim. Boys who are rightly trained do not commit penitentiary offenses and if their poor mothers have indeed been "poor" mothers, their griefs and humiliations are only their just dues.

WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR having long since ceased to be an American in spirit has effected complete expatriation by renouncing his nationality altogether and becoming a full-fledged Englishman. It has been asked why should Americans sneer at Mr. Astor for so doing, in view of the fact that America is a nation of expatriated subjects of foreign potentates? We welcome Englishmen who leave their country to become citizens of the republic: why should we denounce the citizen who leaves our country to become a subject of the queen? The question does not present analogous cases. The Englishman that becomes an American citizen does so because of a sense of obligation to the country in which he improved his material condition or acquired a fortune or raised a family. His case is quite different from that of the American snob who leaves his native soil because he is piqued at his countrymen for failing to show him the deference due in his imagination to a man with great wealth, and in order to escape just taxation imposed by the government which gives protection to the property from which he derives his income. Mr. William Waldorf Astor enjoys the distinction of being a unique case of snobbery. His one aim in life is to enter the nobility and found a peerage but it is doubtful whether he will ever make judicious investment of his vast wealth to that end. He is an air-tight snob and hence the people of England have as much contempt for him as do those of his native country. He is jeered at in London more than he was in New York and all because of the lack of good fellowship which is evidenced by his grip on his purse-strings. In addition to his other mean qualities, that of penuriousness is most conspicuous and against the background of his selfish nature not a single virtue is silhouetted even in faint relief. It was this predominating penuriousness more than all else that impelled him to surrender his American citizenship, for he always rebelled against the exactions of the tax collector. But they are as skilled in the art of elongating a leg in England as they are in America and when a man with many millions seeks to cut a wide swath in a cheap way in London he receives scant encouragement. If Mr. Astor had sought to make himself a "good fellow" when he first went to England he might have dazzled the Britishers by his prodigality, but he preferred to pursue the tactics of a conservative swell until he was guyed unmercifully. And then he tried to make up for his delinquencies by a great splurge but he only attracted the attention of a throng of déclassée aristocrats. Subsequently he made himself ridiculous by publishing a fake biography of his grandfather to show that he was of noble lineage and about that time the Prince of Wales was quoted as saying of W. W. Astor, "He bores me." That should settle the fate of the great American Snob, for any one that gives his Royal Highness that tired feeling is forever barred from the real thing in social functions. So after all the lot of the naturalized Englishman is not to be a happy one.

AND HE LOVED HER STILL

OH! LOVE is a treacherous boy,
See, see, how the truant deceives me,
That she loved me she swore by on high,
And now for another she leaves me.

How false and how faithless is woman!
From fancy to fancy still ranging;
Her heart can be constant to no man,
But day after day will be changing.

For did she not vow, o'er and o'er,
That mine she would be and forever,
Oh! did she not swear by each power,
That death, only death should dissever?

'Tis not for the vows she had plighted,
Now shamelessly broken, I sigh;
That, I leave to the gods she has slighted,
And they must avenge it on high.

But thus to forsake him whose pride
Thou was't, on thy beauty who doted;
Leave him for a soldier's mean bride,
And fly from a heart so devoted—

The heart that was worth thy caressing,
Whose pleasure was but to obey;
And that heart thou mightst still be possessing,
Still proud to acknowledge thy sway.

He may love, but he will not, believe me,
Thus glory in wearing thy chain;
Yet this bosom, though thou coulds't deceive me
And scorn me, will love thee again.

[Translated from the French of Bonnefons.]

The Saunterer

AN INTELLIGENT SERVANT IS a luxury devoutly to be desired for there is no embarrassment quite so distressing as that resulting from the blunder of a hired man or hired woman, but the intelligent servant is also to be guarded against. It is better to have a blithering idiot engaged in the performance of household labors than one that combines smartness with treacherous proclivities. More than one family has been disrupted in San Francisco through the maliciousness of a smart servant. The records of the divorce courts are full of instances of domestic discord promoted through the agency of bright chambermaids and shrewd butlers. One of the latest instances of the evil resulting from the employment of too much sagacity in the kitchen is found in the case of Captain De la Mar, the forty-times millionaire who laid the foundation of his fortune in the mines of this state and whose marriage about five years ago to the beautiful Miss Sands of New York and subsequent divorce are fresh in the minds of the public. I understand that the captain's jealousy was aroused by a designing kitchen artist who wrote letters and signed them with the name of the man who was afterwards made co-respondent. Captain De la Mar was inordinately jealous of his handsome wife and was too ready to be convinced, but I have been told that the treachery of the servant has been revealed to him, and that he has succeeded in obtaining the forgiveness of the woman he had wronged. The story comes from New York that they are soon to be remarried in Paris where Mrs. De la Mar has lived since her separation from her husband and child.

Much to the surprise of the legal fraternity, the Tevis estate plum did not go to the newly organized firm of Page, McCutcheon & Knight. So it appears that there was either no foundation for the rumors concerning the motive that actuated Mr. McCutcheon in disbanding the old firm or else the dissolution of co-partnership was premature. I am inclined to take the charitable view of the matter, now that I know that the Tevis will was not in McCutcheon's inside pocket, for it appears that neither he nor Mr. Page had any reason to feel assured that they would have the handling of the estate. Although Page, McCutcheon & Knight would undoubtedly manage the estate satisfactorily to the heirs, no mistake was made in the selection of John Drum as the attorney for the executor. Mr. Drum is a young member of the profession who enjoys the confidence and respect of every reputable lawyer in San Francisco. In his somewhat brief career before the courts of this state he has shown himself to be a lawyer of splendid ability and with a fine sense of the proprieties that should obtain in the practice of his profession. He is well known to the Tevis heirs for he studied law in the office of Louis Haggin, and his brother Frank Drum is now and has been for years the cashier for the old firm of Haggin & Tevis. He practiced law for a short time in the office of E. J. McCutcheon and subsequently with McEnerney & Goodfellow.

Since the death of Lloyd Tevis I have heard some speculation as to whether he ever told his side of the story concerning the alleged bribery of Chief Justice Wallace of the Supreme court. That story has been hinted at in the newspapers a thousand times and has frequently been used by Judge Wallace's political enemies, and not without effectiveness. In my opinion the story was the fabrication of a diseased brain overtaxed with anxiety resulting from the interest of its possessor in an important law suit. The author of the story was a man named Connolly who was a resident of San Joaquin county. He declared that he bribed Judge Wallace to obtain a favorable judgment and that Lloyd Tevis was his agent. I believe the sum paid was five thousand dollars, and Connolly declared that he saw the chief justice and Tevis meet in the latter's office on the day the money was paid. As Judge Wallace and Lloyd Tevis were friends there could be noth-

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco.

JOHN CAFFREY, Pacific Coast Representative.

ing significant in a meeting between them and as the justice's decision was against Connolly I never could understand why the story of the transaction should have been circulated to injure the distinguished jurist. All the circumstances pointed to the innocence of Judge Wallace and if Connolly ever parted with any money for the purpose of having it used to corrupt a court, he must have received something in the nature of a double-cross, as they say in sporting circles, from the man that handled the sack.

A progressive hearts party was given at the residence of Mrs. Louis Glass, 1415 Jones street, on Wednesday evening of last week, by her daughter Miss Frankie Glass. Six tables were arranged in the large parlors and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The prizes were won by Mr. Hammer and Miss McDermott, the consolation prize by Mr. Shard. Everyone who has ever been entertained by Miss Glass knows what a charming little hostess she is, and this hearts party was one of the most enjoyable affairs she has ever given. A stringed orchestra was in attendance and at the conclusion of the games dancing was in order.

"When you are married, Henriette, I shall give you a beautiful silk petticoat for a wedding gift," said Gertrude, as she gave her dearest friend a warm kiss.

"Why wait till then ?," returned Henriette, looking in the mirror to see that her friend's embrace had not disarranged her golden tresses. "I would much rather have it while I am living."

If a scrap-book is not an index of its owner's character it at least indicates his temperament. If you find a scrap-book filled with spring poetry you know that the owner's mind lightly turns to nonsense. If a scrap-book contains poems of passion you are sure that they were collected by one whose bent of inclination is in an amorous direction. The scrap-book of an orator bespeaks the spellbinder who is not burdened with originality, and a collection of scientific clippings suggests the student. I came across a scrap-book in the Chronicle office the other day and its contents aroused my curiosity as to its ownership. Its pages were filled with recipes for brewing all sorts of punches and exhilarating beverages, and for concocting a variety of dainty dishes, with antidotes to relieve one of the evil effects of indulgence in the complicated libations and stews, soups, et cetera. Surely here was the property of some well-fed sybarite and epicure. My first guess was that M. H. de Young was the owner of the book for I could think of none other connected with the Chronicle who was likely to be interested in such things. I was not surprised, however, when I learned that I was wrong. William Gifford Smith, the editorial writer with the fat neck and eloquent paunch, is the man that rounded up those recipes. He is an epicure of the Lucullus order and he confesses that if he did not have an antidote for every bane he would long since have been a hopeless victim of the gout.

A buxom newspaper woman who chronicles society events for a daily paper made the trip through the Yosemite a short time ago on the back of a mule named Moses. One day the mule saw a bear and he shied so suddenly that the lady was thrown off. She fortunately fell upon a heap of dead leaves and nothing more serious happened than the disarranging of her dress. Upon her return to the newspaper office she narrated her experience to her co-workers whereupon they were prompted to perpetuate the event in verse. A variety of doggerel was written, and each writer took the bear's view of the situation. Here is one effusion that was not intended for publication:

Said Bruin: "I think it shocking
"For a dame to show her stocking
"Without apparent provocation to a bear.
"From her garter I should guess
"She's a writer for the press
"There were several items on it, that I'll swear."

If it be a fact and not an advertising dodge to test the contralto's popularity, that Jessie Bartlett Davis has left the Bostonians for good and all, then that famous organization may well feel itself a tottering structure. When Marie Stone retired, a sad gap was made in the Bostonians' ranks, a gap which, however, was acceptably filled by a new soprano. Camille d'Arville made such a hit as prima donna that it was a sad piece of news to the comic opera loving world when the dashing soprano started out on her own account as a star. But Alice Neilsen was probably the most popular soprano the Bostonians ever had and charming as Helen Bertram is, she could not fully fill the place made vacant by the fair Alice. The retirement of Tom Karl and Edwin Hoff were both serious losses to the company's strength. Then when the magnificent Cowles seceded to Alice Neilsen's organization it almost seemed as if the worst had happened that could happen. Nevertheless, a greater misfortune comes in Jessie Bartlett Davis' resignation. Grant that Mrs. Davis is not so young as she was ten years ago, grant that her lower limbs are less well fitted to the upper part of her body, grant that her voice is not so powerful as it was, still with all these drawbacks she is still Jessie Bartlett Davis and as such is beloved by the majority of theatre-goers. With only Barnabee and Macdonald of the original Bostonians, I must come to the conclusion that it will soon be necessary to inscribe an epitaph upon the once glorious company of comic opera artists.

A great many stories are told about the amiable Jessie and among them is one which, though it is not new, will bear repetition. Mina Cleary, who is now Mrs. Eugene Cowles, once owned a little dog which was named Jessie, possibly without malice aforethought; the story does not say whether the canine barked contralto. Miss Cleary, who sang in the chorus, was always escorted to and from rehearsals by her little Jessie and the dog also attended her at evening performances. One night when "Robin Hood" was the bill, just as Alan-a-Dale, disguised as a monk, was embracing the plump form of the fair Mina, little Jessie ran out from the wings and hot with resentment at seeing a supposed man with his arms around her mistress, the dog seized Jessie Bartlett Davis' monk's robe in her teeth and pulled away at it in true tug-of-war fashion. Barnabee's wand, which he carried in

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

Engraved . . . ✷
Wedding Announcements
and Invitations . . . ✷

ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

his character as Sheriff of Nottingham, was immediately to the fore and, as he jabbed at the dog, he cried:

"Come off, Jessie; come off."

Mrs Davis, who was oblivious to the dog's proximity, of course imagined that Henry Clay Barnabee had reference to herself and, scarcely able to restrain her tears, she abruptly left the stage. When Miss Cleary, Barnabee and little Jessie had smoothed the contralto's injured feelings, a matter which consumed some time, Mrs. Davis explained why she had wept.

"It was not so much your calling me Jessie," she said, "but it hurt my feelings to have you talk slang to me."

On Sunday there was a great deal of amateur hairdressing going on and the wherefore of this must be laid at the door of the Call which published pictures of the latest style of coiffure illustrated by four pictures of Hope Ross. Artistic disorder is the distinguishing trait of this new style of wearing the hair and it is not likely to be becoming to many faces. Only flaxen or red blonde locks are effective in disordered modes of hairdressing, a fact which is patent to anybody who has taken the pains to watch stage beauties in their various transformations. Mrs James Brown Potter affects the loose, wavy style to show off her burnished locks, while Mrs. Leslie Carter preferred to wear her bright red braid a-hanging down her back in "The Heart of Maryland." However, she may have changed her style of coiffure during the past two years. Blanche Bates runs to two fashions in hairdressing, the Madonna part and smooth braids, or long curls hanging over her shoulders with a few stray locks over the temples. In both of these ways she is equally beautiful. Miss Bates knows that black hair never looks so well as when it is smooth, and plainly parted.

It is from the stage that we get our modes of hairdressing, for it is Minnie Maddern Fiske that has sent this latest innovation among us. In "Tess of the d'Urbervilles" Mrs. Fiske wears her soft wavy hair tumbling in artistically tousled masses over her forehead. It was Mrs. Langtry who gave us the Langtry bang—what ages ago that was! Elsie de Wolfe was probably as largely responsible for the Madonna part as were the Gibson girls. To Anna Held's door may be laid the pompadour craze, not the sleek, high roll which some affect, but the waved hair which, though rolled over a rat, never gives the impression of stiffness.

"She is a widow."
"Grass or turf?"
"Neither."
"Well, then, what kind of a widow is she?"
'Clover: her husband has implicit confidence in her."

Paul Cowles, local manager of the Associated Press, is destined to be the next president of the Press club. He has already been nominated and although there is talk of an opposition ticket, Cowles' election is assured. Jim Tyler of the Bulletin, who has made one of the best financial secretaries the club has ever had, will be retained in that position and John Harrison, better known as "Uncle John" of the Chronicle, has been prevailed upon to accept the nomination for recording secretary. Harrison is at present librarian of the club, and to his efforts is largely due the great improvement that has been made during the past year in the club's reading material. Although the volumes have increased in number the library has not deteriorated from the standpoint of quality. Mr. Harrison will probably be succeeded as librarian by Eustace Cullinan, the Bulletin's poetical genius, who is eminently qualified for the position. Mr. Waterhouse, the funny verse writer of the Examiner, will be one of the vice presidents of the club, and Wells Drury of the same paper and Louis Honig of the Call will certainly be elected directors.

He: What an idiot Miss Bachelormayde makes of herself, trying to dress and act like a man.
She: She gets very near the model, all the same.

Fred Myrtle of the Bulletin and Colonel Trevelyan, one of the few survivors of Balaklava, are occupying a cottage at Santa Cruz and may be seen every day in duck trousers on the beach. En passant, I desire to call attention to the fact that few reporters are vouchsafed the privilege of a vacation and that when Mr. Crothers announced in the editorial rooms of the Bulletin some weeks ago, that each reporter could take a week off without losing a cent of salary the members of the staff were filled with joy. Myrtle chose Santa Cruz as the place for the rest and he started off last Saturday. He was escorted to the ferry by a delegation of friends. He wore a straw hat and carried a traveling bag that was the proper thing in Liverpool before he thought of coming to America. He attracted the attention of a newsboy, who aroused his indignation by asking him with a leer on his face:

"What number on Market street are you looking for, Mister?"

Myrtle's friends thought it a good joke that he should be confounded with the hayseed advertisement for a clothing store, but if they saw him on the beach at Santa Cruz in his duck trousers, or going into the surf in his maroon colored bathing suit, they would marvel at the change in his appearance.

Just the thing to take camping, a bottle of Chapin and Gore's old Reserve Bourbon.

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY
12 years old before being bottled
Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers
412 Front St., S. F.
Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

SHOES MADE TO ORDER
Hand Sewed, $5.50
Repairing Done Nicely
Machine Sewed, $3.50
Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold Cheap.
Telephone Polk 18
T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

Dr. CARL DEHMEL
(formerly of Berlin)
Surgeon Chiropodist
and Masseur . . .
Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe Nails a Specialty
CONSULTATION FREE
EMPORIUM and
GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR
Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

By this time Billy Hynes ought to be convinced that his recreant spouse is beyond recall. It was hard for him to realize that the mother of his children had become so badly smitten with the musical tailor that she could not be coaxed or lured back to her own fireside. He felt that the glamour would soon wear off and that her fondness for young Grennan was merely an evanescent fancy. She would be disillusioned, he thought, before the end of the voyage on the sailing vessel. And if there is anything that has a tendency to take the edge off a rollicking romance it is the mal de mer that generally goes with a trip on a sailing vessel, but Mrs. Hynes is made of sterner stuff than that which becomes dispirited under ordinary adverse circumstances. Latest developments in the case show that her passion for the weak-lunged cornetist became more intense under the tropic sun of the Hawaiian group. This matronly woman with the limpid, languorous eyes was whispering "Aloha" to her sartorial sweetheart with a fervor as hot as Mauna Loa's seething lava, while her unfortunate husband in his lonely home in San Francisco was devising ways and means of inducing her to return. And return she did, but not as her husband expected—alone and anxious for the forgiveness which he was so eager to grant. This Guinevere heaped scorn upon dishonor by accepting the money which, I am told, her husband sent her to defray the expense of the return trip and she came back as she went, in the arms of her lover and once more aboard a sailing vessel. The guilty pair arrived in this city late Saturday afternoon and, when darkness set in, a closed carriage conveyed them to the Grennan domicile where the mother received her truant son and counseled with him to make restitution. He declared that he was willing to do so but that Mrs. Hynes would not go back to her husband, and that if deserted she would commit suicide. He incidentally outlined his plans for the future. His itinerary includes a trip to Omaha where he has an engagement to play his silver-mounted cornet in the Hawaiian band at the exposition and from there he will travel with the band through the eastern states. He will be accompanied by his Californian Chimay whom he hopes to make his wife in the event of her husband's obtaining a divorce.

After leaving the Grennan residence the lovers repaired to a downtown lodging house where they remained in seclusion until Sunday night when they left for Los Angeles after bidding farewell to select friends and relatives. They received a few visitors Sunday and I believe they gave an impromptu musicale in their rooms, during which a couple of revolvers were on exhibition. Although Hynes was aware of the return of his wife he made no effort to see her. He was no doubt disgusted when he learned that she was accompanied by Grennan. I hope that he will make no further effort to reclaim her for he will only make himself ridiculous The case has many pathetic features and it would be well if the curtain could now be drawn, for scandals of that sort are not of an entertaining character. It is bound to end in the old familiar way and point the inevitable moral, but the damage has been done and can never be repaired.

The little Filipinos who have come on to be an attraction at the Mechanics' Institute fair are having a great time getting themselves acclimated and accustomed to the ways of San Francisco. Down in Hayes street opposite the Pavilion annex an empty store has been fitted up for the foreigners and they have a stove and all sorts of comforts which are likely luxuries to them. Of course they spend most of their time in the Pavilion and one of the first things the little islanders discovered was a big tank, which they immediately proceeded to use for swimming and bathing purposes. They go in stark naked and never seem to mind the fact that there are white face spectators standing near and looking on. The other morning, I am told, some of the Filipino women took a notion that their garments needed washing. Without waiting for such a preliminary as a change of costume, they divested themselves of their attire and immediately proceeded to do their laundrying, oblivious to the presence of the onlookers who were commenting on the bronze Venuses and their classical poses.

Mr. Newman threw himself down into a cushoned fauteuil at the club and heaved a relieved sigh:

"My wife has made a clean breast of it," he said to his fellow clubman, young Bachelor.

"Yes," remarked the latter, in a dry tone as if no further comment were necessary, "I noticed her gown was more décolleté than usual at the Swells' dinner last evening."

There was a hot time in the old town of Capitola last Saturday night when Otto Ziegler, the kingpin bicycle rider, disputed possession of a boudoir with one of the surviving Arguello heirs of San Jose. The affair created quite a sensation at the summer resort and developed into something in the nature of a scandal. Ziegler, it will be remembered, took unto himself a bride several months ago in the person of pretty Margaret Tennant, daughter of Fred Tennant of San Jose. Mrs. Ziegler distinguished herself shortly before her marriage by rebuking, in a somewhat forcible manner, a red-headed girl who was laboring under the delusion that she had claims on Tennant père. Mrs. Ziegler has been spending the summer at Capitola with her husband and I understand that she was as much put out over Otto's violence as was young Arguello. But the gossips of Capitola enjoyed the dénouement very much.

$100 Reward $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY, Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

Recreation Park Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets

BASE-BALL

EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Oakland vs. San Jose

August 12th and 13th

The last Californienne to betake herself to the boards is Miss Maud Knowlton, daughter of Ebenezer Knowlton. "What Do You Think He Would Say?" is the scare head to a column in one of the dailies announcing this fact, and He refers to one of Miss Maud's stern old Puritan forbears. It is a good advertisement for the debutante and might have been written by papa himself. As a matter of fact, Maud is not the first histrion in the family. Caro True Boardman, the elocutionary reader, is a connection of the family and Ebenezer Knowlton himself, though a pedagogue, has no little talent in this direction and was well known as a public reader and reciter in bygone days. His daughter Maud was well known for her dark, brilliant beauty and for a certain spice of diablerie which made her very fascinating. She left San Francisco as a bride, having married a Mr. Lambert of Chicago who seems to have been mislaid and forgotten. Ethel, the second daughter, was also a pretty girl but she lacked her sister's brilliancy and dash. This did not prevent her, however, from being involved in a little affair of a contract marriage with a young man at a certain summer resort. The young lady pleaded it was all in fun and doubtless the affair was settled to the satisfaction of all concerned, as Miss Ethel, like her sister, married a Chicago man and left the city.

Our theatre-goers are sadly in need of a reminder upon one of of those points of lesser morals otherwise known as manners. I refer to the practice so much indulged in by women, and to some extent by the other half of humanity, of beginning to don wraps and headgear before the performance has ended. Certainly the few seconds of time gained in this way are not of much moment to the audience; it cannot be possible that they are all in frantic haste to catch the last boat. The rustle and stir produced are annoying to those who like to enjoy the finale of a play or an opera and I should think would be distracting to the stage people. I believe that it is merely a symptom of the great American malady, rush, and it certainly evinces none of that repose which should mark the caste of Vere de Vere.

Care hath a place in every home,
And Love and Care once quarreled sore.
Out in the world did Cupid roam,
But Care turned him from every door.
The world grew weary of Care at last;
It captured Love and held him fast.

A story that is making the rounds of the funny columns reminds me of a similar occurrence of many years ago in a rural neighborhood some miles from Napa. The community was in a condition so well described by the phrase "spoiling for a fight," and yet there was absolutely nothing that would answer for an active casus belli. The school was closed for the summer vacation, so there was not even that perennial storm centre, nor the question of "Who's going to board the teacher?" School election was over months ago and nothing else in sight—and yet the whole valley, individually and collectively, went about with an invisible chip on its shoulder and a perpetual challenge to "Tread on me coat-tail." At this interesting juncture a well-intentioned minister happened to drive along, bent upon a vacation trip with his little family. Finding that there was no church service held nearer than ten miles and no Sunday school, he stopped over and established a Union Sunday school, innocently imagining that he was performing a good work and actually filling a long felt want—furnishing something to fight about. No sooner was the Sunday school established and the good man gone upon his journey than the inhabitants split into two factions, each bent upon running the institution. The Sunday school exercises consisted almost entirely of singing hymns and the method of conducting the warfare was unique and original. Each side tried to induce as many visitors as possible from outside to attend and each made a point of selecting such hymns as it was supposed the others were unfamiliar with. Each faction had a tacitly acknowledged leader who announced the selection and immediately "raised the tune" which was joined in enthusiastically by the rest. If, however, the hymn was known to the opposite faction there was a chance to "sing them down" which was by no means passed over. On one occasion a leader announced a hymn, the opening line of which was:

"He leadeth me, Oh! blessed thought."

The young farmer, however powerful his lungs, did not possess the accomplishment of reading at sight, and when he bellowed forth,

"He leadeth me, Oh! blessed thow"

the contretemps was too much for even his own followers, who joined in the general titter. The opposition took advantage of the break and immediately announced another selection. In her elation, the leader started out at such a pitch that she soon balanced upon her vocal tiptoes with several high notes ahead quite out of her reach. Her father, an old farmer of the type made familiar in the illustrations of "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," burst out with the admonition:

"Start her again, Leeney; start her lower this time."

While the discomfited Jim L—— comforted himself with the outspoken reflection:

"Huh! Got the tune right if I couldn't read the words."

Mrs S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, popular new fall hats 'Musketeer" roubadour" and "Rough Rider."

The Laxative Liver Lozenge

PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable

PRICE 25 CENTS

CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, · 139 Powell St
W. W. STOCKER.

Utica Cleansing Compound and Utica Compound Paste.....

TRADE MARK TIACU

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society, 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

This compound is made of pure and unadulterated drugs
Used for Baths and Shampoo it will make the skin soft and white.

For Swollen and Painful Feet it is unrivaled.

For Poison Oak and Prickly Heat it is a sure remedy.

Suitable for cleansing anything.

SAMUEL SEYMOUR,
21 SPEAR ST. S. F. Pacific Coast Agent.

The story is going the rounds in press circles of New York that Alice Rix-O'Leary has lately fallen heir to an immense sum of money through the death of her mother, Mrs. Ballard, in San Francisco. How far the story is true I do not know but the legacy is placed at everything from thirty to seventy-five thousand dollars, and I am told that Mrs. O'Leary has lately been seen in this city, having been called westward by her mother's death. Alice is said to be very well pleased with her latest husband and Mr. O'Leary feels that he is in clover. He is writing special articles for a New York paper about the Union iron works and the war-ships Californian mechanics have built and is receiving sixteen dollars a column for them. Dave, as Mr. O'Leary's friends call him, is a nice young fellow under thirty years of age and is a son of the O'Leary who was for many years the head and front of the Journal of Commerce, also, I believe, editing a paper called the Iron Age. Dave is a good writer and when he was in Honolulu he had a contract to furnish a history of the Hawaiian islands to some publisher whose name I did not learn. However, something new cropped up and O'Leary decided to throw up his job as historian and return to the United States. A clubman who has just returned from New York tells me that Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary have made a great hit there. The former is said to be very clever and he would have a fund of good stories to tell only that, like the famous raconteur Travers who some years ago kept Gotham laughing at his witticisms, O'Leary has a stammer which makes story-telling a difficult task.

"Woman possesses in the highest degree the gift of concealing her feelings. Where the wisest man would betray himself, the woman can go on unsuspected." At least so said Georges Ohnet's Dr. Rameau.

Most of our musical population who have been on the wing are now settled in town again after their summer outings and are preparing for a business season with their classes and concert engagements. Miss Eleanora Connell has returned from her summer vacation in excellent health and spirits. She has been for a month in Portland at the Hobart-Curtis, the most fashionable of farming hotels, leaving the city from time to time for the innumerable pretty river trips. Word comes to us that she charmed many of Portland's music-lovers with her singing and she has made many new friends. Mrs. Jessie Dean Moore has resumed her classes, having returned from Guerneville with her daughters. The camping party of which Mrs. Moore was a member had the pleasure of witnessing the Bohemian club's burial of Care at its mid-summer high jinks, the non-members of the club watching the scene from the other side of the river.

Miss Ella V. McCloskey has returned to her home after an extended vacation through Oregon and the northwest. She will resume her teaching at her residence, 857 Hayes street. Miss Eleanor Jeseph has resumed her professional work after spending two months with her parents in Ukiah.

Some of the republican leaders who are not wise enough to observe that popular sentiment is against partisan politics in municipal affairs are making frantic efforts to find a man who is foolish enough to accept the nomination for mayor. They suggested to Vanderlynn Stow the other day that he was "just the man to beat Phelan."

"Well," said Stow, "I haven't heard of any great popular demand for the defeat of Phelan. I have been laboring under the impression that everybody that has the interest of the city at heart is tickled to death over the prospect of re-electing him."

A call was made at the office of the Alaska Commercial company in the hope of persuading young Louis Sloss to take the nomination but it was learned that the whole Sloss family was in favor of Phelan for mayor.

The Bulletin is having the laugh, as it were, on the other dailies, over the result of the primary election. The Bulletin advocated the ticket presented by the Committee of One Hundred from top to bottom and the victory of the committee was a victory for the Bulletin, which of course TOWN TALK modestly shares in. The Examiner is entitled to credit for its fight against the unspeakable Buckley but its encouragement of the so-called independent democrats indicated that Mr. Hearst was not a very enthusiastic supporter of the policy of Messrs. Fay and McNab and the other stalwarts of the Committee of One Hundred. Prior to the election it appeared from the columns of the Examiner that Mr. Hearst was of the opinion that Sam Rainey was really out of politics for he ignored that distinguished farmer altogether and referred to his erstwhile followers as independent democrats, but on the day after election he published a cartoon which showed that he was not entirely oblivious of Samuel's existence. There has been much speculation in political circles as to why Hearst was so lukewarm in his support of the Committee of One Hundred, and it has been suggested that probablo he has promised Tammany the next delegation from California to the national convention, and felt that it would be easier for him to deliver the goods if the reformers could be shorn of some of their power. I am of the opinion, however, that Mr. Hearst is not bothering himself much about Californian politics.

The Joe Le Counts will spend the winter at the Colonial, I hear, and Miss Susie Le Count will be by all odds the prettiest young woman that has ever been numbered among the boarders at that hostelry. I am told that the latest fad in social pleasures—not the book party, which was a back number at church socials long before society added it to its amusement catalogue—is private theatricals. Taking this fact into consideration with the supposition that the Colonial's younger guests will follow the mode, I can easily imagine Miss Le Count as the star of an amateur club. In the production of "Columbia" at the California theatre, a stage pageant not yet forgotten, Miss Le Count carried off high honors as Priscilla in a tittle scene from "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

Alice Ames, who lately married Thomas Hinckley Robbins, a young Harvard student, and went away to Boston to live, is also one of our society girls who may well pride themselves upon the possession of histrionic talent. Miss Laura McKinstry, before she decided to become a hospital nurse, had won not a little fame as a star actress in the erstwhile Fortnightly club. I believe if many of the members of the local swim were to embrace a stage career they would very speedily score hits. For who can do society dramas more gracefully than those who really are what their parts in the plays call for?

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

One could easily fill a volume with good stories of happenings on the beach at Santa Cruz. An amusing thing happened the other day. A comfortable-looking woman came into the bath-house with a luncheon basket in her hand. She looked up at the weighing machine, walked all around it, and after much deliberation climbed aboard. It registered one hundred and seventy-two pounds! She was in a fearful rage and sent for Ralph Miller, declaring that she had never exceeded one hundred and sixty pounds in her life. Miller smiled a bland smile and begged her to let him relieve her of the basket. Then he produced a nickel and said:

"Have another weigh with me!"

The woman scaled again and this time she was only one hundred and sixty pounds. Then Miller handed her the basket and she staggered away with it, scratching her head and wondering how it 'was all done.

While I have not the slightest objection to the borrowing of paragraphs, I will insist that proper acknowledgment be made of the source whence they came. I have called attention in several instances, by personal letter, to the practice of stealing from TOWN TALK'S columns and have warned the perpetrators of the thefts against repetition thereof. The editor of the Illustrated Indiana Weekly promised to reform but I have come to the conclusion that he is a hopeless kleptomaniac, for since then he has several times repeated his crime. I have therefore eliminated that Indiana larcenist from my exchange list. To continue his thefts he must buy the paper or be put to the inconvenience of going to the public library of his town to read it.

I am surprised that the critics of the dailies have given such little space to Nick Long and his wife, Idalene Cotton, whose sketch has made such a hit with Orpheum audiences during the past two weeks. They were surely entitled to more than the scant notices that were given them, for old time's sake if not for the merit of their performance. San Francisco theatre-goers always take pride in the success of old favorites who received their early training on the local boards. Nick Long is a San Franciscan by birth and training and he has spent most of his time in this city. His father was a Washington street hardware merchant in early days and Nick acquired his taste for the stage when a mere lad playing around the entrance to Maguire's opera house. He was educated at Santa Clara college and was a classmate of James V. Coleman and Sands Forman. Shortly after leaving college he became a member of the famous California theatre stock company and is now one of the few survivors of that historic organization. He is better known to theatre-goers of recent years as the creator of the title role in "The Private Secretary" in the first production of that comedy at the Baldwin. His clever wife, Idalene Cotton, to whom he was married on a Thanksgiving day some years ago, is also a San Franciscan. She is the daughter of Ben Cotton, the famous minstrel, and she was at one time a member of the Alcazar stock company. She has proved herself a talented woman and has developed into the Cissy Loftus of the American stage.

At the Tivoli last week, upon the occasion of a performance of "Il Trovatore," the view of the stage was obstructed for two members of an opera party by an elderly woman who above an old-fashioned coiffure of curls à la Clarissa Harlowe wore a bonnet with high trimmings. The obstacle finally became so annoying that one of the party courteously requested the old lady to remove her headgear. The desire was no sooner expressed than granted. Then a young man who was occupying a seat back of the opera party leaned forward and asked, politely:

"Beg pardon, but would you object to asking the lady in front of you to remove her curls?"

There is quite a family reunion of Crocker branches in progress just now, the George Crockers and C. B. Alexanders all being on from New York. They will spend the remainder of the summer on the coast, I am told, chiefly at Del Monte. Mrs. Crocker is accompanied by her daughters, the Misses Rutherford, who have improved greatly during their eastern sojourn. Miss Alice Rutherford was always a charming girl, of refined and sweet personality, but she has now acquired a metropolitan air which has naturally added very much to her beauty. It is this difference in deportment and carriage that was observable in Mrs. Oelrichs and her sister when the Fair girls paid their first visit to their old home after taking up their residence in New York. It is the indéfinissable something that the New York woman, and the feminine resident of no other city, possesses. In the native-born New Yorker, bred within sight of Central park and old Trinity, it might be termed a sort of refinement of insolence, as it were, but in the San Franciscan who has been transplanted to New York the change is only noticeable for its pleasing and improving qualities.

Dividend Notice

DIVIDEND NOTICE—Dividend No. 70 (25 cents per share) of the Hutchinson Sugar Plantation Company will be payable at the office of the company, 327 Market st., on and after Monday, August 21, 1899.

Transfer books will close on Tuesday, August 15, 1899, at 3 o'clock p m.

E. H. SHELDON, Secretary.

LADIES ARE COMMENTING

about the magnificent line of switches I carry and the very moderate prices I charge.

In fact, no store in town gives such values or shows such an array of hair ornaments.

G. LEDERER
123 Stockton St.

GERMEA
THE
KING
OF BREAKFAST
FOODS

One of the most delightful functions of the summer season at San Diego, writes my correspondent, was the musicale given by Mrs. George Peckham and the Misses Hildreth on Friday evening of last week. The ball given at Hotel del Coronado last week by the alumni of the Coronado high school was attended by all the four hundred of San Diego. Miss Nellie Grant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Grant of San Diego, is visiting in San Francisco. Miss Edith Evans of San Francisco is the guest of Miss Vyne Bowers. Mr. Alexander Reynolds Jr. will soon leave for Belmont. Mr. Reynolds was the guest of honor at a supper and dance given at the Country club last Tuesday evening. Mrs. John H. Gay is visiting in Los Angeles. Word has been received that Misses C. Gerichten, Amy Gerichten and Lida O'Brien and Mrs. Jeanette Hart, who sailed in July for Dresden, have safely reached their destination.

A letter dated at Manila June thirteenth has come into my possession. It was written by a San Francisco boy in the regular army and contains much that is of interest at this time, bearing as it does upon the conduct of General Otis.

"The foreign merchants," he writes, "the English included, are thoroughly disgusted at our dilatory ways. General Lawton while on one of his fighting trips cut the telegraph wires behind him so that he would not be bothered by Otis. Two weeks ago he started out with his division to clean out the insurgents in the south of the line. The movement was well planned, each brigade having a position assigned to it and full instructions regarding what they were to do when the advance began. The fight started and was pushed vigorously and soon the insurgents were on the run. They were pushed back a long ways to a place between two hills where the brigade under General Hall was supposed to be, in order to flank them. The insurgents kept on going and when Lawton got up to the place he found that General Hall had never been there at all. Then Lawton got a telegram from Otis ordering him to fall back, which of course he did. Lawton's secretary, whom I know well, tells me that when Lawton came into his quarters that night he sat down on his cot with his elbows resting on his knees and covered his face with his hands and cried like a child."

Here is another paragraph from the same letter which tends to bear out the suspicion that McKinley's man Otis is by no means eager to end hostilities: 'Last Saturday another movement was made at the same place with better success. We lost two killed and twenty-three wounded, the insurgents' loss being smaller than ours. Here I may tell you of an instance which makes every Colorado man lose his temper. There were six companies of them in the advance. They had driven the insurgents back until it was necessary for them to pass through a narrow opening between two hills. The Colorados were not over a thousand yards from the opening through which the insurgents were passing and had a plain sight and an excellent position from which they could pour in a deadly fire. The war vessels in the bay were in such a position that they could see the insurgents pouring out, there being about fifteen hundred. The boys commenced to shoot from their positions and the boats in the bay started throwing shells and using their rapid fire guns. They had just fired a few rounds when the bugler blew 'Cease firing.' Every one stopped shooting and the insurgents were allowed to pass through the opening unmolested. The lieutenant-colonel and about sixteen men in the six Colorado companies were wounded and when they had a chance to capture and kill their enemies they were prevented from doing so."

Continuing in another part of his letter the writer says:" I cannot understand the way operations are carried on nor can any one with whom I have talked. The men are started out on a thirty or forty mile march after insurgents. One wagon is filled with the peace commissionars' proclamation, written in Tagalog, and a barrel of paste. The men find a crowd of insurgents and are fired on. One or two of the boys are killed and possibly half a dozen wounded. They are ordered to lie down but cannot fire. The insurgents get up on their trenches and say 'Mucho malo Americano,' and walk off. After they are gone, out comes the barrel of paste, a lot of brushes and the proclamation. Then the town or village is posted so full of bills that the uniinitiated would think Barnum's circus was coming. Then the soldiers fall back and I suppose Otis wires Washington, 'Situation well in hand; insurgent loss so much; volunteers willing to remain.' Out on the north line a few days ago a party out scouting ran into a body of insurgents and before they could get under cover two men were killed; also a mule. Otis nearly wore out the wires for two days trying to find out who was responsible for the death of the mule. The custom house here is an institution that needs looking after. It is in charge of a regular army officer, Colton of the Nebraska regiment being relieved. The inspectors wear diamonds galore. A short time ago a barge load of small boxes passed the custom house as cigarette papers. Somebody in another department happened to pick up a box and thought they were pretty heavy for cigarette paper. The man reported the matter to some one who examined the package and found instead of papers, Mauser cartridges. As we do not use Mauser rifles you can guess whom the cartridges were for and how our inspectors can wear diamonds. I think there were five million cartridges."

Never before in local history have I heard so many stories of elopements as are floating around these days. There appears to be an epidemic of salacious episodes in the smart set, or else our gilded aristocrats have become addicted to the pernicious habit of gossiping by way of pastime. Again, perhaps they are inclined to weave romances of the erotic order whenever favorable circumstances present themselves. For instance, such a coincidence as a trip to Paris made by a married man about the time that his pretty sister-in-law departs for Europe might be distorted into an elopement. One of the stories now afloat concerns a wealthy member of a large lumber firm, who is now abroad, and his wife's sister, who happens to have gone away. And another story involves a prominent physician who has been administering pills to society for many years. The circumstance of his separation from his wife gives color to the romance about his association with a San Jose

A delightful hot drink may be made with the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky and the usual hot water ,sugar and a little lemon skin.

The enterprising dry goods house of J. J. O'Brien & Co. has at present in its spacious show windows a most inviting display of Black and Colored Dress Goods at prices which cannot fail to suit purchasers. A grand display of gentlemen's underwear is also an attraction in the windows of this popular house. The sale of wash goods and Ladies Muslin Shirt Waists which has been in progress during the past week still continues.

heiress, whose sister was recently married. The story is that they have eloped but I understand that the physician is now on his way back home. Physicians are often hired to accompany their patients on health trips and consequently the simultaneous departure of a doctor and a woman should not be regarded with suspicion. But gossip cannot be discouraged by protests.

Another piece of interesting information that got into circulation during the week was in reference to the mental collapse of a popular young shoe merchant's wife. She has been very ill and became afflicted with suicidal mania and it was reported that she was sent to an insane asylum, but this is denied by the family physician. She is one of the heirs to a large estate left by her mother who obtained considerable notoriety by being involved in almost incessant litigation. One of the daughters became the wife of a local newspaper artist about two years ago and she went to New York where she soon grew tired of a domestic life.

The Californian volunteers who are going to be the beneficiaries at the big entertainment to be given for them at the Orpheum will have to send a special vote of thanks to Edna Wallace Hopper. For it was that brilliant and blooming specimen of what our city can produce in humans of the feminine gender that insured the success of the auction sale of seats on Thursday. Society—which was present in its most magnificent midsummer millinery—is still talking of Edna's wonderful leap into the auctioneer's box, and saying that if Wendell Easton and Mrs. Hopper were to form a vaudeville team, Manager Morrisey's fortune would be made. For first there was a tableau of Mr. Easton in immaculate morning attire standing alone. Then burst upon the spectators' vision a pretty little woman in a frock of pearl gray, that fitted her exquisite figure like a glove. A swish of skirts with countless filmy flounces, an agile bound, and Edna Wallace Hopper joined Mr. Easton in his box. She sat on the edge and swung her daintily-booted feet before the eyes of the audience. A moment before, the people had been going wild over the biographic pictures of our boys in the war; now their rapturous applause was for Edna Wallace Hopper. She had everything her own way and coaxed the dollars out of—well, they were not unwilling pockets, in a manner delightful to record. The witticisms of Wendell Easton and the enthusiastic gayety of Edna Wallace Hopper won the day.

Mayor Phelan and Mrs. A. S. Townsend were the most liberal buyers, the former paying one thousand dollars for a box and the latter two thousand and twenty-five dollars for two boxes. It was a matter of surprise to many that Mrs. Eleanor Martin was not among the bidders for the boxes as she has always been so prominent in works of benevolence for our soldier boys. Eddie Marshutz made himself quite a hero by bidding in a box at one hundred dollars and then returning it to be sold again for the fund.

Uncle George Bromley, who occupied a box with his friend Captain Martin Patterson of the Emperor of China's steamship service, who is out here on a six-months' leave, was very earnestly importuned by Florence Roberts and other beauties of the stage to mske a bid but he always replied that he would "speak later." It was a much regretted fact that Blanche Bates was not present but it is doubtful if even she could have been a more potent magnet to draw the bidders than was sparkling Edna Wallace Hopper.

A paragraph which is making the rounds of the exchanges, relates to the advertisement of a western justice who offers gifts and other inducements to people intending to plunge into matrimony in order to induce them to allow him to perform the important ceremony. Years ago I used to see in a weekly paper published in a small town the advertisement of a justice of the peace who ended his announcement with: "Matrimonial knots tied on short notice, warranted to stick in any climate." These must have been the kind of cordage that induced Ouida to make one of her characters "recommend marriage on the same principle as old Levett used to tender dry biscuit sans confiture:

"''Tisn't so nice as marmalade, I know, Master Philip, but then, dear, it's so wholesome!'"

"Tim Frawley has to work twice as hard as the average man."

"Why so?"

"Because he has to play and work at the same time, no change."

Our plutocracy will be well represented at Menlo this afternoon together with a sprinkling of our aristocracy and there will also be present, when the races begin, some of those on the fringe of society. The program of races include some interesting events and the cups that have been offered for prizes are well worth striving for. Walter Hobart will of course be conspicuous and Walter is by no means a diminutive drawing card. Frank Carolan, Charley Baldwin and Hugh Hume are also among the entries and hope not to be among the also rans. Mr. Hume is so confident of his ability as a rider that he has made several small bets on himself. These bets indicate, however, that that there are several others who do not regard the Post's editor as a dangerous competitor. They are betting five to one that he won't win a race, five to one that he won't come one-two-three and eight to one that he won't win a certain race that he is very confident of capturing.

Self respect is on good terms with

The Old Government Whisky

Suit your taste—100% proof, bottled in bond; or 90% proof, Special Reserve, bottled at Distillery.

A wholesome stimulant—a nerve tonic.

Captain Billy Barnes is suspected of having a press agent. I learn from the Call that he has just won a big law suit and that he has succeeded in divesting himself of about seventy pounds of superfluous flesh; also, that there are numerous other pounds still upon his person for which he has no immediate use and which he also intends to dispose of. I hope that he will succeed for he has long since passed out of Colonel Kowalsky's class and was beginning to look like a heavyweight joke. Billy is a bright young lawyer and I predict that when he comes down to his right weight he will win all kinds of big cases.

Go shout the gladsome pæans out,
Proclaim it through the town;
Bill Barnes is tired of being stout—
The captain's coming down.

His flesh will burden him no more,
Nor make his papa frown
To see his son halt at a door—
For Bill is coming down.

He grew so fat he was a sight;
He looked like a great clown.
His clothes they broke, they were so tight—
But now he's coming down.

He once sought honors, high of state,
In Sacramento town;
His record broke beneath his weight—
Since then he's coming down.

I was guilty of a misstatement last week in reference to an engagement matrimonial between Mrs. Bandmann and Lieutenant Brandt and it occasioned widespread surprise among the readers of TOWN TALK, whose confidence in my accuracy upon social and other topics is such that they accepted it as true and marveled at the news notwithstanding that many of them had reason to regard it as improbable. As I am always ready to acknowledge an error I have no hesitation in calling attention to the circumstance of the existence of a Mr. Bandmann and also of a Mrs. Brandt. The announcement of an engagement between a married man and a married woman must be conceded to be premature at least. The announcement was made, however, in good faith but upon misleading information from a source that was believed to be reliable. To the many hundreds of readers of TOWN TALK who testified during this week to the close scrutiny that is given to my paragraphs, by inquiries as to when Mr. Bandmann died, I take great pleasure in informing them that that gentleman is still enjoying good health. Among the elite of Newport and New York marital engagements between married people are not uncommon but the fashion has not yet spread to the wild and wooly west. Such engagements are still preceded here either by a judicial decree based upon statutory grounds or a death certificate.

Apropos of the Bandmanns it may be interesting to know that they are no longer wealthy people. Julius Bandmann was president of the Giant Powder company when that corporation enjoyed the exclusive privilege of manufacturing giant powder. He was then reputed to be a millionaire and enjoyed the confidence of the business community. A decision by the United States Supreme court involving the patent rights under which Bandmann's company operated proved fatal to the corporation and deprived him of his fortune. The erstwhile millionaire now spends most of his time doing jury duty at the city hall for two dollars per day. The Bandmanns were lavish entertainers in the days of the prosperity of the powder company and

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, elegant new bird and wing effects.

Madame De Pasquali
(Marguerite in Faust)

Mrs. Bandmann owing to her great beauty was always surrounded by a large circle of admirers. Although she is now advanced in years she has not lost her physical charms.

In regard to Miss Carrie Coleman Platt, whose name was mentioned last week as having been a former companion of Mrs. Bandmann's daughter Tonie, I am told that the main reason of her trip to New York was the fact that the Pacific Union clubman whose friendship she has enjoyed for some years was broken in pocket and could no longer contribute to the support of the cosy flat near Nob hill. With depleted fortune, he was obliged to seek the Klondike hoping to replenish his exchequer through the mines lying beyond the Chilkoot pass.

E. C. Pistolesi having been elected by the Native Sons to exhibit himself in the full pride and panoply of grand marshalship on the occasion of the big parade in honor of the California regiment, there can no longer be any doubt but the affair is destined to be a grand spectacular success. By accepting the grand marshalship Mr. Pistolesi renders himself liable to the suspicion of harboring political aspirations. From time immemorial it has always been conceded that grand marshals of San Francisco parades are in line for political preferment and there is no reason why Mr. Pistolesi should be an exception. He is before the people at present in more ways than one, having been selected some time ago to act as attorney for the Hotel Nymphia. This institution is, perhaps, too far ahead of the times to be appreciated but Mr. Pistolesi's connection with it does not appear to have affected his popularity. I hope, however, that there will be no recruits from the hotel in the parade.

It is reported that the editor of a North Carolina paper is offering to publish ten verses of poetry for a load of wood and a three-column story for the equivalent in groceries. This probably accounts for some of the matter that makes its appearance in print. I wonder whether he is as particular with regard to his "exchanges" as the owner of a little sheet published in Uncle Sam, Lake county, some years ago? He was very willing to accept wood at market price for payment of subscriptions but when a load of manzanita was delivered and credit asked at the rate of four dollars and a half per cord he suggested that three dollars and a half be accepted "because the sticks are so crooked."

"I had awful bad luck here some years ago," said Mrs. Swiftleigh, who was sojourning at Del Monte

"Gracious! didn't lose a purse I hope, or a diamond necklace," said Mrs. Brown.

"Oh, dear no, nothing like that," said Mrs. Swiftleigh. "It was during the big railroad strike and my husband came down on a Saturday to stay till Monday, The trains stopped running and he couldn't get away for two weeks."

Consul Pratt, United States representative at Singapore, recently took out an injunction against Kelly and Walsh, the publishers of John Foreman's book upon the Philippines, because it contains an alleged interview with Aguinaldo in which Pratt is represented as having promised independence to the islands on the part of the United States. The injunction applies to all the Straits settlements and similar action has stopped the sale of the book in Hongkong. Pratt says he intends to bring suits which will extend the injunction to all the British possessions.

Society people at Sacramento have been greatly shocked, I understand, by the story of the death of Mrs. Arthur Wilson, published by the News of that city. The story reflected most seriously upon Dr. G. B. N. Clow, who is a prominent physician of Sacramento and who has always enjoyed the reputation of being a most circumspect practitioner and one that could never be induced to encourage illegal medical expedients. The Arthur Wilsons have long been conspicuous in Sacramento social circles and the death of Mrs. Wilson, ending a brief illness, was a great surprise to her friends who had no notion of the seriousness of her condition. Arthur Wilson is the son of J. B. Wilson of the State Board of Agriculture.

The wise men of the political push who have always imagined that they cut large blocks of congealed moisture in affairs pertaining to the management of the government, were rudely awakened from their pipe dream last Tuesday night when the returns rolled in from the various precincts. The following morning they could be seen rushing to cover from all directions. The effect of the primary was the complete annihilation of the push as a factor in local politics. It has been demonstrated that it was a stuffed bogie man. It is of no more consequence than one of Buckley's extinguished lamps. During the next few months it will be interesting to note the efforts of the wise men of the push to persuade people to believe that they were not identified with the Buckley faction on the occasion of the recent repudiation of that defunct dealer in gold bricks. And on the republican side the cohorts of Crimmins and Kelly will present an interesting spectacle in their efforts to crowd in behind the band wagon of the Grand hotel reformers. At this particular time I am curious to know what sort of a play Dr. Perrault of the board of supervisors will make to establish himself in the good graces of the leaders of the anti-boss element. Dr. Perrault has been so industriously engaged in doing peanut politics for Crimmins and Kelly that he will have some difficulty in convincing the reformers that he was only working for the good of the party.

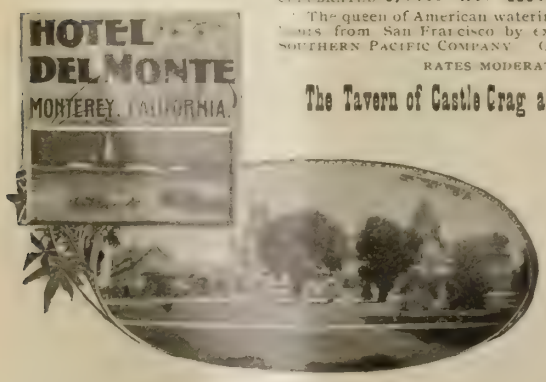
A SEVENTY-TWO DOG STAKE

THERE WILL BE a seventy-two dog stake as the drawing card at the Union coursing park today and tomorrow, the first round being run down today. The sport is growing in popular favor more and more every day owing no doubt to the high class coursing that the Interstate coursing club present to the public. The Union coursing park is easy of access as the Southern Pacific trains, leaving at Third and Townsend, stop at the gates of the park and the San Mateo electric road cars pass the grounds every few minutes. Coursing will begin today at one o'clock and tomorrow morning at eleven. The admission to the park is only twenty-five cents; ladies admitted free.

Two Noted Resorts both under one management, noted for its efficiency. Representing the mountain interior and seaside of Central California.

THE CELEBRATED Hotel del Monte, MONTEREY, CAL.

"The queen of American watering places." Only 3½ hours from San Francisco by express trains of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY. OPEN ALL THE YEAR. RATES MODERATE.



The Tavern of Castle Crag and Soda Springs

320 miles from San Francisco, on the famous SHASTA ROUTE within sight of MOUNT SHASTA and the wonderful CASTLE CRAGS, altitude 2,100 feet.

Rates: by the day, $2, $2.50, $3
By the week, $14 to $17.50.
Bath rooms extra.

Season, June to September

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION ADDRESS GEO. SCHONEWALD, MANAGER
Hotel del Monte, Monterey, Cal., or Tavern of Castle Crag, Castle Crag, Cal.

World of Law

THE SUPREME COURT HAS at last been misjudged. That is to say, the august tribunal has incurred the displeasure of the police department and of the district attorney through no fault of its own. Its magnificent habit of writing involved opinions has caused its weightiest sentences to be misconstrued and the result is that the police department and the district attorney are compelled to ask its pardon. I refer to the case of Albert Frederick George Vereneseneckockockhoff, or, decapitated, plain Albert Hoff. This good man was so unfortunate as to murder a worthy housewife for whom he was laying a carpet. His reason may best be imagined. The insanity dodge would hardly work, so he said he didn't do it. Still more unfortunately, the jury said he did and Mr. Hoff was ordered to be cut off in his prime by means of a stout rope, a knot and a trap. His appeal was taken to the Supreme court more for form's sake than anything else; but the ways of the tribunal of last resort are many and varied. After much discussion, in which Mr. Justice Van Dyke took no part, the learned justices sent the case back for re-trial.

The decision was filed at 4:35 p. m. one day, too late for the evening papers and at a time when the morning men were weary and anxious to get away. The first three pages of Mr. Justice Temple's remarks were devoted to a review of the instruction upon the subject of motive delivered by Judge Cook to his jury. It was the same old instruction that had passed muster in the McNulty and Durrant cases and others of minor note; but it suddenly occurred to Mr. Justice Temple that for a judge to tell the jury that a motive for a crime need not be worn by the proprietor thereof like the heart of a coy maiden upon her sleeve, but may occasionally be hidden and therefore to be presumed by a jury when the facts of the case appear plain to it, was a violation of the prisoner's rights The accused in a criminal case in California has a high old time of it That is as far as the perusers of the opinion went.

"Judgment reversed for an erroneous instruction on motive," they said.

The police caught it up, the district attorney, everyone. Judge Cook walked about disconsolate, saying:

"If I can't give the same old instruction on motive that has been the standard these ten years back, how am I to know where I stand?"

Everyone was sympathetic and it was at once conceded that Mrs. Botkin must get a new trial, since the very same instruction was used in her case. Meanwhile, the Supreme court with its erratic ways was vilified to the fullest extent.

By and by it occurred to some one to read the Supreme court opinion on the case from beginning to end. This was done and the whole stupid mistake shown up. For, after Mr. Justice Temple had said all he wanted to say about the objectionable instruction on motive, he proceeded to remark:

"The point would not have been noticed here but for the necessity of revising the case for another instruction to which objection is made." And then followed a scathing rebuke to Judge Carroll Cook for his long-winded and criminally pointed instruction upon the question of circumstantial evidence. It was shown that Judge Cook had at great length elaborated upon the virtues of circumstantial evidence, driving its value home to the hearts of the jury and leaving no stone unturned to have it regarded with full weight. In one place His Honor said:

"Circumstantial evidence has this great advantage, that various circumstances from various sources are not likely to be fabricated."

"Why not?" asked Mr. Justice Temple.

And so, after picking to pieces the court's charge upon this question he decided that there was a limit to all things and he reversed the judgment. He might have been a little more liberal, in my opinion, in his reading of Judge Cook's charge, but he chose to be severe. Several judges concurred

So the Supreme court was, for once, misjudged by a hasty interpretation of its decision upon an important case. It is only right to make this clear, as the tribunal of last resort in this state is in a peculiar position; it cannot answer back. It must bear all the slings and arrows hurled at it by a disgruntled bar, all the more poisonous because few members of the bar dare for their lives say anything in the open derogatory of the Supreme tribunal and, therefore, send in their shafts through others in secret; it must bear all this, I say, and etiquette permits it not to reply. So, where wrong has been done, let it be righted; for, depend upon it, when the Supreme court fails to please the public upon a public question, it is because it cannot. It is there to construe laws as they are made, not to make laws.

The reversal of the Hoff case will have a salutary effect on one member of the Superior bench. It will teach Judge Cook a severe lesson, not to be so long-winded. I remember when Carroll Cook was elected in November, 1896. He swore by all his gods that he would teach his fellow judges a lesson they would do well to profit by. "Six minutes charges, not longer," he declared. And he suited action to the word by delivering the briefest charge ever heard on his first case. Good for Cook! By degrees, however, the spirit of a dream seemed to steal over him. He appeared to enjoy the sound of his own judicial voice. Lengthier and lengthier grew his incidental speeches in court, his opinions, his instructions. His charge to the jury in the Botkin case was a masterpiece of length. The result is shown in the reversal of the Hoff case. The justices who sit up aloft in the Parrott building would never in this world have reversed the case because of the tenor of the judge's instructions It was their length, the very persistency with which Judge Cook hammered away at the same old theory, that made the whole amount to a very elaborate argument for the prosecution, and, therefore, reversible. Go back to your six minutes charges, judge. Time yourself by the clock.

I have a story to tell of another judge of the Superior bench, Judge Edward A. Belcher. Judge Belcher has just returned from a sojourn of several weeks in the heart of the Yosemite valley. He was with Chris Jorgenson, the artist, who sketched while Judge Belcher declaimed to the tree tops.

"Chris did some remarkably fine work while he was away," said Judge Belcher on his return. "I watched the progress of his work and it pleased me greatly. I was quite satisfied with him."

Well, one day they were talking in a circle at the Sentinel. Russell Wilson was of the party and he told a story of how his revered father, Sam Wilson, had had his hat taken from the rack at the Pacific Union club. Sam Wilson was proud of his hats, and was consequently filled with loathing when, on emerging from the drawing room after lunch, he found the only hat left a dirty, shabby thing he would not have been found dead with. He stormed and raved, but to no purpose; he had to take the hat or go bare-headed. So he took the hat, flew down town to Fisher's, bought a new hat and had the satisfaction of kicking the ancient relic to pieces. The next day Sam Wilson went to the club to lunch, as usual, and was about to place his hat in the rack when he observed the initials in the inside of the hat next to his. "S. M. W." He stared, but there they were, and on investigation Sam Wilson found his stolen hat reposing in juxtaposition to the one he had bought.

"My father was mad," said Russell, telling the story, "and he resolved to go without his lunch and just stand right there waiting for the thief to come out of the dining-room to claim his hat. He waited half an hour, when, among the stream of clubmen that emerged from the room, one man walked up and seized the hat without a moment's hesitation. He had no sooner seized it than my father seized him.

"'D —— you sir, how dare you? You are a thief, sir, d —— you. Don't you know that's my hat?'

"'Oh, is it?" asked the other man, unabashed. "Is that so?'

"'It is so,' thundered my father. "How dare you? Why did you take it?'

"'Well,' said the other, 'it was a good hat, and looked comfortable. It fitted me and I wore it.' Then he walked away, leaving my father aghast.

"And that man was Judge Van Dyke, now a judge of the Supreme court."

Russell Wilson told the story well and the laugh was just about to break out when Judge Belcher, who had been a horrified listener, held up a judicial forefinger and said, sententiously:

"There can be no doubt, in my mind, that it was a larceny. The Code is clear on that point. Now, Mr. Wilson, let us suppose the incident to have taken place in our day. Let us take ourselves, for instance. Let us suppose—"

But here Russell Wilson turned a look of such hopeless, helpless misery upon the crowd that there was a stampede from the spot.

Judge Hunt was last heard from at Klamath hot springs. He is due to return in a few days.

THE COURT REPORTER.

FOR A PRETTY EFFECT IN STATIONERY nothing is so chaste as the Fleur-de-Lis Linen when stamped with monogram in silver. Messrs. Cooper & Co. have superior facilities in this line, and show a number of new ideas.

Superseded

AN age agone I left her with a smile upon her face
And looks of love from out her eyes unto her smile gave chase.
Long, dreary days rolled onward ere I saw that face again;
I searched to find those looks of love—alas! the search was vain;
Her every word, her every glance, they told me love was fled—
I've lived and loved, and joy was mine; but now, would I were dead!

THE ADORER.

Dramatic World

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "Brother Officers"—one of the best things of the Miller season.

CALIFORNIA. "The Fairy Godmother"—a very pretty comedy, brightly acted.

ALCAZAR. "The Lady of Lyons"—one of the oldtime dramas but still a winner.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "Falka"—magnificently mounted and well sung.

TIVOLI. "Faust" and "Trovatore"—the old operas serve to introduce some powerful singers.

ORPHEUM. Vaudeville—with Alexandra Dagmar the star of the week.

PANORAMA BUILDING. "Battle of Manila"—worth seeing.

EXPONENTS OF ART WHEN after tedious study they have come to the conclusion that existing conditions need improvement and better elucidation, must in order to convince their fellow men clear barriers of almost unsurmountable height. The greatest obstacle that obstructs the path of these art-revolutionists, as they may be called, is a strict adherence to tradition, of which the public mind is loath to rid itself. At all times the people have chosen their ideals in art after which they have moulded their own convictions and to overcome this deeply rooted prejudice is indeed an herculean task, and constitutes a rock against which most distinguished skulls have been shattered. When Henry Miller, therefore, announces that he has created a new Hamlet, that his conception is a new one, he must convince his audience that his so-called creation is correct as well as new and unfortunately the public at large will ascertain this correctness by comparison and if the comparison proves unfavorable to the artist his Hamlet is considered unsuccessful, because if you create a role that is inferior to one already formulated your creation becomes valueless. And here is an instance where the utility of the critic is proved. For a critic, if capable, must be above prejudices, must recognize the odiousness of comparison and must view the new work with all fairness and justice. If he show by his remarks that he is correct in his contention the public will not hesitate to accord to him its approval: if he be unable to back his contention with reasonable proofs he is unfit to be a critic. In commenting upon Henry Miller's Hamlet two questions must be answered: Is it an improvement? and if so, does the improvement correspond with the ideas of the author? That Mr. Miller's conception of Hamlet is an improvement cannot be denied. He, more than any of his predecessors, emphasizes the fact that Hamlet was not insane. There seems to be a general idea that the royal Dane was wrapped in a cloak of madness. The writer, too, entertained this idea until recently when a reading of the play convinced him that Shakespeare did not intend to invest Hamlet with a darkened mind. For again and again stress is laid upon this fact by passages that deny absolutely this insanity. Hamlet makes his friends swear not to let anyone know of his pretended madness: the king and Polonius doubt Hamlet's madness. His actions, phrases and soliloquies are anything but ebullitions of an insane mind. This particular point Mr. Miller has succeeded in bringing out excellantly and his deportment is in full accord with his conception of the Dane. But, unfortunately, Mr. Miller's rational Hamlet is too rational at times, so that the pretended madness does not come plainly enough to the surface. This defect may be observed in his scene with Polonius where he omits to give his remarks sufficient spirit and where his sarcasm does not sound cutting in the least. There are other defects, as for instance the soliloquy, which should be uttered deliberately; not in a declamatory manner, it is true, but deliberately. Mr. Miller rushes through the lines without succeeding in getting the necessary import from the philosophical phrases. It is true that sometimes in speaking to himself a man talks very rapidly, but the soliloquy is too meaty, too deep to permit a hurried rendition. The author desires to rivet momentous questions in the mind of the auditors, and momentous questions must be expressed with deliberation, even when addressed to one's self in soliloquy. This hurrying talk Mr. Miller always assumes when talking to himself, which proves that his conception of soliloquy is a rapid utterance of ideas. As shown above this is not always advisable. Another improvement in Mr. Miller's Hamlet is his appearance. His Hamlet is young and not exhibiting the signs of old age that have been the accompaniments of most latter day Hamlets. Thus there are two great improvements in Mr. Miller's Hamlet—stress is laid upon the sanity of the Dane and upon his youth. Perhaps Mr. Miller took as his guide a paper once published by Wilson Barrett in Lippincott's magazine wherein the sanity and age of Hamlet are especially treated. However this may be, Mr. Miller's Hamlet is an improvement and with more experience and some hauling over this new conception will make a mark in the dramatic world. Barring an affectation of speech and spasmodic motions of the head Miss Anglin's Ophelia is worthy of entire praise. Both Mr. Miller and Miss Anglin have that affectation of speech. Mr. Miller in particnlar seems to drawl and raise the end of each phrase. Why should this incline of the voice be correct? Does the average mortal talk that way? It sounds very pretty to some and very much the reverse to others, but it is unnatural. And think of a Hamlet with a drawl!

Mary Van Buren, with the Frawleys at the California

The new play of this week at the Columbia, Brother Officers, has proved one of the most pleasing of the Miller series. Next week on Monday night there will be a revival of The Adventure of the Lady Ursula, the play which was so well received when put on earlier in the season. It will be repeated on Tuesday night and on Wednesday and Thursday evenings Heartsease will be presented. The Liars, in which the company made its debut over two months since, will be staged on Friday and Saturday nights and at the matinee on Saturday. A special matinee is to be given on Tuesday afternoon at which the double bill will be composed of Heartsease and the one act play Frederic Lemaitre. It will be remembered that Mr. Miller gave his impersonation of Frederic Lemaitre some years ago at the California theatre as a curtain-raiser to The Junior Partner, in which he was twin star with Hugo Toland. At that time Emily Bancker took the part of the young country girl who thought she possessed histrionic talent until she heard the great actor declaim.

Tivoli WITH AVEDANO as Manrico, Salassa as Count di Luna, Anna Lichter as Leonora and Mary Linck as Azucena, there was an Il Trovatore cast at the Tivoli this week the like of which is but seldom seen together and which easily packed the house at each performance. The performance of Faust was in every respect as good a performance as Il Trovatore; the cast included Barron Berthald as Faust, G. S. Wanrell as Mephisto, William Mertens as Valentine, Signora Pasquali as Marguerite and Mary Linck as Siebel. It appears as if the theatre-goers of San Francisco do not fully appreciate the value of these artists, for while Il Trovatore was played to crowded houses, Faust did not always fare as well despite the fact that it fully deserved to share the ovations. Not sufficient stress can be laid upon the fact that it is wrong to single out one or two stars and in the delight forget that there are other artists just as deserving of your attention. There are not many vocalists who can present Marguerite as well as Madame De Pasquali does. She sings the part so daintily, so accurately and with such fine intonation, her temperament is excessively warm and her colorature simply perfect. Her voice is not a large one, but it has carrying quality that enables you to hear the lowest pianissimo no matter how far you may be from the stage. Her attack is sure and what is still more gratifying she acts the part to perfection and looks it still better. Here is none of your cold colorature singers, but a vocalist and actress who understands that in operatic work you must combine music with dramatic declamation. Her jewel song was simply exquisite. The best work done by Barron Berthald this season was the cavatina in Faust. Herein he had an opportunity to exhibit the purity of his voice. He sings with exceeding taste and knows better how to let out and control his voice than does Avedano. In fact he is the better artist of the two. Avedano sometimes forces his voice, which makes it sound strained, and not until he swells his notes and comes out with force can you appreciate the volume of his voice. It is also evident that almost every role is transposed for him so that he is able to sing it lower than originally. He does not save his voice like Salassa. These remarks are intended to show that from a scientific standpoint Berthald is the better artist and yet he does not obtain the recognition that is justly his due. In Faust he proved beyond a doubt that he is an excellent tenor and with the exception of those ruled by prejudice his art will be recognized. As to Mertens and Salassa it is unfair to make comparisons, but as it appears that the public insists upon comparing these two vocalists it is but just to say that Mertens has a larger and more resonant voice, while Salassa sings more scientifically. But the voices are so varied that we simply cannot say whether the one or the other is better. Salassa is the better artist scientifically speaking; Mertens is deserving of attention as his voice is always reliable. He is no stranger to San Francisco. Mary Linck's Siebel is far the best the writer has heard. It is difficult to tell whether this compliment is as valuable as it is intended to be for all the Siebels heard by the writer seemed to have been filled by very poor material. Miss Linck, too, is an actress as well as a singer and her efforts deserve to be heartily applauded. Her Azucena in Il Trovatore was exceedingly well sung and acted. While Mr. Wanrell possesses a bass voice of fine quality, he does not pay sufficient attention to the histrionic part of his duties. His Mephisto is not an ideal one. His voice is very pretty and he sings intelligently but his bass lacks resonance so necessary in a dramatic character. His mimicry is totally without expression and he does not seem to live himself into the part. Outside of his singing his Mephisto was not a success. Owing to the large demand for seats the Tivoli has found it necessary to retain Il Trovatore for another week and present it alternately with Fidelio. Particular attention should be paid to this last opera. It is Beethoven's only operatic success and very rarely heard here.

Orpheum AS USUAL VAUDEVILLE has been a winning card and the star performer this week is Alexandra Dagmar, a Russian with a well-rounded figure which she displays in several changes of costume between songs. Next week the big benefit for the First California Volunteers will be held at the Orpheum and the bill at the vaudeville house is appropriately strong. There will be four new acts, the principal of which will be Mansfield and Wilbur who will present a sketch entitled Color Blind. Gertrude Mansfield first won recognition as a member of May Irwin's company and was later attached to Weber and Field's, and Caryl Wilbur when last here was leading man with Lillian Burkhardt. Esmeralda, who plays the violin and zylophone while balanced on a tight wire, is said to be clever and the two acrobatic troupes, Caron and Herbert and the Cardownies are sure to make a big hit.

Alcazar THE LADY OF LYONS has done a splendid week's business, with Miss Roberts' delightfully sympathetic portrayal of Pauline, which will terminate with tomorrow night's performance. Next week will be given Under Two Flags when Miss Roberts will appear as the vivandiere Cigarette, who loses her life to save the life of the man she loves—Bertie Cecil. One cannot name another of Ouida's novels that has enjoyed such popularity as has Under Two Flags, and the Alcazar will no doubt be packed at every presentation of the play.

California CHARLOTTE THOMPSON in Thursday's Call justly entitles A Fairy Godmother, presented by the Frawley company at the California this week, a "romantic comedy without a heart interest." This is the best criticism of the play and while accusing A Fairy Godmother of this defect, Msss Thompson might have included all comedies the plots of which are based on French situations. Somehow it appears that under comedy the Frenchman understands piquant dialogue coupled with chic deportment. As long as a certain thing is said well and cleverly, it does not matter particularly whether it corresponds with the moral ideas of the world or not. Consequently the playwrights, when moulding a comedy of a French character, devote most of their attention to the dialogue and least of it to the action. Hence we attain as a rule mere conversational plays which lack genuine emotional quality but which sound very well to the literary ear. Therefore a company which professes to present a a French comedy must consist of fine artists who are able to lay stress upon the literary merit of the lines. Aside from clever conversation there is really nothing to A Fairy Godmother. It is an intrigue instituted by a woman for the purpose of winning back the affection of her husband. The idea is so unnatural and unwomanly that we cannot become interested in the matter and do not know whether to agree or disagree with the characters. In nine cases out of ten we disagree with the methods. Here is a husband neglecting his wife for other women and is even caught by his consort in the act of flirting with a supposed stranger. She tries to make him jealous by adopting his own manner of procedure and when confronted with the impropriety of her actions says she had obtained a divorce, at which information her husband seems to be "tickled to death." Despite these repeated rebuffs, she continues her plan to win back her consort and finally she succeeds. But the queer thing about all this is you cannot exactly tell whether the husband is glad or sorry at the "happy" turn things have taken. Indeed you are almost convinced that he will just continue to live as before the reconciliation. So as a matter of fact the play does not effect anything at all. However the play is well presented. London Assurance will be given next week from Monday or Thursday evenings. As You Like It will be given during the remainder of the week.

LASH'S BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

Grand Opera House

THERE IS a young man among the members of the Morosco company who has yet not received that recognition which is justly his due and this young man is Winfred Goff. He possesses a resonant, pure baritone of a very soft quality and sings with much taste and intelligence. There is not a grand opera company in the United States that need hesitate to engage the services of Mr. Goff for he fosters besides a valuable voice, a knowledge of the scientific side of the vocal art. His Boleslas in Falka is decidedly a meritorious characterization. He is one of those few vocalists who combine histrionic talent with their knowledge of music and taking all these things into consideration Mr. Goff is endowed with gifts that will bring him to the front of the operatic element ere many years have passed. The cast as a whole is admirable. Next week Alfred Cellier's Dorothy will be given. In view of its clever libretto and catchy music it should attract large audiences.

HO FOR MONTEREY

GREAT INTEREST is being manifested over the Southern Pacific company's excursion to Monterey, Hotel Del Monte and Pacific Grove, which though an annual event with the company's passenger department, is not the less enjoyable for that fact.

The excursion will be on Sunday, September third, and trains will leave the Third and Townsend street depot at eight o'clock and returning will leave Monterey at a quarter to five. The trains will be run through without stops.

The fact that William H. Menton, excursionist passenger agent of the Southern Pacific, will personally supervise the excursion is sufficient to insure its success in every detail.

Monterey is making preparations to entertain the visitors with a series of splendid attractions in the way of games, races etc.

A rate of two dollars for the round trip has been made by the company and it it is probable that over two thousand people will avail themselves of the opportunity to visit Monterey.

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Beginning Next Monday August 14th, Farewell week of

HENRY MILLER

And a Special Company

REPERTOIRE:—

Monday and Tuesday - - "THE ADVENTURE OF LADY URSULA"
Tuesday Matinee—Special Bill - - - - "HEARTSEASE"
(Preceded by the one-act play - "FREDERICK LEMAITRE")
Wednesday and Thursday - - - - - "HEARTSEASE"
Friday and Saturday Evenings, Saturday Matinee "THE LIARS"

Monday, August 21st. - - CLAY CLEMENT.

Grand Opera House

Morosco Amusement Co., Inc. Lessees. Telephone, Main 532.

Last performances of "FALKA"

Commencing Next Monday Night, Grand Revival of

"DOROTHY"

A Comie Opera by Cellier and Stephenson

Our Prices—Orchestra floor, 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts

Matinee Saturday. Best reserved seat in the theatre, 25 cents.

Branch Ticket Office just inside main entrance of Emporium.

Alcazar

FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor
MARK THALL, Manager

'Phone Main 254

Week of August 14th

FLORENCE ROBERTS supported by WHITE WHITTLESEY and the ALCAZAR COMPANY in a beautiful presentation of EDWARD ELSNER'S dramatization of Ouida's novel,

"UNDER TWO FLAGS"

Presented with elaborate effects and finish.

Our never deviating prices—15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Orpheum

O'Farrell between Stockton and Powell Streets.

Week Commencing Sunday Matinee, August 13th.

GERTRUDE MANSFIELD and CARYL WILBUR
ESMERALDA. CARON and HERBERT.
CARDOWNIE TROUPE. ALEXANDRA DAGMAR.
LINTON and McINTYRE. DEONZO BROTHERS.
ALDEN and HILL. THE BIOGRAPH.

Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c
Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday

California Theatre

S. H. FRIEDLANDER Manager. Tel. Main 173.

Farewell week. Your last chance to see
MISS BLANCHE BATES and HER EXCELLENT COMPANY
Presented by T. Daniel Frawley.

Repertoire: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday Nights,
"LONDON ASSURANCE"
Friday Night, Saturday Matinee, Saturday Night and Sunday Night,
"AS YOU LIKE IT"

SPECIAL NOTICE: Handsome souvenir photographs will be distributed to our patrons on Thursday evening

SPECIAL NOTICE: Farewell testimonial tendered to MISS BLANCHE BATES.

Wednesday afternoon, August 16th, first production on the Pacific Coast of Ibsen's "HEDDA GABLER"

Coming: Warde & Sackett's Comedians, presenting,
"A BACHELOR'S HONEYMOON"

Reserved Seats, 25, 50, 75, and 1.00. Matinee, 25, 50, and 75.

Tivoli Opera House

ERNESTINE KRELING, Prop. and Mgr.

Telephone Bush 9

Regular Season of Grand Opera.

MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY Evenings,
Beethoven's only opera
"FIDELIO"
TUESDAY, THURSDAY and SUNDAY Evenings, SATURDAY MATINEE,
"IL TROVATORE"

Popular Prices, 25 and 50 cents.

Battle of Manila Bay

This Grand Historical Panorama is now on exhibition . . .

Lectures every half hour by the eminent orator, PROF. W. G. ROLLINS

Admission, 50 Cents
Children, 25 Cents.

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

—PRICE, $3.00—

Saws of every description made to order.
Planing and Currier Knives, Lace Leather, Emery Wheels, Saw Mandrels,
Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

Military Contrasts

HERE ARE TWO PICTURES. Look on one and then on the other, and you will find the contrast eloquent of the difference in the character of two men.

PICTURE NO. I.

There are two characters in this picture—Major General Otis and a private of the Utah regiment. The scene is General Otis' headquarters in Manila. The private enters bearing a message to the commander of the American forces and finds the general busily engaged at his desk. Without looking up General Otis gesticulates in the direction of a chair in a somewhat impatient manner. The tired Utah volunteer interprets this as an invitation to be seated, and he drops into the chair. Presently General Otis finishes his work looks around and is greatly astonished to find a private occupying a chair in his quarters. He had supposed that his visitor was an officer.

"Such impertinence!" he exclaimed. The private who had the audacity to sit down in the presence of his august Highness was thrown into the guard house and kept there a week for the improvement of his military manners.

PICTURE NO. II.

The scene was of an earlier date than that of pictnre No. I. It is night. A lonely volunteer, also of the Utah regiment, is plodding his way along a road leading to Manila. He didn't have a pinch of tobacco on his person and he longed for a smoke. He would not reach camp for an hour and he earnestly hoped that he would meet somebody with a cigarette. Presently he hears wheels on the road and his heart beats high with hope. Just as the vehicle was about to pass him he shouted to the occupants: "Say there, can you give a fellow something to smoke?"

The vehicle stopped and a voice said:

"Yes, here is a cigar." The volunteer reached for the cigar, and as he expressed his thanks for the gift he recognized Admiral George Dewey. THE VOLUNTEER.

Clancy on Politics

"I SAY, BARRY, tell me the trooth; don't lie to yer old frind, but whisper it an' raymimber I'll keep it sakerid within me breast f'river—what ticket did ye vote a Chewsda' last?"

Before receiving a reply Mr. Clancy said "whisht," in a stage whisper, walked from behind his bar and closed the door in a way that indicated a desire to guard against eavesdroppers. If the communication he was about to receive affected the welfare of a nation he could not have exercised greater caution. He even shooed the black cat off the counter to the far end of the bar-room before he permitted his friend Barry to reply.

"I voted Buck's ticket from top to bottom," was Barry's emphatic reply.

"Glory be!" exclaimed Mr. Clancy, as he rolled his eyes heavenward. "Barry, you're a gintleman an' a scholar," he added. "I knew there wuz somebody in this precink voted Buck's ticket. Those devils in th' booth couldn't have counted a hundred votes for th' ticket iv there wuzn't wan man f'r Buck in the precink."

"There wuz more than me," said Barry.

"Well, I dinnaw," said Clancy. "There's bin none iv them in here. Be th' way I heard thim talkin' in here f'r over a month I thought Buck wuz goin' to schweep th' town. McCarthy's boy Tom who used to wuruk up at th' city hall an' who hasn't done anything since, poor lad, told me confidenshilly that Buck had 'em 'all skinned.' Sez he to me th' night befure illeckshin, he sez, 'there's nuthin' to it but Buck' he sez, 'those shwell guys,'' he sez, 'iv the Kom-mit-tee iv a hundred,' he sez, 'are all lobsters,' he sez 'They don't know enough,' he sez 'to ax f'r their own death certificatts' he sez. 'They'll be all axin' Buck f'r a job next week,' he sez. And they were all like McCarthy's boy 'round here befure Chewsda' but since Chewsda' I've not found a man, Barry, but yerself that voted Buck's ticket. I've come to the conclushin that this is wan iv th' shtrongest rayform precinks in the whole city. Ivry man that comes in here has bin prayin' f'r the sucksiss iv th' Kom-mittee iv Wan Hundrid f'r days an' days."

"What ticket did ye vote?" asked Mr. Barry.

"Well," replied Mr. Clancy, and he paused because he was having trouble with his pipe. "As I was sayin'" he continued, "this is a rayform precink. We are all f'r Phelan, th' charter an' civil service. 'Down with th' bosses' is our motto. An' shpeakin' about bosses reminds me that you can buy little Phillie Crimmins's saloon today f'r a song an' last week it wuz worth more than a ten acre lot in th' middle iv th' Klondike. Such Barry,is th' ups an' downs iv th' saloon business whin yer whisky shtore belongs to th' organizashin. If ye iver own a saloon, Barry, keep it out iv politics. Little Phillie's shtore was a fine shtand befure Chewsda.' He sold plenty iv shperrits befure Chewsda' to people who came round to ax him who he intinded to illict mayor iv th' city. He always axed them in return f'r a little advice on th' subject, an' they were so willing to give it that they went round ivry day, an' dhrank whisky while they advised th' boss. I think he had about made up his mind to give the job to Dooboast whin Chewsda' came with its terrible calamity, an' th' bung dhropped out iv th' barrel. An' now iv Dooboast gets th' nominashin it'll be from th' kid-gloved gintlemin in th' Grand hotel. But iv course he can niver be illected afther settin' fire to th' church in Manila. 'Afther dhrivin th' Phlipinoes out iv th' church he applied th' torch,' sez the dispatches. I niver knew before, Barry, that th' commanding off'cer iv a regimint carried a can of keroseen into battle with him, but that's what Dooboast did in Manila f'r he reached f'r his can as soon as he reached th' church an' up wint th' sacred edifise in shmoke. I shpose it was th' proper thing f'r him to do, but iv he had any intinshuns at that time to run f'r mayor whin he returned, he should have turned th' conflagrashin job over to some Irish Catholic in his regimint. The man that goes round with a keroseen can on his sholeder an' a firebrand in his hand lookin' f'r a chance to burn a church, is not th' feller to run f'r th' mayor's job."

"I shpose yer f'r Phelan," said Barry.

"Yes, an' so was Buck," he replied.

The Heavenly Twins has just been dramatized. The stage version is said to differ in many respects from the novel. A new version of Monte Cristo has been prepared for Beerbohm Tree.

Marion Crawford is writing a play for Viola Allen, the title of which is In Old Madrid.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, early fall pattern hats.

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE

DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1029½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh. Office Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND

DENTIST. Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL

DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S W. corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas."

BUSH AND SON

DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 206 Kearny St., S. F. Rooms 310-308-309. 'Phone Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN

VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone, 4118, San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street, Telephone 66. 1529 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

FRANCIS STUART

TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK

HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON

MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone, Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LOUIS CREPAUX

(Member Paris Grand Opera)

HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

PIERCE & TAYLOR

STORAGE WAREHOUSE, 735 Market Street-Opposite Grant avenue. Furniture, Pianos, Trunks, Paintings, Mirrors and other goods stored in clean, light dry lofts. Charges moderate. Telephone Black 311.

DECKELMAN BROS.

RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON

Wholesale and retail dealer in Coal and Wood 670 and 672 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts, San Francisco. Telephone East 152.

Five Years' Record of the Continental Building and Loan Association.

ASSETS, June 30, 1894
$109,377.90.
Profit and Reserve Fund
$17,739.06.

ASSETS, - June 30, 1895
$185,400.29.
Profit and Reserve Fund,
$26,657.26.

ASSETS - - June 30, 1896
$324,522.07.
Profit and Reserve Fund,
$41,231.87.

ASSETS, - - - June 30, 1897
$562,919.34.
Profit and Reserve Fund,
$66,157.71

ASSETS, - - - - June 30, 1898,
$986,401.30.
Profit and Reserve Fund,
$107,777.45.

ASSETS - - - - - - June 30, 1899
$1,321,845.14.
Profit and Reserve Fund,
$169,769.93.

THE ANNUAL REPORT of the Continental Building and Loan association reveals a magnificent financial showing at the close of the tenth fiscal year during which the association has been in existence.

The report of the president, Dr. Ed. E. Hill, is a very interesting document and ends with the plain and true statement:

"These institutions" [meaning building and loan associations] "should be protected by specially framed laws that will help them to grow in usefulness, because no other branch of finance puts as much of its capital into new homes and correspondingly increases the amount of taxable property, to say nothing of the help to the individual who desires to divert his monthly payments of rent to the monthly payments on a home."

The assets increased from $986,401.30 in 1898 to $1,321,845.14 in 1899, a gain for the year of $343,598.70. The earnings apportioned to installment stock increased from $107,777.45 to $133,367.49 in 1899, an increase for the year of $25,590.04.

William A. Corbin, the Continental's secretary and general manager, makes a report which is interesting from A to Z and which is complete in every detail. The purpose of such associations as the Continental is fully set forth in Mr. Corbin's report. He tells among other things how the association has aided to build sufficient homes to make a city of four thousand inhabitants; i. e., about eight hundred homes.

Mr. Corbin says that the conditions for owning a home in California have never been better than at this time. The people are gradually getting educated up to the fact that it is cheaper to own your own home than to pay rent

Supplementary to the secretary's report are given the reports of the field agents, the number of which has been increased to 136. Fresno is said to be one of the most flourishing of the out of-town agencies. The treasurer of the Continental's Fresno branch is C. Allison Telfer, who is also cashier of the Fresno National bank.

The addition of the insurance feature to the Continental association during the past year has already shown its beneficial effects to stockholders. By the insurance clause the investor's stock immediately matures, in case of death, and is payable to the person designated to receive it.

An itemized statement of loans made during the year in the different towns of the state is appended, with a comparative summary of loans for five years, showing increase of homes, etc. Pretty half-tones of homes built by the Continental with "things of interest to the home builder" add to the interesting features of the report, which is issued in booklet form.

An index explaining the different grades of Continental stock, and how to secure it, forms the finale to one of the most complete reports that has been sent out this year by any financial institution, and one which is replete with matters of interest to the reading world at large, whether those desirous or not wishing to buy themselves homes.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street, direct importer of fine millinery goods Exclusive styles.

THE VAMPIRE

ANGEL or demon, tell me which thou art,
And whether thou wouldst bear my captive soul;
If far beyond the stars that o'er us roll,
To some bright home where we shall never part,
Or to those regions of eternal flame,
Where spirits lost forever loudly wail;
So thou art there, dear love, 'twill be the same,
Or hell, or heaven, with thee I'll gladly hail.

Body and soul now thine and thine alone
And the rash homage of each pulsing vein,
As frenzied love leaps into reason's throne,
And like a drunken prodigal doth reign,
All, all confess the raptures that I feel,
As through thy lips my swooning senses steal.

LOUIS A. ROBERTSON.

$100 Reward $100

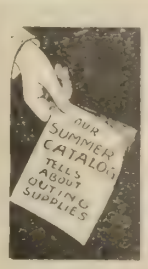
The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY, Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c

EDUCATIONAL

SELBORNE SCHOOL... FOR BOYS
... SAN RAFAEL....
The school will reopen on August 29th in the fine new buildings, heated by steam and lighted with electricity.
For catalogue apply to the Principal,
REV. CHARLES HITCHCOCK,
SAN RAFAEL

TRINITY SCHOOL... 3300 WASHINGTON ST SAN FRANCISCO.
(FOUNDED 1876) Boarding and Day School for Young Men and Boys
Prepares for university and college.
Accredited with the University of California and the Leland Stanford University. A faculty of eleven professors and teachers.
Boarders limited to thirty-five. Christmas term opens August 1st
REV. DR. E. B. SPALDING, Rector.



Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST TEL MAIN 5522.
3253 FILLMORE ST. TEL. WEST 152

Justice—A Picture

"IMPRISONMENT for life."

Until three o'clock in the morning the jurors had held out and the judge, nodding on his bench, the officers of the court and the newspaper reporters who had waited around hoping each to outstay the other and so get the exclusive story for his own paper, were utterly wearied. The case had dragged itself out interminably and the judge, who had hoped to enjoy at least a six weeks' vacation, had seen his anticipation crumble and the six weeks dwindle to a prospective fortnight.

Only one man was alert, unfatigued, nervously awake to each movement of the door whose opening would announce that the jurors had reached a decision. It was the prosecuting attorney. He was a young man and this his first case of importance, therefore to him the jury's opinion meant almost as much as it did to the prisoner at bar.

It was a murder trial, that worst of murders with the victim a child. The accused was no burly criminal, no sanguinary Bill Sykes, only a sweet-faced, slender, sad-looking woman. With her large blue eyes and smoothly parted brown hair she had more the look of a Madonna than the Magdalen with Jezebel instincts that the prosecution had pictured her during the trial.

Yet she was guilty. Thus pronounced the foreman of the twelve intelligent citizens who filed into the courtroom just as the hands of the clock pointed to three.

"Imprisonment for life."

They might have made it hanging but they had compromised at that—"imprisonment for life."

The judge looked relieved and the officers of the court awoke from their musings, while the reporters grew interested in a moment.

The prosecuting attorney gnawed his finger-nails and felt that if he had not been in such a conspicuous position his composure would give way. What an immense impetus the jury's decision meant to his own ambition nobody but himself could quite understand. His first important case, and it had resulted in a conviction!

The woman who was to be imprisoned for life grew white as death as the foreman of the jury read the decision. She did not faint but the keen-eyed reporters noticed that her knees trembled as she was led back to jail.

A child murderer! Could there be any criminal more vile, any creature more vicious than this? To take a little baby, only three years of age, put a knife into its tiny hand and guide the weapon so that it would sever an artery and the wounded one bleed to death? So fiendish a deed deserved hanging, surely, and imprisonment for life was a mild sentence. No mother would kill her child? Well, this mother did; the fact was clearly proved at the trial. And did not the jury weigh all the evidence, carefully and in detail, before it rendered its verdict?

The prosecuting attorney congratulated himself upon the way in which he had drawn forth the evidence from the witnesses, with no browbeating, but simply through his marvelous quickness, his penetrative mind, that let not the most minute clew that would convict the woman escape.

There was the unnatural father, for instance. Who else would have thought of putting him upon the stand to give witness against the woman who, if she were not married to him, still stood in that relation to him and had been faithful to him for the four years of their acquaintance? Why did not the lawyers for the defense place the man upon the stand to testify in the mother's favor?

Who else would have thought of numbering the woman's brother among the witnesses for the prosecution? Blood ties are strong: brothers and sisters usually stand together for weal or woe. But this brother's testimony was made to become one of the links that drew upon the prisoner at the bar her doom.

The prosecuting attorney went home to bed He wished to sleep. He had surely earned sweet dreams and deep repose by his unremitting labors during the past three weeks. Through the jury's decision this morning he had placed his foot solidly upon the first round of the ladder leading to fame and before him he could see an endless vista of such successes, with as the crown of his happiness the possibility of winning the hand of one whom he had long loved but without hope of ever gaining her hand. A scantily briefed lawyer was a vastly different person from a judge. The prosecuting attorney already saw himself on the bench.

No thoughts came to disturb his happy visions of the woman who had just been told that she was to go to prison for life. She was a case, his first important case—as a woman, as a mother, she did not come within his ken.

He did not even stop to question himself as to her guilt or innocence. The evidence pointed to her guilt; personally he did not care whether she had killed her child or, indeed, whether she had ever had a child.

And the woman sat in her cell, dry-eyed for her grief was beyond tears. It was not the fact of her coming imprisonment for life that occupied her thoughts. Everything was against her. Her bitterness of spirit was caused by the knowledge that he, the father of the child, the man for whom she had sacrificed her name and her young life, believed her guilty of the murder of their little one. Her brother, the boy whom she had played with when they were children together, the lad whom she had begged off from many a punishment from her parents, the youth whom she had aided with her hard-earned money when as was so often the case he was "strapped," that brother had testified against her before the court.

The twelve jurors talked over their breakfast. They ate rapidly for they were in a hurry to get home and secure some sleep.

"After all, I hate to believe that pretty woman is a murderess," said one, stabbing a slice of toast with his fork.

"If you had not talked so much about the impossibility of anybody else's doing the deed, I'd have let her off," said another, sleepily stirring his coffee.

"For my part, I consider it a shame that we could not have placed a lighter penalty—but we acted according to law," remarked another.

"It's all right," observed the juror who had been the moving spirit, the fiercest one for argument of the twelve, "this is the prosecuting attorney's first case. I have known him for years and I know he had made up his mind to win it. It was the hand of fate."

A young fellow who had stood out the longest of any of the jury for a different sentence laughed aloud. The sound seemed strange coming so soon after the jurors' long and grave silences in the courtroom.

"Fate is as often on the side of the unjust as the just," he said. "I hope we have not convicted an innocent woman just to help a man on in his career."

The woman who had been convicted of killing her child was being conveyed to the state prison. She was under guard and a watch was kept upon her slightest movement. When she suddenly leaned forward and turned her head in listening attitude, the officer in charge of her person moved closer to his prisoner. When she placed her hand in the pocket of her gown, he came still nearer to her. But it was only a handkerchief that was brought forth.

The woman through her tears broke the silence.

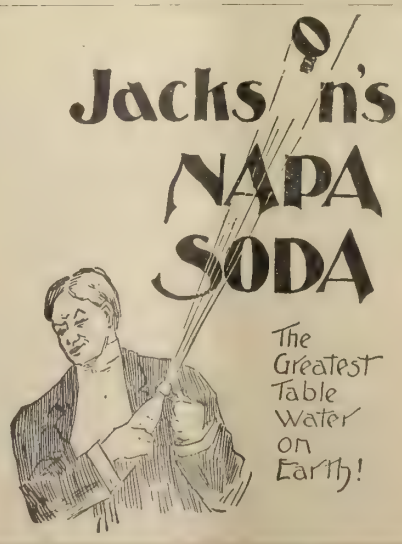
"Did you hear that?," she said with a sob to the guard. "It was a little child crying."

And the man heard her murmur, in a half whisper as though she were meditating:

"And they say I killed my child."

THE MELODRAMATIST.

Mrs S. R Hall, 10 Kearny street, new Velvet Roses in beautiful shades and tints for fallwear.



LEE D. CRAIG
NOTARY PUBLIC AND COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS
316 MONTGOMERY STREET, Bet. Pine and California
San Francisco, Cal.

Music World

MY ATTENTION WAS ATTRACTED to an article in last Sunday's Examiner entitled "Art of Dramatic Singing Declining" in which one Du Pont Syle exhibits his crass ignorance of music and the musical conditions of the present day. Of course the largest part of the article is attributed to one Richard Davey, but as no quotation marks are used it is impossible to discover which of the two is the greater fool. Before going into details I cannot but feel surprised that a paper which is supposed to be ably edited can permit its dramatic critic to discuss musical affairs, especially when it engages the services of a musical critic. H. M. Bosworth is thoroughly capable of attending to all musical affairs, while L. Du Pont Syle has proved that he knows absolutely nothing about music. A man may be a scholar in literature but to understand music sufficiently to criticise and instruct you must have received a musical education and most constantly remain in touch with all musical affairs and developments of the world, else it is an absolute impossibility to debate on this subject. According to the article above referred to the supposed decline of the art of singing is ascribed to: "First, the eagerness of young singers to begin earning money, which leads them to curtail preparation necessary to their profession; second, the killing pressure put upon voices by the requirements of the new (Wagnerian) school of music." What both of these circumstances have to do with the decline of the art of singing is indeed a puzzle. Young singers who in order to earn money discontinue their studies would never become singers. They could never have any influence in the decline or increase of art, because they cannot be artists nor foster any artistic instinct when they lack the fundamental characteristic of an artist—ambition. A singer without ambition is of no value to the art and a singer with ambition would not cut short his studies in order to earn money sooner. Vanity among vocalists is nothing new and was just as frequent years ago as it is today; only in former days vain musicians were ignored while now they succeed sometimes in gaining prominence. No, we have not more inefficient singers, but we have writers who notice them more frequently than used to be the case.

¶ ¶

But the second clause is the acme of idiocy: think of the "killing pressure put upon voices by the requirements of the new (Wagnerian) school of music." First of all there is no killing pressure put upon the voices, provided they are fit to essay the roles. A Wagner tenor can always sing Wagner provided he has been taught how. Surely there is no particular change in the quality of voices noticeable that have been trained for Wagnerian music. But even if it were the case, could this have any influence on the decline of the art of singing? Not at all. The number of voices spoiled by trying to sing Wagner are always insignificant organs that could never have influenced the art of singing; besides they were never fit to enter into Wagnerian operatic work. Wagner held that the vocal and orchestral score are separate and distinct from each other, that hence the vocalist and instrumentalist must work separate and distinct from each other; that the orchestra is not supposed to accompany the singer; but that the voice should float above the orchestra as a vessel on the sea and should be carried away by the sound waves that meet it from below. Wagner held that there are voices of exceptional power that require such treatment and he was right. There is not a man or woman who can point at a genuine Wagnerian singer whose voice was ruined because of the so-called Wagnerian school. Yes, weak voices suffer from being strained, but any singer who risks Wagner without possessing the necessary strength is not an artist and his loss would not be felt.

¶ ¶

Then we have in this same article the expression of "new (Wagnerian) school of music." First of all, there is no "new (Wagnerian) school of music," but a "new (Wagnerian) school of composition." Secondly, a school of music would not interfere with singers in particular. Thirdly, it was supposed to read "school of singing." Fourthly, the new school of singing is not Wagnerian, but Italian. And fifthly, the new Italian school of singing is just the very proof that the art of singing is increasing, not on the decline. Do you understand the rot published in Sunday's Examiner now?

¶ ¶

Listen to this argument: "In grand opera, there were but four prime donne of the first rank to be found in London last year—Melba, Calve, Nordica and Ternina. Thirty years ago there were a dozen, including such names as Titiens, Nilsson, Patti, Pauline Lucca and Marichisio." This argues a decline of singing in Italy as well as in England." This latter remark is not true. It does not argue anything of the kind. On the contrary, it argues in favor of the increase of public appreciation of good singing. It argues the decline of stars and the increase of good singers in general. What constitutes the fame of a singer? The amount of notoriety he or she is able to obtain. In former days the notoriety was gained without extortionate advertising rates, hence we had more great singers. Today it costs hundreds of thousands of dollars to become famous, hence the decline of famous singers. Why, how can a man who heard the Lambardi opera company dare to remark that the art of singing is declining in Italy? Why it is preposterous. In Germany I have heard stock companies in cities of not more than fifty or sixty thousand inhabitants that contain singers of as fine talent as that of the most famous vocalists of today. In Italy you may find any amount of great singers. In America you have many, many singers that could vie with any of the stars. Look at Mme. De Pasquali, who sang Marguerite sublimely. Look at Salassa, who is the finest baritone ever heard here. Yet he is not famous. Why? Because he has not enough money to buy fame.

¶ ¶

The art of singing is not declining by any means, and because Mr. Syle heard a rehearsal of Maritana where he could not understand the words it is not sufficient proof that the art of singing is declining. The number of charlatans is increasing, but even this is not proof that the art of singing is declining. Art itself cannot decline, music itself cannot depreciate and anyone who knows what he is talking about would never make such a statement. Why does not the Examiner let its music critic deal with musical affairs?

¶ ¶

The first rehearsal of the Philharmonic orchestra will occur on Thursday evening, August seventeenth. On that day Mr. Howe, the conductor, will also begin his fall classes and private teaching A portion of the week he will devote to Pacific Grove where his summer school of music is enjoying gratifying prosperity. The term of this school has been extended four weeks because of its success.

¶ ¶

H. M. Bosworth is presiding at the organ in St. Dominic's church during the absence of Mr. Palmer. Mr. Bosworth, being an organist of much experience, is thoroughly familiar with church music and his services are of exceptional value to any congregation. Rhys Thomas did well to ask Mr. Bosworth to play for him. By the way, the choir at St. Dominic's, I hear, is making gratifying progress.

¶ ¶

It has now been definitely settled that Paderewski will be in San Francisco during the early part of March and efforts are being made to arrange for six matinees. Paderewski's manager writes in a private letter to Harry H. Campbell that everything points to a success equal to that of Paderewski's last appearance here.

¶ ¶

The friends of Miss Clara Kalisher, the efficient contralto who recently returned from Paris, are contemplating a benefit concert to be tendered this vocalist before her departure for the east. Charles L. Young, ever on the alert for meritorious talent, has engaged Miss Kalisher for the coming season.

ALFRED METZGER.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

TEACHES: { Tone Production
Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone production

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Bldg.

Reception Hours:
3:30 to 4:30

Minor Chords

Madame Jeannette Webster Crawford will add much to the interest of the coming season as she intends making a tour of the state directing the California Ladies' quartet which was organized by her in Los Angeles this spring, from two to five rehearsals having been held weekly since the beginning of March, with splendid result. Mr. Willis Ames will manage the quartet and the time is near at hand when Madame Crawford, who is is an enthusiast in ensemble work, will present in San Francisco and other Californian cities a quartet of worthy work to those whose natures are attuned to the melodies of the old masters. Madame Crawford has been fortunate in securing musicians of ability and reputation, all of them being eastern ladies and worthy of so gifted a director. She hopes to have as much success with the California Ladies' quartet as she enjoyed with the Agnes Zimmermann quartet of ladies organized and directed by her in Boston. After a season here they will probably be heard in the east where Madame Crawford is widely known. The quartet is composed of Madame Jeannette Webster Crawford, pianist and director; Miss Eloise Lemon, violin; Miss Lavelle Knox, viola; Miss Sara A. Simons, violoncello. Miss Lemon is a Chicago violinist of unusual excellence and studied with Mr. William Lewis of Chicago who also taught Maud Powell, the renowned violinist. Miss Lemon is highly endorsed by the eastern critics and has been a successful teacher and conductor. Miss Knox is considered the finest viola player in California. Her tones are broad and full of color and her personality charming. Miss Simons is an exceptionally fine ensemble player and was a pupil of Herr Berlich, formerly of New York. Much enthusiasm was created at a concert recently given by the California Ladies' quartet in the parlors of the Hotel Arcadia, Santa Monica. The program rendered was: Quartet No. 4, allegro, larghetto, menuetto, allegretto, Mozart; Serenade (piano, violin and cello), Widor; quartet, op. 16, two movements, Beethoven; Presto, B flat quartet, Weber. Mrs. Crawford professes a warm admiration for TOWN TALK which published some time ago a portrait and sketch of her interesting career, and her fine intellectual face created not a little interest. Her appearance in San Francisco will be hailed with pleasure.

MARY FRANCES FRANCIS.

¶ ¶

Eleanor Kent is meeting with great success in Atlantic city, New Jersey, as prima donna of the Aborn opera company. Within the next four weeks she will sing the leading roles in Carmen, Chimes of Normandy, Erminie, Pinafore and The Bohemian Girl. Of course all this means hard study to the San Francisco girl but hard study also means continued success as it is only by continued application and increased versatility that success on the stage can be attained. Miss Kent will return to New York in September to rehearse her roles for next season.

HARMONY CLASS

Dr. H. J. Stewart is now forming a class for the study of Harmony (elementary grade.)

For terms, apply at the Studio, 1406 Van Ness Avenue.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . -

Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.

Specialist in the Development of the Voice

* * * HOME STUDIO:

RECEPTION HOURS, 12 TO 2 912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .

Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu-El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,

Studio for Voice Culture Operatic Repertoire,
Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method.

Engagements accepted for Concerts
Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.

Terms Moderate

Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

MR. FRANCIS STUART

. . . Teacher of Singing

1615 Jackson St., near Polk

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, Vocalist, 1109 Post street.
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist, Oroville. Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

DR. H. J. STEWART....

Organist of Trinity Church, and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .

has removed his
MUSIC STUDIO
to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine

Singing, Piano, Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music

E. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street

Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.

A thorough course for teaching. Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Under direction of For Voice Culture, Piano and Organ
Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck, Assisted by MISS CECILIA M. DECKER
Alto Soloist Central M. E. Church.

Operatic and Dramatic Department in charge of Mrs. Mary Fairweather
Piano Department in charge of Mr. Arthur Fickenscher
Assisted by Mrs. Fanny E. Buckland, (Virgil Practice Clavier Method) and Miss Estelle Davidson (Synthetic Method)
Languages: MR. L. D. VENTURA, B. E. (French and Italian)
MISS ELSA PRIBER. (German.)
Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy.
Instructions in Physical Culture, Chorus and Sight Singing, Ensemble Playing, etc., etc. Advantages Unsurpassed. Full particulars and terms upon application. 841 Fulton St., Bet. Webster and Fillmore,
Telephone West 223 San Francisco, Cal.

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use

BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE

It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.

PRICE $3.00

At music stores or by mail Descriptive circulars sent upon application.

HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

What it is THE SYNTHETIC METHOD for the pianoforte, as originated by Albert Ross Parsons and developed by Kate S. Chittenden, has for several years been an important factor in the musical instruction of New York and the surrounding cities. Although occupying a very high position in the east it is little known on this coast perhaps because it has been mainly dependent for understanding upon transmission from its originators to their pupils. It is a "live" method, as is "Touch and Technic," and cannot be learned from books. Its name suggests concentrated energy as well as material for the feeding of that energy. Who can study this system without thrilling with gratification at the efforts which are made through ingenious and original exercises to "build up" the pupil's musical intelligence? Even the young child feels that there is a motive in each exercise—that it is there to develop some principle necessary to his musical equipment. There is more vital force in one of this method's simple devices than in pages of the material often given to beginners. In the synthetic method, the hands are trained as living things. They swing, hang, skate, stab. The fingers march, walk, see-saw, slide. Freedom, flexibility, independence, are natural outgrowths. More than these in importance, the mind and heart are awakened and kept awake by interest and pleasure. For is it not interesting and pleasant to cause the hands to do these acts? And when the exercises are mainly from dictation, does not the mind move and have its being in each performance of those exercises? Must it not be concentrated more on them than it would be on the reading of pages of notes? When from the very first lesson, the muscles of the hand and arm are freely used under the influence of directed thought, is not the child's ambition roused, is he not made to feel a high estimate of his powers, is he not inspired to be free and express himself?

HELEN M. ANDERSON.

¶ ¶

Mr and Mrs. Willard J. Batchelder have returned from their summer vacation. Mr. Batchelder has resumed his teaching and his office is now in the Kohler-Chase building

¶ ¶

Manager S. H. Friedlander has negotiated for quite a number of big musical attractions which he expects to bring to San Francisco and the coast this coming season.

¶ ¶

The success of Miss Rose Adler (Relda), of this city, in Paris is very gratifying to her many friends here who predicted a brilliant future for her.

¶ ¶

Miss Lotte Siegel, one of San Francisco's most able musicians, has returned from her summer vacation.

SOHMER PIANOS BYRON MAUZY
Agent 308--314 Post Street, San Francisco
Sheet Music, Books, etc. Tel. Main 5261

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd
TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral. Voice Culture and the Art of Singing First-class Engagements only accepted. Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MR. J. F. VEACO
TENOR SOLOIST Grace Church, California Street. Voice Culture. Studio: 1012 Sacramento St. near Powell. Reception hours 12 to 2.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave. Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Residence, 1622 Fell Street, near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE
SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakland, Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL
SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing, has resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento street. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL
POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire. 130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS
CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches. Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE
TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER
TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY
TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St. Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH
PUPILS of Madame de la Grange Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

J. W. McKENZIE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX
PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A. Building Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30. Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL
VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY
SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue. Studio, 717 Sutter Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON
SINGING and Piano. Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK
PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 575. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

HELEN M. ANDERSON, A. C. M.
TEACHER OF PIANO. Refers to Mr. Louis Lisser, Dr. Wm. Mason and Albert Ross Parsons. Synthetic Method and "Touch and Technic" a special course for teachers. 31 Guerrero St.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH
PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory, Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M. 1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA
TEACHER OF PIANO. 2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER
TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays, 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS
TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony. 2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE
TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a. m to 1:30 p. m. Thursday excepted. Telephone Hyde 1491 825 Sutter Street, S.F.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE
PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street. Telephone Larkin 782.

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.
ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F.

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.
PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies. Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON
CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher. Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA
TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. GERTRUDE JUDD
WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published.

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN
TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.
TEACHER OF ZITHER. Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street. Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.
VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn. Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR
MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5. Will accept engagements for concerts.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano.
MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

World of Letters

THOUGH Nigel Ferrard is a book of the current year, it savors more of an older day before the sex problem, the unspeakable woman and the precocious infant were given the centre of the stage. The title is ill chosen as the mere name gives no hint of the contents, which might be high tragedy, low comedy or flat commonplace. As a matter of fact, the plot is quite out of the ordinary track and the story is very well told though hardly what one would recommend to the morbid minded. It is manifestly unfair to both author and publisher to attempt to condense into a single paragraph the outline of a tale that is elaborately set forth in several hundred pages, nor is it just to set about the analysis of characters which should be allowed to develop themselves to the reader. Briefly, a child of exceptionally high strung nervous organization and who, unknown to her temporary guardian, is possessed of somnambulistic tendencies, wanders out of doors in her sleep while in a strange neighborhood. On her awakening she is subjected to a severe nervous shock and that, in connection with the consequent fall, destroys her memory. Nigel Ferrard, a young surgeon, believes his safety depends upon her and finding that she has no recollection of anything but her name, Gwennie or Gwen, he constitutes himself her guardian and invents a fictitious history to account for her infirmity and his mentorship. Gwen is in no sense lacking. On the contrary her mind is more alert than the average and she becomes both well educated and accomplished. She is very unlike the usual type of the English girl just released from the school-room. She has a lively tongue and is quick at repartee—far more of an American than a Briton. At the same time there is none of the flippant smartness just this side of vulgarity which so often charactizes the heroine of the Duchess school. She has vague and indefinite impressions of scenes and circumstances of her early youth, for she was fourteen years of age at the time that Ferrard took her into his care, and she is inclined to refer her hazy recollections to memories of former incarnation. These impressions are always produced by being brought into contact with people or circumstances which she had known in her childhood, but which she had forgotten and Ferrard had never been aware of. Gwen has had a wholesome upbringing and is not given to morbid musings. At first she is determined upon a career but finds a suitable one in marriage with her guardian. It is through Mrs. Marchmont, the villain of the story, that Gwen discovers her identity though not until that half-mad Nemesis has done her full share of mischief. A lighter element, though hardly comedy, is furnished by Isabel Ferrard with her devotion to scientific pursuits and wasteful economies. She takes possession of the billiard-room for her beetles and the guest-chamber for the rearing of silkworms and the footmen and housemaids are kept in such close attendance upon these important insects that they have no time for legitimate duties. And yet, when circumstances arise in which common sense and energetic action are needed, Isabel is not found wanting. The dialogue is bright, often epigrammatic, though not of that unnaturally scintillating brilliancy which makes people of ordinary intellect doubtful of its possibility among mere human beings.

I am one of those people who mistake their impressions for thoughts and their prejudices fo opinions.

Careers are possible to anyone who has not to earn a living from them.

Good comes out of evil; that is not religion, only psychology—quite a different thing.

The story brings to mind that novel of Mrs. Molesworth's, popular twenty years or more ago, A Life's Assize. The similarity (if one may so call it) lies neither in plot nor treatment but in the main, underlying motive, the needless sacrifice of years to remorse and concealment when a free examination and investigation of circumstances in the first place would reveal the real culprit. Nigel Ferrard ought to dramatize well. The characters are not too numerous and are all well defined, while the exigencies of stage presentation would demand little, if any variation from the present form. The author, G. M Robins, is bracketed as Mrs. L. Bailie Reynolds. [J.B.Lippincott Co. paper, fifty cents.]

Someone has written to the Bookbuyer: "Will you kindly inform me who is the author of Reclaimed, a sequel to George Eliot's Daniel Deronda?" Now, the next query is, what is there in Daniel Deronda that has need for further elucidation? Perhaps Hans and Gwendolen are united in happy marriage and one of the Meyrick girls is handed over to Rex. Mrs. Glasher and the elder Cohen might be permitted to improve each other's morals or the other Cohens might be induced to give up their faith and their pawn-shop. It had never occurred to me that Deronda had need of a sequel and if George Eliot herself had thought the work unfinished, she would have supplied the second volume. Sequels, even when supplied by the author, are rarely satisfactory, one of the best being The Dusantes, which Frank R. Stockton supplied to round out The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine. His story The Discourager of Hesitancy, a "sequel" to The Lady or the Tiger? is about as aggravating as that tale itself. The veriest tyro at novel reading can tell where G. B. Dinsmore "begins to finish" Bret Harte's M'liss. Of all the continuations of Edwin Drood, left unfinished by Charles Dickens, the best are but approximately satisfactory and one is apt to wish one had let them alone.—The Bookworm.

EDWARD ROWLAND SILL.

A bird he could not choose but soar to greet
The sun. What wing upon such flight can dwell,
So fine the atmosphere his pinions beat
In vain that ether; then heart-broke he fell?
—Herbert D. Ward.

A tonic is something that restores strength and vigor to the entire system. Ripans Tabules are a tonic in the sense that they correct digestive disorders and help in the proper assimilation of food. When the organs of the stomach are in perfect working order the whole system is benefited. A society woman of New York City suffered from an attack of bronchitis each year as winter approached, and was often unable to go out of doors for days. When the last attack came on she took a Ripans Tabule each evening and was greatly benefited, having less soreness in her throat and very little tendency to cough. As a result, she had better general health that season than for years. The Tabules, she states, acted in her case as a tonic and imparted renewed strength to her system. If she omitted to take one at night, she would notice that she was not so well the next day.

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

LEGAL NOTICES

SHERIFF'S SALE

SAN FRANCISCO PAVING COMPANY (a corporation) Plaintiff. vs. ANNIE C. RINES, and THE GERMAN SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY (a corporation) Defendants.	No. 65 594 Superior Court Department No. 7. Order of Sale and Decree of Lien.

Under and by virtue of an Order of Sale and Decree of Lien issued out of the Superior Court, Department No. 7, of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on the 11th day of July A D. 1899, in the above entitled action, wherein San Francisco Paving Company (a corporation), the above named plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of lien against Annie C Rines, defendant, on the 21st day of February A. D. 1899, recorded in Judgment Book 47 of said Court, at page 253. I am commanded to sell all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a point upon the Northerly line of Sixteenth street distant thereon One hundred and eighty (180) feet Westerly of the Westerly line of Sanchezstreet, running thence Westerly upon the said Northerly line of Sixteenth street Fifty (50) feet, three (3) inches; thence at right angles Northerly Thirty-six (36) feet; thence Northeasterly parallel with the Southeasterly line of Market street, Eighty-two (82) feet, six and one-half (6½) inches; and thence Southerly in a straight line Eighty seven (87) feet, four and three-fourths (4¾) inches to the point of commencement. Being a subdivision of Mission Block One hundred and three (103) in said City and County of San Francisco, State of California

Public notice is hereby given that on Monday the 14th day of August A. D. 1899, at twelve o'clock Noon, of that day, in front of the New City Hall, Larkin street wing, in the City and County of San Francisco, I will in obedience to said order of sale and decree of lien, sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to raise sufficient money to satisfy said judgment with interest costs, etc., to the highest and best bidder, for lawful money of the United States

HENRY S. MARTIN,
San Francisco, July 22nd A. D. 1899. Sheriff.

J. C. BATES, Attorney for Plaintiff,
434 California street, San Francisco.

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

Department No. 2.

ANNA DE LAWCZYNSKI Plaintiff vs. THEOPHILE F. DE LAWCZYNSKI Defendant	Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA SEND GREETING TO:

Theophile F. de Lawczynski, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful neglect of plaintiff for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of Defendant's willful desertion of said Plaintiff since the15th day of March, 1898; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Anna Fabry, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT.	Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of ROGER PRENDERGAST Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, executors of the last will and testament of ROGER PRENDERGAST deceased, to the creditors, of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executors at the law office of J. J. Dwyer at the Mills Building, Seventh Floor, Room 38, northeast corner of Bush and Montgomery streets in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

PETER J. DUNNE and CHARLES HIRSHFELD,
Executors of the last will and testament of
Roger Prendergast Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 22, 1899.

J. J. DWYER, Mills Building,
Attorney for Executors.

TOWN TALK prints Briefs and Transcripts

SUMMONS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. 2

CHRISTINA JACOBY Plaintiff vs HERMAN JACOBY Defendant	Action brought in the SuperiorCourt City and County of San Francisco State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

EUGENE F. BERT, Attorney for Plaintiff

The People of the State of California send Greeting to:

HERMAN JACOBY, Defendant

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therin within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or, if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of Plaintiff since the 11th day of December A. D. 1897, and for more than one year last past; and upon the further and second ground of defendant's willful neglect of said Plaintiff for more than one year last past; also that Plaintiff be permitted to resume and be known by her former name of Christina Penders, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 6th day of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

SEAL OF SUPERIOR COURT.	Wm. A. Deane, Clerk. By Wm. R. A. Johnson, Deputy Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of MARY LEONARD, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned. Executrix and Executor respectively of the last will and testament of MARY LEONARD, deceased, to the creditors,of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within Four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executrix and executor or either thereof at the law offices of LENT AND HUMPHREY at rooms 54 and 55 in the Crocker Building in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

MARY LEONARD and LEON ROOS,
Executrix and Executor respectively of the estate of Mary Leonard, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco August 12, 1899.

ESTABLISHED 1863

GOLD PEBBLE SPECTACLES EYE GLASSES OPERA FIELD AND MARINE GLASSES

COMPLICATED CASES OF DEFECTIVE VISION DIAGNOSED FREE OF CHARGE

824 MARKET STREET, PHELAN BUILDING, Near Fourth

A. D. Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty
Open Day and Night — Telephone Main 971

Santa Fe Route

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St.. Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway.
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street.

Lake Tahoe

The Most Picturesque Mountain Lake on the Continent

Its Attractive Resorts

Tahoe City	Tallac
McKinney's	Lakeside House
Rubicon Park	Glenbrook
Emerald Bay	Deer Park Inn

Glen Alpine Springs

Afford fine hotels, home comforts and all modern conveniences at reasonable rates.

Endless opportunity for outdoor recreation, such as boating, bathing, steamer excursions around the lake, mountain climbing, sight seeing, hunting and fishing

The atmosphere is pure, dry and health giving. Absolutely no malaria and no insect pests. Nights cool and delightful. Holders of Ogden Route tickets with sufficient limit may be granted a stop-over at Truckee to visit the lake. Side trip including trip around the lake, $6.00.

ALL AGENTS OF THE

Southern Pacific Company

are supplied with handsomely illustrated folders for free distribution, giving full and complete information. Ask or send for one.

S. A. WHITE H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W. H. PORTER
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 SAN FRANCISCO

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.

DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF

PAPER

Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty

401-403 Sansome St.

SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence

Livery and Sale Stables

423 Post Street,

W. E. BRIDGE, Proprietor

Telephone No 1323 San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY

Office, 1004 Market Street

TELEPHONE, SOUTH- 420

TELEPHONE MAIN 240

George D. Graham

MANUFACTURER OF

Printing and Lithographic INKS

Printers' Rollers and Composition

Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials

529 COMMERCIAL ST.

Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.

Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.

609 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer
. . of . .
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

Schillinger's Patent Sidewalk and Gardenwalk a specialty

Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

UNITED STATES BREWERY

311-313 FULTON STREET

CELEBRATED Steam Beer

ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS

EDWIN E. PARKER BENJ. L. TARBOX

The Reception

206 SUTTER ST., San Francisco.

Private Rooms for Ladies Music Room at
Oysters in Every Style. Disposal of Patrons.
TELEPHONE MAIN 1231.

A No. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton

JAS. P. DUNNE & CO. . .

No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL . . .

Fourth and Market Sts.

Overcoats and Valises Checked Free
TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR

THE MANHATTAN . . .

25 Geary Street, S. F

Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5611

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world

Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free. A valuable book for men.

W. SCHEPPLER

DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

Summer Resorts

BLUE LAKES HOTEL

* * *

Conducted in a quiet home-like manner. The best of tables, fine fishing and hunting. Inclosure of 25x60 feet in shallow water for women and children. Rates $10 to $12 per week in hotel or cottages according to location. Ample accommodations. Round trip. good for six months, $9.50, via S.F and N. P. to Ukiah, thence by stage from Palace Hotel.

Address J. WILSON, Bertha P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

LAUREL DELL . . .

* * *

Increased facilities for comfort and pleasure. New dining room, 32x170 feet, overlooking lake. Driving, boating, bathing, fishing, bowling, etc. Lighted by gas.

H. WAMBOLD, Bertha P. O., Lake Co.

ANDERSON SPRINGS . . .

* * * Lake County

Natural Steam, Hot Sulphur and Iron Baths. Rates, $8 to $14 a week; telephone. Round trip, $8. Write for particulars.

J. ANDERSON, Proprietor,
Anderson Springs, Middletown P. O.

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging.

Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room, telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5 50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

GLENBROOK . . . Lake County, California

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish, you want to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation, exhilarant pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an invigorating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O. W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

Agua Caliente Springs Hotel, SONOMA VALLEY

* *

Two hours from San Francisco, via Tiburon Ferry. Warm mineral swimming and tub baths. Water, gas, electric bells. Rates, $10 to 12 per week, $2 per day.

Address AGUA CALIENTE SPRINGS,
Agua Caliente, Sonoma Co., Cal

Howard Springs . . . Lake County, (Putah P. O.)

* *

Hot and cold mineral springs; hot steam and plunge baths of great healing power—will cure rheumatism, nervous diseases kidney troubles, etc. Terms $10 and $12 per week. Special rates to families. Postoffice and telephone. Round trip tickets $10 at Southern Pacific office.

Address MRS. R. J. BEEBY.

Bonanza Springs . . . Lake County, Cal.

* *

A NATURAL camping ground; five different mineral springs. We cater to campers only, and invite all who want good water pure air, fishing and hunting, to come. Hot and cold mineral baths. Cottages neatly furnished to rent from $1.50 per week. Provisions, hay, grain etc., can be purchased on the grounds. Teams meet stage at Seiglers.

Address R. F. DOCKERY, Bonanza Spgs., Putah P. O., Lake Co.

HOTEL EL PASO DE ROBLES

"Pass of the Oaks"—twenty-five miles from ocean—where the beautiful Salinas valley runs into the foothills. The mountain ozone produces a healthful atmosphere for the sick.

Numerous cottages are dotted about grounds where invalids and convalescents in calm repose recover their wonted Health.

OTTO E. NEVER, PASO ROBLES, CAL. — CITY OFFICE, 636 MARKET ST

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

Wm. B. Hooper, Manager — San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA ✷

.....1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer, First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY ✷

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY. ✷

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

Pacific Carriage Co.

OLIVER HINKLEY
SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.

STANDS:

General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street

California Hotel — N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny — 48 Eighth Street

TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 — Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

Town Talk does Printing of all Kinds

FULTON
LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY
236 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.
Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons; Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 561c

TELEPHONE MAIN 400
MOISE KLINKNER CO.
RED RUBBER STAMPS, STENCILS
BOX & BURNING BRANDS
MEDALS, BADGES, CHECKS, DIES.
320 SANSOME ST. SAN FRANCISCO.
MOISE'S EASY SHINE. MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

"TOWN TALK"
Moise's
ARTISTIC
RAISED LETTER
SIGNS

To Chicago in 3½ Days
To New York in 4½ Days
VIA
Chicago Union Pacific
AND
Northwestern Line
Through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Buffet Library Cars with Barber daily . .
All Meals Served a la Carte in Dining Cars
For full information address
R. R. Ritchie, General Agent
PACIFIC COAST
No. 2 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco
PALACE HOTEL

"PIONEER LIMITED"
BETWEEN
St. Paul and Chicago
CHICAGO MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY
Finest and most complete train on Earth
C. L. CANFIELD, General Agent,
636 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

DO YOU KNOW
A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT
Send or Sample Copy of the
OAKLAND TRIBUNE
and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco
Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory
40 ELLIS St., Rooms 1 and 2
SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00
Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO, SHELTERED FROM OCEAN WINDS AND FOGS. VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE; EASY TERMS. AMERICAN LAND AND TRUST CO., 132 MARKET STREET, S. F.

LARKSPUR

Is destined to be the metropolis of Marin County and is San Francisco's most popular suburb. It is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mount Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially, Eminent physicians pronounce it a great sanitarium.

A Great Sanitarium Many attractions are offered—such as sea bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks snd drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations; for, Larkspur is building up more rapidly than any other town on the N. P. C. R. R. Large esidences and cottages for sale on installment payments. Do not pay rent when the same money will purchase a beautiful home. Cottages for rent; property exchanged.

AMERICAN LAND and TRUST CO.
132 MARKET STREET

SING FAT & CO.

(ESTABLISHED 1866)

Chinese AND Japanese Bazaar

CHINESE EMPEROR
TRADE MARK.

614 DUPONT STREET, next to St. Mary's Church

Beware of Firms Infringing Upon Our Name.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .

Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,

Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States

Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,

San Francisco.

Prices Hammered 25 to 50 per cent. DOWN SAVED

CLEARANCE SALE

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 MARKET STREET, S. F.

'Phone, Main 1659

Mont Rouge Vineyard

Livermore Valley California

CHAUCHÉ & BON,

PROPRIETORS

Office and Depot, 17 First St.

Telephone Main 1514 SAN FRANCISCO.

Town Talk Prints Menus

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

This Paper no
to be taken fron
the Library.

PACIFIC TOWN TALK

LITERATURE · SOCIETY · MUSIC · STAGE · POLITICS

RNIA
ATE
LIBRARY

San Francisco, August 19, 1899 Vol. 7—No. 364 Price, 10 Cents

WATER——LIGHT

Water works and electric light plants for country clubs and residences. Contracts taken for complete installations, and all work fully guaranteed Only the best class of work solicited. No steam, heat or danger.

HERCULES GAS ENGINE WORKS, [Inc.]

305 Market St., S. F.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teaches {Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS: 3:30 TO 4:30

You should ride a

STEARNS

Cushion Frame Bicycle

Safe Deposit Vaults

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

N. W. corner of Bush and Sansome Streets.

STORES Trunks for one dollar a month.

RENTS Safes for $5 a year, furnishing the most perfect security for valuables of all descriptions.

Office hours, 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS
AT HOME

Call and see
The Thermal Bath Cabinet

Baldwin Pharmacy

119-121 Ellis Street

MRS. CLAY CLEMENT
In "A Southern Gentleman" at the Columbia next week

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus.....$ 2,187,617.90
Capital actually paid up in cash..... .... 1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1899..... 27,656,513.03

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier, William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, July 1, 1899. - - - - - -	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital. - - - - - - - -	1,000,000
Reserve Fund. - - - - - - - - -	205,216
Contingent Fund. - - - - - - - -	442,763

E. B. POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER ROBERT WATT THOMAS MAGEE DANIEL E. MARTIN
GEORGE C. BOARDMAN W. C. B. DE FREMERY ALBERT MILLER
GEO. TASHEIRA E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over - - -	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital - - - - - -	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund - - -	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over - - - -	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits -	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits -	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock - -	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock - -	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO
WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

Mutual Savings Bank of San Francisco

33 POST STREET, below Kearny

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE BLDG

Guaranteed Capital - $1,000,000 — Paid-up Capital - - - $300,000

JAMES D. PHELAN, President — S. G. MURPHY, Vice President
GEO. A. STORY, Cashier — JOHN A. HOOPER, Vice-President
C. B. HOBSON, Assistant Cashier

"Rate of interest on loans secured by improved San Francisco real estate six per cent."

Interest paid on Deposits. ∴ Loans on approved securities.
Deposits may be sent by postal order, Wells, Fargo & Co., or Exchange on City Banks When opening accounts send signature.

OCEANIC Steamship Company

The S. S. Australia
Sails for Honolulu Wedn'sday, Aug. 23 at 2 p. m.
The S. S. ALAMEDA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, Sept 6, at 10 p.m.
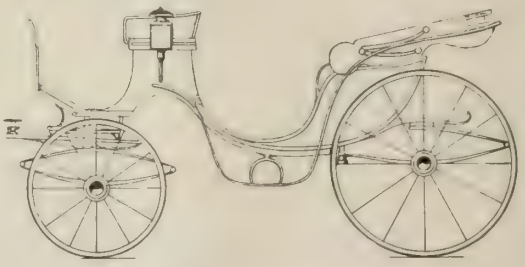
Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents
114 Montgomery Street, S. F.
FREIGHT OFFICE—327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855.

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A. N. Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart, H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.

You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, August 19, 1899

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

THE DEATH of Robert G. Ingersoll is a theme that pulpit spellbinders will relinquish with reluctance. The Reverend (?) Sam Jones rushed into print with the aid of the organ of the Christian Endeavor association to tell how he regarded the great Agnostic. He is quoted as stating that whatever virtue Mr. Ingersoll possessed was a gift of grace of Christianity. His liberality, his charity and his love of home were not gifts of infidelity and when "he throws his teaching of no God, no bible, no heaven and no hell into the hearts and lives of others, who have not been blessed by the help which Christianity gives to us, he turns the whole human life into utter rot." It has probably never occurred to Sam Jones that Christ himself was not reared in a Christian home nor under the influence of the Bible, as he understands it. We have a fair percentage of Jews amongst our population who are not steeped in "Bible," i. e., New Testament and they are, for all that, most creditable citizens in their public and private capacity. Jewish tramps and beggars are literally unknown. They do not fill our alms-houses and prisons. Their children are not to be found in appreciable numbers in reform schools and though large families are proverbial amongst them, the Hebrew orphan asylums contain proportionately to population fewer inmates. The boastful Christians might learn valuable lessons of charity and forebearance from this people whose religion is practical help, not windy sensationalism. Ingersoll was quite as much in the private confidence of God as is Sam Jones or any other pulpiteer. He knew as much of the "designs of Providence and the intentions of our Creator" as did any preacher amongst them. He did not deny the existence of a God or a hereafter but he did most emphatically refuse to accept the usual Christian minister's conception of a Creator, all powerful for good and yet complacently permitting, if not actually originating evil. He held that human wisdom was bounded by experience, that we have no positive proof of a future existence, and that our own theory that we would do better on a second trial and therefore we ought to have one, by no means constitutes a divine reason why we were going to have it. He lived an upright, honorable life from principle—not because he was afraid of roasting for all eternity to add a portion to the joy of the saints, nor because he expected to collect usury on the sum of his good deeds. Had he been less honest he might have "devoted his talents to the service of God" for a big salary and a ten per cent discount on tailor bills, with traveling expenses at half rates. Mountebanks and clowns like Sam Jones and Sam Small, whose discourses touch the borders of indecency, sensation-seekers like Beecher and Talmage and scoundrels of the Brown-Gloria type have done more to bring the cause of Christianity into disrepute than have all the atheists and agnostics for two thousand years. There is a vastly large number of professing Christians that have no higher conception of a hereafter than had the little girl in Harper's Bazaar, who ardently longed to be an angel, "so I can fly down and peck Willie for breaking my doll."

A REPORTED CASE of Jew-baiting at the military academy at West Point has set the Call's tea kettle to boiling over and that estimable journal is predicting an epidemic of persecution of Hebrew citizens at large and military cadets in particular. Nearly a column of editorial was recently devoted to this alleged Dreyfus in miniature. According to the story told by Sigmund Albert, he has been made the victim of a conspiracy to wear him out. He has been tripped at drill, insulted and beaten into insensibility, and his room-mate has been persecuted merely for extending ordinary courtesy toward him. It is also claimed that two other Jewish cadets have been driven out during the year by the same course of treatment. On the other hand a story reaches us to the effect that Albert himself has been the offender. Though hazing, in the old sense of the word, has been abolished at West Point, he and his room-mate have been repeatedly detected in torturing other students and they have made themselves personally, not religiously, obnoxious. An investigation would have resulted in their ignominious expulsion and they chose to resign rather than undergo the ordeal of an examination. This is a matter which cannot be decided offhand. The children of Jewish citizens attend school side by side with those of other denominations, in all sections of the country. They hold their own in scholarship and deportment, and if they are not personally disagreeable, no complaint or objection is ever raised against them. It is hardly likely that there should be a sudden outbreak of religious intolerance at West Point. On the other hand persecution and cruelty are not characteristic of the Jews, either as individuals or collectively. It is very rarely that they resort to physical violence. Only a few years ago the country was on the verge of hysterics because of a case of reported negro persecution at West Point: Cadet Jackson, a young colored man, had been most cruelly hazed. His personal belongings had been destroyed, and he, too, had been beaten into insensibility, his nose slit and ears sliced off. Anonymous letters had been sent to him in which his life was threatened if he did not resign from the academy, or if he ever made any attempt to identify his persecutors. The affair was, on the face of it, outrageous, and the whole civilized world was ready to point the finger of scorn at the military arm of the government, under which such a flagrant case of race persecution conld have taken place. The authorities set about investigating the matter, and showed a determination to probe it to the bottom. The dénouement was as startling as it was unforeseen. Young Jackson was cornered and finally confessed that he was, himself, the sole author of all his misfortunes. It seems that his standing had fallen so low that he would have been dropped from the class roll and in order to avoid the disgrace of dismissal, he had devised a scheme which was to let him out under circumstances rather heroic than humiliating. He reasoned that no one could possibly suspect him of mutilating himself, and as there was no one guilty of any misdemeanor, no one could be made to suffer, while the sympathy he would excite would either secure to him the advantage of a new trial, or raise up friends who would help him on in the world. The case of Sigmund Albert should be rigidly investigated. If there has been anything in the nature of Jew baiting, summary dismissals of the guilty parties may have the effect of convincing would-be future army officers that the Constitution of the United States means what it says when it guarantees religious freedom. If on the other hand, it appears that the three persecuted cadets, Albert, Affel and Huntzler, have proved themselves unfit for associates, or were liable to be dropped for other causes they should not be allowed to hide their misdeeds under a cloak of alleged religious persecution. "If there were but one Jew in the country he should be as safe as if the princely army of the Maccabees were here to enforce his rights," but let us be sure who is right before we begin a war dance.

MR. LLOYD OSBOURNE, formerly vice and deputy consul-general of the United States in Samoa, has corroborated the charges made by TOWN TALK a couple of months ago in reference to the troubles over the island throne. TOWN TALK declared that there was too much Christianity in the islands and that our representative in Samoa, the sanctimonious Mr. Chambers, was largely responsible for the row. He encouraged missionary meddling in the affairs of the natives and prevented the Samoans from electing their own king because the London Missionary society, for which he has the most profound admiration, had a candidate for the royal job in the person of an adopted son of Malietoa. Mr. Osbourne is authority for the statement that religion was at the bottom of the complications which resulted in the killing of British and American naval officers and which threatened to disrupt the amicable relations existing between Germany and the United States. Mataafa, the chief whose election was approved by the German consul, is a Roman Catholic convert; Tanu, the choice of the missionary society is a Protestant divinity student. The London Missionary society would not tolerate a Catholic king and Chief Justice Chambers, the head and front of the Samoan Band of Hope, was shocked at the thought of such a thing. Mr. Osbourne declares that Germany was right and the attitude of Herr Rose commendable and that the Americans and English fought side by side to inflict a sectarian rule upon an unwilling people. Now that President McKinley is mending his fences for the next campaign it would probably be well for him to give some attention to the case of Mr. Chambers. The chief justice has undoubtedly added some color to the black eye of the administration.

THE NEWSPAPER proprietors of San Francisco need not flatter themselves that they are the only magnates of the press who abuse one another in good strong English. The New York editors occasionally entertain their readers with verbal onslaughts of a highly personal character. The Herald recently roasted the Sun, and the Sun retaliated with an editorial paragraph that must have been written with a pen steeped in venom. "The Obscene Face of Bennett," is the caption of this somewhat brutal attack on the proprietor of the Herald. "It is useless to call his attention", says the Sun's editor, "to the fact that he is a treacherous and vulgar sort of a blackguard. He is quite used to that sort of thing, and besides we object to the use of strong language. Otherwise Bennett might be exhorted in terms that would make the cicatrix of well earned shame that he wears across his face even more livid than it was when he got it." There was a time in the field of journalism in this country when that sort of pungent personality promoted engagements on the field of honor, but nowadays the wild-eyed editor regards the pen as the most potent of all weapons, and he has too much contempt for the worthless carcass of an enemy to provoke a breach of the peace by anything more serious than splenetic disparagement in the columns of his paper. Yet it must be conceded that in the days of the fighting editor, the influence of the press was much wider than it is today. The editor that had the courage of his convictions in the days when he had to be prepared to support them behind a pistol inspired confidence and respect.

AFTER all there does not appear to be any occasion for the sympathy that has been aroused in some quarters for the poor benighted natives of the Philippine islands. The conquest of the islands does not involve bloodspilling and such sanguinary and tragic episodes as have been pictured from time to time in the press dispatches. Uncle Sam's soldiers are not engaged in testing the accuracy of their aim with human targets and President McKinley, through his representative, General Otis, is not endeavoring to coerce the Filipinos into submission. The excerpts from a soldier's letter published in TOWN TALK last week show that the army is engaged in a most peaceful mission, and that the natives are doing nearly all the shooting while the Americans lie down and wait for the ammunition to be exhausted. The mission of the soldiers is to spread the light of liberty and the virtues of a government for and by the people. It is a hazardous mission for the light is repugnant to the natives and they resent intrusion, with Mauser bullets. The spreading of the light is accomplished by posting the Peace Proclamation on the dead walls and telegraph poles, and the ammunition consists of barrels of paste and brushes. Verily it is a bill-posting job that the soldiers are engaged in, and as they are not union men President McKinley may have trouble later on with the labor organizations. Now that we know what the army is doing, and what sort of a policy is being pursued in the Philippines, we see no necessity of substituting a fighting general for the peaceful Otis. It would be absurd to send General Miles over to direct the maneuvers of the bill posters. No great amount of sagacity is required for the selection of advantageous space on the dead walls. General Otis is the right man in the right place and he should be kept supplied with paste.

"HATS OFF" is a book of the day, a burlesque of the foolish American women who are trying to ape the ways of titled royalty, and is particularly appropriate just now when the various societies of colonial dames and damsels are calling upon the courts to determine which of them has the right to the exclusive use of the precious adjective. In another century if the republic and the society hold together that long, there will, in all probability, be a similar dispute in this state as to which are the most native Native Sons and Daughters, though the ruction will be likely to confine itself to the female branch. Shall those whose forbears came "the Horn around" rank those whose ancestors arrived via the plains and the prairie schooner, or shall both give way to those who can count back to the days "before the Gringoes came"? Shall the progeny of the bankers, faro or otherwise, refuse recognition to those whose ancestors merely put money into the hands of the bankers, or shall the whole pioneer contingent stand aside and make way for those of later date who can claim "Paw was rich and maw was handsome and I am both"? Perhaps the greatest mistake made by the Fathers of the Republic was in not providing for titles and an aristocratic class. Had they done so we might have been spared the ludicrous spectacle of a professedly democratic people falling over themselves in their eagerness to bow down to anything even remotely connected with foreign nobility. We should not have our women figuring as Mrs. Captain and Mrs. Colonel, not to mention Mrs. Ex-Senator and Mrs. Ex-Pay Inspector; nor putting themselves forward in public lotteries at ten cents a chance for the doubtful honor of figuring as "Queen" of a fiesta, and later on, as an outcome, the principal in a sensational divorce suit. A lawfully established nobility with an Earl Marshall to pass upon the crests and coats of arms, would act as a bar to the usurpation of the devices of foreign titled families by the mere plutocrats and would be the means of saving us in many ways from making fools of ourselves. The fiesta, with its assumption of cheap royalty, appears already to have passed—requiescat in pace. Various excesses have been assigned, chiefly the Spanish war but a resident of a city which suffered long and was silent speaks thus: "The first year every one went in for a good time and all pulled together. The best people came to the front and dissatisfaction was kept pretty well in the background. The second year the committees began to see how they could save money for themselves. The grievance committee organized early and reported often. The decorations were mostly second hand and the whole thing was on a cheap scale. The third year the cheap politicians and the objectionable classes were very much in evidence. Fourth year the same, only more so. Fifth year—no fiesta."

TOWN TALK gratefully acknowledges the complimentary notice received in the August number of the Pacific Union Printer, apropos of the issuance of the Union label to this paper. The Printer is published by authority of the San Francisco Typographical union and is a splendid sample of the printers' art. Mr. Will J. French, the editor of the paper, deserves praise for the high standard to which he has raised his newsy publication.

AN INTERESTING EXCURSION

THE MONTEREY people are looking forward to a large exodus of visitors on Sunday, September third, the occasion of the excursion given by the Passenger Department of the Southern Pacific company. Hotel Del Monte, Monterey and Pacific Grove will be visited.

All sorts of attractive features have been arranged by the Monterey people to furnish entertainment for the excursionists upon their arrival. The program will have the element of novelty in all of its details.

The trains last year accommodated very comfortably an immense number of excursionists, and William H. Menton, the Southern Pacific's excursionist passenger agent, is making careful preparations that will render this year's excursion quite as successful as its predecessors.

The excursion will be on Sunday, Steptember third, and trains will leave the Third and Townsend street depot at eight o'clock and returning will leave Monterey at a quarter to five. The trains will be run through without stops.

A rate of two dollars for the round trip has been made by the company and it is probable that over two thousand people will avail themselves of the opportunity to visit Monterey.

THE ENGRAVING OF COOPER & CO., the Art Stationers, is not only superior to that of other houses, but is less in cost. Compare their figures —as for the rest, no charge if not satisfactory. Other houses also charge fifty per cent more for stamping note-papers and with inferior workmanship.

WAIFS

ONE MORN with quickened pulses did we stand
Where life's young fountains murmured of unrest;
The virgin vintage of her lips I pressed,
And lo! we passed to an enchanted land,
Where ruin's bridgeless gulf was rainbow spanned;
But when, that night, she wept upon my breast,
She seemed a love-wrecked angel on the strand
Of some strange star, wing-weary of joy's quest.

Not all unhappy, still we drift along,
Down the wild waters of love's waif-strown sea,
And closer do we cling when others tell
Of that dark whirlpool, in whose eddies strong,
Frail passion-freighted lovers, such as we,
Are dragged by under currents down to hell.

LOUIS A. ROBERTSON.

The Saunterer

THE AMATEUR SPORTS AT Del Monte opened yesterday with tennis and will extend over Sunday, the twenty-seventh. The golf matches will begin on Monday and for two days the links will be given over to the women wielders of the sticks. Miss Moffitt is still in the south, having added many laurels to those gained at the Fourth of July games, and she has sent word from Santa Catalina that it is not possible for her to enter for the Del Monte games. This is a sad disappointment, for those who did not get a chance to see her brilliant winning of the championship in July were looking forward to the August games as an opportunity of observing Miss Moffitt's prowess on the links. The golf events will be preceded by tennis and the pigeon shoot today and the latter sport continues to be popular in spite of the heavy scoring it received when first introduced at Del Monte, at the pen of Mrs. "Annie Laurie" Black, who denounced it for its cruelty to the harmless doves. Golf will consume four days, tennis one and a half and the pigeon shoot a day, while polo, bicycle and pony racing with steeple chasing will each be given a day, the yacht race to be the great finale. Ernest Wiltsee expects his Aggie will come in winner on the bay but I understand that Harry Simpkins has hopes of as roseate a hue for the success of his Duke. R. Barrett Fithian of Santa Barbara, who has been staying at the Palace, will take his lately purchased and newly rigged yacht to the South Seas and I understand he set sail yesterday expecting to be away for six months.

"The saleswoman often forgets to be a bored and disdainful goddess and arouses herself to be interested and helpful," says Annie O'Hagan in a descriptive article on "A Midsummer Afternoon in New York," in the August Munsey. It may probably be true of New York saleswomen but very rarely has one just cause of complaint of the shop assistants of San Francisco, who are uniformly obliging and attentive. A Californienne who made her first extensive visit to the east recently and who experienced the step-motherly hospitalities of all the large cities north of Baltimore and east from Chicago, wrote back: "If the policemen, conductors, clerks and sales-girls in San Francisco were as impertinent, indifferent and generally toploftical as those I have encountered since I left there they would, to quote the expressive slang of the street, 'get their heads punched.'"

I remarked a couple of weeks ago that there was in the elopement of Mrs. Hynes, the fat and voluptuous wife of Billy Hynes, with the featherweight cornetist a combination of the grotesque, the humorous and the pathetic. There was one incident of the affair which I failed to mention. It contributed to the combination and for picturesque impudence it has no parallel. Among the people assembled on the dock to bid farewell to Grennan was Billy Hynes who of course had no suspicion of his wife's presence in the vessel. After the gangplank was pulled up and the ship started on her journey Grennan raised his cornet to his lips and to the ears of the group on the dock floated the familiar tune, "Say au revoir but not good-bye."

"I am disheartened," said the bashful wooer, "I cannot think what is the first requisite to win my Lily's love."
"That's easy enough," said the seasoned benedict. 'One word answers it—opportunity."

Some time ago I took occasion to refer to the prevalence of inebriety in the school department. Since then I have learned that the principal of one of our grammar schools is in an abnormal condition when sober. The fumes of the flowing bowl befuddle his brain to such an extent that the boys of the school treat him with contempt and throughout the department the school is notorious for its lack of discipline. The teachers openly discuss his incompetency and marvel at the pull by which he is enabled to hold a position in which he is a disgrace to the department. They say that all that he does is to whine about the decreasing attendance, knowing that a consolidation

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco.

JOHN CAFFREY, Pacific Coast Representative.

of classes may result to the injury of his pocket. I understand that the school directors are aware of this principal's conduct and I wonder that he is tolerated. But there are all sorts of queer people in the school department. There is, for instance, a teacher who proudly proclaims that she is not an American, that this country is all wrong and that its schools and teachers are failures Moreover she asserts that she has no love for the flag and would not teach children to respect it. And there is at the head of a primary school a principal who belongs to womens' clubs that advocate purer air and more comfortable surroundings for working girls. Yet she has issued a ukase that no teacher in her school may sit down in the class room. She must be on her feet continually, walking up and down the aisles, bending over the children and watching their work.

Homebound on the Central Pacific in the Pullman.

Nellie (returning from boarding school): Oh, I shall never marry unless for love. Would you, Mrs. Bride?

Mrs. Bride (who has just taken a flying trip to Nevada): I am not sure. This makes my third—for love—in two years. Next time I may try money

---

Mr. Astor of New York and Mr. Drexel of Philadelphia are not the only Americans, it seems, who find this country not good enough for them. Tod Sloan has also lately aired his views to several New York reporters about life on this side opposed to life on the other side of the big pond. Tod says he has not yet decided to become a subject of the Queen but he thinks that Englishmen are "the real thing" and far superior in their turf tactics to men who race their horses in the United States. The Beresfords, Charles and George, are said by Tod to treat him as if he were one of their own sons and he thinks the Prince of Wales one of the jolliest fellows he has ever met. To a Sun reporter Tod remarked:

"I wish to say that on the way over I did not have anything to do with Senator Wolcott or that novelist. I did give the Austrian rider a few points on how to succeed in America, and on the last day I nodded to Pedlar Palmer. But I didn't speak to any of these people. I don't wish to be understood as declining to speak to all such persons. For instance, I talked with William C. Whitney. He told me that he was coming back to America next week. He is buying a good string of race horses over on the other side, and I think he is all right. He will have a good stable if he keeps on, and I shall speak to him when he returns to England."

He further said that though his name had been connected with those of several young Englishwomen, he has not yet decided to marry: "When a rich American girl marries an Englishman she usually gets a good title. I haven't figured out exactly whether or not a fellow gets a title with an English girl."

From these extracts I should judge that Mr. Tod Sloan was either joshing the Gotham newspaper men or else he has contracted a very serious case of inflated cranium.

Mr and Mrs. John Vance Cheney are mourning the loss of their daughter, Miss Janet Vance Cheney, who after a lingering illness passed away in San Diego about a fortnight ago. The Cheneys formerly resided in San Francisco where Mrs. Cheney became particularly prominent as the teacher of a new method of piano-playing. She was the originator of the little musical club called the Abbey Cheney Amateurs, of which her daughter Janet was one of the leading members. Also members of the club were Miss Helen Curtis, now Mrs. Thomas Magee; Miss Margaret Cameron, now Mrs. Smith, and the accompanist of the Hughes club across the bay; Miss Hilda Newman, who at present ranks among our best pianists; Miss Evelyn Henry, who is in New York now, studying vocal music with view to a professional career; Miss Martha Gross, now Mrs. Charles Lacey Plumb of Chicago; Miss Millicent Cosgrave, Miss Lillie Moulton and a few others whose names I forget. The Amateurs probably went out of existence after the loss of their teacher, for I have heard nothing of their work of late years. Mrs. Cheney went to Chicago to live, her husband becoming librarian of the Newberry library there. He had formerly been librarian of the free library of this city. As a poet John Vance Cheney is well known in the world of letters.

Last week it looked as if there would be no contest for the presidency of the Press club this year. Paul Cowles of the Associated Press was supposed to have a walk-over but now Jim Booth, formerly of the Report, is in the fight and there is a prospect of an interesting battle. Mr. Booth is a campaigner of no ordinary ability and he will infuse plenty of vim into the contest. He is popular in the chit-chat annex of the club and his friends have rallied around him. As an election without a contest for the presidency would not be a spirited affair, the members are rejoicing over Booth's entrance into the fight.

Quite a large party of deer hunters were at Tocaloma last week, among whom were Messrs. Al Miller, deputy sheriff, John Smith, Hon. G. Parks, assessor of Marin county, Sheriff William Taylor and party and supervisors Phelps and Black of San Francisco. These mighty hunters before the Lord—see account of Nimrod in Genesis—slew many a fine buck, and the little dépot platform was quite a spectacular proof of their prowess. A few members of the Country club had a battue on their preserves on Sunday a week ago and succeeded in killing three fine bucks. Trout and chub fishing are good and some considerable baskets of frogs are caught daily.

O'Hooley was slumbering on his beat but the words dropping from his lips in his dreams showed him to be a patron of the drama.

"Blanche Bates—Blanche bates 'em all," he said.

The stork has descended upon the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Patrick and both the young parents are rejoicing over the advent of the little one. Mr. Patrick is one of our best known young business men and his wife (May Daniel) was a popular member of the school department before her marriage.

Mrs S R Hall, 10 Kearny street, new Velvet Roses in beautiful shades and tints for fall wear.

Dr. CARL DEHMEL

(formerly of Berlin)

Surgeon Chiropodist and Masseur . . .

Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe Nails a Specialty

CONSULTATION FREE

EMPORIUM and GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR

Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

I am surprised to learn of the number of prominent San Franciscans who are arriving in and departing from this cosmopolitan city, writes my Chicago correspondent. The first two seen during the past fortnight were those clever pyrographists, the Misses Lillian O'Hara and Grace Livermore, who temporarily left their artistic Sutter street studio and have been among us sight-seeing and enjoying their well earned vacation. Moving with the noon-day throng in State street I passed two of your well known attorneys, Charles L. Ackerman and M. C. Sloss. One day last week as I was turning into Michigan boulevard I ran into Frank Jaynes, superintendent of the Western Union telegraph company. He was on his way to the company's office. Mrs. Jaynes accompanied her husband on his eastern trip. Seymour R. Church, the Sansome street merchandise broker, was noticed and sauntering leisurely along Monroe street, toward the department store of Seigel Cooper & Co., I found G. L. Rathbone, the genial secretary of Macondray & Co. He, like many others, was admiring the early fall styles now exhibited in the tradesmens' windows. Dr. John Gallwey stopped over a few days and made his headquarters at one of the fashionable hotels on the Lake front. August Schilling and Fred Frohman were here on business. J.L.Hess of the Werth-Emmet company is staying at the Great Northern. H. P. Taylor Jr. and Warren D. Clark of Williams, Dimond & Co. have left for the east. Mrs. A. B. Boldermann was here last week.

Los Angeles has been well represented in Chicago. E. W. Reynolds, J. W. Walton, Mrs. John W. Hinton and E. P. Johnson were all here recently. The city of Oakland is not far behind with Mrs. A. W. Brewer, Miss C. Young and James McCaw. Haywards sent us J. W. Strobridge and wife. John Marshall, I am told, is a proud man. Last week he was informed that a little girl baby had made her advent into his household. Mr. Marshall married the daughter of a prominent Denver merchant some five years ago. This is their first child. His former fellow employes in the office of the Royal Exchange assurance in Montgomery street will undoubtedly be showering the customary congratulatory letters upon him when they hear of this important event. Maud Chappelle—a former San Francisco contralto, now a resident of this city—has been engaged as soloist for the fall musical festival at Clear Lake, Iowa. Several other prominent musicians from here are also engaged, including L. Amato, the 'cellist.

Alfred Rulofson and daughter made a brief visit to Chicago this week and then pulled out for the east. Miss Rulofson is a strikingly handsome young woman and I understand possesses a voice of much sweetness. It is to be regretted that she did not stop over long enough to enjoy some of the excellent garden concerts we are having at present. The National Window Trimmers' association has been holding its annual convention here during the past week. An award of prizes was the final business of the convention. It is gratifying to know that a Sacramento boy, Charles W. Morton, carried off the diamond medal offered by the Chicago merchants. It is valued at five hundred dollars. I was surprised to see Tom Sharkey the other morning walking along the Lake Shore drive. Several friends accompanied him. J. C. Stubbs of the Southern Pacific company is at the Grand Pacific.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street. Our elegant new fall "dress hats" displayed this week.

How many Californians remember Margaret Hamilton of Napa? Very few, I will venture to assert. And yet it does not seem so many years ago since she was one of the most popular belles of the state. Maggie Hamilton was one of the advance guard of Californian heiresses that went to Europe to replenish the purses of the effete aristocracy. She married Sir Sidney Waterlow of Trosley Towers, Wrotham, Seven Oaks, Kent, and she is now the Duchess of York's most intimate friend. It was only the other day that I read in a London paper that Sir Sidney and his charming American wife were entertaining Ambassador Choate at their residence. And "among those present" were those other well known Californian representatives of the nobility, Lady Hesketh and C. P. Huntington's adopted daughter, Princess Hatzfeldt.

Lady Bache Cunard has returned to America and is now in the Newport swim. Lady Bache Cunard is none other than plain Miss Maude Bourke, that was, who once lived in Oakland. It was not so long ago that she was spoken of as the fiancée of Prince Poniatowski but that affair, owing to a financial difficulty, it will be remembered, did not come off. She is one of the American women who have made places for themselves in London society. Although she had many friends in New York before she went to London she was not in the ultra-fashionable set into which she has been welcomed at Newport since her return. She was not known as an heiress before her marriage and that element of most international marriages was lacking in her case, but having established herself in the exclusive set of London, she now has the entrée to the innermost recesses of Gotham's swagger circles.

The management of the Southern Pacific system is often censured for not producing luxuries and comforts for its patrons but there are other railroad magnates beside Mr. Huntington who are amenable to criticism. Take, for instance, Mr. Stetson of the North Pacific Coast road. His system is not so extensive that he can successfully plead oversight by way of extenuation of his delinquencies. If his road were used for the transportation of nothing but cattle or stetsons then there would be no occasion for complaint anent the ill-smelling and foul rookery yclept "Mount Tamalpais station." If there is a health officer in Marin county he should be censured for neglect of duty for not having long since condemned that rendezvous of disease-breeding germs. I know that Mr. Stetson is a very economical old gentleman and that he takes as good care of his quarters as an ordinary man does of his life, but something should be done to force him to heed the complaints of the patrons of his road. If he were compelled to spend twenty-four hours in the station he might possibly be aroused to the realization of its unfitness for the accommodation of human beings.

One of the features of the new charter is the augmenting of the duties and responsibilities of the

Engraved . . .
Wedding Announcements
and Invitations . . .
ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

district attorney. As a consequence the next district attorney is destined to be a man of considerable importance to the community. He will have supervision over the work of prosecuting offenders in the police courts and will therefore have the selection of the prosecuting attorneys. A district attorney who knows his business and is not subservient to the pull of the push may effect a most desirable reformation in police court circles. The democratic reformers appreciate the necessity of selecting a man for the job who possesses firmness of character and who cannot be swayed by political or other influence, and I have been informed that Charley Wesley Reed is their choice.

———

Here is the latest version of a recent episode which imparted a merry twinkle to the eye of the legal profession;

Mr. P——: I intend to withdraw from the firm.

Mr. McC——: And I, also, intend to withdraw from the firm.

Mr. E——: Gentlemen, the firm is dissolved for I have already withdrawn.

And thus it is that a man may display alacrity in grasping a situation without the aid of a diagram.

———

I am told by a lately returned traveler that the Castellanes still furnish considerable food for discussion, as le monde is always wondering what they are going to do next. As the Parisian law provides that a husband can only inherit personal and real property from a deceased wife, and is debarred from inheriting money, it is said that Castellane has persuaded his adoring wife to part with several hundred thousand dollars in the purchase of real estate, and in the erection of a magnificent residence, which is not however yet completed. Since the count persuaded her to dye her hair golden and paint her cheeks to simulate a blonde, tout Paris laughs at the unattractively bizarre appearance presented by la riche Americaine. And my informant tells me that Castellane is anything but a noble in the manner in which he conducts himself. His amours are notorious and he does not aim high but chooses the most ordinary type of soubrette and café chanteuse upon whom to lavish his attractions—and incidentally Anna Gould's money.

———

Fair Parisiennes are wearing the tightest of dress-skirts, the extreme of the fashion that I described some weeks ago as being so closely fitted to the figure as to cause the wearer extreme difficulty in sitting down. The skirts are made in two styles, either very tight to just below the hips and then flaring out with a wide flare, or else very tight to below the knees, when the flare becomes pronounced. My informant tells me that they are not wearing double skirts of different colors in Paris, as is the present mode here, but the costumes are all of one hue. Nevertheless, the tailor-gowns are so elaborately trimmed as almost to lose their identity as tailor-made.

———

And with the new gown, I am told by an occasional correspondent, the Parisienne has adopted a "new walk." This does not entail a swinging of the hips à la couchee-couchee, and long loping steps, the style introduced by Mrs. Leslie Carter. The new walk is designed to display to the utmost the beauty of the clinging tunic and flower-like skirt. The gait is easy to imitate and much easier to exaggerate. One must walk slowly, take extremely short steps and spring well on the ball of the foot. The models who display the new gowns at the dressmakers' shops in Paris have exaggerated this gait in the most ludicrous fashion. As they come toward one they appear to be doing a sort of dreamy dance in the nature of a cross between the cake walk and the danse du ventre. It is a most fetching performance and I expect to see the Trilby pedestriennes of a short time ago doing the Parisian step along the promenade before long.

———

When a woman who has been rapturously in love with her husband since their marriage and has been his constant companion in his travels all over the globe suddenly takes a notion to settle down in a suburban village and take up the breeding of prize bull pups as a pastime, her friends usually fancy something has occurred to upset the domestic harmony. Whatever the reason, such a chapter, I hear, has been written in the history of an ex-San Franciscan, an heiress of millions, who, before her second matrimonial venture with a New Yorker standing on the same financial basis as herself, achieved some notoriety by her romantic elopement with a local man about town who afterwards became noted on the turf. The lady has recently gone in for the breeding of prize canines on a large scale and is said to be most successful at it from both a monetary and artistic point of view. While she breeds bull-pups her husband is studying music in Paris, having a magnificent vocal organ which would easily win him fame on the stage. A correspondent writes me from Paris that the student of singing has lately made himself conspicuous by his attentions to a fair art student, a Californian girl who is a near relative to a man once occupying an important state office. This infatuation is said to be the talk of the students' quarter. The art student has an income of fair proportions that would enable her to live in good style, but lately her extravagances have brought her into a far more conspicuous position than that she formerly occupied. She drives about in a smart little cart behind a magnificent specimen of horseflesh, both these possessions being the envy of her less fortunate fellow students.

In all cases of physical and mental exhaustion the use of a little Jesse Moore Whisky will be found invaluable as a stimulant.

Self respect is on good terms with

The Old Government Whisky

Suit your taste—100% proof, bottled in bond; or 90% proof, Special Reserve, bottled at Distillery.

A wholesome stimulant—a nerve tonic.

San Franciscans will not be at all surprised to learn that the hit of the opera season in Berlin this year has been made by Théa Dorré. When the Tavary opera company sang at the Baldwin, Dorré was pronounced by every local critic, and by the public voice as well, to be the finest Carmen that had ever appeared here. Otto Florsheim, the famous Berlin critic, wrote to the Musical Courier that he considered only one Carmen had ever surpassed Madame Dorré, and that one is Calvé's. Dorré is a Chicago woman, a slightly built brunette, very graceful and the possessor of wonderful talent as an actress. As a singer she is not especially great but her Carmen won everybody's admiration for its fidelity to the author's conception of the character. It may be of interest to many to learn that in private life the bewitching Dorré is Mrs. Bailey.

When Barron Berthald, who is singing at the Tivoli now but who, I am told, will later go east to accept the position of tenor in the Castle Square opera company, decided to elope from comic opera into grand, it is said his decision was the cause of not a little bickering between managers. Berthald had been singing the role of Prince Charlie in "Rob Roy" and was the idol of all the matinee girls in the big cities where the company appeared. Therefore when Damrosch coaxed him away from Manager Whitney it is easily understood that the American's wrath arose against both Damrosch and the tenor. Nevertheless Teutonic firmness won the day and Berthald had his wish of returning to the higher ground of grand opera after his long series of triumphs in the lighter work.

While Americans are growing more strict in their drawing of caste lines, my friends in London write me that it is quite the reverse over there. Once upon a time the London season was open only to people with titles or commoners with pedigrees of blue dye, while the Morning Post—the paper which chronicles the doings of swelldom—would not have thought of mentioning the names of any but the givers of most exclusive functions. Now, it is a case of nous avons changé tout cela. As one writer puts it, "the social fringe is broken through." The barrier has been boldly leaped by the nouveau riche and it is the poor relation who has been obliged to step aside to let the newcomer have free rein and a clear road. If you can entertain in a truly entertaining manner, you need show no genealogical tree to the London swim. Give the women a chance to show their gowns and meet some eligible men, and give the men something to amuse themselves with and a liberal supply of liquid refreshment and your house will be packed with a smart crowd at every reception. Money talks just now in London, whether provincial or American gold, and the woman who can give a novel entertainment is sought after, whoever her grandfather was.

It will be remembered that a certain lady of aristocratic lineage, whose death is still fresh in the minds of Londoners, until the day of her death kept to her resolution of never asking people who were in trade, or Americans, or Jews to her parties. But she was considered a back number by the Prince of Wales and his set. Americans are just now—in spite of the fiasco William Waldorf Astor has made in trying to gain entrance to the inner circle—floating on the very highest wave of English favor. Lady Randolph Churchill, Mrs. Arthur Paget, the Duchesses of Manchester and Marlborough, Mrs. Mackay, Mrs. Ronalds Mrs. Cavendish-Bentinck and Lady Essex are all of the nation excluded by the aristocratic lady referred to from her parties. And if one cares to include a stage favorite, who is more popular in London just now than Cora Urquhart Potter? Bohemianism is the proper thing in London and to be a bohemian of the simon pure quality you must be gifted with brains. Money alone will not carry you to social popularity. The social aspirant must be clever. It is well understood, from the prince downward, that to be a favorite host or hostess you must be able to amuse your guests. If a native Briton cannot do this, then a cleverer foreigner may shove him aside.

How different this is in the United States at the present time. In New York the talk is all on the pattern of Lady Macbeth's monologue—blood—blood—blood. Of course this means blood and money. But in San Francisco never was the time when money's voice was more loudly heard. The real aristocracy of our city, the old-timers of southern or eastern birth, have been pushed out of sight by the plutocracy, the descendants of hardworking parents who slaved that their sons and daughters might have money to burn. The plutocracy contains many very worthy young people but there are others of these money-burning sons and daughters who are the reverse of gentlepeople. They are loud, vulgar in speech and action, modeling their follies apparently upon the characters in the cheap novel of the day. They flaunt their ill-breeding in public places and at the summer resorts this season they have been particularly noticeable. However, I am glad to be able to say that these specimens of our golden youth are not in a majority.

Just the thing to take camping, a bottle of Chapin and Gore's old Reserve Bourbon.

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY
12 years old before being bottled
Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers
412 Front St., S. F.
Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

If you can afford it
DRINK
Jesse Moore Whisky

SHOES MADE TO ORDER
Hand Sewed, $5.50 Repairing Done Nicely
Machine Sewed, $3.50
Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold Cheap.
Telephone Polk 18 T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

LEE D. CRAIG
NOTARY PUBLIC AND COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS
316 MONTGOMERY STREET, Bet. Pine and California
San Francisco, Cal

"A woman has to possess a positively angelic temper if she can smile sweetly when a man in the street car puts his wet umbrella against her white piqué frock," says the Baltimore Telegram. But just imagine the joy of living in a section where wet umbrellas come in the white piqué season! Come over here where we look to the almanac, not the barometer, for a weather guide, and the umbrella goes into retirement from May day till Thanksgiving.

I hear that Mr. and Mrs. Hofmann (Gerda Wismer) are spending their honeymoon quietly in a small Pennsylvania village. Mr. Hofmann, who is first violin of Walter Damrosch's orchestra, also being manager of the organization, is said to be willing for his wife to continue in her career, which has thus far promised so brilliantly. Therefore Gerda Wismer will continue with Daly's company of players until the close of her present contract.

Mrs. H. C. Porter is spending the summer at Hotel El Carmelo, Pacific Grove.

Among the debutantes scheduled for the fall season is Miss Azelia Keyes, a granddaughter of Judge Clinton Hastings and of General Keyes. As the offspring of two such illustrious grand sires and with Mrs. Major Darling for an aunt this young woman should attract some attention in the swagger set. But more important than all, not excepting her charms of person and vivacious nature, is her financial stability, for Miss Keyes is an heiress with simoleons galore. She has just returned from the east where her education has received its finishing touches and she is now adequately equipped for social conquests.

"Poetic license, of course," said Scribble as he wound his arm around Miss Poster's slender waist.

Hastily disengaging herself from his embrace, she replied haughtily:

"For my part, I do not agree with those who would give entire liberty to the press."

Mrs. E. B. Crocker was the guest of honor at a "ladies' social" given by the Elks of Sacramento the other night. Mrs. Crocker has deeded to the Elks her magnificent residence in Sacramento for a home, and the Elks are very much elated over the generous gift. Mrs. Crocker is not the only benevolent woman who has been deeply impressed by the grand principles of the order of Elks. Mrs. Jane Stanford's interest was aroused a couple of years ago at a memorial service held by San Francisco lodge, and since then she has more than once testified to her admiration for the order. If women were eligible to membership Mrs. Stanford would become one of the most enthusiastic Elks in the country.

Reel Terry, the campaign spell binder and raconteur, has discovered a cure for the cocktail habit. He declares that it is much more effective than the gold cure. Reel discovered the cure by accident, and he charges nothing for it. There was a time, not long ago, when Reel Terry found great delight in fanning the flame of conviviality with the wing of friendship, but now the cocktail route holds no attractions for him. Mineral water is his staple libation. And he attributes his change of thirst to a well developed case of rheumatism. He declares that there is nothing more destructive to a thirst for alcohol than an old reliable case of inflammatory rheumatism, one that is highly suggestive of elephantiasis. That is what he had a short time ago, and he now recommends it as the remedy for inebriety. "Innoculate yourself with inflammatory," says Reel, "and you'll never want any more booze."

The unfitness of I. W. Lees for the office of chief of police has once more been demonstrated by his handling of the case of Augustus Howard, the Australian swindler. The plain facts of the case are as follows. The chief of police was notified of a crime and was informed of the identity of the criminal. It was his duty to make an arrest, but for so doing he would have received nothing but his salary. By constituting himself a collector he recovered a large sum of money and permitted the criminal to escape. He certainly received a part of the recovered "swag" for Chief Lees is not in business for his health. He has grown wealthy by just such practice. I was not surprised that he permitted Howard to escape. I can only marvel at the mysterious influence which he exerts to hold his job in the face of his mephitic record and manifest unfitness. The superior respectability of Police Commissioners Alvord and Tobin is all that restrains me from suspecting that behind his "pull" is something akin to blackmail.

The automobile does not appear in our streets with the regularity that should be the case, judging by the

A delightful hot drink may be made with the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky and the usual hot water, sugar and a little lemon skin.

LADIES ARE COMMENTING

about the magnificent line of switches I carry and the very moderate prices I charge.

In fact, no store in town gives such values or shows such an array of hair ornaments.

G. LEDERER
123 Stockton St.

The Laxative Liver Lozenge

PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable.

PRICE 25 CENTS

CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, - 139 Powell St
W. W. STOCKER.

Utica Cleansing Compound and Utica Compound Paste.....

TRADE MARK TIACU

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society, 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

This compound is made of pure and unadulterated drugs
Used for Baths and Shampoo it will make the skin soft and white.

For Swollen and Painful Feet it is unrivaled.

For Poison Oak and Prickly Heat it is a sure remedy.

Suitable for cleansing anything.

SAMUEL SEYMOUR,
Pacific Coast Agent

21 SPEAR ST. S. F.

way the fad for this mode of locomotion is raging in the east. It did not surprise me to learn that the most enthusiastic of the automobilists at Newport is Mrs. Herman Oelrichs. Tessie Fair was always known to be an enthusiast in every new fad and when bicycles came into fashion she and her sister were almost the first to set the fashion in society of being hostesses at bike parties. When it was the fad to belong to a mandolin club, the walls of the Fair residence at the corner of Pine and Jones streets used to reverberate to the tum-te-tum of stringed instruments. And so it was with every novelty. Somebody, apropos of the automobile said to me:

"Yes it ought to, but it most always doesn't."

And a friend writes me from the east of two ambitious automobilists who have had much pleasure with their machine. But the other night they could not make it move a step and now they call it the "naughty-mobile."

"You say that he got a model wife?"
"Yes she has posed for every artist in town."

I hear that the De Youngs are entertaining at their country place in Marin county a guest from New York, no other in fact than Mrs. Charles T. Yerkes. This lady is passing the summer on the coast and her husband will join her here later on. Mrs. Yerkes is a woman whose name has been very much in the newspapers for the past six years, and she is the second wife of the Chicago millionaire, Charles T. Yerkes, the man who served a term in Sing-Sing but did not lose business prestige thereby. After startling Chicago by his limitless expenditures, Mr. Yerkes and his wife decided to storm New York where they built themselves a palatial home. It may not be generally known here that Frank Unger is now the major domo of Mrs. Yerkes, a position he formerly filled in the home of the Harry Gilligs. I outlined the duties of the major domo some weeks ago—he is quite a functionary in the habitations of new New Yorkers.

Quoi qu'il en soit, Charles T. Yerkes, when you come down to the fact of ancestry, does not belong to that beneficently intrusive class, the new rich. Mr. Yerkes' grandfather, Silas Yerkes, was a Quaker of considerable prominence, and one of his forefathers was the first burgess of Germantown. Another of his Pennsylvania kin came over with William Penn, and I do not know of a New Yorker who can show a clearer claim to American sangre azul than this. A friend of mine once dropped into the studio of Müller-Ury, the New York artist, and was greatly attracted by two portraits he saw there. They had been enlarged from old miniatures, and my friend was told that they were to be placed in the gallery of Charles T. Yerkes, the millionaire. The portraits were of Silas Yerkes and his wife, the Quaker grandparents of the ex-Chicagoan.

Something that will interest San Franciscans is the fact that Mrs. Yerkes has taken as her protegée the daughter of Frank Unger. This young girl, who is said to be a fac simile of her mother when the latter was Minnie Buchanan, possesses marked artistic talent which she is having cultivated in Paris. Mrs. Yerkes is very liberal to her protegée and few students are surrounded by such luxury as is Miss Unger's lot. Her mother, Mrs. Arthur Jules Goodman, is at present in London with her husband. The artist has been doing much clever work for the magazines lately and Mrs. Goodman is, I hear, among the Americans who have managed to please the London taste in stories.

Among those who will appear in the cast of "A Bachelor's Honeymoon" at the California next week will be young William Brewer. Mr. Brewer, whose friends call him "Billy," has been an actor off and on for quite a few years and he is the possessor of considerable ability for character work. I remember having seen him first in the character of the violinist in "The Dancing Girl" at the Baldwin when the A.M. Palmer company produced that powerful play. Billy Brewer's part was a small one but he did full justice to all there was in it. Later I saw him in one of the plays produced by Lillian Beddard at the Bush street theatre, and afterwards young Brewer appeared at the California in a production of "Trilby." He is very versatile and has a voice capable of most pleasing modulations; his elocution is admirable. The young actor is a son of Dr. Brewer, the well known dentist, and the family formerly resided in Sacramento. Miss Elizabeth Brewer was married a few months ago to the attorney, James S. Spilman.

Mrs. Lily Langtry having captured a twenty-eight year old lover for advertising and other purposes, indignantly denies that there is great disparity between their ages. People of good memory who recall the period of her advent to London estimate that about forty-seven summers have passed over her head, but she denies having passed her thirty-ninth year. It is over fifteen years since she made her first appearance in this city and she was far from being a dubutante at that time. She had had her domestic experience, and besides having spent a couple of seasons in the drawing-rooms of London, she had grown tired of the Prince of Wales' companionship and had been recognized for a couple of years as the chère amie of Freddy Gebhardt. Mrs. Langtry is the daughter of the Very Reverend Corbet Le Breton, Dean of Jersey, who some years prior to his death was inhibited from all ecclesiastical functions by the late Bishop Winchester on account of his drunken habits. Like all the Le Bretons he was a very handsome man. In 1868 Lily Langtry was a big-limbed, clumsy, hoydenish maiden, with gigantic feet and bulging calves, and she had that peculiar, clumsy walk of the Jersey and Norman peasant which despite years of training is still quite noticeable.

What! you not in the forties yet?
Now, Lil, come off, dear girl.
Why, you were in the Prince's set
And made things hum and whirl
Nigh thirty years ago—I'll bet.

Old Papa Time's been kind, you know,
Since you left Jersey isle;
For though you've had all kinds of beaux
And made them spend their pile,
You still, by Jove! look comme il faut.

Age has not withered your fair face
Nor custom staled your work;
You've gone a very rapid pace
With Britisher and Turk,
And still, old girl, you're in the race.

On September seventh, eighth and ninth the courts of Del Monte will be the scene of the tenth annual tournament of the double championship of the Pacific states. The winners of the all-comers will be called upon to play Sam and Sumner Hardy, the present champions. The championship match will take place on Saturday afternoon, all matches will be the best three out of five vantage sets. Handsome cups will be given by the Hotel Del Monte to the double champions of the coast. First and second prizes will be awarded to the winners of the all-comers. A consolation tournament will also be held for which prizes will be offered. The ladies' singles tournament for the championship of the Pacific states will also be held at Del Monte on September eighth and ninth, all matches to be the best two out of three vantage sets. The winners of the ladies' all-comers will be called upon to play Miss Marion Jones, the present champion, for the championship of the Pacific states. Entries will close September fifth.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

Mr. and Mrs. D. O'Leary (Alice Rix) will spend some months in San Francisco.

Some men are natural born cads. By reason of their possession of aristocratic parents and the fact that they were born with the proverbial golden spoon between their baby lips, they ought to be gentlemen. Let the student of atavism say why they are cads, instead. I am moved to these observations by something that was told me lately about a young man whose people are ranked high in society. Many moons ago the engagement was announced in all the daily and weekly newspapers of the youth and a very beautiful young woman, a divorcée, who was perhaps ten years his better in point of age. The young man did not, at the time, deny the engagement and he continued to be seen abroad in the society of his reputed fiancée. But the wedding did not come off and now I hear that the lady in the case has another admirer, a local lawyer, and it is tacitly understood by their friends—though it has not been formally announced—that a matrimonial engagement exists. The youth of wealth and lineage who once sunned himself in the lady's smiles is now being desperately angled for by a young society girl with a plain name but a pretty face. The other day some one was talking to the youth about his former fiancée.

"Fiancée?" he said. "I was never engaged to her. I don't know what possessed her to send such a story to the papers."

And that is why I say this wealthy, well-born youth is a cad.

Far different was his conduct from that of one of our young club men, who was married a few years ago to a charming woman. Before this he had been engaged to a girl who, though in society, was known not to possess a reputation sans reproche. At least everybody knew it but her fiancé, and nobody had the courage to tell him that the girl he adored was not like the psalmist's heroine whose price was above rubies. About a month before his marriage day there arose one who was sufficiently the man's friend to tell him the truth about his fiancée. I believe the person who told was one of the girl's relatives. Anyhow, this was at a day when women with pasts were not such ordinary occurrences as they are nowadays, and in fact were not even popular appendages to society. So the marriage was announced as "off," but as it was given out that the man had been jilted by his bride-elect at the eleventh hour, no one suffered but the deserted bridegroom. And all of his friends rejoiced when, his wounded heart healed, he finally married a woman of high standing, morally, socially and financially.

By the death of ex-Congressman Piper the game of poker lost one of its most ardent votaries. Plain draw poker was about the only thing that could separate Piper from his money. But he did not play for large stakes. He was a constant attendant at the poker parties of Mrs. Howard Coit in the Palace hotel. The late Judge Eugene Garber also played in the game in Mrs. Coit's rooms and there are several prominent old Californians who seldom miss an evening's pastime there. Although Mrs. Coit is now an aged woman she is still possessed of all the rollicking spirit that made her so popular in the early days when as Lillie Hitchcock she was known as the woman that "ran with the old machine."

In the divorce court notes in Sunday's paper I noticed the filing of a suit by Gertrude L. Gear against George D. Gear; cause, desertion. Mrs. Gear is a sister of Leigh Larzalere, the commission merchant, and Mr. Gear is the attorney who has just arrived from Honolulu en route to Washington, D. C. He has been chosen by the Hawaiians to represent them before the United States Supreme court in a test case to decide whether the American Constitution is in force in the islands. Gear represented the London Savages in the now almost forgotten Blythe case.

The death of Henri F. Emeric forms another chapter in a life history that would offer a splendid field for the novelist. Until others of the characters in the romance have passed away, the story cannot be said to be finished. Mr. Emeric did much for California. He improved the game laws and he added to the game itself, bringing terrapin and other delights of epicurean palates to swell the list of Californian products. His life was broad, full of interest, but it cannot be said to have been a happy one. He had just

Two Noted Resorts both under one management, noted for its efficiency. Representing the mountain interior and seaside of Central California.

THE . . . CELEBRATED Hotel del Monte, MONTEREY, . . . CAL.

"The queen of American watering places." Only 3½ hours from San Francisco by express trains of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY. OPEN ALL THE YEAR.

RATES MODERATE.

The Tavern of Castle Crag and Soda Springs

320 miles from San Francisco, on the famous SHASTA ROUTE within sight of MOUNT SHASTA and the wonderful CASTLE CRAGS, altitude 2,100 feet.

Rates: by the day, $2, $2.50, $3.
By the week, $14 to $17.50.
Bath rooms extra.

Season, June to September

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION ADDRESS GEO. SCHONEWALD, MANAGER
Hotel del Monte, Monterey, Cal., or Tavern of Castle Crag, Castle Crag, Cal.

secured a measure of happiness, practically beginning his life anew with a beloved bride, when his fate willed that death should call him. One must always feel regret when a rich man dies. A poor man's existence has such a narrow span but to the man of boundless fortune a truly Monte Cristo-like future is opened.

I remember the first time I saw Mrs. Emeric—not the present widow, who was a Miss Dorn, but the first wife. It was at a meeting of the board of directors of the Little Sisters' Infant Shelter. Mrs. Emeric had been induced by her adopted daughter, Mrs. Siegfried, to come to the meeting and the board of directors was mightily glad that she came. For they had never met such liberality before in one person. Mrs. Emeric was nothing if not generous. I could easily name several young women who owed the excellence of their wardrobes for many years to the kind purse of the woman who, though rich in this world's goods, was yet so poor in that which makes life worth the living. Beautiful with a rich brunette complexion, brilliant dark eyes and a voluptuous form, no one would have fancied that this woman, the picture of health, was afflicted with an incurable disease that was eating her very life away. The Emerics had no children, so they made protegés of Mrs. Emeric's relatives and to these the unhappy woman was kinder than any mother could be. One of her nieces, Irene Stearns, was married within the last two years to Mrs. Emeric's brother, Howard Barbier. Her sister Lorena, better known as "Birdie" Barbier, was the one who at her death received all the property Harry Emeric had deeded to his wife. The suit Mr. Emeric brought to recover this property was later compromised but Miss Barbier still remains in the enjoyment of a considerable income. She is a very beautiful young woman and knows how to enjoy life.

Of the many versions that have been published regarding the reason of the disagreement between Harry Emeric and his wife's sister is one that I have never seen in print. This is to the effect that Miss Barbier was engaged to a young man, a member of a local firm of carpet manufacturers, and this matrimonial understanding was not pleasantly regarded by the fair Birdie's brother-in-law. As she was a resident of his home and he presumably filled the relation of guardian toward her, he though he had a right to say who should be the man to become his ward's husband. The story goes that Miss Barbier rebelled at Mr. Emeric's espionage. There was a huge split in their amicable relations and the young woman was ordered to leave her brother-in-law's house. This she did, with alacrity, and started a ménage of her own. But when the Emerics moved to the Palace hotel, I am told by one who knows all the persons concerned in the story, that Birdie used often to visit her sister. She arranged her visits so that they would be at times when Mr. Emeric was not in, and Miss Barbier would send up word to her sister that she was downstairs in the reception room. Upon these occasions, Mrs. Emeric never failed to give her sister subtantial presents, for she would never let her favorite want for anything.

The former Mrs. Emeric had a desire, before her health became such that she could no longer cherish any ambitions for herself, to shine as a social leader. There is really no reason in the world, save that she did not go the right way to achieve her wish, why she should not have succeeded. Of humble origin and limited education herself, she had married a man of good family. And their wealth should have been their passport into local society, which can certainly not be termed exclusive. They moved into a comfortable residence in Geary street near Van Ness avenue and Mrs. Emeric proceeded to entertain. Some people of prominence attended her parties but a good many others did not. She entertained most lavishly, gave dinners, opera and theatre parties and all sorts of delightful functions carried out in the perfection of detail. She even supplied the gowns, I am told, of certain young women who attended her parties. However I have never heard that any one of these girls has ever since expressed a word of gratitude toward her benefactress.

A feature of the Emeric dinners was a table service of solid gold, the only one, I have heard, of this rich metal to be seen on this coast. I do not know who has it now. It seems a thousand pities that this generous hostess should not have had her ambitions for social prominence realized. Nevertheless it was through the envy of one of her own relations that her hopes were dashed to the ground. Malicious stories were put in circulation, and even found their way into one of our weekly papers which is not scrupulous as to how it gets its news or whether the news is true. The stories were not bad, but they were dictated by malice and reflected, usually sarcastically, upon the manner in which "a certain hostess" in "a Geary street residence" entertained. It was said spiritualistic seances were often the ordre du soir, and that sort of thing. By and by they stopped—but the damage had been done. And it was shortly after that Mrs. Emeric went abroad, accompanied by her physician, Dr. Terrill, to see what could be done for her by foreign medicos. The result of that trip and her return to San Francisco to undergo an operation here, are well remembered. The operation was successful but the shock of the earthquake that at the moment the surgeon had completed his work, shook the city was too much for the patient in her weak, nervous state, and she died.

First reporter: I know why Chief Lees didn't capture the thieves that stole the box of sovereigns from the Mariposa.
Second reporter: Why?
First reporter: He forgot to throw himself into a hack.
Second reporter: What a fatal oversight!

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Shumate have returned from their wedding trip and while awaiting the completion of their new home will reside with Mr. Ortmann, Mrs. Shumate's father, at the corner of California and Scott streets.

"JURANCON" IS "IT."

TOM McCANN, the avant courier of the Livermore vineyard, has just returned from a tour of the north and middle west, which he made for the purpose of directing attention to the Chauché & Bon wines. He says that the famous "Jurancon" is now the popular table beverage in all the leading clubs and restaurants from Portland to Chicago.

An advance shipment of Fall Dress Goods will be one of the principal attractions at the establishment of J. J. O'Brien & Co. during the week commencing August twenty-first, and ladies desirous of purchasing the latest and most desirable dress goods fabrics at moderate prices should not fail to visit the old established firm. Another attraction at O'Briens' is their complete stock of Boys' and Children's clothing which parents will find on sale at remarkably moderate prices. The Boys' School Suits which O'Briens' are selling at from $1.60 to $4.95 are exceptionally good values.

World of Law

THE COURT VACATION IS practically over now and all the departments of the Superior court will shortly be in full swing. Judge Hebbard is taking a late rest and will not be seen on the bench till next month; but the others have had their fun and are prepared to settle down to the hard work that will be their lot between now and Christmas. Various judges have various methods of enjoying their ease. Judge Hunt is the busiest man alive on his vacation. He simply cannot rest a minute. He is up with the lark, on his feet the whole day and is the hardest man in the state to tire. He had a varied experience this year. At first he went to Boca, nine miles east of Truckee on the main line, and stayed awhile at the hotel there. He used to swear by the Boca hotel, from the excellence of its table and the care of his guests taken by mine host McDonald. The old Scotchman, however, who so pleased his customers that so great an authority as Admiral Beardslee made especial mention of his establishment, has left Boca and the hotel is now in the hands of a younger man, who, up to now, has not succeeded in so well satisfying the fastidious tastes of the Truckee river anglers.

This fact, and also the fact that the fish were few and far between and the anglers for them were legion, caused Judge John Hunt to pull up stakes after a brief stay and seek pastures new. He went to Webber lake, where he got better sport. But when his fishing trip was over the judge returned to San Francisco, got Mrs. Hunt and took her up to Klamath hot springs, where the last remnant of flesh that hung upon his gaunt frame was boiled out. It was a long cross-country journey and Judge Hnnt reports the weather at boiling point. The world is very small, so it was not surprising that the famous angler should meet acquaintances at odd nooks and corners in his travels through Siskiyou county. He brought back pleasant stories of a pleasant outing.

The whole detective force has been employed in an attempt to discover what Judge Coffey did with himself during his vacation. The man whose city address has never yet been divulged takes a delight in burying himself far from the madding crowd. He is now back and rubs his hands and chuckles when asked how he enjoyed himself. "From east to west, from north to south, o'er hill and dale, by land and sea we roamed," says His Honor, referring to his nephews and himself. That is all he will say. Some had it that Judge Coffey had been to New York and had gathered a fresh stock of legal knowledge from an observation of the institutions and customs of the east. The knowing ones, however, declare that the probate judge did not leave the state but tramped on foot through Lake county, taking in the various resorts on the way.

If that is so I wonder Judge Coffey did not meet his brother of Department 11, Judge William P. Lawlor, who also footed it through Lake county. They say the latter was the most picturesque object the world ever set eyes on. "I travel alone to get acquainted with myself," he said, as he tramped his Weary Walker way. Some idea of his plight may be gathered from the fact that he was refused admission to the hotel at Highland springs. "We take no tramps," said the man. Now that sort of thing would irritate any man differently constituted to Judge Lawlor. Not so the little judge, who chuckled merrily to himself as he gradually overcame the scruples of the bath attendant with regard to some harmless and decidedly necessary ablutions. He enjoyed himself to his heart's content and is now back on the bench, dispensing justice in his usual firm, vigorous, fearless, open way. Despite his short experience he is all there.

It seems only too certain now that the Botkin case must be reversed and the murderess of poor Mrs. Dunning awarded a new trial for the very same reason that caused the Supreme court to grant a new trial to Albert Hoff. Judge Carroll Cook reluctantly admits that he delivered the very same long-winded and pointed charge upon the subject of circumstantial evidence in the one case that he used in the other. Chief Lees is looking very glum at the prospect of another trial, with witnesses that may or may not be induced to undertake a second time the long journey from Delaware state. Judge Murphy is no less dissatisfied and is now concentrating all his energies upon an elaborate motion for a rehearing of the Hoff case. He will point out that the objectionable instructions have been used over and over again and will endeavor to show the tribunal of last resort that terrific harm will be done in the event of its refusal to reconsider.

There are lots of 'A. A.' brands of whisky, but only one Jesse Moore 'A.A.'

"Ain't there anyway to get the case to the Supreme court at Washington?" asked Chief Lees the other day

"Afraid not," replied his legal adviser.

"Why," blurted out the chief, "there are thirty odd kinds of habeas corpus. I'll swear we can use one." The chief is an adept on habeas corpus and forgets that it is the prisoner's remedy, not the state's.

Poor Supreme court! It has some hard tasks set it. It is confronted with a dilemma in the charter cases. In order to decide that the county clerk, the recorder, sheriff, coroner, district attorney and public admiuistrator must come up for election again next November it must "skin back" its decision in the case of Kahn v. Sutro. It must say, too, whether the charter supersedes the county government act, and no matter what its ultimate decision it cannot fail to get itself cordially disliked.

One eminent believer in good government said the other day that in his opinion the Supreme court would rise above small technicalities in dealing with the new charter. "They will say," quoth he, "that the people's will expressed at the polls and in the legislature must be supported even if the means to arrive thereat has been somewhat irregular." Then, in the next breath, the same man said that when the people had had two years of their coveted charter they would be up in arms against it. Time will show; it is hard to please a fickle public for all time.

Judge Wallace is mentioned as a democratic candidate for district attorney. Ye gods! The dignified judge, so conscious and so tenacious of his power, to be willing to find himself in the position of an advocate before some younger member of the judicial fraternity. Nothing but a judgeship, and of the Supreme court at that, would serve to atone for his Honor's defeat of November last, it was thought. And now district attorney! It will be justice of the peace next. His ex-Honor must be tired of a life of luxury and ease between his Van Ness avenue mansion and the card-tables of the Pacific-Union club.

Another eminent jurist, Justice of the Peace Joseph E Barry, has been calling attention to himself of late. He passed some weeks at Highland springs, where he was the adored of the fair sex. He spouted eloquently and vigorously upon all occasions on the subject of his great profession, having an eye to a place among the fortunate four who will be elected superior judges in 1900. One night he was heard to observe:

"I am the only jurist (save the mark!) in San Francisco who has always consistently fought the Southern Pacific!"

Now, Uncle Collis, get out your drag-net and sweep this young man in. For years you have silenced the tongues of your most dangerous opponents by placing their names on your pay-roll. Look out for Joseph Barry before he gets you in his clutches.

—o—

My friend Mr. William S. Barnes, the eminent ex-district attorney, has been distinguishing himself as a criminal lawyer up country. A man named Emerson killed a man named Rogers in Tuolumne county and hearing of Captain Billy's wondrous prowess he sent for him. Terms were arranged, and the genial Billy exerted all his forensic and strategic powers on his client's behalf. But country juries are hard game. The man was found guilty of murder in the first degree, with the death penalty. What throws the extra ha-ha! on to Billy B. is the fact that this was the first conviction in forty years in Tuolumne county.

—o—

I have been to Santa Cruz for a few days. While there I inspected the courthouse and found it to be an inoffensive, unbusiness-like sort of place. The town is agog with the expectation of a second trial of Plyler, the mayhem fiend. It may come to nothing, as the miserable victim of the outrage has fled the city, gone to hide himself God knows where, away from the taunts of friend and foe. THE COURT REPORTER.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last fifteen years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

BUT NOT THE LAST

AWAY with your fictions of flimsy romance;
Those tissues of falsehood which folly has wove!
Give me the mild beam of the soul-breathing glance,
Or the rapture that dwells on the first kiss of love.

Ye rhymers, whose bosoms with phantasy glow,
Whose pastoral passions are made for the grove
From what blest inspiration your sonnets would flow,
Could you ever have tasted the first kiss of love!

If Apollo should e'er his assistance refuse,
Or the Nine be disposed from your service to rove,
Invoke them no more, bid adieu to the muse,
And try the effect of the first kiss of love!

I hate you, ye cold compositions of art!
Though prudes may condemn me, and bigots reprove,
I caught the effusions that sprang from the heart
Which throbs with delight to the first kiss of love!

Your shepherds, your flocks, those fantastical themes,
Perhaps may amuse but they never can move.
Arcadia displays but a region of dreams:
What are visions like these to the first kiss of love?

Oh! cease to affirm that man, since his birth,
From Adam till now, has with wretchedness strove:
Some portion of paradise still is on earth,
And Eden revives in the first kiss of love.

When age chills the blood, when our pleasures are past,
For years fleet away with the wings of a dove,
The dearest remembrance will still be the last,
Our sweetest memorial the first kiss of love. BYRON.

Dramatic World

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. The Miller company in a repertory of the successes of their season.

CALIFORNIA. "London Assurance," "As You Like It" and Ibsen—Blanche Bates shows her versatility.

ALCAZAR. "Under Two Flags"—Ouida's old novel in dramatic version.

TIVOLI. "Fidelio" and "Il Trovatore"—interesting and well sung.

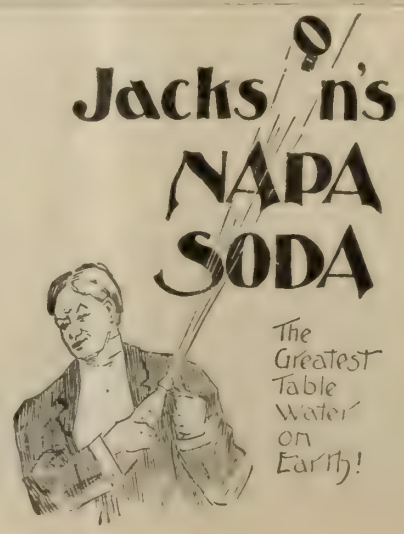
GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "Dorothy"—a dainty and charming production.

ORPHEUM. Vaudeville is all right.

PANORAMA BUILDING. "Battle of Manila"—worth seeing.

SAYS THE DRAMATIC ORACLE of Munsey's, in speaking of Hannah May Ingham, leading woman of the Murray Hill company: "To play Ophelia at fifteen is something of an ordeal, even for an enthusiastic amateur. To play it so well that the impersonation leads to an engagement for leading roles in a professional company, is a record worth remembering Like a vast number of her sister players, she is a daughter of California. The association of amateurs in which she gained her first distinction, was named in her honor, the Ingham dramatic company. A peculiarity in her career is the fact that from the very beginning she has never played any but leading parts." I must confess never to have heard of this prodigy before. California is always producing precocious infant wonders, who are rarely heard of after they reach maturity. About a decade ago there were a dozen or more amateur companies, all producing Hamlet or Romeo and Juliet. If I remember rightly, Laura Crews was essaying Juliet at the age of seven. There were Little Wednesdays and little every-other-days at every theatre in town and there never were so many theatres open at once before nor since. There was a Little Morrow Tucker and a Little Geraldine Something else, and almost as many Little Lord Fauntleroys and young Bootblacks on the stage as there were on the streets; and yet, of the whole army of "gifted children," how many are now worthy to be called actors? Georgie Cooper and Jimmy Horn come into their talent by right of inheritance. Their mothers, Georgie and Edith Woodthorpe, were exceptionally bright stage children of about the same period as Zoe Tuttle, Helen Dauvray (Little Nell, the California Diamond) and Fay Templeton, none of whom except Helen Dauvray maintained in adult years the promise of her childhood. There were four of the Allen sisters, but Viola appears to be the only one who has become a leading lady. Grace Pierce is another of whom much was prophesied. One might enumerate a score or more, all of whom were to have cast a shadow upon the greatest names the stage has ever known—and all of whom have been eclipsed. In some cases it has been the inevitable result of mistaking a small talent and natural vivacity for great genius. Children not infrequently play a child's part well because the character is practically their own. There is nothing beyond their experience or their capacity of comprehension. With well-trained voices and a familiarity with stageland they do creditable work and moreover, they are easily stimulated by applause and flattery. It is not so much acting as doing on the stage precisely what they do off. It does not follow as a matter of course that these same children are capable of transferring themselves mentally to other times or conceiving other conditions. Elsie Leslie was a wonderful Fauntleroy. Had she not been such a mere infant, her failure to grasp the difference in the characters of Prince Edward and Tom Canty in The Prince and the Pauper would have been pitiful. The child was letter-perfect in her part and well-costumed, but at her age, how could she have been expected to appreciate either of the characters, the boy king of England or the street beggar of over three centuries ago? Sometimes the child actor falls behind from lack o industry. They are generally taken from school while very young and thereafter their whole training consists of elocution, singing, dancing and such physical training as will help them to appear well under a calcium light. History, literature or general mental culture of any kind is considered unnecessary and the natural outcome is that the child who, at ten, twelve or even fifteen years of age says good-bye to school books, has no definite idea of where to turn for information concerning any epoch or event in history. Tough girls and chappies they study from life on the streets. Bathing girls and bouncing girls and the precociously juvenile young man about town—and there is the end of their ability. As a rule, the only infant phenomena who make good actors at maturity are those who are descendants of theatrical families, and who are retired early to undergo a thorough schooling, entirely uninterrupted by excursions into the land of make-believe. Stage prodigies are too apt to prove themselves but forced blossoms, beautiful in advance of their season, but evanescent. SARAH CONNELL.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street. Our elegant new fall "dress hats" displayed this week.



Tivoli THE FEATURE of this week was the production of Beethoven's Fidelio. By reviving this classical work which may be entitled a symphonic poem the management is entitled to the gratitude of every earnest admirer of good music. Because of the symphonic character of the work, the vocalists are not taxed to any great extent and the artistic success of the performance depended almost solely on the orchestra. It is not a secret that the musicians who sit before the stage at the Tivoli are fully capable to overcome the greatest difficulties with ease. Despite the fact that Fidelio necessitates a large number of strings, the Tivoli orchestra obtained sufficient volume to extract the imposing grandeur and impressive color which the composer has introduced in the score. Theopera Fidelio is as earnest as are all of Beethoven's works and through it may be heard some reminiscent strains from some of the composer's well known and much admired symphonies. It was indeed gratifying to note that an opera which several years ago would not have attracted two hundred people, succeeded in filling the Tivoli on almost every evening of its production. Miss Linck no doubt deserves credit for her impersonation of the title role. To sing Beethoven's music is far more fatiguing than to sing Wagner opera, for the former demands intensely dramatic accent embodied in vigorous recital, while Wagner merely demands powerful organs which he asks to free themselves of any fetters whatever. Miss Linck, both in dramatic declamation as well as musical knowledge, proved herself fully capable of essaying the part. Miss Ada Palmer Walker made her initial bow in grand opera here as Marcelline. Miss Walker has a soprano of dramatic quality which she understands how to use according to artistic rules. In Marcel Perron, who essayed the part of Fernando, the Tivoli has succeeded in engaging the services of a vocalist who commands a pleasant and well schooled voice. He certainly did some good work in Fidelio. William Schuster as Rocco, the jailor, was fully equipped with the necessary requirements of the role. Il Trovatore brought back Ella Prossnitz, who is considerably refreshed from her week's vacation and whose voice showed fine signs of dramatic quality and excellent method. No doubt as Santuzza Miss Prossnitz will prove an admirable exponent of the role, as her histrionic talent together with her musical ability will make the part very impressive. Next week's bill will consist of I' Pagliacci and Cavalleria Rusticana. Who would not give much to hear again that wonderful baritone of Salassa's in the prologue to Pagliacci? To this day it is ringing in the ears of all those who heard him before. Avedano will repeat his triumph as Canio.

Orpheum ALTHOUGH there will be but three new attractions in the vaudeville line the coming week, the bill presented promises to be one of exceptional strength. All of the new acts come well recommended and the people retained from last week will all make some change in the specialties they present. Of the newcomers Frank Hall and Cass Staley promise the most. They call themselves The Twentieth Century Burglars and their demonstration of the possibilities of comedy in a criminal occupation is said to be clever and amusing Freeze brothers, tambourine jugglers and clog dancers, made a big hit in New York during the early part of this year and McMahon and King, black face artists, are known the world over as champions of the art of fun making. Mansfield and Wilbur will be retained from last week. Their work won for them many friends and in a new sketch which they will present they expect to continue their success. The other holdovers are Caron and Herbert, Cardownies, who acquired the ability to dance real jigs and hornpipes on the heather of the Scotch Highlands; Esmeralda, the musical wire-walker; Dagmar, the Czar's big favorite, and the American biograph.

Grand Opera House THEY are giving a delightful production of Alfred Cellier's Dorothy at the Grand. One hears of its great success everywhere and its popularity is evidenced by the fact that the theatre is crowded to the doors nightly and those who come late are unable to gain admission. Bessie Fairbairn, who makes her first appearance, justifies the favorable reports that have preceded her from the east and proves herself to be a clever character actress. Monday evening Von Suppe's Clover will be revived after a lengthy interval, with a splendid cast and an increased orchestra and chorus. The costumes and scenery will be very beautiful and the latter will illustrate picturesque and celebrated places in Bavaria, France, Italy and Norway. A charming feature of the program will be a grand ballet, which will be danced by a corps of beautiful girls, while the Venetian carnival holds full sway. A military march by attractive damsels in brilliant and dazzling uniforms will also be performed.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street. Our elegant new fall "dress hats" displayed this week.

Alcazar BERTIE CECIL AND CIGARETTE have been objects of adoration to many hundreds of theatregoers all this week, and next week by special request Florence Roberts has decided to repeat two of the plays in which she created so profound an impression, Camille and Romeo and Juliet. Camille will be given on the first three nights of the week and beginning with Thursday evening and for the remaining of the week with the Saturday matinee, Romeo and Juliet will be revived. Miss Roberts' season at the Alcazar has been most successful. There remain but two more weeks of Miss Roberts' season, when will come the inauguration of the strongest stock season the management has ever offered its patrons. Both in people and plays to be presented the fall season of the Alcazar promises a dramatic treat to our theatregoers. The new leading man is said to be both clever and handsome.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of MARY LEONARD, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned. Executrix and Executor respectively of the last will and testament of MARY LEONARD, deceased, to the creditors, of. and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within Four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executrix and executor or either thereof at the law offices of LENT AND HUMPHREY at rooms 54 and 55 in the Crocker Building in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

MARY LEONARD and LEON ROOS,
Executrix and Executor respectively of the estate of Mary Leonard, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco. August 12, 1899.

LENT & HUMPHREY,
54-55 Crocker Building.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of ROGER PRENDERGAST Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, executors of the last will and testament of ROGER PRENDERGAST deceased, to the creditors. of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executors at the law office of J. J. Dwyer at the Mills Building, Seventh Floor, Room 38, northeast corner of Bush and Montgomery streets in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

PETER J. DUNNE and CHARLES HIRSHFELD,
Executors of the last will and testament of
Roger Prendergast Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 22. 1899.

J. J. DWYER, Mills Building,
Attorney for Executors.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE AT PRIVATE SALE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES.

In the Matter of the Estate of MABEL RUTH LOCKWOOD CRAMER, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of Los Angeles duly given and made on the 8th day of August A. D. 1899, in the above entitled proceeding, the undersigned, the administrator of the said estate, will sell at private sale to the highest bidder for cash, Gold Coin of the United States and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, 10 per cent of the purchase price to be made-at time of sale, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court on or after the 6th day of September A. D. 1899, all the right, title and interest and estate of the above name decedent at the time of her death and all the right, title and interest that the estate has by operation of law or otherwise acquired other than or in addition to that of the said Mabel Ruth Lockwood Cramer, deceased, at the time of her death, and commonly described as an undivided one-fifth (1-5) interest in and to all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California and more particularly described as follows: Commencing at a point on the northerly line of Elliott Park One Hundred and thirty-two (132) feet westerly from Steiner Street and running thence westerly along said line of Elliot Park twenty-two (22) feet, thence at right angles northerly seventy (70) feet: thence at right angles easterly twenty-two (22) feet: thence at right angles southerly seventy (70) feet to the point of commencement, with improvements thereon consisting of a cottage of six rooms: Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining.

Bids or offers must be in writing and will be received at the offices of Lent and Humphrey, Attorneys at law, Rooms 54 and 55 Crocker Building, at the junction of Market and Post Streets, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California or may be delivered to the administrator personally or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said court at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of said sale.

RICHARD LOUIS CRAMER,
Administrator of the estate of
Mabel Ruth Lockwood Cramer.

LENT & HUMPHREY,
Attorneys for the Administrator,
54-55 Crocker Building, San Francisco, Cal.

A. D. Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty
Open Day and Night — Telephone Main 971

Columbia THE MILLER SEASON will come to an end with tonight's performance and the regular combination season of the theatre will begin on Monday night. The management will then present the author-actor, Clay Clement, and his own company in the new romantic comedy, A Southern Gentleman. When Clement appeared here last season in The New Dominion he was received in the most cordial manner and his return will be one of more than passing interest in theatricals. He will be supported by Augustus Cook, Jeffry D. Williams, H. S. Duffield, Phosa McAllister, Helen Broderick, Mrs. Clay Clement and others. It is said that in no play heretofore offered has southern sentiment and southern atmosphere been so happily combined into a story of intense interest as has been done by Clay Clement in A Southern Gentleman. The play was seen in but one southern city last season—Louisville, Kentucky, where it was the subject of not only the most favorable and extended criticism but was editorially commented upon by Mr. Watterson personally in the Courier Journal.

California THREE INTERESTING productions have held the boards this week, London Assurance, Hedda Gabler and As You Like It. Next Monday Mr. Friedlander will present A Bachelor's Honeymoon, said to be the funniest farce that has been written for many a day. It is entirely devoid of offensiveness or vulgarity and had a tremendous success at Hoyt's New York theatre where in the farce line it easily made the hit of the season. The company presenting ia here has been carefully selected and contains some of the cleverest comedians in the country. A Bachelor's Honeymoon will be run but one week when the California will be closed to undergo a complete renovation and to receive improvements and adornments.

There was an amusing little incident at the Columbia last Saturday night. About the middle of the last act an old lady accompanied by a little boy started for the door. But she evidently did not know where the place of exit was located. She had been occupying a seat in the extreme rear of the balcony, but she tramped—not noiselessly—with her little companion down the stairs not only of the upper, but of the lower tier of seats. And then she made everybody in the front row stand up while she and the boy made their way across from one aisle to the other. About the time she was starting up the stairs on another hunt for the exit, an usher spied her and gave her a cue to pursue her search successfully. However, it must have been a strange sight to those on the stage when an entire row of balcony spectators arose in the midst of the last act.

AN OPEN AND A PUPPY STAKE

THE ATTRACTION at the Union coursing park today and tomorrow will be a Puppy and an Open stake. The puppy stake has forty-eight entries and the open fifty-four. In the puppy stake the Pasha kennels have entered a very promising dog in Roundabout, the puppy has a world of speed and should capture the long end of the purse. In the open stake Lawrence and Gladiator should battle out for first money if they are in form.

An excellent remedy for insomnia will be found in the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky taken at bed-time. Your druggist has it.

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Beginning Next Monday

MR. CLAY CLEMENT in his latest and successful romantic comedy,

"A SOUTHERN GENTLEMAN"

In preparation - - "THE NEW DOMINION"

Grand Opera House Morosco Amusement Co., Inc. Lessees. Telephone, Main 532.

Last performances of "DOROTHY"

Commencing Monday, August 21st, Grand production of Von Suppe's beautiful comic opera,

"CLOVER"

Our Prices—Orchestra floor, 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

Matinee Saturday. Best reserved seat in the theatre, 25 cents

☞ Branch Ticket Office just inside main entrance of Emporium.

Alcazar FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor MARK THALL, Manager 'Phone Main 254

Week of August 21st

Last week but one of FLORENCE ROBERTS, when will be presented her two phenomenal successes.

Monday night - - - - - - - - - CAMILLE.
Tuesday night - - - - - - - - - CAMILLE.
Wednesday night - - - - - - - CAMILLE.
Thursday night - - - - - - ROMEO AND JULIET.
Friday night - - - - - - ROMEO AND JULIET.
Saturday matinee - - - - - ROMEO AND JULIET.
Saturday night - - - - - - ROMEO AND JULIET.
Sunday night - - - - - - ROMEO AND JULIET.

Alcazar prices always prevail—15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Orpheum O'Farrell between Stockton and Powell Streets. Week Commencing Sunday Matinee, August 20th.

HALL and STALEY, "Twentieth Century Burglars."
FREEZE BROTHERS. McMAHON and KING.
GERTRUDE MANSFIELD and CARYL WILBUR.
CARON and HERBERT. CARDOWNIE TROUPE.
ESMERALDA. ALEXANDRA DAGMAR. BIOGRAPH.

Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c
Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday

California Theatre S. H. FRIEDLANDER Manager. Tel. Main 1731.

Week commencing Monday, August 21st. Matinee Saturday only.
The Mirth Provoking Farce from Hoyt's New York Theatre,

"A BACHELOR'S HONEYMOON"

Presented by Warde & Sackett's Comedians.

A Laughter Cyclone
A Rollicking Farce.
A Breezy Absurdity

Popular Prices, 25, 50, 75, and 1.00. Matinee, 25, 50, and 75c.

Tivoli Opera House ERNESTINE KRELING, Prop. and Mgr.

Grand Opera Season

"FIDELIO" tonight. "TROVATORE" Sunday night.
For next week

"CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA"
and
"I' PAGLIACCI"

All the company in alternate roles.
Popular Prices, 25 and 50 cents. Telephone for Seats, Bush 9

Battle of Manila Bay

This Grand Historical Panorama is now on exhibition . . .

Lectures every half hour by the eminent orator, PROF. W. G. ROLLINS

Admission, 50 Cents
Children, 25 Cents.

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

—PRICE, $3.00—

Saws of every description made to order.
Planing and Currier Knives, Lace Leather, Emery Wheels, Saw Mandrels,
Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

THE WIND AND THE WHEAT

I HEARD the wooing lips of the wind low whispering to the wheat
Which rustled and trembled, swayed and bowed beneath his caresses sweet;
Which listened responsive and thrilled all through from golden head to feet.

Defiantly smiled and glittered in the face of the dazzling sun;
The wheat knew well that his shining day to shadow would surely run
And loved the wilful wind the best whose persistence had favor won.

JULIETTE ESTELLE MATHIS.

Music World

WHILE LAST SATURDAY I endeavored to show that the vocal art is not declining, that the reasons enumerated in favor of this supposed decline were absolutely irrelevant and incorrect, I shall even go further today and prove that vocal art stands at this day higher than previously and is steadily increasing. And I shall not confine this statement to vocal art alone. I propose to show that music as an art is upon a higher artistic basis today than it ever was before. Beginning with the vocal art, the most accurate criterion by which to ascertain the value of a certain commodity is the demand for it. What is good of products applies also to the artists and what may be credited to artists is equally true in regard to art itself. Thus if you desire accurate information as to the standing of vocal art today in comparison to that of earlier date, find out the number of persons who practice vocal art today with that of former days. If you discover that there are more students now than there were before you have gained the first step in proving that vocal art is increasing, for a greater interest signifies a greater demand and if the demand for vocal art is becoming greater, art itself is, as a natural result, more encouraged. And finally when art is more encouraged this year than it was last year it shows that the art is increasing. I need not cite any examples to prove that the number of vocal students and teachers exceeds today by far that of previous periods. I need not show facts and figures to uphold my assertion that today we have ten good vocal students and teachers to one years ago. These statements are too matter of fact to need any further elucidation. No one whose observation is keen will deny these circumstances. Now then, if the number of students and teachers is larger than it was at any previous time, the demand for a vocal education is certainly increasing and I have gained my first proof in my contention that the vocal art is in the increase.

¶ ¶

From the instructors and the instructed we pass on to the professional vocalists. These are divided into two classes, the concert singers and the operatic singers. If you desire to prove that vocal art is increasing, you must show that its exponents are increasing also, and thus I do not hesitate to assert that today we have more good concert and operatic singers than we ever had before. And the very best proof lies in the fact that the number of prima donnas and "illustrious" concert singers is decreasing. This sounds strange, does it not? Nevertheless it is the truth. What was the reason that years ago we had over a dozen prominent prima donnas? Because the average operatic singer was so limited in resources that anyone who succeeded in discarding this vocal conventionality was hailed with delight. Twenty-five years ago singers were not offered the inducements regarding vocal art that is offered them today; by this I mean that vocal instruction was practiced by a select few and that all ordinary vocal teachers were not equipped as well years ago as they are at the present day. So the teachers not being so numerous and their resources of instruction being very limited they could not educate their pupils to become prominent singers, hence the enthusiasm over new stars. In short, as there were but few good teachers there were but few good singers and thus it was possible to produce more "famous" artists. However, matters are different today The number of good teachers is increasing, the number of good students is becoming larger; hence our good artists are becoming more numerous. It stands therefore to reason that our "famous" prima donnas must accomplish far more than has formerly been the case and consequently we have not so many. The more efficient our amateur talent is becoming the more is required of the professional and the day will come that the star system will be abolished altogether because we will have so many stars that they will be too numerous to enumerate. A natural result of the increase of good talent is the decrease of great stars. The concert stage is an excellent illustration. Note, for instance, the pianists—they are becoming more numerous every day. And because Liszt at his time was considered more wonderful than Rosenthal today is not proof that he was really superior; it merely proves that at the time of Liszt there were not so many pianists as there are today. Why did Paderewski make a greater "hit" than Rosenthal? First, because more money was spent to "boom" him, and secondly, because during his first tour pianists were very rare in America. We will see whether my contention is correct during Paderewski's next visit to America.

¶ ¶

I have thus gained two points: First, there is a greater demand for vocal education than there ever was before and secondly our number of well equipped vocalists both in concert as well as operatic work, is increasing while the number of so-called "stars" is decreasing. Of course an increasing demand for a vocal education carries along an increase of charlatans, who desire to create the impression that they above all are able to introduce young ambitious amateurs into the inner circle of vocal art. I believe there are just a few here in San Francisco of this class. But as long as they succeed in luring inexperienced people to their private studios only, it is not the critic's duty to interfere with them, but whenever one of these self-appointed educators desires to pose before the public as an eminent apostle of the art of music then is the time to apply the whip of retribution. Perhaps there may be some opportunity next season to act in the interests of humanity. Next week I shall endeavor to show how music in general is today far more advanced than it was years ago.

¶ ¶

Giulio Minetti returned from his European trip last Sunday. He looks somewhat sunburned and has acquired a few pounds of avoirdupois. He visited his family in Turin, Italy, and also his old teacher Signor Bolzoni, who gave him some of his compositions—two string quartets bearing the compliments of the author and some symphonic orchestral pieces. Signor Bolzoni is director of the Turin conservatory of music and a prominent teacher and composer. Mr. Minetti will play these new compositions during the next series of chamber music by the Minetti quartets which will begin during the early part of September. In Paris Mr. Minetti attended the opera and also witnessed some of the Dreyfus excitement which he claims is not so great as one reads in the newspapers. In fact he asserts that the interest is keener here in America than it is at Paris. In London Minetti visited the symphony concerts of Wood and Mackenzie. He prefers Wood's orchestra which he heard in Tschaikowsky's symphony No. 6—the pathetique—and claims that Scheel's interpretation of it is far superior to that of Wood. Ysaye was the soloist, and received his usual ova-

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

TEACHES: Tone Production
Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone production

Studio: Y. M. C. A Bldg.

Reception Hours
3:30 to 4:30

tions. At Covent Garden Minetti heard Tannhauser and Die Walkure, which operas included Lilli Lehmann and the heavenly twins—Jean and Edouard. He also heard Van Dyck in Lohengrin. Lilli Lehmann, according to Minetti's idea, is still an excellent vocalist and her voice does not seem to show any signs of antiquity. Of course the De Reszke brothers are upon the pinnacle of fame. Minetti returned on the German steamship Wilhelm der Grosse where he met Scharwenka. A concert was given for the benefit of the sailors in which Scharwenka and Minetti participated. One of their selections was a Foote sonata And now having gained a little inspiration abroad Minetti is ready to take his quartet in tow, which promises to inaugurate one of the most refined and artistic chamber music series ever given in San Francisco.

¶ ¶

From the Colorado Springs papers I see that Ferdinand Stark is as successful there as he was here. One of the writers has this to say of Stark: "The secret of this superiority is found in Mr. Stark's personality. He is a born leader. His command over his men is such that though they are a picked body of soloists on hearing them one gets the impression that the whole orchestra is but Stark magnified. His sense of rhythm is phenomenal. I know of no one, unless it is Strauss, who can ennoble a waltz and lift it into the realm of poetry as can Ferdinand Stark. His command of the rallentando is almost unique; he knows the value of the pause; his crescendos are uplifting—in short his variety, dash, tenderness and sparkle compel one's admiration." Glancing through Stark's programs I find that he gives a series of symphony concerts which include such works as a suite by Grieg, symphony by Mozart, Tschaikowsky's andante cantabile (for strings) and chant sans paroles and Beethoven's symphony No. 1.

¶ ¶

Emil Steinegger's farewell concert was well attended and gave evidence of the fact that the gentleman does not make any mistake in desiring to increase his already advanced musical accomplishments by a visit to Europe. I hear that Mr. Steinegger is not one of those who parade their talent in public but is rather backward in trying to obtain recognition. It is generally the case that artists who do not make great pretensions are generally the most deserving and Mr. Steinegger does right in going to Europe where in an artistic atmosphere he is sure to acquire confidence in his talent. I understand also that Mr. Steinegger is an excellent teacher. He seems to have grasped the idea of going to Europe after one's studies are completed here. In other words go to Europe for observation and polish rather than for study. He has selected a good man in Leschetizky and on his return his ideas will no doubt be broader and more positive. The participants in the concert were the Press club quartet, D M. Lawrence and Chas. Parent Jr.

HARMONY CLASS

Dr. H. J. Stewart is now forming a class for the study of Harmony (elementary grade.)

For terms, apply at the Studio, 1406 Van Ness Avenue.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . -

Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.

Specialist in the Development of the Voice

* * * HOME STUDIO:

RECEPTION HOURS, 12 TO 2 912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .

Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu-El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,

Studio for Voice Culture, Operatic Repertoire, Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method.

Engagements accepted for Concerts Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.

Terms Moderate

Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

MR. FRANCIS STUART

. . . Teacher of Singing

1615 Jackson St., near Polk

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, Vocalist, 1109 Post street
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist, Oroville. Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

DR. H. J. STEWART....

Organist of Trinity Church, and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .

has removed his

MUSIC STUDIO

to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine

Singing, Piano, Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music

E. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street

Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.

A thorough course for teaching. Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Under direction of For Voice Culture, Piano and Organ

Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck, Assisted by MISS CECILIA M. DECKER
Alto Soloist Central M. E. Church.

Operatic and Dramatic Department in charge of Mrs Mary Fairweather
Piano Department in charge of Mr. Arthur Fickenscher
Assisted by Mrs. Fanny E. Buckland, (Virgil Practice Clavier Method) and Miss Estelle Davidson (Synthetic Method)
Languages: MR. L. D. VENTURA, B. E. (French and Italian)
MISS ELSA PRIBER (German.)
Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy.
Instructions in Physical Culture, Chorus and Sight Singing, Ensemble Playing, etc., etc. Advantages Unsurpassed Full particulars and terms upon application. 831 Fulton St., Bet. Webster and Fillmore,
Telephone West 223 San Francisco, Cal.

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use

BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE

It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.

PRICE $3.00

At music stores or by mail. Descriptive circulars sent upon application.

HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Dr. H. J. Stewart began his regular organ recitals at Trinity church on August sixth, and executed them in that musicianly and artistic manner that characterizes his organ playing. Tomorrow's recital will be of especial interest as it will comprise a Wagner program. The five numbers will consist of: Elsa's Brautgang zum Munster (Lohengrin); Song of the Rhine Maidens (Gotterdammerung); Wotan's Farewell and Magic Fire Scene (Die Walkure) and Kaiser March Throughout Dr. Stewart's selections I notice a praiseworthy departure from the ordinary collections of church music. He seems to be fully awake to the fact that church music is supposed to educate and instruct as well as assist in divine service. It is too bad that really good music is so rarely found in the musical program of a church service. Now here is a musical service after my own heart: Te Deum in B flat minor, Foote; offertory, Hearts Feel That Love Thee, Mendelssohn; Te Deum and Jubilate in F, Tours; Fear Not O Lord, Goss. These are numbers of merit and are taken from the Trinity musical program of tomorrow and next Sunday. The organ recital next Sunday will include compositions by Best, Tours, Grieg and Gigout. True music lovers should not fail to attend them.

¶

The Arion concert last Tuesday evening introduced Herman Genss as a conductor of choral works. The Harmonie showed marked improvement under the baton of its new director and in a little while will be able to give a good concert. Mr. Genss is one of those earnest musicians who pay strict attention to light and shade and are accurate and careful, endeavoring to obtain as correct an interpretation of the works as can possibly be obtained. I am sorry to say that from Tuesday's orchestral exhibition I cannot as yet form a decisive opinion of Mr. Genss' qualifications as an orchestral conductor but must yet depend on the fine indorsement he obtained abroad. However it is not fair to draw conclusions after a first hearing, especially when connected with such great disadvantages as guided the organization of this orchestra. Only one day did the musicians have to come together and considering the short time he had to organize this orchestra Mr. Jaulus, who did this work, must be heartily complimented for he succeeded in engaging first-class musicians. Mrs. John Marquardt's harp solo was a decidedly artistic piece of work. There are few artists that can vie with this highly talented harpist.

ALFRED METZGER.

SATISFACTORY TO THE EYE AND EAR
BYRON MAUZY PIANOS
308-314 POST ST
Sheet Music, Books etc. Telephone Main 5261

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd

TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral. Voice Culture and the Art of Singing First-class Engagements only accepted. Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MR. J. F. VEACO

TENOR SOLOIST Grace Church, California Street. Voice Culture. Studio: 1012 Sacramento St. near Powell Reception hours 12 to 2.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave. Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Residence, 1622 Fell Street, near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE

SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakland, Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL

SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing, has resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento street. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL

POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire. 130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS

CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches. Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER

TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY

TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St. Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH

PUPILS of Madame de la Grange Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

J. W. McKENZIE

VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX

PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A. Building Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30. Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL

VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue. Studio, 717 Sutter Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON

SINGING and Piano. Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK

PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 975. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

MISS ELLA LAWRIE

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Classes for children a specialty. Address, 404 CENTRAL AVE. Telephone, GEARY 676.

MRS. H. EHRMAN

TEACHER OF PIANO. Leschetizky method. Children a Specialty. 1234 BUSH STREET.

HELEN M. ANDERSON, A. C. M.

TEACHER OF PIANO. Refers to Mr. Louis Lisser, Dr. Wm. Mason and Albert Ross Parsons. Synthetic Method and "Touch and Technic" a special course for teachers. 31 Guerrero St.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH

PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory. Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M. 1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA

TEACHER OF PIANO. 2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER

TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays. 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony. 2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE

TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club. Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. Thursdays excepted. Address, 1317 Hyde Street. Tel. Larkin 281.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE

PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street.

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.

ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F.

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.

PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies. Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON

CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher. Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA

TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published.

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN

TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.

TEACHER OF ZITHER. Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street. Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.

VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn. Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR

MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5. Will accept engagements for concerts.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano.
MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

The Professor's Hobby

Dr. Justus Falkenberg, PROFESSOR of Archeology in Berlin, had for the last five years regularly installed himself at the beginning of his long vacation in the household of his brother Fritz Falkenberg, apothecary of Honef, a little health resort. In years gone by he had passed his holidays at the seashore but now that he had grown older and more sedate he no longer found enjoyment there. At his brother's he found a true home, large, pleasant rooms and such cheerful attention to his wants that the fifty-year-old bachelor fairly basked in a sense of ease and comfort. When his tall, stout figure and large friendly face appeared on street or promenade many a hollow-chested and narrow-breasted Kurgast cast an envious glance after him.

The two brothers were wealthy in their own right. The apothecary was the younger by two years and had been ten years a widower. He had one child, a twenty-year-old daughter, Marie, who ruled the household, reinforced by an experienced cook, the pearl of her calling, as the professor termed her. At almost every meal he felt constrained to cry out:

"That woman understands her business."

Between the two brothers reigned an unusual concord—except on one point—for perfection unhappily does not exist on this planet.

The professor had a hobby—what learned German has not, especially when he is a bachelor? His was graphology. The apothecary considered this child's play and designated it by one word, "Bosh." But the professor did not worry himself long over his brother's vandalism, for had he not learned from the latter's handwriting that he was of a flighty nature, and that to him the deep and solemn secrets of wisdom had no meaning?

This happy fellow might be able to determine the age of Rhine wine by tasting it but to loosen knotty problems by power of deep thinking—impossible! However, no blame to the poor fellow.

Toward ten in the morning, after his walk the professor often installed himself in the laboratory, where he was decidedly in the way of the apothecary and his two assistants. As his father had been of the same calling he understood a little of the art of reading prescriptions A new district physician had come to Honef and as soon as the professor heard of his arrival he seized upon his prescriptions to study the handwriting. One day he captured one of them as usual, and was soon deep in his beloved graphology. He studied a long while and at last with great decision pronounced judgment:

"The fellow drinks."

The attendant so shook with laughter that he had to lay down the vessel he was in the act of holding; while the apothecary cried out wrathfully:

"A stop to such foolishness; remember you are talking of the district physician."

"I cannot help it, it is so, the writing declares it."

"Bosh!"

The professor did not mind the word but his brother's tone irritated him and he replied, earnestly:

"I can only advise you to read some books on the subject, such as 'Studies in Graphology' by Lagenbeck or 'The Psychology of Handwriting' by Professor Preyer. You will thereby acquire a respect for this knowledge. They have demonstrated that character in all its particulars is expressed in handwriting, and that further—

"Listen, I beg of you! In the first place you are disturbing us, in the second it is the doctor's hour and he may appear at any moment He writes from ten to twelve prescriptions here daily."

"And drinks an equal number of drams. Honestly, now Fritz, isn't it so?"

"Not quite so many, only half."

"Now do you see how my knowledge stands the test —— "

"Go I pray you; the doctor is coming."

"Well, good heart, I will go to please you."

Hardly had the professor left the room, when sure enough in came the doctor. The purple color of his nose betrayed his weakness. Inside of half an hour he had written a dozen prescriptions, accompanying his work with sarcastic observations and drinking three glasses of Marton sherry. When he had finished his task he treated himself to three of dry sherry.

Meanwhile the professor took a walk in the garden to admire the roses. There he found his niece Marie, a stately blonde with fine and agreeable features. He broke off a fine centifolia and said, laughing merrily as he presented it to her:

"Accept, deserted maiden, in the absence of your bridegroom, the all-wise justice of Honef, this flower. I do not understand how the chosen of such a bride can leave her to go on a pleasure trip."

"I accept your rose with thanks and on the return of my bridegroom, which will be today or tomorrow, I shall not fail to acquaint him with your severe charge."

"Frightful! My knees even now tremble under me."

The mighty frame of the professor suddenly shrank, his knees shook and he assumed such a comical look of anxiety, that Marie laughed heartily. But this melodious sound found a harmonious echo and the professor, looking over his shoulder, perceived the perfect cook who had approached unseen and joined in the mirth of her mistress. He was ungrateful enough to forget for a moment all the gratification Anna's cooking had afforded him and he berated her soundly. The cook, however, had arrived at years of discretion and took his hard words calmly.

"I should like to ask," she said with a superior air, "if I am not to bake some cake for the coffee."

"Why do you ask?" inquired Marie.

"Ach, Gott! Müller called to me through the kitchen window that the justice has just arrived"

Marie's face glowed with joyful surprise.

"Certainly Anna, do as you wish."

The cook threw the professor a look which if translated into words would have said:

"Do you see now how you have treated me, you great clown?"

Then she nodded disdainfully and hurried as fast as her great, round figure would allow her, toward the house.

"I am impatient to see the young magistrate and new bridegroom," said the professor, for he had not yet met the young man who had only entered upon his office six months before.

While Anna was busy mixing the cake someone tapped her on the shoulder. With a cry of astonishment she turned round so hastily that she knocked a letter out of Müller's hand into the coal-box

"Ach Gott! Müller, it is you! How came you to frighten me so?"

Müller cast a look of dismay at the letter and then one of love at Anna. He was the bailiff of the court, a man of forty, who, with his savings, amounting to a round five thousand marks, appeared to the cook a desirable parti.

"Now, Müller, I am too busy to see you mornings, you must wait till evening. What was that that fell into the coal-box?"

"That was the letter of the justice to Fraülein Marie."

"Ach, dear Lord God of Biebernheim!" shrieked Anna, trying to extricate the missive from its black hiding-place.

But her blind zeal only hindered matters—a little bit of coal dust had done no damage, but the print of her greasy finger was indelible. As she saw the misfortune she set up such a wail that Müller embraced her mighty girth tenderly, saying to comfort her:

"Never mind Annchen, it is not so bad as all that."

"But I cannot give the letter to my mistress in that state!"

"No, no, of course not. Wipe your fingers and then fetch me a new envelope."

"What are you going to do, Müller?"

"Copy this scrawl, that's simple enough."

"You will open the letter?"

"Why not? Do you want a scolding from your mistress and I a downright blowing up from the justice? Or shall we suppress the letter?"

"Oh, heavens, not that!"

"Then quick and bring envelope, pen and ink."

"But you will not read the letter?"

"Of course not. A love letter and from a magistrate? Shocking!"

While Anna brought the articles desired, Müller opened the envelope with the aid of his pocket-knife. Müller had not overrated his cleverness; in a short time a new address was written, enough like the old to deceive anyone.

"Now Anna, it is all right. There is the neatest letter in the world."

Anna wiped her hands a second time in her white apron and took the letter.

"Well done, Müller. But you have forgotten one thing, the name of the sender on the back."

"Is that necessary?"

"Yes indeed, our young lady is used to it. When she reads the name she does not give a second look to the address."

Müller did as she directed and Anna hurried into the garden where she found her young mistress still with the professor.

"Here, Fraülein, a letter from the Herr Braütigam."

Marie seized the letter joyfully, opened it with haste and carelessly let the envelope drop to the ground while with a beating heart she read the lines of her beloved wherein he announced his coming for afternoon coffee. Anna would gladly have picked up the envelope, but a glance of the professor deterred her and she hurried back to her kitchen. Hardly had she disappeared when the professor stooped and seized it eagerly; he was on fire to see and test the handwriting of the aspirant to his niece's hand. Hardly had he glanced at it when he exclaimed:

"That man drinks, too."

"What do you mean, uncle?" asked Marie, who did not understand him.

"Is that letter really from your intended?"

While he spoke he cast a glance of pity on his niece.

"Certainly, uncle, from Fritz."

"Poor child, I pity you."

"But uncle, what do you mean?"

"It is my sacred duty to warn you. I must tell you what these characters clearly and distinctly announce to me."

"Indeed, I am most anxious."

"They tell me that the writer is a drunkard and a bully."

"But uncle, Fritz does not drink and he is a peace-loving man."

"Love is blind but my wisdom is clear-sighted."

"Your wisdom is a nuisance, a crime. Yes, a crime, for it slanders people, it takes away their honor and good name. You will not only recall your judgment but you will entirely alter it."

"No, I cannot, I dare not."

So ran on the dispute between uncle and niece long and excitedly, until the apothecary appeared on the scene. Naturally the father took his daughter's part and both heaped the professor with reproaches. Red in the face from anger the father at last cried out:

"So long as your mania harmed no one I did not interfere, but now since you bring trouble into a happy house and cause strife between a loving pair, I forbid you to study another bit of handwriting in my house. I have had enough of this folly which is a menace to mankind and makes honest people miserable."

The professor gave in and peace was restored. At coffee the uncle became acquainted with the young man, who made a good impression on him, for which he was sorry since the agreeable young fellow of barely thirty was the possessor of such horrible failings. Drunkard and bully! So declared his handwriting, yet his eye was so bright, clear and soft that the professor was almost convinced that his beloved wisdom was at fault in this instance. Meanwhile he resolved to hold his peace and watch.

Everything would have gone smoothly had not the apothecary later in the evening joked his brother and revealed to the magistrate the result of his graphological researches.

The justice was a peace-loving man, and under ordinary circumstances would have laughed at the professor's verdict but being a lover he was sensitive at being placed in an unfavorable light in the eyes of his beloved. He was angered and before he left the house he found an opportunity of seeing the professor alone and taking him to task for his assertions. All this was very painful for the latter but his uprightness of character prevented him from extricating himself from the disagreeable situation by a lie, and he held unchanged to what the writing had revealed to him. But this was too much for the young man and he challenged the professor to a duel with pistols unless he would retract.

The loud voices of the disputants finally brought the apothecary and his daughter on the scene. The magistrate, still insisting on satisfaction, strode angrily from the house. The professor only threw oil on the flames, for he regarded the challenge as a proof of his correctness. In transports of rage the two brothers turned away from each other for the first time in their lives.

Never had four people passed so uncomfortable a night, never was graphology so execrated. The apothecary dreamed that he had driven his brother out of the house. Marie dreamed that she saw her beloved lying on the grass with a wound in his breast. The professor spent the night in deliberating whether or not he ought to compromise his beloved graphology by a lie. This conflict of soul cost him sigh upon sigh, and yet he could come to no decision

As soon as morning dawned he leaped out of bed and hastened to his acquaintances to inquire into the character of the justice. To his astonishment one and all spoke favorably of him.

Strange! Could his beloved hobby have played him a trick?

About nine o'clock Marie begged her intended to call upon her and her entreaties inclined him to reconciliation. She wished to bring him and her uncle face to face. This he would not listen to but agreed to write to him.

"But, I beg of you, write politely and not touchingly."

"Certainly, first because he is your uncle and secondly because it is not fitting for a Prussian judge to challenge anyone to a duel."

"I will take it upon myself to see that my uncle gives you a friendly answer."

The magistrate returned home and wrote his letter which he forwarded to the professor. As the latter during the afternoon received and read it, his expression showed astonishment, and his face grew longer and longer. He sent after his niece, and called out as she appeared:

"Look here, is this really your bridegroom's handwriting?"

"Certainly."

"But, mein Gott! it is an entirely different hand from that out of which I drew my conclusions. Here is the envelope and here is the letter."

A deep and searching investigation now began and the truth was drawn from the perfect cook. The professor hurried to the magistrate, told him all, and begged his pardon. The young man was in such a happy frame of mind that Müller got off with a light reprimand. To his satisfaction the professor learned that the bailiff indeed took a glass now and then and on occasions was something of a brawler. He gave a sigh of contentment. The infallibility of his beloved graphology was confirmed.

[Translated from the German by Irene Connell.]

FOR A WORTHY CAUSE

On the evening of August thirty-first, at Maple hall, will be given a benefit for a very worthy cause, i. e., to increase the fund for the support of the Co-operato, the home for self-supporting and small-salaried women established by Reverend Dr. and Mrs. J A B. Wilson at 645 Folsom street, and which has now been in successful existence since December twenty-second, 1898.

Miss A. M. Beecher, M. D., Mrs. Nellie Holbrook Blinn, Miss Maude Noble, Miss Gertrude Judd, Misses Alyce and Gertrude Gates will all contribute to the program of the benefit entertainment.

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE

DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1029½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh. Office Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND

DENTIST. Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL

DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S W corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas.'

BUSH AND SON

DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 206 Kearny St., S. F. Rooms 31 Pn'hoo-ło9 083-e Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN

VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone, 4118, San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street, Telephone 66. 1529 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

FRANCIS STUART

TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK

HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON

MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone, Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LOUIS CREPAUX

(Member Paris Grand Opera)

HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

PIERCE & TAYLOR

STORAGE WAREHOUSE, 735 Market Street-Opposite Grant avenue. Furniture, Pianos, Trunks, Paintings, Mirrors and other goods stored in clean, light dry lofts. Charges moderate. Telephone Black 311.

DECKELMAN BROS.

RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON

Wholesale and retail dealer in Coal and Wood 670 and 672 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts, San Francisco. Telephone East 152.

World of Letters

THAT WAS a delightful doing of Edward Stevens, to review Dr. C. W. Doyle's Taming of the Jungle under the impression that it was the work of "R" Conan Doyle of Sherlock Holmes fame. Stevens might have made the mistake of confusing the initials of two authors of the same surname—both moreover, physicians, but how could he or anyone else of even ordinary observation, have failed to see in almost every paper for the last six months laudatory references to "our" Dr. Doyle; and getting past Stevens, is there not yet anyone connected with the Morning Call who knows anything at all about literary matters? For the past quarter of a century that paper has been making just such woful breaks and apparently never even suspecting their absurdity. It is a curious fact, in connection with reviews in general, that the books are almost invariably handed over to the youngest apprentice to the inky trade. One would naturally suppose that a taste for reading, the ability to recognize grammatical English and a bit of experience ought to be a part of the mental outfit of a literary critic, not to mention the possession of critical and analytical ability and some acquaintance with literature. Literary criticism requires quite as much ability and acumen as does the dramatic variety, but apparently the office boy is regarded as competent to "do books." To get back to Dr. Doyle, his Illumination of Lee Moy in the current Lippincott gives a foretaste of his forthcoming book. It promises well for interest and will give us not the "gentle heathen" of the Mission Sunday school, but the shrewd, silent Oriental, the stranger within our gates.

The much commented upon though still nebulous book of Mark Twain, which is not to be published until a hundred years after his death, is reminiscent of that absurd conceit of Stockton's professor, that the humor of Pickwick Papers might be preserved for future generations by rendering it into Greek, where it would be safe from the possible changes incident to a living and growing language. Mark Twain is so up-to-date that one feels inclined to the opinion that we are being defrauded for the benefit of those who probably will not be capable of appreciating the good things they are about to receive.

Anent Stockton, here is a specimen of his Greek translation rendered back into English: Let anyone compare it with the original of Dickens—if he can recognize enough of it to find the right place:

"'For the reason that he who drives a vehicle of the post-road holds high office above the masses,' to him answered the Sire Weller with eyes affiliated; 'for the reason that he who drives a vehicle of the post-road acteth at will, undoubted, humanity otherwise proibited. For the reason that he who drives a vehicle of the post-road is able to look with affection on a woman of eighty far distant, though it is not publicly believed that in the midst of any it is his desire to wed Among males which one discourseth similarly, Sammy?'"

The persistency with which McTeague calls for recognition and comment is surprising. The August Book Buyer devotes a page and a half to a discussion of the novel "from the middle point of view." McTeague is now "a novel with a purpose," but I confess that I am unable to discern what it is. Is it a warning to "Beware of the Dentist" or of a girl who has "win" in a lottery? Perchance the moral is that one should not live on Polk street, or again, it may be a warning to men not to murder their wives or to select some more genteel method than the "all bluggy" one detailed by Mr. Norris. If people had cold shivers over McTeague, what is to be said of A Man's Woman, where one may sup full on horrors in every chapter? The minute details of a surgical operation are a little too much for even abnormal nerves.

It is an odd coincidence, as for that matter all coincidences are, that Winston Churchill, the author of Richard Carvel, should have a namesake in England who is also a writer. The English Winston Churchill is a son of Lady Randolph Churchill of the Anglo-Saxon Review, for which, it is reported, he is writing a new novel. It has been suggested that he should use the middle name Spencer, which both he and his father have omitted and which, for some high and mighty reason unknown to me, must always be hyphenated with Churchill, but surely a man may do as he pleases with his own name. In this connection, it is worth while to mention the humorous lament of the Englishman, Gilbert Burgess who, too, writes nonsense tales for children somewhat after the manner of our Gelett Burgess and who threatens, since Gelett has invaded his field, that he will turn his steps towards San Francisco.

The Bookman announces: "The new edition of H. C. Bunner's poems—the third since his death—will be enlarged by the insertion of his posthumous verses." !!! It is to be hoped that Bunner's "posthumous verses" will do less violence to his memory than do the alleged posthumous writings of others who have gone before. However, it is not every day that the Bookman is caught napping and there is some allowance to be made for New York weather in August. There ought to be a lively "Letter Box" in the September issue.

Ahmet Aarifi Effendi, once director and censor of the press at Constantinople, issued a circular containing the following rules for the guidance of every editor in the Turkish capital:

Do not publish scientific or literary articles too long for completion in a single issue. Avoid the notice "To be continued," which causes an uncomfortable tension of the mind.

Avoid blank spaces and suggestive dots in the body of an article. They tend to raise suppositions and disturb the tranquility of the reader's mind, as was lately seen in the case of the Levant Herald.

Avoid personalities. If anybody comes and tells you that a governor or a deputy governor has been guilty of embezzlement maladministration, or any other blameworthy conduct treat the charge as not proved and say nothing about it.

You are forbidden to publish the petitions in which individuals or associations complain of acts of misgovernment and call the sultan's attention to them.

You are absolutely forbidden to publish a word about attempts on the lives of foreign sovereigns, or acts of sedition in foreign countries, for it is not good that such things should be made known to our loyal and peaceable populations.

You must not mention these regulations in the columns of your journal, because they might provoke criticisms or draw unpleasant observations from ill-conditioned minds.

There is little chance for "scoops" under such regulations and journals which make a specialty of sensations would have small opportunity to work up a paying subscription list. Even the newsboys would be deprived of an excuse to call "extry!"

Here are two old printers' toasts which at the rate that linotypes are replacing hand-set work, will soon be as unintelligible to the craft as they are to the outside world:

Woman—Rule of our infancy; guide of our childhood; measure of our youth; fat take of our manhood; star of our hope; pearl of our middle age; she corrects the last stick; smooths the last sheet, and gives the last embrace ere we frisket to the skies.

The Printer—The master of all trades—he beats the farmer with his hoe, the carpenter with his rule, and the mason with setting up tall columns; he surpasses the lawyer and the doctor in attending his cases, and beats the parson in the management of the devil.

From Laird & Lee comes A Guide to Paris. Now, a guide book is never looked upon as a humorous work, but this little book is inexpressibly amusing, with its anecdotes of droll mistakes and its directions given in a way to put the most grumbling traveler in good humor. It is gotten up by Professor Maury of the University of Paris and is of immense, practical value, containing maps, directions, advice-guides to every possible place, also giving the most rational pronunciation to follow the French that I have ever yet come across.

It is said that Henry James, the novelist, asked an American girl in London if there was not a river in this country called the Potomac. "Oh, yes," she answered; "and I should have thought you knew all about it, because there is a place on it called Mount Vernon, where a man named Washington once lived. You are sure to have heard of him, you know, because his father was and Englishman." This would have been quite witty on her part if her history had been a little more accurate.

A Philadelphia mother reads a child's story paper regularly to her little daughter, and most of the tales are continued from week to week. The other day the little one heard the expression, "writers' cramp," and asked what it meant. "It is a stiffening or cramping of the fingers, my dear," was the reply; people who write a great deal often get it and have to stop writing for awhile." "Oh!" said the little miss, as a great light broke upon her perceptive faculties, "that is it, is it? I've often wondered why the writers of those nice stories always stop in such interesting places."

Pierri Loti (Lieutenant Viaud), who was recently restored to his rank in the French navy, has been intrusted with a diplomatic mission to Persia and Afghanistan. This will be interesting news to Loti's many admirers, as he was contemplating a visit to central Asia when ordered to report for duty, and it was feared that the literary world would lose some delightful books. M. Viaud is said to frankly acknowledge that he is not of much value as a sailor. As a child he aspired to be a minister.

THE BOOKWORM.

Santa Fe Route

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St., Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway.
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street

Lake Tahoe

The Most Picturesque Mountain Lake on the Continent

Its Attractive Resorts

Tahoe City	Tallac
McKinney's	Lakeside House
Rubicon Park	Glenbrook
Emerald Bay	Deer Park Inn

Glen Alpine Springs

Afford fine hotels, home comforts and all modern conveniences at reasonable rates.

Endless opportunity for outdoor recreation, such as boating, bathing, steamer excursions around the lake, mountain climbing, sight seeing, hunting and fishing

The atmosphere is pure, dry and health giving. Absolutely no malaria and no insect pests. Nights cool and delightful. Holders of Ogden Route tickets with sufficient limit may be granted a stop-over at Truckee to visit the lake. Side trip including trip around the lake, $6.00.

ALL AGENTS OF THE

Southern Pacific Company

are supplied with handsomely illustrated folders for free distribution, giving full and complete information. Ask or send for one.

S. A. WHITE H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W. H. PORTER
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 SAN FRANCISCO

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.

DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF

PAPER

Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty

401-403 Sansome St.
SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence

Livery and Sale Stables

423 Post Street,

W. F. BRIDGE, Proprietor

Telephone No. 1323 San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY

Office, 1004 Market Street

TELEPHONE, SOUTH-420

TELEPHONE MAIN 240

George D. Graham
MANUFACTURER OF
Printing and Lithographic INKS
Printers' Rollers and Composition
Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials
529 COMMERCIAL ST.
Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.

Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.

609 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer
. . of . .
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
Schillinger's Patent Sidewalk and Gardenwalk a specialty
Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

UNITED STATES BREWERY

311-313 FULTON STREET

CELEBRATED Steam Beer

ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS

EDWIN E. PARKER BENJ. L. TARBOX

The Reception

206 SUTTER ST., San Francisco.

Private Rooms for Ladies Music Room at
Oysters in Every Style. Disposal of Patrons
TELEPHONE MAIN 1231.

A No. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton

JAS. P. DUNNE & CO. . .
No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL . . .
Fourth and Market Sts.
Overcoats and Valises Checked Free
TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR
THE MANHATTAN . . .
25 Geary Street, S. F.
Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5611

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free. A valuable book for men.

W. SCHEPPLER

DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

Summer Resorts

BLUE LAKES HOTEL
* * *

Conducted in a quiet home-like manner. The best of tables, fine fishing and hunting. Inclosure of 25x60 feet in shallow water for women and children. Rates $10 to $12 per week in hotel or cottages according to location Ample accommodations. Round trip good for six months, $9.50, via S.F and N. P. to Ukiah, thence by stage from Palace Hotel.

Address J WILSON, Bertha P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

LAUREL DELL . . .
* * *

Increased facilities for comfort and pleasure. New dining room, 32x170 feet, overlooking lake. Driving, boating, bathing, fishing, bowling, etc. Lighted by gas.

H. WAMBOLD, Bertha P. O., Lake Co.

ANDERSON SPRINGS . . .
* * * Lake County

Natural Steam, Hot Sulphur and Iron Baths. Rates, $8 to $14 a week; telephone. Round trip, $8. Write for particulars.

J. ANDERSON, Proprietor,
Anderson Springs, Middletown P. O.

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging.

Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room, telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5.50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References, any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

GLENBROOK . . . Lake County, California

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish,
If you want to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation.
If you want pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an exhilarating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

Agua Caliente Springs Hotel, SONOMA VALLEY
* *

Two hours from San Francisco, via Tiburon Ferry. Warm mineral swimming and tub baths. Water, gas, electric bells. Rates, $10 to 12 per week, $2 per day.

Address AGUA CALIENTE SPRINGS,
Agua Caliente, Sonoma Co., Cal

Howard Springs . . . Lake County, (Putah P. O.)
* *

Hot and cold mineral springs; hot steam and plunge baths of great healing power—will cure rheumatism, nervous diseases kidney troubles, etc. Terms $10 and $12 per week. Special rates to families. Postoffice and telephone. Round trip tickets $10 at Southern Pacific office.

Address MRS. R. J. BEEBY.

Bonanza Springs . . . Lake County, Cal.
* *

A NATURAL camping ground; five different mineral springs. We cater to campers only, and invite all who want good water pure air, fishing and hunting, to come. Hot and cold mineral baths. Cottages neatly furnished to rent from $1.50 per week. Provisions, hay, grain etc., can be purchased on the grounds. Teams meet stage at Seiglers.

Address R. F. DOCKERY, Bonanza Spgs., Putah P. O., Lake Co.

HOTEL EL PASO DE ROBLES

"Pass of the Oaks"—twenty-five miles from ocean—where the beautiful Salinas valley runs into the foothills. The mountain ozone produces a healthful atmosphere for the sick.

Numerous cottages are dotted about grounds where invalids and convalescents in calm repose recover their wonted Health.

OTTO E. NEVER, PASO ROBLES, CAL — CITY OFFICE, 636 MARKET ST

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

Wm. B. Hooper, Manager — San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA ✷

1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY ✷

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY. ✷

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

Pacific Carriage Co.

OLIVER HINKLEY
SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.

STANDS:

General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street

California Hotel N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny 48 Eighth Street

TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

Town Talk does Printing of all Kinds

—— FULTON ——
LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY
246 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.
Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons; Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 561c

TELEPHONE MAIN 400
MOISE KLINKNER CO.
RED RUBBER STAMPS, STENCILS
BOX & BURNING BRANDS
MEDALS, BADGES, CHECKS, DIES.
320 SANSOME ST. SAN FRANCISCO.
MOISE'S EASY SHINE. MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

"TOWN TALK"
Moise's
ARTISTIC
RAISED LETTER
SIGNS

Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST
TEL MAIN 5522.

3253 FILLMORE ST.
TEL. WEST 152

EDUCATIONAL

SELBORNE SCHOOL... FOR BOYS
... SAN RAFAEL....
* *
The school will reopen on August 29th in the fine new buildings, heated by steam and lighted with electricity.
For catalogue apply to the Principal,
REV. CHARLES HITCHCOCK
SAN RAFAEL

TRINITY SCHOOL... 3300 WASHINGTON ST. SAN FRANCISCO.
(FOUNDED 1876) Boarding and Day School for Young Men and Boys
Prepares for university and college.
Accredited with the University of California and the Leland Stanford University. A faculty of eleven professors and teachers.
Boarders limited to thirty-five. Christmas term opens August 1st
REV. DR. E. B. SPALDING, Rector.

DO YOU KNOW
A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT
Send or Sample Copy of the
OAKLAND TRIBUNE
and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco
Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory
40 ELLIS ST., Rooms 1 and 2
SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00
Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

LASH'S KIDNEY AND LIVER BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO, SHELTERED FROM OCEAN WINDS AND FOGS. VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE; EASY TERMS. AMERICAN LAND AND TRUST CO., 132 MARKET STREET, S. F.

LARKSPUR

Is destined to be the metropolis of Marin County and is San Francisco's most popular suburb. It is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mount Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially, Eminent physicians pronounce it a great sanitarium.

A Great Sanitarium Many attractions are offered—such as sea bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks snd drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations; for, Larkspur is building up more rapidly than any other town on the N. P. C. R. R. Large esidences and cottages for sale on installment payments. Do not pay rent when the same money will purchase a beautiful home. Cottages for rent; property exchanged.

AMERICAN LAND and TRUST CO.
132 MARKET STREET

Mont Rouge Vineyard

Livermore Valley California

CHAUCHÉ & BON,

PROPRIETORS

Office and Depot, 17 First St.

Telephone Main 1514 SAN FRANCISCO.

GERMEA

THE

KING

OF

BREAKFAST

FOODS

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .

Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,

Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States

Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,

San Francisco.

Prices Hammered 25 to 50 per cent. DOWN SAVED

CLEARANCE SALE

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 MARKET STREET, S. F.

'Phone, Main 1659

Town Talk Prints Menus

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

TOWN TALK

BOHEMIAN CLUB EDITION

August 26 '99.

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,187,617.90
Capital actually paid up in cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1899	27,656,513.03

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier, William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, July 1, 1899,	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital,	1,000,000
Reserve Fund,	205,215
Contingent Fund,	442,763

E. B POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER ROBERT WATT THOMAS MAGEE DANIEL E. MARTIN
GEORGE C. BOARDMAN W. C. B. DE FREMERY ALBERT MILLER
GEO. TASHEIRA E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO
WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

Mutual Savings Bank of San Francisco

33 POST STREET, below Kearny

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE BLDG.

Guaranteed Capital - $1,000,000 — Paid-up Capital - - - $300,000

JAMES D. PHELAN, President — S. G. MURPHY, Vice President
GEO. A. STORY, Cashier — JOHN A. HOOPER, Vice-President
C. B. HOBSON, Assistant Cashier

"Rate of interest on loans secured by improved San Francisco real estate six per cent."

Interest paid on Deposits. Loans on approved securities.

Deposits may be sent by postal order, Wells, Fargo & Co., or Exchange on City Banks. When opening accounts send signature.

OCEANIC Steamship Company

The S. S. Australia

Sails for Honolulu Wedn'sday, Aug 23, at 2 p.m.

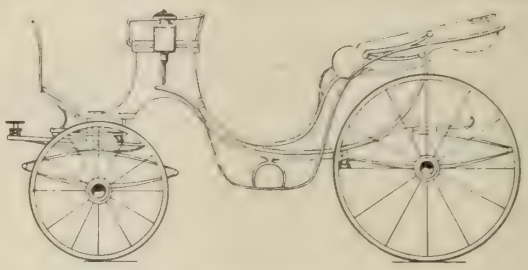
The S. S. ALAMEDA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, Sept 6, at 10 p.m.

Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.

FREIGHT OFFICE—327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855.

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A. N. Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart. H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.

California Optical Co. Scientific & Manufacturing Opticians — Strictly Reliable

You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, August 26, 1899

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

THE IDIOSYNCRASIES of the dailies are most amusing. For over two years prize fights have been conducted in this city under police supervision, and apparently with the approval of the newspapers, for none called attention to the flagrant violation of the state law. That law made it a state prison offense to engage in or conduct a prize fight. Every newspaper in the city was cognizant of the law, and yet the newspapers encouraged its violation, by maintaining a strict editorial silence and by devoting columns of local space to the descriptions of the affairs, to interviews with the pugilists and their managers, and to gossip concerning prospective battles. In some instances they declined to give space to news about field sports upon the plea that they were overcrowded with "stuff about the big fight." They could have put an end to pugilism in this city by denouncing the violators of the law and demanding the arrest of the offenders. They preferred to stimulate interest in the sport, and as a consequence of this plainly indicated preference, the impression was created that pugilism was not offensive to the community, and the legislature of the state repealed the prohibitory statute and enacted a law licensing glove contests. The governor approved the measure, and the fight promoters proceeded to provide entertainment for their patrons. All went well until one night last week when a certain brute met his death at the hands of another brute in the presence of several thousand enthusiastic people representing all classes of society. Thereupon the shocked and virtuous editors of the dailies indulged in hysterical denunciation of the outrage. Are they not amusing? TOWN TALK is not an advocate of the sort of physical culture which is promoted within the roped arena, and in accordance with the code formulated by the aristocratic Marquis of Queensbury, but we suffered no perceptible shock through the violent removal of a red-headed pugilist. Moreover we believe that glove contests will continue to be held, and that the dailies will continue to emblazon bulletins from the ring side on the facades of their tall structures, and subsequently utter shrieks of derision at one another for failing to get out the first announcement of the coup de grâce.

A MOUNT VERNON society composed of women who have the courage of their convictions declares its purpose to prosecute all boys under ten years of age who may attend any theatrical performance unaccompanied by their parents. The ladies have also induced a judge in the town to announce in advance that he will sentence every boy caught in the crime of attending a theatre unattended by his parents to be confined in some institution until he shall reach the age of twenty-one years.

It is just such wholesale and high handed proceedings as these which stand in the way of "women's rights." There is no law in this or any other land which gives the judge of a police court the authority to incarcerate a boy for five years or more and brand him as a felon without opportunities for education or for fitting himself to earn a living simply because he has spent an evening in what may have been highly intellectual enjoyment. There is no attempt to distinguish between a dive performance and Henry Irving in Shakespeare nor apparently is there any effort to prevent girls from going where they please without chaperonage. It is well that the Constitution of the United States contains a clause forbidding the infliction of cruel and unusual punishment. The young men of twenty-one who emerge from their confinement of five or more years for having committed the heinous offense of attending a play would not be very anxious to cast their first vote to sustain a government under which such tyranny was permitted. The boy of today is the man of tomorrow and upon him depends the stability of our government. Too much restraint is apt to produce the same effect as too little. Both lead to anarchy. This good Mount Vernon society might profitably employ itself in making red flannel night caps for the little Hottentots.

IT IS REPORTED that the Harper-Doubleday and McClure combination contemplate issuing a new magazine on the lines of the Review of Reviews, but it hardly seems possible that there is an opening for another. The field of literature—if one can be justified in applying the term—is already so overcrowded that one would think it more necessary to prune down the production and add strength to some of those already in existence. There is no possible subject but which now has its literary exponent. Every ism and ology hastens into print. There are not only medical and surgical magazines but regular publications devoted to special diseases. Faith Cure, Christian Science, Phrenology, Hypnotism, Palmistry and all the other sciences are represented. There is not only The Voice of Labor, but the voice of each minute subdivision of labor. Every religious body and every fraternal organization is represented. Colleges, high schools and Sunday schools are all supplied. The first thing that the various Boys' Clubs and Homes turn their attention to is securing a few cases of battered type, giving the inmates a slight smattering of the printers' craft, getting out a paper and trying to compete with regular offices in securing job work. One wearies of the items concerning the papers gotten up by passengers of ocean steamers and snow bound railway trains. Aristocracy and royalty have invaded the field in England and the ubiquitous small boy can be found about the wholesale districts "rustling for ads" for his Clarion or Sunrise in a manner that would open the eyes of those who know him only as a shirker. The butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker each has his special trade journal. The Journalist, the Writer and the Author add to the burden and the daily and Sunday papers and general magazines do their best to cover all ground. Every section of the country has its magazine and of late the railroad gazetteers have been invading the field of descriptive and historic writing by publishing in pamphlet form excellent articles by competent writers. Among the first to join the rush in the Klondike district were some young printers who invested all their spare funds in an outfit with which they expected to reap a golden harvest by establishing a periodical, and they probably would have realized their hopes if they could have succeeded in getting it in intact. As it was, the press and other accessories were abandoned on one of the trails and their journalistic hopes found a grave in the Arctic snow. There are very few men—and we may add, women—in these days who do not in their secret souls consider themselves competent to "run a paper," and it looks as though there were very few who were not making a trial, even though they only run it into the ground.

THE STAGE BLONDE has had her day, according to Manager Lederer, and since the stage beauty sets the fashion for the rest of womankind, we may expect to see job-lots of blondine sold for lesss than cost while brunine goes up in price. In some unaccountable fashion blondes have managed to gain a reputation for all the virtues and from our earliest childhood we are made familiar with

> Anna Maria, fresh and fair,
> Sky blue eyes and golden hair,

as a type of the angelic. Art, literature and the drama persistently represent the vixens and villains as of the brunette type and yet in every day life, experience does not reveal virtue as a matter of complexion. The criminal records produce quite as many fair law breakers as dark ones and some of the most notorious names therein are those of blonde females. The dear deluded darling of a farmer's daughter in stage-land would fall short of her character did she not make her first appearance in blonde pigtails, and the villain, of either sex, would be unrecognizable in other guise than brunette while the comic element would fail to be funny in anything but a bald red wig. There used to be a doleful poem beloved of "elocutioners" of which we recall but a single line.

> Ah, consumption has no pity for blue eyes and golden hair.

One can readily see why the Marguerites, Elsas and Brunhildas of opera should be blonde, since so many of the leading characters are of Norse or Germanic origin the type of which is fair; but why should every leading lady of every type of stage presentation insist upon the same complexion, and why should one of the main causes of dissensions in every amateur performance be the determination of every woman in the cast, irrespective of age or occupation, to appear in a blonde cheveleur of precisely the same shade of infantile gold? Perhaps the only answer is the universal woman's reason—Because.

MRS. SUSIE RYNHART has mounted the lecture platform. She is engaged in relating her harrowing experiences while attempting to carry "the word of God" and a year old infant into the interior of Thibet in defiance of the laws of that country. The infant naturally succumbed to the hardships of a journey on horseback at an altitude of fourteen thousand feet and one can only wonder at the brain capacity of a woman who would subject a child to such needless suffering. It is a curious commentary upon missionaries, either as organized bodies or as individuals, that although loudly protesting their belief that God, in his infinite wisdom, created the world and all it contains, nevertheless He is quite incapable of instructing His creatures without assistance and each and every one of them looks upon the special brand of creed which he accepts as the only one entitled to use the patented trade mark "The word of God." Egotism and self-assertion have quite as much to do as religion with these schemes for forcing closed doors and ill-advised efforts to set at defiance the laws of these countries and outrage the decencies of their communities are at the back of the greater part of the massacres which take place. There seems to be some sort of a nebulous idea that the government of the United States is in duty bound to protect those who are engaged in "spreading the gospel" and "upholding the Christian religion." Never was there a greater mistake. This country is bound to protect its citizens engaged in peaceful and legitimate occupations, but one has to stretch the interpretation to make it cover actions which directly contravene the religious observances of foreigners in their own homes, however absurd they may appear to us. Many of these enthusiastic religionists have only the most vague ideas as to the beliefs which they feel called upon to combat. They have no notion whatever of the point of resemblance from which they might make a start in their crusade. No, the "poor heathens have no Bible." Thousands of dollars are collected every year all over the civilized world to be devoted to saving their souls, willy-nilly. As to practical results, there are always enough so-called converts for the sake of the loaves and fishes, or the commercial advantages or because they are willing to be accommodating, and one god more or less makes no particular difference. Millions of Bibles are distributed and always eagerly accepted. It has been an open secret these many years that the Orientals depend upon this source for the raw material which they "convert" into papier mache articles to be disposed of chiefly in occidental markets. It is related in Frank Leslie's for July on the authority of the zealous and successful missionary himself, that having "labored hard in the work of converting the Chinese to Christianity, there was unfeigned rejoicing in all the missions of China and the churches of America when the demand for Bibles on the part of our converts culminated in an order for eighty-four thousand Bibles at one shipment." The gentleman says it was "at once the most encouraging and the most disillusioning experience of my life," for an inquiry into the method of soul-saving which brought about such wholesale results brought to light a practical commercial basis. It seems that firecrackers are manufactured at home, the contractor furnishing the powder only, the workman supplying the paper. Now, paper is not so cheap in China but Bibles can be had for the asking, hence the demand and the whole eighty-four thousand were used to make firecrackers' holy smoke that time. A religion which is not a natural outcome of the life and civilization of a nation does not fit its needs and can never be more than a veneering of the surface. The Kanakas today are, at bottom, as pagan as they were before the missionaries began with them. The Hindoos are still what they were. Who ever met with an acceptably Christian Chinese or a really converted Indian? The Mohammedans are decidedly not dying out nor are the Jews—not for lack of missionaries amongst them. Meanwhile, an application has been made at the Copley Square Library, Boston, Massachusetts, in these United States of North America, for "some book that told about Christ and had Genesis and Exodus in it," from which one might infer that there was a fair field for religious propaganda nearer home.

IT IS EXTREMELY DIFFICULT for the people of this country to understand why there should be any doubt as to the result of the trial of Dreyfus. It appears that the prosecution cannot make out a case and that therefore his acquittal should follow, but the judicial system of France is not founded upon the same principles as that of the United States. The failure of the prosecution to establish guilt is not sufficient for a verdict of acquittal; the defendant must prove his innocence and the proof must be made as clear as the sun. The Anglo-Saxon standards of justice cannot be applied to France, and in the case of Dreyfus even the French standards of justice cannot be adhered to, because the honor of the army is involved, and there is nothing that concerns the Frenchmen more than the welfare of the army. The Dreyfus case has ventilated the rottenness of the army, but the Frenchmen feel that if Dreyfus is convicted the army will be vindicated, and therefore they are earnestly hoping for his conviction. They concede that if his innocence were demonstrated, six ministers of war would be disgraced and that is a calamity they object to having precipitated.

The sentiments of many of the French people are expressed in the following language of Paul Deroulede, the socialist:

"There is not one accused but two, and the first of the accused is now France—France, her generals, her statesmen, her entire political organization, and behind if with few exceptions, the whole social organism, the whole people. Before condemning France to the punishment of Jewish oppression, before binding her hands with the cords of infamy and making her follow barefooted, with the halter about her neck, the caparisoned horse of Captain Dreyfus, prove to us, demonstrate to us, that he is worthy to remount it, or else let him return to the devil from whom he comes and leave the French people in peace. To substitute the uncertainty of his innocence for the uncertainty of his guilt is to perpetuate the affair, to revive hatreds and to commit a crime of lese patrie."

Such are the principles which Deroulede is proclaiming day and night in France and he has many followers. The crime that concerns them is not that of lese humanite. In their opinion it is preferable for Dreyfus to suffer though innocent than for the mere crime of lese patrie to be committed.

THIS special edition of TOWN TALK is not authorized by the Bohemian club, but was published on the responsibility of the editor, who recognizes in the club an institution of much interest to many who have not been blessed with the privilege of membership, and who will be entertained by a perusal of its history and its achievements. The club itself is a home for its members and as such is surrounded with all the sanctity and sentiment that a gentleman bestows upon his own roof-tree. Hence, the writer feels that no one should receive the impression that the club is responsible for the exploiting of its own affairs.

"THE HUB"
CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
132 KEARNY STREET, Corner Sutter
EXCLUSIVE
HIGH-GRADE
CLOTHIERS
Fall Ideas=Right and Ready
COME TRY SOME ON

The Temptress

BELIKE thou art a temptress come from hell,
The devil often dons a fair disguise;
And yet I like the laughter in thine eyes,
And for thy lips—I love them wondrous well.
They do remind me of an ocean shell,
With all its murmurous melody of sighs,
Till I forget when captive to their spell,
The whispering music may be naught but lies.

Nay! Nay! I do thee wrong, have I not felt
The rosy rebels into sweetness melt,
And seen thee swoon beneath my warm caress?
What matter if thy lips the word withhold!
In the mute music of thy pulses bold,
Thy love grows voluble and doth confess.

Louis A. Robertson.

The Saunterer

DIFFERENT men have different minds and in no place is this more noticeable than in our clubs. There are always groups of what we call nowadays "knockers," and these all knock in different directions. Some are for changing the rules and regulations. Others are for cutting down the membership roll. Others believe in abolishing the bar and the dining-room. It is doubtful if a club could exist without its knockers. However it is likely that the Bohemian club contains less of this element than is numbered among any other San Francisco club. Perhaps this is because

"Good fellowship rules as its goodly king,
His subjects all to his mandate bow;
He ruleth supreme, and there is nothing
Of petty strife—but a loyal vow!

Bohemia's realm is a land of cheer,
And sordid care enters not its gates;
Comradeship blooms in its atmosphere
And a laugh through its halls reverberates."

Almost every member of the club who is at all prominent has figured in a story of some kind. Many of these stories have appeared in the daily and weekly papers of this city but they are worthy of repetition. Horace Platt has had more than the average number of bons mots accredited to him. I remember one story which describes an evening at the theatre when Mr. Platt, accompanied by "the actor's friend" and a few other Bohemians, occupied a box, and opposite their box was another in which the occupants were also members of the club. I believe they were all guests of Jimmie Hamilton. It was along toward the third act that an occupant of the second box came over to the one wherein sat Mr. Platt.

"Good evening," he said; "the others have made me a committee of one to pay my respects."

"Really?" drawled Mr. Platt, adjusting his eyeglasses that he might see more plainly who were sitting in the other box. "Do you know this is the first time I ever heard of any of that crowd paying anything?"

A story is told that one time Emil Carlsen and Willis Polk had a desire to study in the realistic and they begged Harry Bigelow to take them through the morgue. They got a lot of sketches but they felt weaker than the small boy essaying his first smoke behind his father's barn. Finally the driver of the morgue wagon entered and said that he had brought a suicide's body this time. The man had cut his throat. Bigelow immediately ushered his visitors into the operating room, where they found the supposed corpse still alive but unconscious. Just as they bent over the would-be suicide a huge gasp came forth and the wound opened. Poor little Willis could stand no more and fainted dead away. When Bigelow looked around for the artist he had fled no one knew where. However, only a few moments had elapsed when a messenger rushed in saying a man was dead in the alley. The driver of the wagon soon brought the corpse into the morgue. It was a ghastly place to smile but he could not refrain from it. For the new corpse was only poor Carlsen, who had dropped in the alley in a dead faint which had been mistaken by the bystanders for the real article.

A feature of the Christmas jinks has always—up to last year, when the usual Santa being ill the Bohemians would out of love for him appoint no other—been a Christmas tree with appropriate gifts for all the members. I recollect hearing that at the jinks of five years ago one of the gifts created an immense laugh. The recipient was, I think, Dr. Cushing and his present, a copyof the Woman's Examiner.

There is a legend extant in the annals of the Press and Bohemian clubs that the Press club cat and the Bohemian club owl did not always dwell together in harmony. It took more than water and firewater to restore peace—in short, a conflagration. When the Press club burned down, tradition says the black cat knew not where to take up its habitation. As it looked around, in desolate dismay, down upon the feline swooped a large-winged owl and beneath its sheltering feathers the little cat found refuge. Thus, says the legend, peace and harmony took up their abode in the breasts of the cat and the owl.

They have given many dinners at the club to distinguished visitors from the east and from Europe. One of these functions was in honor of Hon. T. B. Reed and Hon. F. F. Low presided. It was not the club entire that acted as host upon this occasion, but former residents of Maine, and beside the guest of honor there were many others invited, not by any means all Maine men. Almost every actor and author of note has been dined or breakfasted by the Bohemians—Henry Irving, E. S. Willard, Charles Dickens Jr., Rudyard Kipling and others. It was at a dinner given to Frederick Warde by W. Greer Harrison that Horace Platt read his beautiful essay on "Shakespeare." There is more than one member of the club beside Jimmie Hamilton and Greer Harrison who is an admirer of the immortal bard, and Mr. Platt is one of the most enthusiastic of these Shakespearean students.

One of the best stories told about Uncle George Bromley is an incident that occurred to the veteran Bohemian when he was in Boston in 1895 attending the conclave of Knights Templar, he being a Knight of California Commandery No. 1. In Tremont street one day a lady stepped up to Sir George and said:

"Oh, how delighted I am to see you again. How do you do?"

Of course Uncle George raised his hat and shook hands most cordially, but somehow the lady did not seem satisfied.

"Don't you remember me, Mr. Bromley? Why, it was only six years ago that I met you at Mrs. ——'s."

Then a dash of inspiration came to the other. He seized both the lady's hands:

"Remember! Why, I have been striving for six years to forget you."

The late Isaac H. Bromley, editorial writer on the New York Tribune, was an honorary member of the Bohemian club. He was a brother of George T. The New York journalist had a fine fund of humor. A story, however, that used to amuse him very much was one that told how his son Isaac Jr., the present advertising manager of the New York and New Haven railway company, when working as a reporter on the Tribune was given a detail by the city editor to interview some oldtime character in New York.

"Give full play to your humor," said the editor, "and you can have a column and a half in the Sunday paper."

When Ike Jr. told his father about this detail, later, he said:

"How do you imagine, father, he knew I had any humor about me?"

"Perhaps he thinks you may have inherited it," said Bromley père.

Young Isaac fell into a brown study from which he awoke with the query:

"Does he know mother?"

Ever since Kühne Beveridge modeled George T. Bromley's bust for the Bohemian club in honor of his seventy-fifth birthday, the fair sculptor has enrolled herself among the vast army of Uncle George's nieces. Since her first bits of modeling, Miss Beveridge has been doing remarkably well in New York and London. At a recent exhibition at her London studio, there was quite an arry of notabilities of her modeling from the Prince of Wales to Buffalo Bill. In a letter to Mr. Bromley, Miss Beveridge tells him that the family will soon start for South Africa where Kühne's step-father, the Baron von Wrede, has received an appointment as civil engineer. The younger sister, Ray Beveridge, has grown to be a beauty, I hear, and a wit also. She is a great favorite in London. Ray will be remembered here as the "little girl blacksmith," and her blacksmith shop in Sacramento at one of the state fairs was a prominent feature of the exposition. Ray made a striking figure in her leather apron presiding at the forge.

"Soak is an awfully honest man."

"Yes?"

"Yes. He's so straight that he won't take his whisky any other way."

I have not seen any of our golden youth wearing bracelets, though the golden girls are not backward about adopting such little fads as the new style ties and collars affected by their brothers. I can fancy bracelets being highly becoming to some of our young men about town whose beauty is of an effeminate cast. I hear that the bracelet worn by the Prince of Wales once belonged to Maximilian, the ill-fated Mexican emperor, but no doubt the prince is not superstitious. One night at the Zinkand I noticed a man wearing a bracelet, a magnificent snake of Roman gold with eyes of brilliants. The wearer's ornament naturally attracted considerable attention, especially as he was attired in an ordinary gray suit, a scarlet waistcoat, pink shirt and red tie. He was with two strikingly gowned women and those occupying seats at the other tables naturally supposed the trio to be people of distinction. But among all the society youths who were enjoying après théâtre refreshments upon that evening, and for whom the gaily dressed man's bracelet seemed to have such wonderful fascination, I have as yet noticed no imitators of the fad. However, as the fashion has come as far west as Chicago, it will likely strike us in time.

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco.

JOHN CAFFREY, Pacific Coast Representative.

Some of the dailies have been striving to verify the story of a social episode to which I briefly referred a fortnight back. It is the story of the elopement of a wealthy lumber merchant with his own sister-in-law. They have ascertained that the story is about a year old, and that the lumber merchant is now a physical wreck in Paris while his wife is residing in this city, but they have been unable to locate her sister. Although there appears to be scarcely a doubt of the truth of the story the dailies have not secured sufficient reliable corroboration to warrant them in giving it publicity. An interview was secured with the deserted wife who, by the way, is the daughter of a deceased grocer whose name is still a household word throughout the city, and she has maintained a dignified silence, neither affirming nor denying the reports. She declares, however, that her sister is now in New York.

Samuel M. Shortridge

Word comes from Paris that "our" Sybil Sanderson Terry is no longer in affluent circumstances. She is now staying at her mother's villa, dresses in the deepest black and is still very much affected by her loss. It is said that Terry mortgaged his Cuban estate to the extent of several millions shortly before his death and that now his widow has found it necessary to give up her magnificent Champs Elysées home owing to the necessity for retrenchment. During the years of Terry's protracted wooing, the singer dowered her mother and her two mature sisters with valuable presents which they have since turned into cash and she has a well filled jewel box but nothing more to show for the vast sums she received in the heyday of her success. I am told that the return of the family to San Francisco in the near future is not unlikely.

A London correspondent writes me that there is one American in the world's metropolis who is regarded by both his own countrymen and Englishmen as well as typical of the very best America can show in the way of a man. This is Henry White, who for years has been first secretary of the United States embassy. Mr. White has lived so long in England that he seems almost a part of London but at heart he is one of the best Americans that ever lived. He is, in feeling, another Dewey and is as modest, unassuming and altogether sterling as is the famous admiral whose name is just now on every lip. Mr. White is not a spread-eagle American but, in his gentlemanly way, he upholds his country whenever the United States is brought into discussion. He is a married man with a wife who is a typical American matron of the highest caste, and they have a smart young daughter who inherits the best qualities of both parents. It is such Americans as these that keep our nation popular abroad, in spite of the snobbish plutocrats who try to buy their way into the London swim only to get laughed at for their endeavors.

John D. Spreckels

I hear that American women are so much the vogue in London just now that the English women are aping them in every way. The surest way just at present for a man to win his way into a pretty girl's favor is to tell her she looks American, acts American, or her dress is American. Which is quite the reverse of the case over here, and sort of balances matters up, as it were. At Burlingame or in Santa Monica, if you would get a girl to look twice at you, you must say:

"Oh, how English you look. I should have taken you for an English girl, sure."

Raphael Weill returned from Paris on Sunday and the Sabbath déjeuners which were discontinued during his absence will now, I presume, be resumed. Mr. Weill, who is known among business men as one of the most solid of our merchants, shines in another capacity among Bohemian club members. On Sunday mornings, Mr. Weill dons cap and apron and enacts the roll of chêf. He is said to be most expert at concocting dainty dishes and is equally able to cope with a gas range or a chafing dish. Other Bohemians who have come "home" after lengthy absences are Colonel A. G. Hawes, who was in Mexico, and Harry Marshall, Frank Unger and Theodore Wores.

Stuart Robson is going to forsake comedy for a more serious line of work and is this season to appear in "The Gadfly," a dramatization of the novel. The play is said to be in the vein of "Daniel Rochat," which theatre-goers of some years ago will remember. In the Sardou drama Sara Jewett, I recollect, played the part of the Christian while Charles R. Thorne was the atheist. Ever since Maude Adams made such a success in "The Little Minister" and Viola Allen scored such a hit in "The Christian," plays in which clergymen figure have been regarded as winners by theatrical managers. Those who have read the novel "The Gadfly" will remember that its motive lies in the conscience-war between an advanced atheist and a priest of the most deeply religious type. While I cannot fancy Stuart Robson playing anything but liveliest comedy, still it is a move in the right direction that he should aim at something of more dramatic depth. His move is probably indicative of a general revulsion of feeling among the play-goers. After the succession of silly farces and musical comedies and salacious comedy-dramas, even a play with a problem is welcomed. But I sigh for the good old days of "The Charity Ball," "Saints and Sinners" and "The Henrietta."

Tradition says that "The drinks are on me" was originally an utterance of Hugh Burke.

We shall soon see no bald men in San Francisco, and Harry de Young, Donald Graham and the others who enjoy distinction in the social or political world will no longer be able to flatter themselves that they can outrank billiard balls. I am told that any fine day one may go to a down town building and see a procession of well known club men whose hirsute head coverings are getting scanty, each waiting for his turn to enter the studio of a hairdresser who claims to be able to make new hair grow upon the baldest head. She already has an enormous clientèle and her studio has been enlarged to a suite of six rooms, this enlargement being necessitated by the increase of business. Fifteen dollars a month is her price and she finds no difficulty in obtaining all the patients she wishes at this figure. Truly, vanity is not a fault possessed only by women.

J. O'N. Reis

The graves of two noted Bohemians lie just outside Honolulu. One of the graves is that of "Joe" Tilden, the other, that of Jules Tavernièr. The latter was a Frenchman born, an American by adoption. Before he became noted as a portrayer on canvas of Hawaiian scenes, particularly the volcanic phases of Mauna Loa, Tavernier had taken as the special feature of his paintings sketches of Indian life on the plains. Some of the most striking of the jinks cartoons in the club collection were the work of Tavernier. Four years before the passing of the artist, that prince of epicures, Joseph Tilden, was burned to death at his Hawaiian home. Tilden was, like Dan O'Connell, always one of the merriest spirits at Bohemian feasts. When he took up his residence in Honolulu, he was sadly missed. When he passed away forever, many tears were shed.

It was Jere Lynch, the Honorable Jeremiah Lynch, who presented the club with the Egyptian mummy that is commonly supposed to be that of the beautiful princess, daughter of the great Pharaoh, who rescued little Moses from his cradle in the bull-rushes and adopted him. The mummy, in a glass case, is treasured among other priceless possessions of the club.

There is a goodly band of artists in the club, of which some have moved to other cities, still however leaving their names on the membership roll. G. Cadenasso, Emil Carlsen, E. Peixotto, J. W. Clawson, H. S. Fonda, C. A. Jorgenson, Solly Walter, J. D. Strong, C. R. Peters, Bruce Porter, F. Marion Wells, C. J. Dickman and Amedee Joullin are some of Bohemia's artists.

Uncle George Bromley asked the question: If in the bright lexicon of youth there is no such word as fail, what word would you substitute?

Who would ever suspect Chief Justice Beatty of the Supreme court of being a hoodoo? Nobody, I am sure. And yet that venerable and esteemed jurist has entertained a lingering suspicion that concealed somewhere upon his person was a genuine Jonah. The justice is an ardent lover of the national game, and as Sacramento is the town from whence he hails he is a rooter in a mild way for the Gilt Edge team of that borough. But although the Gilts have been winning ball games with marked regularity it was never Justice Beatty's good fortune to applaud one of their victories until last Saturday afternoon. That is why he regarded himself as a hoodoo. He beamed with smiles last Saturday when the team from Sacramento won, and when leaving the grand stand after the game he said to an acquaintance:

"Well, it's a relief to know that I am not a hoodoo."

Phew! How those newspaper men of the citizens' celebration committee did jump on Adjutant-Genera Seamans of the national guard! And what a glorious opportunity it was for them to take a kick at our narrow-gauge governor! And how enthusiastically they administered the kick, too! If it were a calm day the impact could have been heard distinctly at the Farrallones. Governor Gage is probably beginning to realize that he was a trifle too gay with newspaper men at Sacramento. He ought to have learned a lesson from the experience of his fellow-townsman, the unlamented and unsung Mr. Markham who is now a dead one, and scarcely remembered as one of the governors of California. Gage's term has just begun but it would already be difficult to recall his name were it not for just such incidents as that arising out of the effrontery of his representative, General Seamans. The newspapers are getting even on Gage by keeping his name out of print except when there is a chance to smash him. He comes to town and nobody knows he is here. No attempts are made to interview him. He is given no more attention than if he were a clerk in his own office. In view of his comparative obscurity I can readily understand his desire to obtain a conspicuous position in the parade. The committee ought to assign him to a vehicle drawn by Seamans in full regalia.

James Madison Hamilton was the author of the expression, in greeting a new acquaintance: I am glad to see yon. For the time being you are as good as I am.

It is astonishing what a hold Henry Miller still wields over the heart of the matinee girl. Last Saturday afternoon the walls of the Columbia were lined with women who had come too late to get seats but who were perfectly willing to stand through the entire play. And Mr. Miller was called out four or five times after the second and third acts, and was twice obliged to make a little speech. Yet it is a matter of wonderment to me how Mr. Miller still manages to please the matinee girl. He is no longer young, he is growing stout around the waist, and everybody knows that he is a married man and devoted to his wife. I asked a smartly-hatted young woman standing near me in the lobby why it is that Henry Miller continues to be such a favorite.

"Why, don't you know?" she said. "It's because he knows how to make love. When he tells her how he loves her, he half closes his eyes, and you see his face turn pale—oh, it is indescribable."

She seemed to see that I was interested, for she went on without a pause:

"I have been attending matinees for ten years and I know every one of them. Mantell has a glare when he makes love, and leans over the back of the girl's neck. He is a wildly passionate wooer. But dear old Barrymore has a swagger that is simply superb, a sweet, sad smile and a languid, oh-I-wish-it-could-have-been expression. Faversham and Worthing go right up close to her and look fiercely down into her eyes. 'You must,' that look says—and she usually succumbs, in the play. Little Sothern gets confused, stammers, then braces up and goes through the ordeal with a do-or-die defiance. But, after all, I like the Miller style best. It is so refined."

And then the curtain went up.

George Loughborough and Miss Clement will accompany the R. B. Fithians of Santa Barbara on their sail to the South Sea islands.

Engraved . . .

Wedding Announcements and Invitations . . .

ROBERTSON'S

126 Post Street

Frank Norris' story entitled "A Man's Woman," now in course of publication, notwithstanding its power and originality of treatment, is marred by some defects incidental to an excess of realism. Certain chapters are devoted to the experiences of a professional nurse who is the heroine of the story. She takes charge of a surgical case requiring a delicate operation and the details of the treatment and even of the operation itself are given ruthlessly, though with an evident knowledge of the subject. There are but two considerations which can render such a description tolerable: It must contain something essential to the plot or it must be the means of creating an atmosphere. As far as the story has progressed the surgical details do not seem to belong to the plot, and here I would remind Mr. Norris of the French playwright's advice, not to put a gun in your play if it is not to go off. In the plots of some skillful writers such as Poe and Wilkie Collins, it will be found that even minute details furnish something upon which the story hangs. The other consideration is that of atmosphere or local color. If the writer's intention be to create this it defeats itself, for the ordinary reader—that is the reader who wants simply the story—will skip what he does not like or does not understand unless he thinks it has something to do with the plot. Surgical and medical details are especially abhorrent to the normal and healthy minded reader, and all the study and research which an author expends in arriving at perfection in them is simply a waste of force.

James D. Phelan
Ex-President and a Popular Wit of the Bohemian Club

Out on Twenty-First and Fair Oaks streets stands an ordinary looking two-storied residence which had the honor of serving as a habitation for Mrs. Langtry when she was a resident of California for divorce purposes, and from which she daily walked to Golden Gate park by way of a constitutional. There was one noticeable peculiarity in the arrangement of furniture which gave the casual passer-by an impression that the inhabitants were eternally house-cleaning. In the upper front room bay-window a large bureau stood, unscreened by blind or curtain, with its back turned to the street. Mrs. Langtry is, of course, but making use of the privilege of her sex and profession in maintaining her eternal youth, but her tale of years brings up the ancient story of a French actress, who on being interrogated in court upon the same subject, made a very liberal discount from facts. Later on in the progress of the case, her son, called up as a witness, was asked to state his age, whereupon he naively, but indignantly made answer: "Just a year older than my mother."

Mrs. Langtry's new mother-in-law, by the way, is a woman after the actress' own heart. She was married to Sir Henry de Bathe in 1871. She had been his mistress for several years and she bore him four illegitimate and two legitimate children. Mrs. Langtry's husband was their first lawful issue. Among those born out of wedlock are Lady Crossley, Mrs. Henry Lawson and Mrs. Hugh McCalmont—all pretty women, who have married the millions that have been apportioned by the press to their father Sir Henry de Bathe. In his day Sir Henry was the greatest dandy in London, but when called upon to fight he proved himself a gallant soldier.

I see that Katherine Bloodgood is still in the concert field. That is, she is at present in London passing a well earned vacation, but in the late fall she will return to fulfill her professional engagements under Victor Thrane's management. A portrait of Mrs. Bloodgood, in a décolleté black velvet gown and with her wavy brown hair dressed after the latest mode in coiffures, adorns the front page of the current Musical Courier. California takes more than a passing interest in Mrs. Bloodgood for, though she was born in the state of New York, she lived in San Diego nearly all her life. Pretty Kitty Spencer and her musical talents were talked about in San Diego long before the Bloodgood divorce suit brought her into prominence. It will be remembered as an event of last year that Kitty Spencer's husband and the father of her child, William D. Bloodgood, sued her for a divorce. Mrs. Bloodgood did not approve of divorces and preferred a separation, therefore she bitterly fought her husband's suit. It was on account of her child, I understand, that she disapproved of her marriage tie being severed by the courts, otherwise there would have been no opposition offered. Mrs. Bloodgood is devoted to her art but though nature has richly endowed her with voice and physical charms she has never evinced any desire to shine as an operatic star but has always appeared on the concert stage or as the contralto of prominent church choirs.

Ella Sterling Cummins Mighels, late of our city and later of New York but now a resident of London, has a story in the Chicago Inter Ocean. It is neither so good nor so bad as it might have been, but her girl is not a far off copy of M'liss. A constant dropping will wear away any stone; perhaps, in the course of another generation, if Californian writers have the courage to keep on they will finally convince the world that the young females of the human family on this edge of the continent go fully clothed and do not live in trees or subsist entirely upon pine nuts and acorns. Mrs. Mighels' intention is good. She aims well but does not hit her mark. However, her arrow makes a straight flight in the right direction and that, in itself, is much.

The Earl of Yarmouth is now the rage in Newport. He is engaged in heiress-trapping pastime and will no doubt catch big game. But the earl has a past and even his present is by no means free from suspicion.

General Joslah Howell

He is a promoter of private theatricals and some years ago he appeared as a ballet girl in Australia. It appears that in the antipodes the female impersonator is under the same sort of a cloud that hovers over the man with the mincing gait who has a penchant for assuming female roles, in this country. An Australian governor refused to receive the Earl of Yarmouth after his ballet girl impersonation and subsequently Queen Victoria took occasion to show that her views upon the impropriety of the impersonation were the same as those of the Australian executive. Nevertheless the Earl of Yarmouth is a social lion at Newport. Evidently the aristocrats of that swagger watering place do not draw the line at trivial peculiarities. The earl is a direct descendant of the Duke of Somerset, who was Lord Protector of England in the time of Edward IV.

The large number of patrons who crowded the aisles of J. J. O' Brien's & Co's spacious salesroom during the business hours of the past few days was an evidence that the Black and Colored Dress Goods and Ladies' Tailor-made suits specially advertised by that firm on Sunday, were found to be as the advertisement expressed it, "Positive Bargains at the prices quoted." During the coming week the display of Black Silk Waists, Fancy Neckwear and Ladies Eiderdown Dressing Sacques will be among the chief attractions at this popular establishment.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

Alameda's cultured set has set aside Ibsen and Browning for the nonce and is now going in for knowledge of color vibrations. Lectures on this timely subject are being given in series at the residence of Mrs. Marcus Wiggin, by Mrs. Norris.

On Saturday evening Mrs. E. S. Bonelli, assisted by her sons Ed and Al Mehlert, and Robert McLean, gave a curio social at Hotel Mount View, Ross valley, which proved to be a most successful event. Six prizes were given equally distributed among the masculine and feminine players. Guests from Mira Monte came over to take part in the games. Mrs. Auger and Mr. Oliver carried off the first prizes, the second were won by Mrs. Sanderson and Mr. Wainwright, the third by Mrs. Franks and Mr. Nathan. The pleasant evenings at the home of the Bonellis in Powell street have proved Mrs. Bonelli's charm as a hostess and she displayed her usual grace upon this occasion. The deligtful evening closed with dancing.

The Olympic club's prospects are brightening. For several years it has appeared as though the club were drifting to the demnition bow-wows. It was heavily burdened with debt, and its financial condition was such that men of means were afraid to be identified with its board of directors. Its athletes were suffering from ennui and all efforts to revive interest were in vain. Its membership was falling off and the personnel of its members was far below what it was in the days when the club was recognized as the leading athletic organization of the Pacific coast. It was felt that there was only one man in the club who could rescue it from a sad fate and that man was William Greer Harrison. Now that he has been prevailed upon to accept the presidency, and as he will have the co-operation of such men as John Elliott, most popular of all amateur athletes, and Henry R. Mann, John Hammer-

Thos. J. Barbour

William Greer Harrison

smith and O. B. Burns, there is scarcely any doubt but that an era of prosperity is impending. The big Post street club building will soon be something more than a mere bath house, and the winged oval will once more be worn with pride.

———

The California regiment having returned we should soon learn the facts concerning the record of Brigadier-General Smith. The man with the hammer has applied the instrument of malevolence to Smith with some severity and I should like to know just how the regiment regards him. I have reason to believe that Smith has been cruelly maligned, for upon investigation nearly every story in disparagement of him that I have heard proved false. Every volunteer officer I have interviewed has declared that Smith was one of the best officers in the Philippines. The regular officers have pronounced him the best volunteer officer. In view of the honors that have been conferred upon him I cannot understand why credence should be given to the stories that have been given circulation by those people who are prompted by envy to libel others in whispers. When an arbitration commission was appointed in Manila, consisting of two regular and three volunteer officers, Smith was honored with the position of chairman. If he were not an efficient officer he would not have been chosen for that responsible position. Subsequently an Army and Navy club was organized in Manila. Admiral Dewey is a member and Smith was its first president. A man's unpopularity does not win him such an honor. When it became necessary to select a governor-general of Negroes island every volunteer officer in the Philippines wanted the position, but Smith was chosen on account of his eminent fitness. In view of these facts it is incredible that Smith was guilty of anything that would reflect discredit upon himself or his regiment. He was a strict disciplinarian and as such he probably incurred the displeasure of some of the volunteers who were laboring under the misapprehension that the trip to the Philippines was taken for pleasure only. He compelled them to drill every day and prevented them as much as possible from indulging in pastimes that swell the sick list. Hence it was that there was less sickness in the California regiment than in any of the other volunteer organizations.

———

One of the musical events scheduled for October will be a concert by Miss Lilian Slinkey. This will be Miss Slinkey's first public appearance since her return from Milan, where she studied for some years, consequently her friends are all on the qui vive to hear her sing and to note the improvement foreign culture has made in her naturally fine voice.

———

Everybody will remember the series of recitals given iby Paloma Schramm and the marvelous manner in which the little pianist improvised from themes given her by people in the audience. It will also be remembered how when the child began her recital her soft cheeks would be flushed with a delicate pink. When she had neared the end of her concert, what a difference was noticed—the cheeks had paled to ghastliness. I was not surprised when the dispatches this week announced the mental and physical collapse of the child genius.

Tom T. Lane

TOWN TALK

George T. Bromley

Mrs. Cavendish-Bentinck, whom I mentioned last week as being one of the leaders in London society, is a twin sister of Mrs. Ogden Mills, who has always been regarded as one in the shining lights of the New York swim. The sisters are said to be very much alike in looks and manner. Both were married about the same time and both have young daughters who made their first bows to society last season. Mrs. Cavendish-Bentinck, my London friends tell me, has a magnificent town-house in Whitehall Gardens, London. I remember reading of a cotillon given about two years ago by the Cavendish-Bentincks when some untoward circumstance caused the electric lights to go out and simultaneously every room was in darkness. There was a positive panic until, after much search, two candles were discovered on Mrs. Bentinck's writing-desk.

———

It was said at the time that the scene presented when the tiny, flickering candlelight revealed the frightened guests, huddled together as they had been moving in the mazes of the valse, was indescribably amusing. In London houses when they are lighted by electricity one can rarely find a candle for it is never supposed such articles will be needed. But Mr. Bentinck and his butler went to the chest holding the family plate and, while the two men dragged forth all the long unused candlesticks, some of the guests were sent next door to borrow candles to grace them. Of course at that hour shops were impossible. And while the candles were being put into their holders a servant was sent off to the electric light company. However, it was fully half an hour before the lights were in order again. Such are some of the inconveniences incident upon dispensing hospitalities in London.

[Photo by Thors.]

Raphael Weill

One of the Most Successful of Bohemia's amateur chefs

———

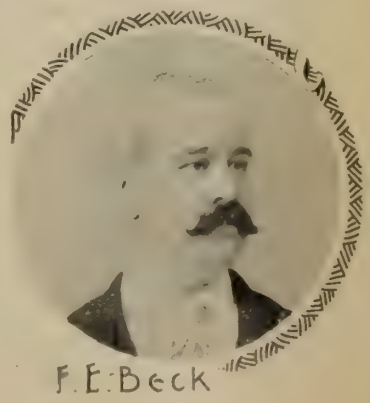
Editor Peck of the Bookman declares "The Vampire" "the best short poem that has been written in the past ten years," and Ambrose Bierce says that the rock upon which Editor Peck's literary galleon has struck is a kind of touchstone to test the merit of navigators on the high seas of letters. He does not agree with Mr. Peck and incidentally states that not one writer in a dozen knows poetry when he sees it. He intimates that if Editor Peck were not afflicted with the congenital delinquency he would not prefer "The Vampire" to "The Recessional" as poetry. And what about Bierce's "Invocation?" Has there been any better poetry than that written in the past ten years? If there has, then I must confess myself afflicted with that same congenital delinquency. I hope that I will not hear Mr. Bailey Millard suggesting "The Man with the Hoe" as the "very bestest." If he refrains I will pardon him for classing it with "Thanatopsis."

———

The Reverend (?) John Alexander Dowie, whose Faith Cure Home is under investigation in Chicago by reason of the number of recent deaths under his ministrations, was quite well known hereabouts a decade ago. He established himself as a divine healer both in Oakland and in this city and managed to take up good sized collections from those who were duped into making contributions, of which of course he rendered no account. He held forth in some large hall or theatre, professing to heal all sorts of disease through faith on the part of the sufferer and his own touch and prayers. Part of his stock in trade was a thin little girl, his daughter, precocious beyond her acknowledged age, who used to take the platform and discuss in a shrill piping voice of her love for and faith in the Lord who had cured her of innumerable and unnameable ailments. His wife also gave testimony as to her experience and materially assisted him in transferring other peoples' coin to his pockets. Though professedly owning nothing, Dowie has been shrewd enough to have all the property of his so-called Zion city placed in his own name. The assessed value of the concern is in the neighborhood of three hundred thousand dollars, not a bad showing for about ten years' work.

———

The warm wave that has struck San Francisco this week has brought in its wake a revival of interest in that form of refreshment exemplified in the once raging fad for ice cream soda, water ices and ice cream. The most up to date bachelor maid, who has educated herself up to a taste for cool beer and plain cocktails, has gone back to her old love. One evening last week I dropped into a candy store in Kearny street and noticed a crowd of people enjoying post-theatre refreshments of a light iced nature. And the matinee girl now treats herself and her friends on warm days to that delicious restorative, plain ice cream soda



Sands Forman
First Secretary of the Bohemian Club

Bill Barton has returned to town with stacks of gold and Bohemians are making merry over his return. Barton has not been up to the Klondike as might be supposed from his sudden acquisition of great wealth. He has been in New York during the greater part of the period of his absence and while there he succeeded in making a deal with a big corporation that has large interests in asphaltum mines, and he is now reputed to be a millionaire. Joe Redding heralded the story to this city when he came out for the midsummer jinks, and Barton made his appearance in the streets the other day, much to the surprise of his old friends, and corroborated the tale of the stroke of good fortune. Several years ago he obtained an interest in an asphaltum mine in Ventura county and tried to introduce the product in the local market but failed. The supervisors were doing business with several contractors who had the foresight to give them a substantial interest in their business and as a consequence Barton's asphaltum was pronounced unfit for use. But it has been found good enough for New York and other large cities. I understand that Northrup Cowles and George Hall were also considerably enriched by the New York deal. Barton will be remembered by many San Franciscans as the author of that once popular rollicking song, "Razzle Dazzle."

Ed H. Hamilton
[As he appeared at a Vaudeville Jinks, fresh from the fields of fiction, in his expoundation of popular and political policies entitled "Who?"]

I heard a very sad story in connection with the homecoming of the California volunteers and one that proves the adage, in the midst of life we are in death. The mother of one of the boys had prepared a reception for him, invited a number of friends and was overflowing with happiness to think she would soon see her son. Yet it is known to her husband that the boy died before the troops took passage on the Sherman. The mother has been in a weak state of health for some time and her husband feared to tell her the sad news because of the effect it might have upon her in her nervous condition. On Wednesday, when the Sherman was sighted, the poor mother was happy and the father was in the depths of despair as it was impossible for him to think of a way out of the difficulty.

Willard T. Barton
as Bill Bowley, the cross-eyed comedian from the Bowery, formerly of the Gayety, in an impersonation at a Vaudeville Low Jinks.

J. L. Flood, multi-millionaire, bon vivant and prince of good-fellows, is a deserter from the ranks of men-about-town. He has been in the city about a fortnight, having returned from his honeymoon trip, and is now quartered with his handsome bride at the Palace hotel, but since his return his old friends and boon companions have seen very little of him. Even Charley Paxton who was his inseparable companion before the death of the first Mrs. Flood, has been in his company for only a brief spell and Captain Nat Messer has been with him only in business hours. It appears as though a second marriage has completely changed the popular millionaire's habits. The hours that he formerly devoted to his new friends at informal stag gatherings are now monopolized by his wife. There is a mild suspicion abroad that Mrs. Flood has social aspirations and that her husband is inclined to encourage them. I understand that they intend to build a magnificent home in New York and take up their residence in that city. If Mrs. Flood really has social ambition she is quite different from her sister, who as the millionaire's first wife never bothered herself about the frivolities of the swagger set but preferred to enjoy life in a sort of aristocratically bohemian way.

Hon. J. J. Smith of Oroville, Butte county, is in town for a few days, visiting relatives.

Clay M. Greene

Isabel Strong, step-daughter of Robert Louis Stevenson, is about to mount the lecture platform with two discourses, "Stevenson in Samoa," and "In Stevenson's Samoa," a distinction without a difference. The latest contributors to Stevensoniana are a young female who casually met him in the Quartier Latin of Paris and someone who has turned a penny more or less honest by virtue of an article going to show that but for his sudden death Stevenson would have embraced the Catholic faith. Already photographs of upper Kearny street, Bush street, Portsmouth square and other humble and plebeian localities have done duty as illustrations because, forsooth, Stevenson had meandered through them. The monument in the old Plaza is almost as familiar now as the writer's countenance. While I have no desire to detract from any honor that has been given to Robert Louis Stevenson, I am of the opinion that a monument erected in Portsmouth square, a locality around which so many of our brief historical associations are clustered and which was the centre of the bustling life of pioneer times, should have been dedicated to our own Jonathan D. Stevenson of the famous Stevenson's regiment, and who is yet unhonored by any memorial.

On September sixth at the residence of D. D. Shattuck, 814 Powell street, the marriage will be celebrated of Miss Anna Crothers of Columbus, Ohio, and W. C. Culbert of the well-known firm of paper dealers, the S. B. Leavitt company. The bridegroom that is to be is very popular up and down the coast as well as in the city, for this business has made it necessary for him to make frequent trips north and south throughout the state. He owns a comfortable home in Alameda. This will not be Mr. Culbert's first matrimonial venture as he has been married before, his wife dying a few years ago and leaving five motherless children. The bride-elect also has many friends in San Francisco, though her home for some time past has been in Arizona, where she was engaged in work for the Home Missionary society. She studied at the Pacific Theological seminary before entering upon the home missionary field and has always been most successful in her labors. Only lately, the society expressed itself so pleased with her work that Miss Crothers was appointed to a wider field in New Mexico. She was spending her vacation in San Francisco when fate changed her plans for the future. Miss Crothers is a bright, charming young woman who is a favorite among a wide circle of friends. No one has ever begun married life with more good wishes than will be showered upon Mr. Culbert and his bride.

Alfred Bouvier

In the death of Mrs. Hitchcock San Francisco loses one of its few reliable historians. There was very little about the leaders of our social swim that Mrs. Hitchcock did not know. She was eighty-two years of age at the time of her demise and she was reckoned among the pioneers of California, having come here with her husband in that historic period usually referred to ambiguously as "early days." Now that Mrs. Hitchcock and Mrs. Hager have passed away I know of no one who can take their place as society historians. They knew everything about everybody and nobody was so competent as they to pass judgment upon who is who and who is not who in the local swim. They both passed the greater part of their later lifetime at the Palace hotel, though Mrs. Hitchcock paid periodical visits to Europe almost up to the time of her death. Her daughter, Mrs. Lillie Hitchcock Coit, was a belle of early days. She still retains her fascinating powers though she must be nearly, if not past, sixty. Howard Coit, her late husband, was classed among the gayest men about town. He was an American aristocrat, of Connecticut ancestry. The Brooklyn hotel now stands where was formerly the Hitchcock residence, famed in early days as the place where was dispensed the most lavish hospitality. It seems as though all the old Californians were passing away. Soon there will be no one left to tell from personal experience what San Francisco looked like "when the water came up to Montgomery street."

Colonel Summers of the Oregon regiment made quite a hit at the midsummer jinks of the Bohemian club, but during his stay in this city he was called on so often for speeches that he gradually became enamored of the sound of his own voice. One night, so the story goes, he was so verbose that Horace Platt was prompted to remark that the colonel had no terminal facilities.

Arnold Grazer, in his Skirt Dance

That irrepressible wit Lan Mizner was at a dinner not long ago, when epicurean topics were under discussion. The merits of various delicacies and dishes were passed upon and one very sweet and charming young woman took occasion to remark that the capon was a very fine bird.

"And virtuous," added Mizner.

Mrs. Edward Morrison did not come so far west as she expected and her relatives and friends here were thus deprived of the pleasure of personally congratulating the young Californian upon the success she has attained upon the eastern stage. Mrs. Morrison is better known here as Lillian Coleman, and she is a very charming and gifted young woman. I have followed with interest her career since she became a professional and the press notices I have seen all speak in the highest terms of her talent. She came, upon her latest tour, as far as Kansas city but concluded not to extend her trip to San Francisco this time.

Arnold Grazer, who will appear at the Orpheum next week in a duo dance with little Hazel Callahan, is what one would call a "natural born dancer." He has taken lessons since he was a mere infant, almost, but it is not those lessons that have made him the marvel of grace that he is. He was born with the talent for dancing, just as were the famous Taglioni, Barbarini and other renowned danseuses. Little Arnold no doubt gained in style and technic from Mademoiselle Irmler, who was one of his instructors, but the gift of grace was his by nature. He has danced on his toes in a marvelous cake-walk, he has given skirt dances and a danse du diable for San Francisco audiences, but next week he will give a more ambitious dance than any of these. This mirror dance in which little Arnold Grazer will be the leading figure is something out of the common. It is not exactly a mirror dance such as that Papinta gave, but is in reality a mirrored-window dance. The writer was shown one of the bits of glass such as that which will be used in the dance, and it is transparent from one point of view, while taking it from another point it reflects objects. La miroir-fenetre, one might suggest as a name for this unique arrangement of glass. Arnold is a pretty lad, as full of fun as any ordinary schoolboy without especial talent, and his dancing is but to him an episode of the day. He will go east after his Orpheum engagement, one understands, and he is sure to win loads of praise from the critics and bouquets from the spectators who see his dances. His mother, the wife of the Mission physician, Dr. Fred Grazer, will accompany him in his travels.

Rhys Thomas will find another ex-Tivoli singer in the Castle Square opera company, which he will join for the new season, no other than Ed Knight. It is a long time since Knight was in this city; he has many friends here who would like to hear him warble in his deep basso the old favorite "Tomorrow will be Friday." Bernice Holmes, the contralto, will also be of the new Castle Square company, which promises to be a powerful organization. I do not know how St. Dominic's choir, and the McNeill club of Sacramento, will get along without Mr. Thomas, who is rated among our best tenors. Before he came to San Francisco he was with Francis Wilson's comic opera company and played as far west as Chicago.

The Seaman's institute entertainments, arranged at regular intervals by local musicians or music lovers, continue and are always evenings of pleasure. At the concert given last week, on Wednesday, among the participants were Miss Charlotte Beckwith and other well known professionals, and stereopticon views were shown by Bruce Wood.

It is said that George E. P. Hall invented the saying: Allah be with you! May He bless you—at his earliest convenience

---

Some of the soldier boys who have been tasting the hospitality of the Philippines, and dodging the enemy's bullets, have become hardened cynics. I was told of one, who when asked if the soldiers had to suffer many hardships, said:

"Hardships? I should say so—and deprivations. Half the time I could not get any morphine."

However the Filipino cigarette, which is big and solid, should have been an excellent substitute.

A young matron remarked at Del Monte early in the week that she was sorry she was married.

"Have you already had a tiff with Harry?" asked her friend.

The young matron said she had not, but explained that she could not play golf as well as she could when single.

"And," she added, "I love golf better than hubby."

World of Law

THE TRIAL OF THE libel suit brought by Senator William J. Dunn against the Examiner, which terminated the other day in a verdict of five hundred dollars damages against the paper, contained some amusing incidents. Mr. Hearst was defended by Billy Foote, and as usual that astute counsel relied on his ability to break down the testimony of the few unfortunates who had the temerity to take the stand in Dunn's behalf and say that the community in which he lived thought him a good fellow. One of those witnesses was Lawrence J. Conlan, better known as "Larry" Conlan.

When Conlan had done all the good he could for Dunn he was turned over to Mr. Foote for cross-examination. "Billy" winked at the jury and assuming his most truculent sneer, snapped at the witness the following question:

"You've done politics for Dunn, haven't you?"

"Yes," was the unabashed reply. "That is, I've done politics with him."

"And you've done politics for Chris Buckley, too, haven't you, eh?"

"Oh, yes."

"Ha, I thought so," triumphantly exclaimed the eminent counsel, with another look at the jury.

"Oh, that's all right," pursued Conlan. "I'd do politics for Buckley now, if he wanted me to, for I never go back on a friend. And I'd advise you not to go back on your friends, either, Mr. Foote."

"What's that?" roared Billy, jumping up. "What do you mean sir?"

"Just what I say."

"Do you mean to say, sir, to insinuate that you have ever done politics for me?"

"I do," rejoined the unabashed Conlan.

"Through whom, sir?"

"Through one man in particular," replied Conlan.

"His name, sir," cried Foote, thumping his chest; "I insist you tell this jury his name."

"Christopher A. Buckley," slowly replied the witness. "Don't you remember the time you sent for me and got me to go to Buckley and have him send a delegation over to Alameda county and win out a primary election for you?"

Subsidence of W. W.

After being out about thirty hours the jury in the Keenan murder trial found a verdict of acquittal. Such is justice in this our Golden State! A man murders the mother of his five children and then asks an acquittal at the hands of his fellow-men on the ground that he was crazed with love for her at the time. And although the proof is as clear as daylight there is no satisfaction in a trial before a jury.

This man Keenan, once known by the sobriquet of Patsy Hogan, cannot have been a kind and indulgent husband, a loving father, or his good wife would not have been compelled to bring divorce proceedings against him. True, after a patient hearing Judge Hebbard decided to refuse the divorce, but that was for the sake of the five little ones rendered motherless by their father's act. That he had a maudlin affection for the family is not disputed; his very action in pestering Mrs. Keenan with promises of reform by way of inducement to her to return to him is in attestation of that fact. But he did not act rightly in the first instance or there would have been no estrangement. So one day he went home, had a few words with his wife, murdered her and was found slightly wounded himself by what looked like self-inflicted cuts.

He was a member of the Fire department and so had a pull. Good men, and true, climbed aboard the witness stand and swore to his spotless reputation for peace and quiet, to his love of his family and earnest desire to better their condition and, as a last resort, to his occasional fits of insanity, particularly after the death of one of his children. That was all right; men have a right to befriend one another; but I maintain that in the case at bar, the friendship of these men was sadly misplaced. Patrick J. Keenan, alias Patsy Hogan, deserved no sympathy at their hands.

I will explain why Keenan did not stand to his guns. He did not play the man and take his medicine. Instead, he broke down completely under the ordeal, forgot all about his pretended insanity and worked artfully to save his life. And in

Self respect is on good terms with

The Old Government Whisky

Suit your taste—100% proof, bottled in bond; or 90% proof, Special Reserve, bottled at Distillery.

A wholesome stimulant—a nerve tonic.

order to do this how did he act? Why, he dragged the good name of the woman he had murdered into the dirt. He tried to save himself at the expense of that poor, dead thing, mute accuser but powerless, indeed, to give him the lie to his face. He took the stand and swore, in the first place, that his wife stabbed him three times before he was compelled, in self-defense, to draw his gun. The woman grabbed for it, he said, it was discharged two or three times, one bullet grazing his forehead, and then he knew no more till he woke up in the Receiving hospital.

That was not all. There was a broad hint of a man in the case. Keenan said that his wife replied to him, on being asked the direct question: "Yes, I have. And it's none of your business what I do with him." Man, forsooth! Why, Mrs. Keenan was a comfortable, motherly person, who helped to support her children and herself by working as a janitress in one of the schools. She was no Venus to attract the smiles of men. In my humble judgment the very nature of the testimony given by this man Keenan should have sufficed to damn him forever in the minds of the jury and have caused him to be discredited in toto. Why not? When a man gets up in court in a divorce case and swears that he has been intimate with the wife it is an unwritten law among judges that his testimony shall go for naught. Vide Henri Steuart, in the Russell case. Why not in a case like Keenan's, where the murderer tries to shield himself by besmirching the reputation of the murdered mother of his innocent children?

And yet that jury wrangled and wrangled away in their room over the facts of the case. Judge Frank H. Dunne very properly did all he could to prevent "undue influence" by locking up all twelve citizens from the beginning of the trial. So it was passing strange that there should have been more than one question to deliberate, viz: whether to hang the man or to let him off with imprisonment for life. Let us do away with common juries and have murderers tried before judges in bank. Keenan was defended by Mr. J. N. E. Wilson, the attorney, by the way, of the M. B. Curtis and G. F. West cases. And that reminds me that I was much attracted by some verses that Mr. Wilson fired off in the course of his speech for the defense. They were not apropos of the case, nor of anything else, for the matter of that, but Mr. Wilson thought they were pretty lines and the jury would be in better humor if they heard them. They evidently made an impression. M. Wilson told me after the trial that the verses were taken from a number of the Century magazine published at least ten years ago. Also they were published anonymously. I reproduce them here:

A STRANGE old tavern have I seen,
The walls are thick, the garden green,
'Tis damp and foul, yet through the door
Do rich men come as well as poor;
They come by night and they come by day
And never a guest is turned away.

The landlord, an unwholesome fellow,
Has a complexion white and yellow;
And though he is exceeding thin
Does nothing else but grin and grin
At all his guests, who after awhile
Begin to imitate his smile.

The guests are a fearful sight to see,
Though some are people of high degree;
For no one asks when a carriage arrives
A decent account of the inmates' lives;
But Holy Virgins and men of sin
Sleep cheek by jowl in this careless inn.

And beautiful youths in their strength and pride
Have taken beds by a leper's side;
But all sleep well, and it never was said
That any kind of complaint was made,
For all the people who pass that way
Appear to intend a lengthened stay.

The house has a singular bill of fare,
Nothing dainty, nothing rare;
But only one dish and that dish meat
Which never a guest was known to eat;
Night and day the meal goes on
And the guests themselves are fed upon.

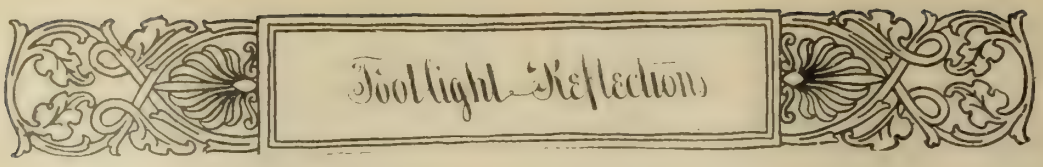
These merry guests are all of them bound
To a land far off, but I never have found
That any one knew when he should start
Or wished from this pleasant house to part.

Oh! strange old tavern, with garden green,
In every town its walls are seen.
Now the question has often been asked of me,
"Is it really as bad as it seems to be"?

The only lucid explanation that Mr. Wilson could offer for his recitation was that he sought to impress the jury with the idea that Mrs. Keenan was better off in her grave than battling with the cares of life in this vale of tears, an ingenious way of contending that Keenan had done his wife a service by murdering her. The five little motherless children were not thought of, just then. Well, well, the law is a peculiar profession. They say the late Mr. Hall McAllister used to recite a chapter of the Bible to his jury when he felt that way.

Rincon Valley, Near Santa Rosa

Along the Line of the California Northwestern Railway Co.



At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "A Southern Gentleman"—authored by its star and starred by its author.

CALIFORNIA. "A Bachelor's Honeymoon"—amusing and with Delia Stacey in it.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "Clover"—sweet and suitable for summer.

TIVOLI. "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I' Pagliacci"—strong production.

ALCAZAR. "Camille" and "Romeo and Juliet"—Florence Roberts season nearing its close.

ORPHEUM. Vaudeville—the Cardownies and Dagmar are all right.

PANORAMA BUILDING. "Battle of Manila"—worth seeing.

DIALECT PLAYS BEGOME absolutely devoid of artistic character when presented by thespians who cannot do justice to the lines. No matter how intricate certain dialect forms may be the actor must be so capable as to make them distinct to everybody, even those unfamiliar with dialect forms. The art of dialect declamation is distinct from that of mere dramatic declamation and requires much study and natural talent. Clay Clement has in his company no member who can do full justice to the gracefulness of the southern dialect and hence it occurs that a large portion of the play is missed by being mashed into an indistinct mass from which it is impossible to gain any information as to the purpose of the play. The southern dialect is not so constructed that one is unable to understand it, but if the declamator comprehends his duties he will never fail to make himself so well understood when using the southern dialect as when he employs classical English properly. So right here we have the great drawback of the performance at the Columbia. Naturally when you take away the dialect from the southern character you deprive him of the very thing that surrounds him with that quaint originality people love so much, and the genuine southern atmosphere is lacking. On the other hand Clay Clement himself is always a careful student and throughout his work one cannot omit observing that the character he portrays lives. His work is convincing, realistic and inspires conviction. After all it is the foremost duty of an actor to reflect certain men or women as in a looking-glass and when they succeed in this essential characteristic of the dramatic art they have done their duty. Therefore Clay Clement must be classed among the leaders in the profession for his characters are molded from a model that lives and his portrayal of a character is merely the reproduction of a living example. This is the finest art. The acme of dramatic art is, after all, imitation, provided you imitate correctly. The least flaw in your endeavor to imitate somebody else makes your work offensive in the eyes of the connoiseur. Mrs. Clement proves herself possessed of much vivacity and esprit and Augustus Cook imposes his aggressive temperament into his role. From one point of view the play is valuable, namely, it contains that genteel aristocratic environment that forms such a distinguished atmosphere around the southern home life. Next week will bring back The New Dominion, in which play Mr. Clement made such a pronounced success last season. The dialect of Baron Hohenstaufen is correct and the genuineness of the character is apparent throughout the play, which is a delightful bit of romance and can easily be listened to many times without losing any of its charm.

Alcazar THE FLORENCE ROBERTS season has been one of the most successful this theatre has ever known. Miss Roberts has established herself a favorite and the fact of her popularity was never more clearly shown than last week at the benefit for the California soldier boys at the Orpheum. While the other participants were warmly received Miss Roberts' greeting was absolutely enthusiastic and she was compelled to return three or four times to bow her acknowledgments for the applause after her act. Miss Roberts has youth, beauty and talent on her side in the race for fame and she will, the writer feels sure, rank among America's greatest actresses at no far distant day. This week Romeo and Juliet and Camille have been the bills at the Alcazar and next week, the last of the Roberts season, Ingomar will be given.

Grand Opera House NOTHING COULD HAVE BEEN a more suitable offering for the midsummer season than Clover. Its very name sounds summery and Von Suppé put into its score some of his most catchy melodies. The members of Morosco's company enter fully into the spirit of their respective roles and sing and act with refreshing vim. As is usual at the Grand the costumes and scenery are of the best. Next week's bill will be Paul Jones, which is a particularly appropriate offering at this time when "our California boys" and American soldiers and sailors are the theme on every lip. Mr. Persse will sing the title role.

Orpheum OF THE SUCCESSION of vocal soloists who have graced the Orpheum's boards Alexandra Dagmar has certainly been the most freely favored by nature. Her beauty is absolutely flawless, her bearing is graceful and aristocratic and she sings divinely. The mystery is how she catches the gallery, for neither Josephine Sabel nor Lydia Yeamans Titus ever succeeded in making a greater hit than that accomplished by the big Russian. Her bigness is not her beauty. You do not think of her enormous size when you look at her, for she is so exquisitely proportioned. And she is refined from head to foot. The Cardownies with their Scotch dances are worth seeing more than once. At first it seems a trifle shocking to see two men with their legs bare and unconcealed by their short plaid skirts; if you could eliminate the audience and the orchestra you might readily fancy yourself in the Highlands. The tall Cardownie feminine who dances the sword dance is as graceful as a fawn

G. H. Mumm & Co.

Extra Dry

The very fine Vintage of G. H. Mumm and Co.'s Extra Dry now coming to this market is eliciting universal admiration on account of its very superior quality and dryness, without being heavy, making it a perfect wine in the true sense of the word. It should be tasted to be fully appreciated.

E. M. Greenway, Pacific Coast Representative

Mr Clay Clement
As the Baron Von Hohenstauffen in "The New Dominion"

and the two others are marvels of agility. There is something uncommonly interesting about these five Cardownies. Next week will mark the return of that delightful actor Felix Morris, who will appear in Kerry, a dainty little comedy taken from Dion Boucicault's play Night and Morning. The company in support consists of Mrs. Felix Morris, Miss Ethel May Harrison, Miss Mary Townley, Foster Lardner and Benjamin Selby. The Mouliere sisters also open at the Orpheum tomorrow. They are the only female triple horizontal bar performers in the world and this is their first appearance in America. Arnold Grazer and Hazel Callahan, two clever San Francisco youngsters, will make their debut to an Orpheum audience in a new spectacular mirror dance. The other newcomer is Apollo, a bounding wire performer with a European reputation.

It is reported that the Comedie Francais has not accepted the bust of Francisque Sarcey, on the ground that the gallery of the theatre is reserved for actors and playwrights, not critics. That may do for Paris but in America, as well as in England, the "gallery gods" are noted critics, so much so that "playing to the gallery" has long since ceased to be rated as slang and is all but classic Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, McCullough and others of our greatest stage stars are said to have placed more value upon the approval of the gallery than the applause of the boxes.

Tivoli THE SENSATION of the week at the Tivoli was Berthald's Canio. With one long jump this accomplished tenor leaped into public favor and has now succeeded in even eclipsing Avedano, who seemed to have been the lion of the season. Berthald is certainly deserving of this tribute, for he is an artist par excellence and an actor of great resources. His Canio was in every respect a highly artistic piece of work and executed in such an ideal fashion that his reputation as far as the balance of his engagement at the Tivoli is concerned will be the very best. The orchestra did justice to its merit and Max Hirschfeld showed his ability as an operatic conductor by imposing his own healthy ideas of these passionate works into the orchestra and chorus. It was a wise action of Mr. Hirschfeld's to refuse an encore of the intermezzo, inasmuch as such would disturb the balance and sentiment of the production. The intermezzo serves as a bridge between the climax of the duo and the finale; to disturb it by rendering it twice—the second time it would never contain the same spirit as the first time—would be utter folly. It was therefore in bad taste when Avadeno repeated Canio's grand aria, and when he took Santuzza from the steps of the church to include her in the applause. The dramatic effect of a play should never be disturbed by formalities. Miss Prossnitz gives an ideal Santuzza, the singing and acting being the author's own conception. Miss Lichter's Nedda was as neat and well executed a role as one is accustomed to hear from this energetic and efficient vocalist. Next week will bring Gioconda and Rigoletto, both of which operas are always in demand.

California DELIA STACEY was always a bright little actress. She knows how to dress, too, and she has a good figure. Miss Stacey makes a distinct success of her role of the retired actress, Miss Arbuckle, in A Bachelor's Honeymoon. The comedy is amusing, it is vivacious and it goes with an élan, a vim that is positively brilliant. The dialogue, while it may be perilously near the risqué at some parts, is never coarse. All of the characters are in good hands. Besides Miss Stacey there is Charles Bates, who cleverly impersonates Dr. Ludwig Schwartz, sub-described as one "who nurses a secret sorrow." William McVay is the hero, Benjamin Bachelor, who marries in haste, and Helen Tracy is his strong-minded sister. William Brewer shows that he possesses considerable talent for character work in his impersonation of the "very busy man," Stephen Howston. Joe Swickard as Anthony Gumbag, George Morehead as Joe, Louise Temple and Ann Hathaway as Bachelor's twin daughters and Verne Castro as Barbara are all good. Indeed the farce is so brightly interpreted that it may be said to go like wildfire. After tomorrow's performances of A Bachelor's Honeymoon the California will be closed for a time to admit of extensive improvements and alterations.

A question as unanswerable as the old one of what becomes of the lost pins is this: What possesses an actress whose nose approximates the shape of a button-hook to have herself photographed en profile?

DEL MONTE EXCURSION

ALL SORTS OF EARLY Californian, Spanish sports have been arranged by the residents of Monterey to entertain the crowd of visitors expected down on September third. It is on that day that the passenger department of the Southern Pacific company will hold its annual excursion to Monterey, Hotel Del Monte and Pacific Grove.

This outing ranks among the great events of the year and last season fully two thousand people availed themselves of the opportunity to go on the excursion. The chance to enjoy such a visit at two dollars for the round trip is not often offered and it is likely that even more will take advantage of it than was the case last year.

The excursion will be under the personal supervision of William H. Menton, excursionist passenger agent of the Southern Pacific, which insures its success in every particular.

Special trains for the excursion will leave the Third and Townsend street depot at eight o'clock, instead of half-past seven as heretofore; returning trains will leave Monterey at a quarter to five. The trains will have ample accommodations and will be run through without stops.

A Scandal

[One of Bohemia's favorite verses.]

THE WIND just whisper'd to the Pine,
Who shook her head and sigh'd,
And then she told it to the Oak,
Who said the wind had lied.
But soon he told it to the Ash,
And to the Willow tree,
And so along the line it pass'd,
Until it came to me.
I got it from the Speck'led Trout,
Who got it from the Pool,
And this is how the story ran,
"Last night the Moon was full."

Anonymous.

At the Club

[Speech made by General X. Y. Z. Jones at the dinner given to the volunteer army officers at the club last week. Topic—"Does Civilization Civilize"?]

CIVILIZATION? WELL, I should smile. Take civilization away from a man and what is left? He and himself alone—and badly left, too. 'Tis well indeed for affected pessimism to sing the praises of the savage and decry the delights of civilization, but as for me I would rather be here tonight, the savory smell of cooking tickling my nostrils; a bird nicely browned on toast before me and my legs gradually corkscrewing under the blissful effects of sauterne, chablis and champagne than to sit under fruit-laden palms upon some South Sea island, feasting with eager appetite upon the tender missionary and washing him down with copious draughts from crystal springs near by. [Applause.]

Oh, no, excuse me! And a bird on the toast is worth two or more on the very prettiest palm tree, though their plumage outrival in brilliancy the neckwear of General Slickinson. Of course, it is not so romantic to sit here, evidences as we are of the highest intellectuality and the most advanced civilization. We should make prettier pictures, no doubt, on golden sands or in cocoanut groves. We should be pleasant to read about if a full-dress fig leaf sheltered us from the inclemency of the winter; if papa were a Fiji chief and mamma wore a nose-ring. However, we cannot be both, and somehow I have a sneaking admiration for the barbarities of civilization. [Laughter.]

If we had no civilization we should have no Monarch, and where would Willful Willie be? If we had no civilization there would be no San Quentin—and what would we do with the men who are fitted for wardens' and keepers' jobs? If we had no civilization we'd have no ferries—and where would Billy Foote get off? If we had no civilization San Francisco would not be the wicked city it is and the supervisors and school directors would not have been moved to start out and do so much to reform it.

I might show these disadvantages of a lack of civilization at length, but further argument, I am sure, is unnecessary. [Thunderous applause.]

When, as a closing argument, I state that the savage, whatever the joys of his situation, knows absolutely nothing of the ecstatic bliss of poker, and that to his dull mind a blue chip is of no more value than a white, that he has never experienced the pleasure of bluffing on an ace high—and losing—I have completed the picture. I now leave to you, gentlemen, the decision: Does civilization civilize?

THE REPORTER.

WHERE QUALITY REGULATES PRICE

THE QUALITY of anything invariably regulates its price. It is a reasonable presumption that, all else being equal, the thing which costs the most is the best. This is particularly true of champagne, the wholesale prices of which are regulated for the entire world by the London market, in which the greatest connoisseurs and most discriminating judges are engaged. Here Pommery invariably sells at a higher price than other champagnes. This is proof positive that it is considered by the best judges to be superior. In America its retail price is usually the same as other brands, but those familiar with the facts appreciate that they are getting better value for their money if they order Pommery. Uncle Sam's commissary department has indorsed the judgment of the connoisseurs of champagne by putting Pommery on board the various transports for hospital use. Pommery was selected out of all the brands submitted, which shows that the government supplies now being shipped to the army are the best the market can supply—quality being apparently considered before price.

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Sunday night, last time, "A SOUTHERN GENTLEMAN"

Beginning Next Monday, Second week of MR. CLAY CLEMENT and his own company.

Elaborate production of the beautiful play,

"THE NEW DOMINION"

Mr. Clement as Count von Hohenstauffen.

Grand Opera House Morosco Amusement Co., Inc. Lessees. Telephone, Main 532.

Last two nights of Von Suppe's charming opera, "CLOVER"

Week of Monday, August 28, magnificent production of Planquette's greatest comic opera,

"PAUL JONES"

Superb cast. Beautiful Scenery. Gorgeous costumes.

Our Prices—Orchestra floor, 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

Matinee Saturday. Best reserved seat in the theatre, 25 cents

Branch Ticket Office just inside main entrance of Emporium.

Alcazar FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor MARK THALL, Manager 'Phone Main 254

Week of August 28th

Farewell week of FLORENCE ROBERTS and White Whittlesey in a beautiful presentation of

"INGOMAR"

Staged and costumed to the period.

Beginning September 3d, opening of the New Stock Season, in "CHRISTOPHER, JR."

Prices—15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Orpheum O'Farrell between Stockton and Powell Streets.

Week Commencing Sunday Matinee, August 27th.

FELIX MORRIS and COMPANY, in a one-act comedy, "KERRY"
MOULIERE SISTERS. APOLLO.
ARNOLD GRAZER and HAZEL CALLAHAN.
CARON and HERBERT. HALL and STALEY.
FREEZE BROTHERS. McMAHON and KING.
AMERICAN BIOGRAPH.

Reserved Seats 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c
Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

Tivoli Opera House ERNESTINE KRELING, Prop. and Mgr.

Grand Opera Season

"CAVALLERIA" and "PAGLIACCI,"

Last times tonight and Sunday Evening.

.....For next week .....

Monday, Wednesday Friday and Saturday Evenings,

"GIOCONDA"

Tuesday, Thursday, Sunday Nights and Saturday Matinee,

"RIGOLETTO"

Great cast in each opera

Popular Prices, 25 and 50 cents. Telephone for Seats, Bush 9.

Battle of Manila Bay

This Grand Historical Panorama is now on exhibition . . .

Lectures every half hour by the eminent orator, PROF. W. G. ROLLINS

Admission, 50 Cents

Children, 25 Cents.

A delightful hot drink may be made with the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky and the usual hot water, sugar and a little lemon skin.

The Bohemian Club

SAN FRANCISCO has no institution of which it has more reason to be proud than the Bohemian club. There are older and more prosperous clubs in the world than the Bohemian, but none that holds higher rank in the world of art and letters or in whose history is embalmed so much wit and wisdom. The Bohemian club is famous for its camaraderie, its high jinks and its punch. The objects of its existence were defined in its first constitution to be:

The promotion of social and intellectual intercourse between journalists and other writers, artists, actors and musicians, professional or amateur, and such others not included in this list as may, by reason of knowledge and appreciation of polite literature science and the fine arts, be deemed worthy of membership. And also, the collection and preservation of records, mementoes and archives, illustrating the progress of literature, science and art on the Pacific coast and calculated to preserve the memory of those who have been or shall be instrumental in promoting such progress.

In 1875 the constitution was amended to permit of the admission of "gentlemen connected professionally with literature, art, music and the drama, and also those who by their love or appreciation of these objects, may be deemed eligible." As the club advanced in years no great stress has been laid upon the amount of "love" and "appreciation" essential to eligibility, and the club has steadily increased in membership and in the number of guests at home and abroad who have attended its jinks, "till," as has been truly said, "the number of those in whose memory lingers a couplet from some bit of original poetry, a fragment from some brilliant description of travel, a snatch of delicious song, the harmony evoked by some master of a musical instrument, a flash of sparkling wit, perhaps a touch of tender pathos, planted there at some 'jinks' has become very great."

The birth of the Bohemian club occurred in 1872—not long enough ago to be shrouded in oblivion—and yet the historian of the club has not a proper record of it in his annals, for which delinquency he must be taken to task. He states that it was brought into existence by men who made their living by the practice of the arts—writers, painters, musicians and actors—drawn together by a similarity of tastes, in subterranean places where beer was sold for "a bit" a glass. They also held informal gatherings in art studios and at private homes, and he concedes that journalists "were not behindhand in these social occasions."

As a matter of fact the club was organized by journalists, and had its inception in the minds of newspaper men. The club was suggested by an incident that occurred one night in front of the box-office of the old California theatre. Thomas Newcomb of the Call and Sands Forman of the Examiner were standing in front of the box-office when they overheard a seedy individual demanding a free pass and representing himself as a reporter. Newcomb remarked that there ought to be some way of lending dignity to the profession of journalism and preventing imposition by frauds. Thereupon Forman suggested a newspaper club and that very night they sat down in a beer saloon and sent out invitations to fellow members of their craft to attend a meeting for the purpose of organizing a club

The meeting was held on February fifth 1872, in the editorial rooms of the Examiner office, in Washington street, and there were present Dan O'Connell of the Bulletin, Sands Forman and Joe Irwin of the Examiner, Tommy Newcomb of the Call and James F. Bowman of the Chronicle. The proposed club was discussed at that meeting and it was then decided to send out a circular inviting all journalists of any standing to cooperate.

The first formal meeting took place February twenty-third and the purpose of the Bohemian club which was then organized was modestly set forth to be "the promotion of good fellowship among journalists and the elevation of journalism to that place in the popular estimation to which it is entitled." Colonel J. C. Cremony, the noted Indian fighter, who was then connected with the Commercial Herald, moved that they adopt the name "Bohemian." The motion was opposed on the ground that "Bohemian" was not a respectable name. It was declared that the popular notion of a Bohemian was one who buttoned his tattered coat to conceal his soiled linen and who, while he was skilled in the art of borrowing money, was afflicted with a treacherous memory. Colonel Cremony made a hot speech in support of the motion and his argument was supplemented by one from O'Connell, after which the motion prevailed and the exponents of respectability withdrew in indignation.

The first president of the club was Thomas Newcomb, and the first home was in the Astor house, at the southeast corner of Sacramento and Webb streets. Although the treasury was in an impoverished condition the club managed to get some second-hand furniture and then the members felt that they were on the high road to prosperity.

In the first year of its existence the club began holding monthly reunions, which were called "High Jinks," a name borrowed from Walter Scott's novel of "Guy Mannering." These entertainments of the Bohemian club are famous the world over for their originality and brilliancy. An idea of their character may be gleaned from the following invitation issued by W. H. Rhodes, a lawyer who wrote sketches over the name of "Caxton," to a High Jinks held in June, 1873:

SPECIAL NOTICE TO ALL

Bohemians attend!
I address you as sire,
Elder Brother and Friend.
Come forth from your attics, your garrets and dens,
And brighten your bonnets and sharpen your pens.
The theme for your thoughts in your High Jinks tonight,
Is jolly and gleesome and funny and bright.
'Tis the wits of the state—California's boast—
Mark Twain's lively spirit and Squibob's pale ghost,
With Pipes in your mouth, and Hart in your hand;
With Podgers in pocket and Forbes at command;
With Mighels to live with, and Mulford to roam;
And Newcomb and Bowman and Bromley at home.
We can laugh at the world with its follies and crimes;
Its cares and misfortunes, its dollars and dimes;
And drawing about us our emblems of Love
Cry "Bohemians below are Archangels above!"
For there, as this evening, in Eden's abodes
You'll find, as
Your Grand Sire
Yours, "CAXTON" H. RHODES.

Mark Twain, who was referred to in the invitation, became a member of the club in 1873, and Bret Harte became an honorary member about the same time. "Squibob" was Lieutenant Derby, "Pipes" was the erratic Stephen Massett and

S. B. Leavitt Company
IMPORTERS OF AND DEALERS IN News, Book, Flat, Ruled, Glazed and Wrapping Papers
SOLE AGENTS
Saxony, Albermarle, and Yosemite
FLAT PAPERS
ROLL WRAPPING PAPERS AND PAPER CUTTERS
CARD AND MOUNTING BOARD, MOUNTS, ENVELOPES, ETC.
Telephone No. 1439
331-335 Sansome St.

Podgers was Richard Ogden, correspondent of the New York Times.

A notable jinks was held in November 1874, which dealt with "The Poets who have sung of the Battle-field." General W. H. L. Barnes was the sire. In the early part of the evening a complimentary greeting was sent to Oliver Wendell Holmes, who wired back the following answer:

Message from San Francisco! Whisper low!
While on his peaceful pillow he reclines,
Say to the friends who sent these loving lines,
"Silent, unanswering, still to friendship true,
He smiles in slumber for he dreams of you!"

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 28, 1874, MIDNIGHT.

On January twentieth 1877, the club moved to new quarters in Pine street over the California market. This motto was left behind in the old rooms:

This place has been consecrated to the growth of friendship and to the cultivation of intelligence. May no evil influence ever pass across its threshold.

The members marched to their new rooms where Judge Boalt delivered an address to the Owl, which was chosen early in the club's career to preside over its destinies. Clay Greene read a poem composed for the event in which the following lines occur:

Old Dick, the Owl, that grave, wise bird,
Whose face is stamped on wall and paper,
Who never in his solemn life
Has laughed a laugh or cut a caper,
Looks out tonight from his new cage
On carpets rich and rooms extensive,
And, muttering to himself he says:
"By Jove! this thing is growing expensive."

About the year 1879, Harry Edwards, the actor who had twice been elected president of the club and who was for many years one of its most active spirits, accepted an engagement with Wallack's stock company and it was decided to give him a farewell entertainment. Camp Taylor, on Paper Mill creek, was chosen as the scene for the jinks and that affair was the first of the Midsummer High Jinks, which each year have become more interesting until today men gladly cross the continent, if they have the means, to witness its glories and participate in its mysterious ceremonies.

About the year 1884 the club had outgrown its Pine street quarters and the members turned up their noses at the variety of smells that emanated from the sundry stalls in the market below. A building had been erected for the club at the corner of Post street and Grant avenue, and here the owl and his followers shifted their motto of "Weaving spiders come not here" together with their art treasures, many of which commemorate incidents in the history of the club and are the works of California's most famous painters. And now the club of modest origin, that held high revel in the days of yore at the corner of a small street and a still smaller alley, within sound of an undertaker's coffin carpenter, and afterwards inhaled the combination odors of sausage and other fragrant stuffs, is now housed in one of San Francisco's most imposing structures in an atmosphere redolent of the highest culture and refinement.

This brief history of the famous club would not be complete without the following from the pen of James Anthony Froude, who was one of the many men famous in the world of letters entertained in Bohemia:

We do not live for politics alone, nor for business alone. The Bohemian club is composed of lawyers, artists, poets, musicians, men of genius who in the sunshine and exuberant fertility of California were brighter, quicker and less bitterly in earnest than their severe fellow-countrymen of the eastern states. It was the American temperament, but what a difference. Dollars, perhaps, are easily come by in that happy country, and men think less of them and more of human life and how it can be spent and enjoyed. If Horace were brought to life again in the new world he would look for a farm in California and be a leading Bohemian. The pictures in the drawing room, painted by one or other of themselves, had all something new and original about them, reminding one of Bret Harte's writing.

In the summer weather the club takes to tents migrates to the forest and holds high jinks in Dionysic fashion. There was a clever sketch of one of these festivals in the abandonment of intellectual riot. It is likely enough that some original school of American art may start up in California. Their presiding genius at the club is Pallas Athene in the shape of an owl; but for some reason which they could not or would not explain she has one eye shut.

THE SCRIBE.

San Francisco

Chronicle

Is the Leading Newspaper of the Pacific Coast and has the Largest Circulation

Delivered by Carrier in all the Principal Cities and Towns on the Pacific Coast

65 Cents per Month

M. H. de YOUNG, Proprietor.

A Bohemian Episode

MONSIEUR CHARLES DUBOIS sits in his studio. He is just giving the last touches to a picture. Softly the door opens and a very pretty woman enters. She is tall and graceful and a remarkable handsome brunette.

The artist looks up and is decidedly surprised to see her.

"Tiens, mon ami," begins his brown-eyed visitor. "Do you remember in our stolen interviews how very often you regretted that I had married before meeting you?"

"Yes, my dear Amelia," replied the artist, "I remember it very well; very well, indeed, and I still regret that you married before we met."

"Eh bien, mon petit Charles," replied the charming Amelia "I am no longer enchained. I am free! In other words I am a widow, and I have come to tell you that your oft-repeated wish may be realized!"

"What! is it really true?" said Charles, looking as though he had been suddenly struck by a thunderbolt.

"Oui, monsieur," said Amelia gayly; "it is really true. But perhaps now you do not wish to marry me?" she added, coyly.

"Why, to be sure I do, ma mignonne," replied the artist with marked nonchalance—thinking to himself, "If I have got to do this thing I had better do it at once and make an end of it"—"I am ready to marry you now, this very instant"

Amelia mistakes philosophy for love and her brown eyes sparkle with delight as she listens

"No, we cannot be married here, mon petit Charles," she answers. "This is simply impossible; propriety forbids, and though I detested my husband I must not be seen with another so soon after his death. But come, let us go to some quiet sequestered country place where we can be married, sans bruit, and where we can live entirely for each other, I having no other thought but you and you having no other thought but me. Where there shall be nothing in the world to disturb our solitude. Here we can laugh together, we can talk together, we can paint together, we can play together, and—and we can fight together. For, you know, we shall certainly do that," she said laughingly. "Come, mon ami, let us start at once!"

"Very well, it is agreed," said the artist, taking his hat, entirely won by Amelia's picturesque description of love in a solitude.

* * * * * * *

A month has passed in this quiet, frightful solitude of the country and the artist, blasé, is nearly dead with ennui.

One evening after he has poked at the fire for nearly a quarter of an hour, while his wife has occupied herself with embroidery, he suddenly breaks the silence.

"Tell me, my dear Amelia," he said, "if you do not think of returning to Paris soon? For my part I infinitely prefer the gayety and bustle of the boulevards to this quiet monotonous life in the country."

"Well, I do not agree with you, mon chèr petit Charles," replied his wife, who adored the country even in the depth of winter because she adored her husband, just as she adored him in the springtime of her love.

"But you see, my dear Amelia," pleaded Charles, "I am positively obliged to return to Paris. Business compels me to do so. I supposed, of course, you would be most delighted to accompany me, and had you agreed to do so I intended taking apartments there and giving up these country catacombs for the winter. However, since you are so anxious to remain among these delightful snow-clad hills, I shall go alone and to please you I shall return; meanwhile I shall write you just exactly what they are saying about you in Paris."

"Ah, yes," said his wife, "do, that would be very interesting. I shall be so pleased to know exactly what my friends think about my sudden departure from Paris—and the rest of it."

With exquisite finesse Charles had touched the cord of feminine curiosity, so Amelia joyfully bade her husband bon voyage.

She opened with the greatest embarrassment his first letter from Paris, which ran thus:

TO THE WOMAN I ADORE:

Ever ready, my dear Amelia, to gratify the least of your desires, the first thing I did on arriving in Paris was to call at your former lodgings and I hasten to let you know at once the happy result of my visit. Presenting myself to the concierge, with that supreme air of indifference which is so interesting in our position, I inquired with charming nonchalance if Madame de V—— were at home.

"No," replied the concierge promptly, "but go upstairs, monsieur will see you!"

Fancy my astonishment, chere Amelia, at being invited to go upstairs and interview monsieur!

"How is this?" I said, trying to conceal my surprise as best I could. "I thought monsieur was dead.'

"Yes, monsieur," replied the concierge.

"Oh, merciful heaven!" I said to myself, "What is this I hear? Am I dreaming?"

Then turning to the concierge I timidly asked: "But is it not true that monsieur is dead?"

"Well, yes" replied the concierge indifferently, "something of that sort did occur."

Then, assuming a most confidential tone, the good woman confided to me that for three days everybody thought that monsieur was dead but that on the fourth, having shown signs of life, monsieur le docteur was called and pronounced it a case of lethargy, and now monsieur is quite well and entirely himself again

"Grand Dieu!" I murmured, "how extraordinary!"

"Pauvre monsieur is very sad—very sad indeed—"

"Monsieur sad!" I repeated in a tone of delicious innocence. "Sorry to come to life again in this wicked world?" I suggested.

"No, monsieur is sad because the wife who adored him and whom he adored has disappeared and no one, not even her most intimate friends, know where she is. Grief over the death of monsieur has probably unbalanced her mind," said the concierge with a deep sigh, "and monsieur refuses to be consoled."

"Ah, that is too bad!" said I, "pauvre monsieur! pauvre madame!"

An hour later Amelia was on her way to Paris, and Monsieur de V —— now goes about telling his friends how his dear little wife came very near losing her mind through grief. Et quant à Monsieur Charles Dubois, he is quite content with single bliss, and when his friends suggest a wife the young artist shrugs his broad shoulders and laughingly says:

"No, thank you! I have no taste for marriage!"

[Translated from the French of H. de Balzac, by Beatrice Hastings.]

Home Products are Best

THERE IS ALWAYS A GREAT DEAL of talk about the superiority of the products that come from foreign manufactories, over those that owe their being to domestic manufactories. Yet this is an absurdity and the person who refuses to see any good in a home-made article, while he continues to exploit the works of Europeans, deserves to be expatriated. Right here in San Francisco we manufacture many articles that easily rank with those of foreign manufacture.

There is the Pacific Saw Manufacturing company, for instance, the pioneer of its line, and located at 17-19 Fremont street in this city. James Patterson is the president and manager of the company, and Antone C. Anderson is the secretary.

The Pacific Saw Manufactory makes saws of every description to order, planing and courier knives, lace leather, emery wheels, saw mandrels etc. A visit to the manufactory reveals some highly interesting scenes, the details of saw manufacturing being of interest not only to those engaged in this line of work, but to all classes of students as well. And a visit to the manufactory also reveals the fact that home products cannot be excelled by those of foreign make.

The Pacific Saw Manufactering company is the agent for C. B. Paul's files, which have no superiors.

IS YOUR HAIR FALLING OUT?

Or is your scalp in a bad condition. If so then you have use for Lederer's QUINTONICA. It makes the hair grow and keeps the head in healthy condition. 35 cents per bottle.

123 Stockton St.

Dr. CARL DEHMEL
(formerly of Berlin)
Surgeon Chiropodist and Masseur . . .
Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe Nails a Specialty
CONSULTATION FREE

EMPORIUM and GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR
On Mezzanine Floor near Post Office
Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.
Saturdays 9 a. m. to 10 p. m.

THE CHILDREN'S JINKS

MY REMEMBRANCE of the only children's high jinks ever given by the Bohemian club is very hazy but I remember quite well the fact that I was there. It was given at the old clubrooms in Pine street, and was one of the most unique events that Bohemia had, up to that time, celebrated.

Robert Howe Fletcher, in his annals of the club, says that the juvenile jinks emanated from a suggestion involuntarily voiced by a crusty old bachelor, who was objecting to the giving of another of the most delightful ladies' jinks.

" 'Women are adorable, no doubt,' he said, 'in their proper sphere, but when we enter the portals of our club, we should feel that it is ours and ours only, and be assured that our privacy is not going to be intruded upon. Why, good Lord !,' he cried with an outburst of righteous indignation, 'if this sort of thing is encouraged much more, we will be having children here next.' "

And thus was born the Great Idea, for Paul Neumann seized upon the suggestion at once.

It was Mr. Neumann who acted as sire of the jinks upon that memorable Saturday afternoon when children from twelve years of age downward climbed the stairs leading to the club-rooms and exclaimed in bashful rapture at the picturesque scenes laid bare to their unaccustomed juvenile eyes.

Mr. Neumann was associated in entertaining the children High Priest Bromley and by Andrew McF. Davis Mr. Davis being a father himself and Mr. Bromley a grandfather, it will easily be understood they both knew how to go about their task.

There was a program of music a kinder-symphony etc, contributed by club talent. The high-priest made a short address to the sire and to the children, who were ordered to appear as neophytes before him. A long line of pretty girls and boys, headed by Mr. Neumann's little daughter, Pauline, filed up before the sire and the high-priest. I do not remember all the bright things that were said. We were told, though, that:

"Notwithstanding you are about to enjoy this great and unparalleled privilege, you are not expected to aggregate to yourselves any special privileges as you mingle with your less favored associates; nor are you expected to feel as did the little boy when he fell into a molasses cask and became so stuck up he wouldn't speak to any of his friends. You should, rather, strive to emulate that other little boy who became so bright that his mother had to use smoked glass to look at him."

We were told all about the owl and how it became Bohemia's emblem, and then questions were asked of the neophytes. However, the high-priest did not wait for the children's answers but answered each one as soon as the query was propounded. Among other qestions were:

"In preparing yourselves for the great battle of life would you prefer to pull the bow oar or join the archery club?

"In modern history is there any account of more than one city hall that cost six millions being surmounted by a six-bit flagstaff?

"Of all the booms now booming over the country, do you believe than any of them will leave so lasting an impression as the spanker boom of childhood?"

There were a few other questions, then we had to chant some verses in chorus, and then we were told to kiss the owl as a conclusion to the ceremony.

Then came refreshments, with candies and bonbons, and we cracked the last and donned the caps and enjoyed ourselves until it was time to go home.

But I imagine it was the sisters, mammas, cousins and aunts accompanying us who extracted the greatest enjoyment from the jinks. We were really too young to understand the immensity of the privilege accorded us, but Bohemia was not then such an open book to the fair sex as it is today and the afternoon was decidedly a treat to our adult feminine relatives.

THE GROWN-UP.

TOWN TALK gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales.

Pommery Sec and Brut

Universally acknowledged by Connoisseurs the HIGHEST GRADE of Champagne.

Tourists to the Continent of Europe observe that Pommery commands the highest price at all better hotels and resorts.

At all the English Wine Sales Pommery invariably realizes the highest values

✳

CHAS. GRAEF & CO.,

New York

Sole Agents for the United States

Pacific Coast Branch, 21 Sutter St.

JOHN CAFFREY, Manager.

HAVING AMPLY DISCUSSED the present prospects of the vocal art and pointed out the fact that today there are more good vocalists and instructors than at any previous time I shall go a step further and contend that instrumental music, too, stands now upon a higher plane than formerly. Repeatedly I have heard the exclamation: "There are no more great masters, they all lie in their graves." The gravest mistake a man can possibly make concerning music is to spread such a report, for it lacks all substantiation and is wholly without reason. In truth there are to-day as great masters as we ever had and I may even make the bold statement that we have greater masters today than we ever had before. These are serious assertions to make and I know that in certain quarters where prejudice rules supreme and narrowness of mind does not permit liberal ideas these lines will be laughed at. But no matter how such statements are received they are based upon absolute facts. Did not Mozart succumb to the pangs of hunger? Were not conspiracies inaugurated in order to kill his Magic Flute? Was he not constantly abused and ridiculed as a charlatan during the time of his activity as a composer? It is a matter of history. Beethoven's Fidelio, at the time of its first production, was cried down by the friends of the other composers who were then considered great. Wagner could never gain a foothold until King Ludwig II of Bavaria, inspired by an almost unnatural affection for the composer, assisted him in the production of his works. And yet today Mozart is living in the hearts of all musicians, Beethoven and his Fidelio are still in existence, while his antagonists were forgotten long ago; and Wagner is admired more than ever. I need not elucidate my contention that none of the great masters was appreciated during his life time. We have today what may be termed a new school of composition, based upon the Wagnerian principle of separating the voice from the orchestra and letting each employ its finest resources. In order to embody this revolutionary idea, more is required of our modern composers than ever was required of them before. Why, a member of an operatic orchestra during Beethoven's time could never have played the score of Pagliacci. Even some of Wagner's men threw away their scores and declared it an impossibility to play such "rot." And just because more is required of them new composers are rarer now than they ever were before. It is exactly the same condition as with the vocalist. The more we require the fewer great exponents of music will we have and the larger increase will we find of good musicians in general. The Boston Symphony orchestra contains today soloists who fifty years ago would have posed as great virtuosi.

¶ ¶

At the present day we have the Italian epoch. Outside of Italy no composers of particular merit are found. I contend that Puccini, Leoncovallo and Mascagni are as great composers, if not greater, than we ever had. In order to fully appreciate the veracity of this statement compare the orchestration of our modern composers with that of the old masters and note the vast difference in color and volume. La Boheme, Pagliacci and parts of Cavalleria Rusticana are fully as grand works as were ever composed. The trouble is that the death of a composer puts a halo around his head that inspires the greater portion of men with an awe bordering almost on worship. It is one of the weaknesses of humanity to belittle an artist during his life and adore him after his death. Musicians do not believe in the French maxim: "Le roi est mort, vive le roi," but they would rather exclaim: "Le roi est mort, á bas le roi"—(The king is dead, down with the [new] king.) The Italian epoch of composition is proof of the musical prosperity of today. Some one may ask now: What about the future? Suppose the Italian epoch is at an end, what then? Well, then we will have another epoch and I voice the sentiment of a great many musicians when asserting that the Russian epoch will in all probability follow. Russia has now its symphonic epoch with Tschaikowsky as a prominent leader. An epoch of symphony is generally succeeded by an epoch of opera. It was so in Germany, France and Italy. In the latter country it is perhaps not so pronounced but a perusal of musical history will prove the truth of this statement. After the Russian epoch the American epoch will not be far distant. MacDowell and Foote have already begun the foundation for national music. These song and oratorio composers will lead the way to more ambitious efforts, as for instance the symphony, and the symphony will be followed by the opera. So you see it is a great mistake to assume that music is declining. No, no, music is increasing and the time will come when the masters of today will be considered as illustrious as the old masters.

¶ ¶

When, twelve years ago, Dr. H. J. Stewart came to this city with the intention of locating, he was told by some acquaintances: "You had better make all the money you can and then leave for there is no room for any more teachers here." It is a pity that some people are unable to discriminate, that is to say, to refrain from making their remarks apply to a class instead of restricting them to individuals. To assert that there is no room for more teachers is absolutely wrong. Good teachers are always in demand. By good teachers I do not mean those whose efficiency dwells only in their own imagination, but those who by their work, their actions, their intellectual efforts and their artistic facility, give indisputable evidence of being entitled to the honor of proving members of that select group known as our musical educators. Small jealousies, vindictive epithets and envy can not dispute or eliminate the inborn gifts of a man and thus the prophesy of Dr. Stewart's acquaintances proved erroneous, inasmuch as his circle of pupils increased constantly until today he is proud to find that his class is larger and contains more capable pupils than ever. The worth of a teacher lies in the work accomplished by his pupils and when I heard that three of the four ladies who sang in the double quartet engaged for the Miller performance of "Heartsease" were pupils of Dr. Stewart I cannot as a conscientious writer deny that he is an able instructor and an earnest musician, for the ladies in that quartet sang excellently. A number of Dr. Stewart's pupils occupy prominent

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

TEACHES: Tone Production
Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone production

Studio: Y. M. C. A Bldg.

Reception Hours
3:30 to 4:30

positions in various churches and fill the same to the complete satisfaction of those who engaged their services as well as those who listen to them. Accompanying this article the reader will find a reproduction of Dr. Stewart's studio. The remark is often made that a music studio does not require luxurious ornamentation, but that a plain room is all that is needed for instructing. This contention is not altogether correct. In order to obtain effective results a teacher should make his pupils feel at home. He should inspire those who come to him for an education with a feeling of comfort, surround them with a cosy nook where their artistic temperament is supported by an artistic environment. Dr Stewart as a teacher, scholar and critic knows right well the importance to be attached to one's surroundings, as they may facilitate or retard study. The manner in which Dr. Stewart's studio is furnished shows taste and refinement. There is not too much luxury nor is there a lack of the necessary appliances that contribute toward creating a homelike atmosphere. There is, before all, the situation that strikes you as particularly applicable for a studio. Van Ness avenue is a quiet thoroughfare and its construction dulls every noise. The studio is divided into two compartments—a reception-room and the studio proper, where a magnificent Steinway grand attracts attention. There is ample space, thus giving the pupils an opportunity to be heard at private recitals which are so essential in the advancement of one's work. An ornament that deserves mention is a rug consisting of the skin of a polar bear, and some splendid specimens of plants and flowers. As a member of the Bohemian club Dr. Stewart fosters artistic tendencies which are noticeable in the ornamentation of his studio. There is a certain quaint refinement prevalent that impresses the visitor immediately on his entrance. Oriental curios, such as Buddhas, artistic candlesticks, Chinese lanterns of rich and quaint designs—among which some bronze, ebony and glass panel specimens are particularly pleasing—form fine features of the decoration Lovers of statuary will be delighted to find a magnificent porcelain statue by Bayre representing a lion. Admirers of bric-a-brac will be delighted with a cabinet containing dainty hand-painted chinaware. Students will find a valuable musical library at their disposal from which they may glean important information. Hospitality seems to be one of Dr. Stewart's traits, for you will find a buffet containing exquisite silverware, among which a costly punch-bowl is particularly conspicuous and which is in evidence during the occasional pupil recitals. In order to be successful nowadays a teacher must not only be efficient but he must know how to surround his pupils with the comforts of a home. Dr. Stewart has solved this problem and hence his success with his pupils, who regard him as a friend and adviser as well as an instructor.

¶ ¶

An informal reception and pupil recital was given by Dr. Stewart at his studio, on Thursday afternoon, August seventeenth. A prominent feature of the selections was the intelligent character of the pupils' execution, which demonstrated good schooling. The program included the following numbers: Song, Bitte (Max Spicker), Miss Nourse; four songs (Henschel), Miss Ella V. McCloskey; song, Sunday on the Rhine (Schumann), Mrs. Emilie Parent; aria, My Heart at thy Sweet Voice (Saint-Saens), Mrs. Briggs; piano solo, Gondoliera (Moszkowski), Miss Lyon; song, Eco di Napoli (Berignani), Miss Grace Davis; songs (a) Invani (Tosti), (b) In Sweet September (Hope Temple); aria, Thou Brilliant Bird (David), Mrs. Eva Tenney; aria, Il est doux (Massenet), Mrs. Etta Bayley Blanchard.

¶ ¶

A concert is announced by Miss Meta Asher and Harry Samuels, both of this city and both instrumentalists of considerable ability. Miss Asher graduated from the Royal academy in Berlin where she studied with Barth and afterwards completed her studies with Moszkowski. She has returned to this city fully equipped with the best musical education that one may possibly obtain and having natural talent she should accomplish gratifying results. Harry Samuels, having received his fundamental instruction from Henry Heyman, entered the Berlin Royal academy and became a pupil of Joachim and afterwards studied with Cesar Thomson at Brussels. Naturally the advice of two such masters had considerable influence on Mr. Samuels' education and it will be exceedingly interesting to listen to his work which is classed among the best in New York.

¶ ¶

The rehearsals for the holiday services at the various synagogues are progressing nicely. The Taylor street synagogue has undergone a complete renovation and presents now a most luxurious appearance. Cantor Davis is officiating at the

[Photo by Bushnell.] Music Studio of Dr. H. J. Stewart

Taylor street temple and the choir includes Miss Ella V. McCloskey, Frank Coffin and F. Mills. Frank Bohner acts as organist.

¶ ¶

Inasmuch as this issue of TOWN TALK is a Bohemian club edition it would be appropriate to mention a few musicians who have gained prominence here while members of the Bohemian club. Among these is Joseph D. Redding who has written many pretty bits of dance music. By the way, there are so many people who sneer at dance music and yet it is as refined as any other class of music. Illustration of this statement is superfluous. The late J. H. Rosewald, too, was a member of the club. He wrote Baroness Meta, a comic opera which was produced at the Grand opera house, and various other minor works of his proved quite successful. Then there is Willard D. Barton who wrote the famous Razzle Dazzle trio and the well known Wild Man of Borneo. Donald de V. Graham has written various bits of melody, among which a Feuille d'Album attracted especial attention. John Marquardt, one of the fore most concert masters in the United States who composes occasionally and is now leader of the Louvre orchestra, is also a member of the club. Luigi Arditi considered it a great privilege when the club elected him as an honorary member. Another Bohemian of musical prominence is Dr H. J Stewart among whose compositions the comic operas Bluff King Hal and His Majesty proved to be works of artistic merit. Dr. Stewart also wrote the beautiful quartet to Tennyson's words Crossing the Bar, which was sung at the memorial service of Elks at Metropolitan hall in 1892. Another composer who was a member of the club was the late Stephen Leach, who wrote the still popular drinking song Let All Obey. Bohemians who are vocalists compose this list: Donald de V. Graham. J. H. Graham, Frank Coffin, Harry A. Melvin, C. D. O'Sullivan, F. G. B. Mills, W. B. Hopkins, C. J. Dickman, H. M. Gillig and others. Members otherwise active in the musical profession are: T D Herzog, H. M. Bosworth musical critic of the Examiner, Sir Henry Heyman, Otto Fleissner, F. J. Loring, C. von Gerichten, Ashton Stevens and George E. P. Hall.

¶ ¶

The other day I heard Miss Hilda Newman of Oakland play a scherzo by Brahms. While I had only an opportunity to admire Brahms in his orchestral compositions, I could nevertheless hear that Miss Newman fosters originality and possesses a natural tasts for that which is refined in music. Her execution is characteristic and one can easily extract therefrom her ideas, which though frequently at variance with the printed copy must be considered largely as improvements rather than anything else. It is somewhat presumptuous perhaps to state that Miss Newman played that Brahms scherzo better than it is written in the copy, but having an aversion to stereotyped methods of playing I was glad to see Miss Newman introduce her own ideas. Such actions always reveal genius, provided they bear the crown of intelligence. Miss Newman will play this Brahms number at Miss Grace Carroll's farewell concert in Oakland on September twenty-second and I would advise the piano students present to follow her interpretation; they can profit by it. Miss Carroll will leave for New York after her concert where she will continue her studies. An efficient instructor will be able to develop Miss Carroll's voice in a manner that will produce gratifying results.

¶ ¶

The musical season in Oakland will be opened by Putnam Griswold, whose concert at the Unitarian church on September first promises to be an artistic and social success. This accomplished baritone will be assisted by Mrs. Sofia Neustadt, better known to the musical cult of this coast as Miss Newlands. The lady is visiting relatives in Oakland and her appearance at Mr. Griswold's concert will be the only one during her stay. She is residing in Scotland where her excellent voice has occasioned much favorable comment. Other participants in this concert will be: Miss Elizabeth Westgate, pianist and accompanist; Miss Constance Jordan, accompanist; Alex T. Stewart, violinist, and the Stewart string quartet

¶ ¶

Having had an opportunity to listen to some of Oakland's prominent vocalists last week, I am convinced more than ever that the vocal art is increasing not alone because of the good voices that one finds but because of the good class of music selected by the soloist. It is always a sign of musical prosperity when the selections you hear at a concert are of first class quality. Thus it seems that Oakland is not in the rear of the army that advances toward a musical Mecca.

¶ ¶

There was a re-union at the Von Meyerinck School of Music on Thursday evening of last week, the purpose of which was to introduce the new members of the teachers' staff, Arthur Fickenscher and L. D. Ventura. The latter explained the plan of his French and Italian classes and read some extracts from the French classics. A meritorious musical program was rendered.

ALFRED METZGER.

Major and Minor

WHEN THE SEASON OPENS with pleasant gatherings of musical and dramatic talent a sweet young face will be missed—a face too radiantly bright to be dimmed with the trials of the world and wherever the name of Myrtle Watkins is mentioned sacredly and reverently a tear falls in memory of the young life taken in God's wisdom to a realm more fitted for so fair a flower. Miss Myrtle was born in Butte city, where she was tenderly laid to rest on the second of last July, passing away at the age of eighteen. She was a pupil of Cyrus Brownlee Newton, who predicted a brilliant career for the gifted girl who was possessed of rare magnetism, her fine hazel eyes being most expressive and her face lighting charmingly as she enthused with her work. Her gifts were manifested almost in infancy, when her mother taught her to lisp little verses and she became an attraction among their circle of friends and at little entertainments. When she was fifteen she had already won medals in elocutionary contests without a teacher's instruction. The writer had a sincere affection for little Myrtle and her interest was all the stronger in the knowledge that the success she had achieved was greatly due to her own ambition and perseverence, for she insisted upon meeting by her own efforts much of the expense of her tuition, and to her mother's first training she attributed her chief encouragement and impetus in her chosen work. Mr. D. Kimber Watkins, her brother, took loving pride in her when she became a student with Mr. Newton, during a period of a year and a half. Her face was becoming familiar at the entertainments of the Y. M. C. A., Western Addition club and at concerts, and she was proud to have placed her foot upon the first step of the ladder as a professional, attracting so much praise in her readings that she received during her last illness flattering offers from the stage Miss Watkins was particularly clever in comedy although she was versatile and had won praise for her natural and spirited monologue work. Mr. Newton lost one of his brightest pupils, the profession a favorite, while at her own fireside her love cannot be replaced. She was a natural musician for having had but a few lessons upon the piano in childhood she improvised and interpreted with true artistic feeling, of late also taking up the violin. Myrtle gave promise as a vocalist and her sweet alto voice was heard at entertainments and in the solo parts in the choir of the Twelfth-street Christian church. It is hard to think of her bright eyes being closed to the sunshine and music of the world, but those who loved her may remember her cloudless face and pure heart that have been spared, at least, earth's griefs.

¶ ¶

Homer Tourgee has published a group of pretty melodious compositions of moderate difficulty for pupils' practice. Each is a gem in its own particular style, the group embracing Water Babies, A Tone Picture, A Storiette and Musings. They are full of sentiment and interest and would be acceptable to teachers who find so much difficulty in selecting simple yet

HARMONY CLASS

Dr. H. J. Stewart is now forming a class for the study of Harmony (elementary grade.)

For terms, apply at the Studio, 1406 Van Ness Avenue.

instructive compositions. Mr. Tourgee is also working upon an opera that is to be produced in the east. Samuel Adelstein will have charge of the mandolin department in the Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music, which Mr. Tourgee tells me is looking up in the number of pupils. William Piutti will give a recital before the California club this afternoon. Miss Hattie Jeannette Elliot has gone to Los Angeles to fill engagements as a lecturer upon Physicial Education. She will be away three weeks, appearing in several towns. Miss Emily Curtis has returned and begun a very busy term at the California School of Elocution and Oratory. Miss Claire Cole has moved to 1317 Hyde street, where her studio is so spacious and charming that she will give some recitals there. Charles P. von Oer is in town, I hear, from Oroville. Mrs. Jessie Dean Moore has returned from a visit with her daughters to Guerneville. Her work has improved very much, she tells me. Alice G. Crawford, the beautiful daughter of Madame Jeannette Crawford, has recovered her health in Santa Monica and may soon resume her work upon the stage. Mrs Eva Tenney has taken a new studio at 1199 Bush street. Professor Bonelli and family have returned to the city and the San Francisco Conservatory of Music seems to be very lively Alfred Kelleher will be in charge of the choral work, and Mr. Newton is gaining quite a large class in the department of elocution. The Knickerbockers will give a concert in Healdsburg in early September.

MARY FRANCES FRANCIS.

¶ ¶

The first Sunday evening of each month is made occasion for a special service of song at Grace Episcopal church, and the music is always of the highest order. J. F. Veaco, solo tenor, is the possessor of a fine voice admirably adapted to the interpretation of sacred music.

¶ ¶

At the reunion of the Von Meyerinck school of music the following program was rendered: (a) Etude, (b) Polonaise (Chopin), Arthur Fickenscher; Widmung (Schumann), Elsa Priber, Che faro from Orpheus (Gluck), Cecilia Decker; (a) Feurzauber from Walkure (Wagner), (b) Campanella (Paganini-Liszt), Arthur Fickenscher; Le sais tu (Massenet), Im Herbst (Franz), Anna von Meyerinck. Mrs. von Meyerinck is more than pleased with the outlook for the coming season, a surprisingly large number of new pupils having already resumed their studies. A special feature of the school throughout the entire season will be so-called faculty recitals which will be given every month at the school by the faculty only. Every evening will be devoted to special composers like Schumann, Schubert, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, French composers, Italian composers, American composers and so forth. Among the

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, Vocalist, 1109 Post street.
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist, Oroville, Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . -

Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.

Specialist in the Development of the Voice

* * * HOME STUDIO:

RECEPTION HOURS, 12 TO 2 912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .

Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu-El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,

Studio for Voice Culture, Operatic Repertoire,
Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method.

Engagements accepted for Concerts
Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.

Terms Moderate

Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Under direction of For Voice Culture, Piano and Organ
Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck, Assisted by MISS CECILIA M. DECKER
Alto Soloist Central M. E. Church.

Operatic and Dramatic Department in charge of Mrs Mary Fairweather
Piano Department in charge of Mr. Arthur Fickenscher
Assisted by Mrs. Fanny E. Buckland, (Virgil Practice Clavier Method) and Miss Estelle Davidson (Synthetic Method)
Languages: MR. L. D. VENTURA, B. E. (French and Italian) / MISS ELSA PRIBER (German.)
Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy

Instructions in Physical Culture, Chorus and Sight Singing, Ensemble Playing, etc, etc. Advantages Unsurpassed Full particulars and terms upon application. 841 Fulton St, Bet. Webster and Fillmore,
Telephone West 223 San Francisco, Cal.

DR. H. J. STEWART....

Organist of Trinity Church, and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .

has removed his
MUSIC STUDIO
to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine

Singing, Piano, Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music

E. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street

Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.

Choral work under the direction of ALFRED J KELLEHER

A thorough course for teaching Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

MR. FRANCIS STUART

. . . Teacher of Singing

1615 Jackson St., near Polk

SOHMER PIANOS BYRON MAUZY

Agent 308--314 Post Street, San Francisco
Sheet Music, Books, etc. Tel. Main 5261

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use

BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE

It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.

PRICE $3.00

At music stores or by mail Descriptive circulars sent upon application.

HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

possibilities is an evening devoted to local composers for which purpose Mrs. von Meyerinck will shortly address the local composers, so that she and her assistants may be enabled to prepare a thoroughly representative program. As the seating capacity of the assembly room of the school is about eighty, invitations will only be issued to a limited number of guests. The first concert will take place early in September.

¶ ¶

The old Philharmonic society is working diligently toward effecting a reorganization of the orchestra under the leadership of Herman Genss, who has succeeded in becoming quite well known since his arrival here There cannot be any doubt that a reorganization of this society will add much toward increasing musical taste in this city and with the proper people at the head a Philharmonic society should prove very successful. It is believed in some quarters that this new orchestra will interfere with Mr. Howe's body of amateur musicians. This is a mistake. We have sufficient patrons of good music to support two amateur orchestras. Each of these will attract a different class of people. Each of them possesses a circle of friends who are willing to support them as an orchestra, and if there is but energy and staying power there cannot be any question as to the existence of two good amateur orchestras. The Harmonie singing society under the direction of Mr. Genss is making rapid progress and will ere long give a grand concert. It is the intention to combine the newly organized Philharmonic orchestra with the Harmonie society in concerts. A male chorus with orchestral accompaniment will be a novel thing in this city and ought to contribute much toward creating a lively interest in this movement, which is in every respect worthy of the closest attention.

ROCK OF AGES WILL RUN.

THE Union coursing park management will have as a drawing card to the grounds today and tomorrow a sapling and an open stake. The sport should be good as the entries in both events are of a very high order. The Pasha kennels have in the sapling stake an unknown quantity in Rock of Ages. The proprietors of the kennel never send a dog to the slips that is not in condition, and it is certain that there will be a number of enthusiasts who will journey to the park to see the youngster make his initial run. Lawrence the good hound, the property of Deckelman, looks as if he would get first money in the open stake.

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd

TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral Voice Culture and the Art of Singing First-class Engagements only accepted. Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MR. J. F. VEACO

TENOR SOLOIST Grace Church, California Street. Voice Culture. Studio: 1012 Sacramento St. near Powell Reception hours 12 to 2.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave. Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Residence, 1622 Fell Street, near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE

SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakland, Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL

SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing, has resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento street. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL

POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire. 130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS

CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches. Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER

TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY

TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St. Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH

PUPILS of Madame de la Grange Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

J. W. McKENZIE

VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition. McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX

PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A. Building Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30. Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL

VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue. Studio, 1199 Bush Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON

SINGING and Piano. Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK

PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 975. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

MISS ELLA LAWRIE

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Classes for children a specialty. Address, 404 CENTRAL AVE. Telephone, GEARY 676.

MRS. H. EHRMAN

TEACHER OF PIANO. Leschetizky method. Children a Specialty. 1234 BUSH STREET.

HELEN M ANDERSON, A. C. M.

TEACHER OF PIANO Refers to Mr. Louis Lisser, Dr. Wm. Mason and Albert Ross Parsons. Synthetic Method and "Touch and Technic" a special course for teachers. 31 Guerrero St.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH

PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory. Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M. 1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA

TEACHER OF PIANO. 2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER

TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays. 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony. 2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE

TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club. Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. Thursday excepted. Address, 1317 Hyde Street. Tel. Larkin 281.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE

PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street.

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.

ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F.

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.

PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies. Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON

CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher. Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA

TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published.

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN

TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.

TEACHER OF ZITHER. Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street. Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.

VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn. Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR

MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5. Will accept engagements for concerts.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano.
MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

Midsummer 1899

I HAVE HEARD GREAT THINGS of the Bohemian club jinks this year. On all sides it seems to be agreed that never has that generous spirit of camaraderie so entered into the souls of Bohemians as to make them forget the trials and tribulations of the outer world and join hands together in a true spirit of friendship. The Bohemian club is remarkable for that esprit de corps which holds it together and makes it one of the clubs of the great world. Though there are and always will be factional disputes in the best of fraternal organizations, and though the Bohemian club has its cliques, all that sort of thing is laid aside and forgotten during the annual visit to Meeker's grove.

One thing that made the celebration this year more joyous than usual was the fact that for the first time the club held its jinks upon its own ground. Since the outing of a year ago the one hundred and sixty acres upon which the Bohemians hold revelry by night and day have passed into the proprietorship of the club. The purchase price was twenty-seven thousand dollars. Some say that the club paid seven thousand dollars for the property and twenty thousand dollars for the sentiment that attached to the spot. What matters it if this be true? There are rich men galore in the society whose town habitation is bounded by Post street and Grant avenue. If they did pay too much for their happy hunting grounds it is their affair and none else's They are happy, at least, in its possession.

As usual, the high jinks took the form of the Burial of Dull Care. The illuminations came as near perfection as the human mind can imagine. The whole grove to the very mountain tops was lit up and the effect was indescribably beautiful. The colors, too, were well chosen, and the fires that burned on the mountain sides blended wonderfully well with the deep green of the foliage It was a sight well worth remembering The curtain rose upon a forest scene, with the return of Rip Van Winkle from a big sleep and his conference with huntsmen as to the best means of killing care. He called for volunteers to show him the means. One suggested friendship. Immediately a light blazed on the mountain side and then zig-zagged down the precipitous path a figure bearing a lantern and representing Friendship. He spoke for his cause with true feeling, only to be interrupted with a mocking laugh that resounded through the grove and a chorus of voices from north, south, east and west shouting, "What the —— do we care?" From all sides rang the defiant chorus and Friendship's cause was for the moment silenced

Then came another volunteer who advocated the cause of Bacchus, the wine-god. "Wine will kill care," he said

Bacchus, appropriately costumed, made his descent from another corner of the heights, carrying what appeared to be a barrel of double X. He made his talk and a capital drinking song was sung. But he met the same scornful reception, the same defiant:

"What the —— do we care?"

The cause of Love, beautifully illustrated with the illuminated figures of a man and woman in close embrace on the mountain side, was next advocated and sent to the rear in the same rude fashion. So with the cause of Literature. Then, when all the suggestions had been exhausted, it was decided by the judges that not one of the elements advocated was powerful enough, singly, to kill care. Friendship could not, nor wine, nor love, nor literature. But the whole four, taken collectively, could do what no one singly could do. So it was decided that all four should join together and kill care. This was done and the four trooped up the grove, to return in a moment with the corpse of Dull Care.

The ceremony that followed was very fine. The priests came on in advance to the strains of Chopin's funeral march; then followed the elements that had combined to kill care, with the corpse between them; then hoi polloi followed the cortege. A funeral pyre had been erected and when the three judges had pronounced the awful sentence of extermination upon Dull Care the cremation took place. Of the judges Brother Peixotto was declared the best He spoke with clarity and resonance and his words were of the most eloquent. Uncle George Bromley, for the first time in his life, read his oration.

The low jinks was not quite so good as usual this year, though there was an amusing representation of a bull fight on the program. The high jinks was so grand, the supper that followed so soul-satisfying, that almost anything in the way of a low jinks would have been received with fervor. But it was acknowledged by the critics that the inventive brain of some genius must be set a-working before a low jinks worthy of the name can be presented to Bohemian visitors.

Some of the sideshows were amusing. A shower-bath had been rigged up, the idea being that the victim should be led to see it, should be prevailed upon to pull the string and should be douched for his pains. President Vanderlynn Stow, however, forbade the use of the bath because of the scarcity of water. So another device was substituted. The victim was escorted to the bath, induced to pull the string, when instantly there flew up a signboard on which was painted: "THE DRINKS ARE ON YOU!"

Then the victim bade all comers accompany him to the bar.

Dr. Arnold of Belvedere rigged up a wigwam in company with another Bohemian and gave free entertainments of the true red Indian description. Another Bohemian, Eager of Chicago, I think, collected cigarettes and had thirty-nine separate and distinct brands to offer visitors to his tent.

Colonel Trevelyan, late of the Seventh Hussars, and of the Barton vineyard, near Fresno, has initials that spell H-A-T. George Lyon, the artist, painted a sign representing an enormous plug hat, with an eye peeping out from under the brim and the words "HIS DEN" as a motto. It was hung outside the colonel's tent.

One thing noticeable about the jinks, during the whole twelve days of the camp, was the absence of the millionaire element in its conspicuous vulgarity. The millionaire was not asked to exhibit his wealth, but was made to share the fun and the contests for drinks with the poorer members. All were on an equality; none were high, none low. It was a noisy crowd that dined at the Bohemian club on the Sunday evening after tents had been struck and the Bohemian summer jinks had rolled away to a place among the things that are past.

Three familiar faces were absent this year. General W. H. L. Barnes did not put in an appearance; nor did Horace Platt; nor did Donald de V. Graham. THE SPECTATOR.

Just the thing to take camping, a bottle of Chapin and Gore's old Reserve Bourbon.

Two Noted Resorts both under one management, noted for its efficiency. Representing the mountain interior and seaside of Central California.

THE . . . CELEBRATED Hotel del Monte, MONTEREY, . . . CAL.

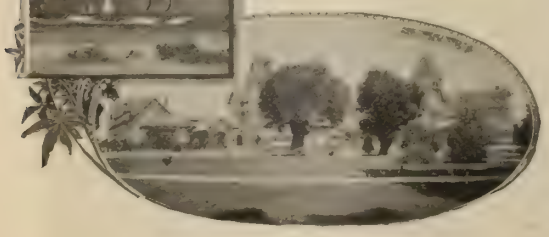
"The queen of American watering places." Only 3½ hours from San Francisco by express trains of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY OPEN ALL THE YEAR.

RATES MODERATE.

The Tavern of Castle Crag and Soda Springs

320 miles from San Francisco, on the famous SHASTA ROUTE within sight of MOUNT SHASTA and the wonderful CASTLE CRAGS, altitude 2,100 feet.

Rates: by the day, $2, $2.50, $3.
By the week, $14 to $17.50.
Bath rooms extra.



Season, June to September

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION ADDRESS GEO. SCHONEWALD, MANAGER
Hotel del Monte, Monterey, Cal., or Tavern of Castle Crag, Castle Crag, Cal.

A Feast of Reason

ONE EVENING SOME YEARS AGO several of the wits of the Bohemian club assembled at a dinner. To the strains of a hunter's horn those bidden to the feast strolled through the halls and entered the small dining-room where they found themselves in the midst of a miniature forest of Arden Stately trees rose on either side and their branches interlaced overhead, closing out all else from view, while a pale moon (calcium) illuminated a stretch of landscape—a chef d'œuvre of the scenic artist. Al Bouvier was the host. A rude table was freighted with palatable things and the guests sat upon benches covered with skins and furs. The ensemble was most realistic. In vino veritas it was learned that the whole affair was planned by a certain fair lady whose health was then and there pledged. A huge boar's head adorned the centre of the table and to it was attached a blue ribbon bearing the legend "The only bore in this merrie company." It was at first resolved that the blue ribbon should go to the greatest bore of the evening, but at the close of the dinner it was decided that each should write an apropos epigram, and that the author of the cleverest should receive the ribbon.

A jolly tooth-puller, Dr. Younger, wrote:

"I was never worth a d——
At writing an epigram
But come to boreing, simon pure
Then boys, I'll take the ribbon sure."

General Barnes' clever effusion was:

"Many a dead bore
Lives in an epigram."

Then came Peter Robertson, dramatic critic and famous for his anti-Bohemian dictum, "men with trousers that bag at the knee come not here." His epigrammatic lines are as follows:

"So may your art, fair lady, always strike it,
And life, like this fair fete be as you like it,
Sure aptest fancy fashioned this design—
Here art and taste in dainty union shine;
And merry humor gives us gentle hint
The only boar's head here has nothing in't."

Al Bouvier dashed off these lines:

"To bore or not to bore?
Who bores? That is the question.
It is not meet to bore to spurn
Has he not uses true,
For many a wit such contrast needs
To make the jokes seem new."

Joseph D. Redding, who is said by lawyers to be a great musician, and by musicians to be a great lawyer, was responsible for this:

Were I to write till 3 A. M.
The time when milkmen yawn
And bakeries give up their bread,
It wots me not; let Empires fall
And ruin come—I have with Bouvier fed."

The final bonne bouche born of that unique feast was the work of James D. Phelan. Here it is:

"The silent witness of the banquet bore
The ancient jest without a smile or frown,
Until—the guests all fallen on the floor—
He then in swinish sympathy looked down
And said: I am no hog—a pearl am I
And cast before ye ere the night did die."

Peter Robertson captured the prize, not, however, because of the superior brilliancy of his achievement in the epigrammatic line. The gallant bohemians conceded that he was entitled to it because he was the only one that had apostrophized the lady of the occasion. THE EPICURE.

The Flesh and the Soul

WHEN ANNA WAS a rosy-cheeked girl in short frocks, her mother was an object of much interest to men-about-town. Her ornately gowned figure was familiar to habitués of the promenade, to loungers in the cigar stores and to theatre ushers. She was frequently seen behind a spanking team in the park and the private-room waiters in every swell rotisserie in town had a bowing acquaintance with her.

Her husband? Well she met him at home, but when she was treading the primrose path she was not encumbered by her better half. She was a handsome woman, was this young and dashing mother of Anna, and she was skilled in the art of enhancing nature's gifts. Her gowns were the finest creations of high-priced modistes, but despite her fashionable attire her refinement of manner, her graceful carriage and aristocratic air, her personality always betrayed that indescribable something which attaches itself to a woman addicted to forbidden frivolities. Her passionate fondness for the roses and raptures of voluptuous pastime impelled her to regard her home merely in the nature of a place of abode. It was a home to her in no other sense. The complacency of a confiding husband encouraged her in the development of amours until she became notoious for the number and variety of her salacious escapades.

Meanwhile little Anna grew up neglected by a heartless mother. She was a beautiful child with a face of Madonna-like innocence and sweetness of repose. When she reached her fifteenth year her father placed her in a convent across the bay. The gay mother gladly acquiesced in this disposition of her child, for it meant a little more freedom and still less responsibility, although it had never seemed as though Anna's existence was a matter of much moment to anybody but her fond father.

The years went by and Anna remained at the convent and developed into a charming girl of a most kindly and generous nature. She saw her mother only during vacation, and in that period she always seemed sad and dispirited. A smile seldom parted her ripe, red lips or effaced the melancholy from her big, brown eyes. That she was an unhappy girl there could be no doubt. Her only consolation appeared to be in the consciousness of her devotion to religious duties. She was a fervent communicant and often told her father that she would like to be a nun. Her mother laughed at the silly notion.

In the course of time that long complacent husband had an awakening. The horns that the world had viewed so long became so conspicuous that they finally attracted the attention of the man that wore them.

A divorce followed and everybody expected to see the dissolute and repudiated wife sink rapidly into the depths that are almost inevitably invaded by women of her ilk. But no, she continued her butterfly existence, seemingly more vivacious than ever. And much to the surprise of many the fair Anna emerged from convent walls and joined her mother. Her friends reprobated her for doing so, and concluded, as they expressed it, that "the bad blood was in her veins."

One day they were greatly surprised to read the public announcement of the grass-widow's marriage. She had captured a rich foreign merchant. She disappeared for awhile, having gone to her husband's home accompanied by Anna.

"She has probably reformed," her acquaintances said, and they marveled that such a transformation could be effected. But one day Anna and her mother returned. They were accompanied by the new husband and took apartments in a fashionable hotel. Soon Anna's mother was conspicuous again on the promenade, and it was learned before long that she was going the rapid pace again.

"Another man wearing horns," they said, and such was the case.

Anna still wore that sad, melancholy air. Cynical persons declared it to be affected; that she was an artful damsel and was merely trying to appear coy, whereas she was a chip of the old block. In the course of a few months Anna no longer accompanied her mother on the promenade or to places of amusement. She was missed and people wondered whither she had gone.

At last the truth is out. Anna is in a convent wearing a veil. Her childhood's wish has been gratified. During all that period in which people wronged her by the suspicion that she was drifting on the rocks the poor girl was striving for the reformation of her mother. There was nothing fictitious about that melancholy air. She wears it yet, and she is more beautiful than ever in the sombre costume that bespeaks her holy vocation. THE LOUNGER.

There are lots of 'A. A.' brands of whisky, but only one Jesse Moore 'A.A.'

The Mitherless Bairn

A WEE BAIRN was wondering in a strange country. He was a tattered kid with a frowsled wealth of yellow hair. His kilts of the Stuart clan were soiled and showed the marks of many conflicts, like the chain-shirt of a warrior. His sun-tanned knees shone above wrinkled stockings which he pulled up occasionally with an impatient movement when they entangled his feet. From a gaping shoe there appeared an array of tiny toes.

He was toddling along an avenue between rows of stolid, brown houses. He went slowly with a look of absorbed interest on his small sunburnt face. His bonnie blue eyes stared curiously. Carriages went with a musical rumble over the smooth asphalt.

A man with a bunch of heather was going up a door-step. Two nursery maids chatted as they walked slowly, while their charges hobnobbed amiably between perambulators. A truck wagon roared thunderously in the distance The child from the poor district made his way along the brown street filled with dull gray shadows. High up, near the roofs, glancing sun-rays changed cornices to blazing gold and silvered the fronts of windows.

The wandering baby stopped and stared at the two children laughing and playing in their carriages among the heaps of rugs and cushions. He braced his legs apart in an attitude of earnest attention. His mouth opened and disclosed his small, even teeth.

As they moved on, he followed the carriages with awe in his face as if contemplating a pageant. Once one of the babies shook his gorgeous rattle at him. He smiled jovially in return.

Finally a maid ceased talking and, turning, made a gesture of annoyance.

"Go 'way, little boy," she said to him. "Go 'way. You're all dirty."

He gazed at her with an infant's sad tranquillity for a moment, while the tears—or was it the mist?—came into his eyes, and then went slowly off, dragging behind him a bit of rope he had picked up in another street.

He continued to investigate the new scenes. The people and houses struck him with interest as would flowers and trees and the drifting clouds. People had to avoid the small, absorbed figure in the middle of the sidewalk. They glanced at the intent baby face covered with scratches and dust as with scars and powder smoke. Yes, there he was "building castles in the air." And who knows but that in after days some of them became true?

After a time he discovered upon the pavement a pretty child in fine clothes playing with a toy. It was a fire engine painted in crimson and gold The wheels rattled as its small owner dragged it uproariously about by means of a string. The baby with his bit of rope trailing behind him paused and regarded the child and the toy. For a long time he remained motionless, save for his eyes, which followed all movements of the glittering thing. The owner paid no attention to the spectator but continued his joyous imitations of phases of the career of a fire engine.

His gleeful baby laugh rang out in the quiet street. As children laugh—as lovers laugh—and to laugh signifies that you must be innocent and pure in heart, lacking which qualities you look glum as a priest who has worked for a bishopric and failed to fetch it.

After a little, the wanderer began quietly to sidle nearer. His bit of rope, now forgotten, dropped at his feet. He took his eyes from the toy and glanced expectantly at the other child.

"Say," he said softly.

The owner of the toy was running down the walk at top speed. He was making a noise like the clanging of a bell. He did not look around at the coaxing call from the small, tattered figure on the curb. The wandering baby approached still nearer and, presently, spoke again.

"Say," he lisped, "le' me play wif it ?"

The other child stopped his shrill tootings. He bent his head and spoke disdainfully over his shoulder.

"No," he said.

The waif retreated to the curb. He failed to notice the bit of rope, once treasured. His eyes followed as before the winding course of the engine and his wee, tender mouth twitched.

"Say," he ventured at last, "is dat yours?"

"Yes," said the other, tilting his round chain.

He drew his toy suddenly behind him as if it were in danger.

"Yes," he repeated, "it's mine."

"Well le' me play wif it ?" said the homeless bairn, with a trembling note of desire in his voice.

"No," cried the other child with determined lips "It's mine! My ma ma buyed it."

"Well tan't I play wif it ? Please, for I have no mither."

His voice was a sob. He stretched forth little, covetous hands

"No," the other child continued to repeat, "no, it's mine."

"Well, I want to play wif it," said the other.

A sudden, fierce frown mantled his baby face. He clenched his fat hands and advanced with formidable gesture. He looked some wee battler in war.

"It's mine! It's mine!" cried the pretty child, his voice in the treble of outraged rights.

"I want it," roared the wanderer.

"It's mine! It's mine!"

"I want it!"

"It's mine!"

The pretty child retreated to the fence and there paused at bay He protected his property with outstretched arms. The small vandal made a charge.

There was a short scuffle at the fence. Each grasped the string to the toy and tugged. Their faces were wrinkled with baby rage, the verge of tears. Finally the kid in tatters gave a supreme tug and wrenched the string from the other's hands. He set off rapidly down the street, bearing the toy in his arms. He was weeping with the air of a wronged one who has at last succeeded in achieving his rights.

The other baby was squalling loudly. He seemed quite helpless. He wrung his chubby hands and cried.

After the small barbarian was some distance away, he paused and regarded his booty. His little form curved with pride. A soft, gleeful smile loomed through the storm of tears. With great care he prepared the toy for traveling. He stopped for a moment at a corner and gazed at the pretty child whose small figure was quivering with sobs. As the latter began to show signs of beginning pursuit, the little vandal turned and said:

"Here's your old toy!"

Then he turned down a dark street and like the snow that melts in the river a moment white, then gone forever.

JAMES M. HAMILTON.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street. Our elegant new fall "dress hats" displayed this week.

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY
12 years old before being bottled

Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers
412 Front St., S. F.
Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

Utica Cleansing
Compound and Utica Compound Paste.....

TRADE MARK TIACU

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society, 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

This compound is made of pure and unadulterated drugs
Used for Baths and Shampoo it will make the skin soft and white.

For Swollen and Painful Feet it is unrivaled.

For Poison Oak and Prickly Heat it is a sure remedy.

Suitable for cleansing anything

SAMUEL SEYMOUR,
21 SPEAR ST S. F. Pacific Coast Agent.

THE EPICURE

Fill the bowl with rosy wine!
Around our temples roses twine
And let us cheerfully awhile,
Like the wine and roses, smile.
Crown'd with roses, we contemn
Gyges' wealthy diadem.
To-day is ours, what do we fear?
To-day is ours; we have it here:
Let's treat it kindly that it may
Wish at least, with us to stay.
Let's banish business, banish sorrow;
To the gods belongs tomorrow.

Cowley.

World of Letters

BOHEMIA without writers would not be Bohemia at all. In the Bohemian club I could name any number of clever men who could write bright stuff if that were their calling; as it is, a good many embryonic men of letters have been forced by circumstances to become merchants, doctors, lawyers and bankers. But of course there are many real literary men who are members of the Bohemian club, fewer now than formerly but still a sufficient number to keep up the literary tone at the monthly jinks. Dr. Winslow Anderson and Dr. Jules Rosenstirn write medical articles and Dr. Younger, who now resides in Chicago, has given to the medical world many well written expositions of his theories. A. L. Bancroft, the historian, is a member of the club but space does not permit my making excerpts from his works. James V. Coleman has a novel in press, upon which the late Daniel O'Connell was engaged in collaboration at the time of his death. Dr. Benjamin Marshall is the author of the Silver Lining series of stories published by William Doxey, the latter by the way also being a member of the club, as is that other well-known local publisher and bookseller, A. M. Robertson. Story of a Watch is the second of the Silver Lining series and contains several sketches and poems. From The Contraband, one of the shorter sketches, I quote this very true bit of Dr. Marshall's observation:

There is no balm to a saddened heart like tears A dumb animal howls to ease its pain, and so does a human being, and there is no doubt a flood of tears soothes a tortured heart.

Among the newpaper men who are members of the club are Hugh M. Burke, C. S. Aiken, C. L. Clough, W. R. Hearst, C. G. Yale, J. A. Hart, E. H. Hamilton, Charles B. Hill, J. N. H. Irwin, E. W. Townsend, L. Du Pont Syle and Peter Robertson. The last might by rights be also classed among the authors and playwrights, for he has written more than one play, I believe, beside the libretto of His Majesty. And Mr. Robertson's Sunday column in the Chronicle is so full of fine bits of philosophy and beautifully phrased thoughts that it seems a pity they should not be gathered into a volume of essays by their author. From late issues of the Chronicle I cull the following bits from Mr. Robertson's dramatic column:

Worth is a variable quantity. There are kinds of worth you would like to have yourself and other kinds of worth you're willing that other people should have, if they want it. Some awfully good people are very unpleasant. In fact there is nobody so peculiarly unpleasant as the awfully good man who is unpleasant. * * We are always seeking to reform the world; we are struggling to reform the world; we are struggling, subscribing, preaching, putting ourselves to an awful lot of trouble to make other people what we believe they ought to be. How do we know what they ought to be? Like ourselves, if we think we are good? They wouldn't be happier for that, may be. Does the world get any better for all our preaching? I doubt it. It seems as if there were a constant law of proportion between good and bad, vice and virtue, happiness and misery. The mystery is in the distribution—the proportion remains about the same. Ah, the alchemy of human nature! If we only understod that. If science could only find the formula that could set down the value of all the integral parts of human nature, love and hate, envy, malice, generosity, patience impatience, and tell us what combination was perfection, we should know maybe, that a little of all of them are needed to make the perfect man.

In the country people seem to be different, maybe less, maybe more, really themselves. Mean people become generous; bad-tempered people become kindly; stupid people become entertaining; coarse people become gentle. Human nature is full of good qualities, and the best of us comes out in the country. We are all thoughtful, considerate, sympathetic, when we go into the summer woods or down to the summer sea. Steeped in the beauty of nature, we cannot be otherwise; we must love one another. * * If it only lasts for a minute, heartsease comes to us there—the only heartsease we can know, for it is God's will that the dearer the one to whom we are dear, the deeper the pain if trouble comes to either. And trouble comes to all. And no one else could give us heartsease. Yearning, longing, sympathizing, loving, suffering, make happiness and unhappiness—the two extremes of the movement of the pendulum which beats the time of life, and only stops when there is no more need for heartsease.

Lieutenant Robert Howe Fletcher, who compiled the first volume of the published annals, was some time since made an honorary member. He is a clever fellow and a good fellow. I remember reading his first published novel, also the pretty little serial about his daughter Marjorie that appeared in St. Nicholas. Mr. Fletcher's writings show him what he is, a sincere American gentleman. Jeremiah Lynch, who is now in the Klondike, is known in the world of letters for his book on Egyptology. Clay M. Greene has written many popular dramas, his latest being His Japanese Wife. The much talked about McTeague's author, Frank Norris, is enrolled among the club's membership. Lucius Harwood Foote, ex-United States Minister to Corea, is one of the most highly esteemed poets on the coast. Harry A. Melvin, the Oakland lawyer, has been a newspaper man and has also written good poetry but of late years he has not contributed much to the world of letters. Mark Twain and Bret Harte are both honorary members of the club.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last fifteen years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

George T. Bromley has often been importuned to write his memoirs, for in the course of his eighty-two years of life he has met many interesting people, from Queen Victoria to Li Hung Chang and John Russell Young, but his only contributions to literature have been a few scattering newspaper articles. He, however, frequently contributes to the press of his native town—Norwich, Connecticut—letters reminiscent of his boyhood days three quarters of a century ago, reminding the older generations of men and scenes long since forgotten, and telling the younger generation of many things they have never known. In a recent letter to his "home" paper Uncle George tells something of the Bohemian club midsummer high jinks, and as 'tis sometimes said that many items of local news are obtained from abroad I copy part of the item from the Norwich Bulletin, whose founder, by the way, was Uncle George's brother "Ike":

The camp is supplied with an abundance of everything except sleep; 'tis always a bit shy on sleep. The weather is always simply perfect, and all day we are getting ready for the great event and at night we all sit around a blazing campfire and have more fun than a barrel of monkeys. A force of cooks, waiters and barkeepers goes up from the club and fresh supplies are sent up every day and the living is the same as at the club.

* * * Just before my departure for the redwoods I was reading in the Courier an account of the celebration of the opening of the Groton railroad, and it occurred to me that I would like to have been there and been called upon to tell what I knew about railroads. I could have told them that when the building of that road was in contemplation Mr. John Breed went to New Haven, where the legislature was then in session, to apply for a charter, when an incredulous questioner said to him: "Why, Mr. Breed, how in the world do you expect to build such an expensive railroad." "Well," said Mr. Breed, "we are going to make a h—ll of a noise about it." And that was what built the Norwich and Worcester railroad. I could have also told the listening throngs between the thunders of applause that I had charge of the construction train in the building of the first railroad on this side of the continent, and was the passenger conductor for nine years thereafter on the same road, which was the Sacramento valley railroad. Before the advent of the railroad conductor the women and children always looked upon the stage driver as just about it; but when the railroad conductor came around the stage driver wasn't in it for a minute.

Bohemia's greatest literary light of late years was rightly considered to be Dan O'Connell. Poor Dan! He died last February but his will be one of the names that will always live in Bohemian annals and the hearts of his fellow club members. Of the many exquisite bits of verse from Mr. O'Connell's muse Sweethearts and Wives was always a favorite. And who could ever forget that beautiful song in Bluff King Hall, Love Endureth After Death?

Doubt that streams through forest flowing
Kiss on sands the yearning sea;
Doubt the sun at noontide glowing,
Doubt the stars, but doubt not me.

Love shall live for aye and ever,
Stream and wood and zephyr's breath,
Murmur nought shall love dissever,
Love endureth after death.

Say those dear words o'er and over,
'Till the birds with carols sweet,
Fill the woodlands, and each lover
To its mate those vows repeat.

W. Greer Harrison is counted among the Shakesperean cult of the club as well as among its authors and playwrights. His plays, with The O'Neill and Robin Hood as their respective heroes, were produced by James O'Neill and Warde and James. Mr. Harrison is a widely read scholar. The only literary effort I have ever seen from the muse of W. G. Stafford was brought forth in response to a request for some photographs of the midsummer jinks last year, to use in illustrating an article, and was typewritten, as follows:

"In reply to your letter of even date I beg to call your attention to the following extract from the club by-laws: 'No information of proceedings of the club shall be supplied for publication to any newspaper or magazine except by authority of the directory.' You have evidently mistaken the Bohemian for the Burlingame club."

THE BOOKWORM.

WATER——LIGHT

Water works and electric light plants for country clubs and residences. Contracts taken for complete installations, and all work fully guaranteed. Only the best class of work solicited. No steam, heat, or danger.

HERCULES GAS ENGINE WORKS, [Inc.]

305 Market St., S. F.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teaches { Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS 3:30 TO 4:30

You should ride a

STEARNS

Cushion Frame Bicycle

Safe Deposit Vaults

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

N. W. corner of Bush and Sansome Streets.
STORES Trunks for one dollar a month.
RENTS Safes for $5 a year, furnishing the most perfect security for valuables of all descriptions.
Office hours, 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS

AT HOME

Call and see

The Thermal Bath Cabinet

Baldwin Pharmacy

119-121 Ellis Street

A tonic is something that restores strength and vigor to the entire system. Ripans Tabules are a tonic in the sense that they correct digestive disorders and help in the proper assimilation of food. When the organs of the stomach are in perfect working order the whole system is benefited. A society woman of New York City suffered from an attack of bronchitis each year as winter approached, and was often unable to go out of doors for days. When the last attack came on she took a Ripans Tabule each evening and was greatly benefited, having less soreness in her throat and very little tendency to cough. As a result, she had better general health that season than for years. The Tabules, she states, acted in her case as a tonic and imparted renewed strength to her system. If she omitted to take one at night, she would notice that she was not so well the next day.

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE AT PRIVATE SALE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES.

In the Matter of the Estate of MABEL RUTH LOCKWOOD CRAMER, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of Los Angeles duly given and made on the 8th day of August A. D. 1899, in the above entitled proceeding, the undersigned, the administrator of the said estate, will sell at private sale to the highest bidder for cash, Gold Coin of the United States and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, 10 per cent of the purchase price to be made at time of sale, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court on or after the 6th day of September A. D. 1899, all the right, title and interest and estate of the above name decedent at the time of her death and all the right, title and interest that the estate has by operation of law or otherwise acquired other than or in addition to that of the said Mabel Ruth Lockwood Cramer, deceased, at the time of her death, and commonly described as an undivided one-fifth (1-5) interest in and to all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California and more particularly described as follows: Commencing at a point on the northerly line of Elliott Park One Hundred and thirty-two (132) feet westerly from Steiner Street and running thence westerly along said line of Elliot Park twenty-two (22) feet, thence at right angles northerly seventy (70) feet: thence at right angles easterly twenty-two (22) feet: thence at right angles southerly seventy (70) feet to the point of commencement, with improvements thereon consisting of a cottage of six rooms: Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining.

Bids or offers must be in writing and will be received at the offices of Lent and Humphrey, Attorneys at law, Rooms 54 and 55 Crocker Building, at the junction of Market and Post Streets, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California or may be delivered to the administrator personally or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said court at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of said sale.

RICHARD LOUIS CRAMER,
Administrator of the estate of
Mabel Ruth Lockwood Cramer.

RICHARD J. DILLON
Attorney for the Administrator,
54-55 Crocker Building, San Francisco, Cal.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of MARY LEONARD, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned. Executrix and Executor respectively of the last will and testament of MARY LEONARD, deceased, to the creditors, of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within Four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executrix and executor or either thereof at the law offices of LENT AND HUMPHREY at rooms 54 and 55 in the Crocker Building in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

MARY LEONARD and LEON ROOS,
Executrix and Executor respectively of the estate of Mary Leonard, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco August 12, 1899.

LENT & HUMPHREY,
54-55 Crocker Building.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of ROGER PRENDERGAST Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, executors of the last will and testament of ROGER PRENDERGAST deceased, to the creditors, of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executors at the law office of J. J. Dwyer at the Mills Building, Seventh Floor, Room 38, northeast corner of Bush and Montgomery streets in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

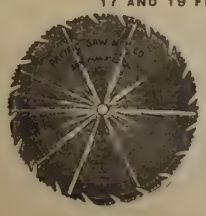
PETER J. DUNNE and CHARLES HIRSHFELD,
Executors of the last will and testament of
Roger Prendergast Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 22, 1899.

J J DWYER, Mills Building,
Attorney for Executors.

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO



Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

— PRICE, $3.00 —

Saws of every description made to order.
Planing and Currier Knives. Lace Leather,
Emery Wheels. Saw Mandrels.
Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

To Chicago in 3½ Days
To New York in 4½ Days
VIA
Chicago Union Pacific
AND
Northwestern Line

Through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Buffet-Library Cars with Barber daily . . .
All Meals Served a la Carte in Dining Cars

For full information address
R. R. Ritchie, General Agent
PACIFIC COAST
No. 2 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco
PALACE HOTEL

ESTABLISHED 1863

GOLD
PEBBLE
SPECTACLES
EYE GLASSES
OPERA
FIELD AND MARINE
GLASSES

COMPLICATED
CASES OF DEFECTIVE
VISION
DIAGNOSED
FREE OF CHARGE

824 MARKET STREET, PHELAN BUILDING, Near Fourth

"PIONEER LIMITED"
BETWEEN
St. Paul and Chicago

Finest and most complete train on Earth

C. L. CANFIELD, General Agent,
636 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

THE ENGRAVING OF COOPER & CO., the Art Stationers, is not only superior to that of other houses, but is less in cost. Compare their figures —as for the rest, no charge if not satisfactory. Other houses also charge fifty per cent more for stamping note-papers and with inferior workmanship.

Summer Resorts

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging

Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room, telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5.50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References, any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

GLENBROOK . . . Lake County, California . .

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish, If you want to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation, If you want pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an exhilarating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O. W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

SHOES MADE TO ORDER

Hand Sewed, $5.50 Repairing Done Nicely

Machine Sewed, $3.50

Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold heap.

Telephone Polk 18 T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

The Laxative Liver Lozenge

PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable.

PRICE 25 CENTS

CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, - 139 Powell St
W. W. STOCKER.

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

Wm. B. Hooper, Manager San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA

.....1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer, First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY.

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

Pacific Carriage Co.

OLIVER HINKLEY
SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.

STANDS:

General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street

California Hotel N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny 48 Eighth Street

TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

Recreation Park

Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets

BASE-BALL

EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Oakland vs. Santa Cruz

August 26th and 27th

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE

DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1029½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh. Office Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND

DENTIST. Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL

DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S. W. corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas.'

BUSH AND SON

DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 206 Kearny St., S. F. Rooms 310-308-309 Phone Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN

VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone, 4118, San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street, Telephone 66. 1529 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

FRANCIS STUART

TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK

HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON

MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone. Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LOUIS CREPAUX
(Member Paris Grand Opera)

HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

PIERCE & TAYLOR

STORAGE WAREHOUSE, 735 Market Street-Opposite Grant avenue. Furniture, Pianos, Trunks, Paintings, Mirrors and other goods stored in clean, light. dry lofts. Charges moderate. Telephone Black 311.

DECKELMAN BROS.

RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON

Wholesale and retail dealer in Coal and Wood 670 and 672 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts , San Francisco. Telephone East 152

Santa Fe Route

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St.. Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway.
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street.

Lake Tahoe

The Most Picturesque Mountain Lake on the Continent

Its Attractive Resorts

Tahoe City — Tallac
McKinney's — Lakeside House
Rubicon Park — Glenbrook
Emerald Bay — Deer Park Inn
Glen Alpine Springs

Afford fine hotels, home comforts and all modern conveniences at reasonable rates.

Endless opportunity for outdoor recreation, such as boating, bathing, steamer excursions around the lake, mountain climbing, sight seeing, hunting and fishing

The atmosphere is pure, dry and health giving. Absolutely no malaria and no insect pests. Nights cool and delightful. Holders of Ogden Route tickets with sufficient limit may be granted a stop-over at Truckee to visit the lake. Side trip including trip around the lake, $6.00.

ALL AGENTS OF THE

Southern Pacific Company

are supplied with handsomely illustrated folders for free distribution, giving full and complete information. Ask or send for one.

S. A. WHITE — H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W. H. PORTER
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 — SAN FRANCISCO

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.

DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF

PAPER

Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty

401-403 Sansome St.

SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence

Livery and Sale Stables

423 Post Street,

W. E. BRIDGE, Proprietor

Telephone No. 1323 — San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY

Office, 1004 Market Street

TELEPHONE. SOUTH—420

TELEPHONE MAIN 240

George D. Graham
MANUFACTURER OF INKS
Printing and Lithographic
Printers' Rollers and Composition
Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials
529 COMMERCIAL ST.
Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.

Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.

609 Sacramento St.,
San Francisco, Cal.

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer
. . of . .
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

Schillinger's Patent Sidewalk and Gardenwalk a specialty

Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

UNITED STATES BREWERY

311-313 FULTON STREET

CELEBRATED — Steam Beer

ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS

EDWIN E. PARKER — BENJ. L. TARBOX

The Reception

206 SUTTER ST., San Francisco.

Private Rooms for Ladies — Music Room at
Oysters in Every Style. — Disposal of Patrons
TELEPHONE MAIN 1231.

A No. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton

JAS. P. DUNNE & CO. . .
* *
No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL . . .
* *
Fourth and Market Sts.

Overcoats and Valises Checked Free — TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR

THE MANHATTAN . . .
* *
25 Geary Street, S. F

Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5611

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world

Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free. A valuable book for men.

W. SCHEPPLER

DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

EDUCATIONAL

SELBORNE SCHOOL... FOR BOYS

....SAN RAFAEL....

* * The school will reopen on August 29th in the fine new buildings, heated by steam and lighted with electricity.

For catalogue apply to the Principal.

REV. CHARLES HITCHCOCK.

SAN RAFAEL

TRINITY SCHOOL... 3300 WASHINGTON ST SAN FRANCISCO

(FOUNDED 1876) Boarding and Day School for Young Men and Boys

Prepares for university and college

Accredited with the University of California and the Leland Stanford University. A faculty of eleven professors and teachers.

Boarders limited to thirty-five. Christmas term opens August 1st

REV. DR. E. B. SPALDING, Rector.

— FULTON —

LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY

236 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.

Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons; Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 561c

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory

40 ELLIS ST., Rooms 1 and 2

SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00

Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

A D Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty

Open Day and Night Telephone Main 971

LASH'S KIDNEY AND LIVER BITTERS

BETTER THAN PILLS.

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO, SHELTERED FROM OCEAN WINDS AND FOGS. VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE. EASY TERMS. AMERICAN LAND AND TRUST CO., 132 MARKET STREET, S. F.

LARKSPUR

Is destined to be the metropolis of Marin County and is San Francisco's most popular suburb. It is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mount Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially, Eminent physicians pronounce it a great sanitarium.

A Great Sanitarium Many attractions are offered—such as sea bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks snd drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations; for, Larkspur is building up more rapidly than any other town on the N. P. C. R. R. Large esidences and cottages for sale on installment payments. Do not pay rent when the same money will purchase a beautiful home. Cottages for rent; property exchanged.

AMERICAN LAND and TRUST CO.

132 MARKET STREET

SING FAT & CO.

(ESTABLISHED 1866)

Chinese AND Japanese Bazaar

CHINESE EMPEROR
TRADE MARK.

614 DUPONT STREET, next to St. Mary's Church

Beware of Firms Infringing Upon Our Name.

Prices Hammered 25 to 50 per cent. DOWN SAVED

CLEARANCE SALE

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 MARKET STREET, S. F.

'Phone, Main 1659

DO YOU KNOW

A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT

Send for Sample Copy of the

OAKLAND TRIBUNE

and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco

Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

THE GRAND
FAVORITE WINE
OF HENRI THE IV
KING OF FRANCE

JURANCON

HIGHEST AWARD

PARIS EXPOSITION

MONT ROUGE VINEYARD
LIVERMORE VALLEY.
CALIFORNIA

GOLD MEDAL

1889

CHAUCHÉ & BON

PROPRIETORS

17 FIRST STREET

SAN FRANCISCO

Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST
TEL MAIN 5522.

3253 FILLMORE ST.
TEL. WEST 152

TELEPHONE MAIN 400

MOISE KLINKNER CO.
RED
RUBBER STAMPS, STENCILS
BOX & BURNING BRANDS
MEDALS, BADGES, CHECKS, DIES.
320
SANSOME ST. SAN FRANCISCO.

MOISE'S EASY SHINE. MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

"TOWN TALK"

Moise's

ARTISTIC
RAISED LETTER

SIGNS

Free Tickets to the Orpheum

BUY YOUR

LENOX and IVORY SOAP

Save your Wrappers and get Free
Tickets to the Orpheum

THE JOHNSON-LOCKE MERCANTILE CO.
204 FRONT STREET, S. F.

Will exchange for Lenox and Ivory Soap Wrappers
FREE TICKETS to the Orpheum
Under the following conditions:

if you want a 25c Reserved Seat	Send ..... 25 wrappers of LENOX SOAP Or.. ....12 wrappers of IVORY SOAP Or else send .15 wrappers of LENOX SOAP And .. 6 wrappers of IVORY SOAP	if you want a 50c Reserved Seat	Send 50 wrappers of LENOX SOAP Or . .. . 24 wrappers of IVORY SOAP Or else send 25 wrappers of LENOX SOAP And 12 wrappers of IVORY SOAP

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .
Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,
Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States
Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,
San Francisco

NEVADA RESTAURANT

N. P. LOUPY, Proprietor

Private Rooms for Parties. Large hall for Banquets Weddings, etc

126, 128, 130 GEARY ST., San Francisco
TELEPHONE, MAIN 1179

GERMEA

THE KING OF BREAKFAST FOODS

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

TOWN TALK

PACIFIC LITERATURE SOCIETY MUSIC STAGE POLITICS

San Francisco, September 2, 1899 Vol. 8—No. 366 Price, 10 Cents

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY

This Paper not to be taken from the Library.

MABEL CRAFT
Whose brilliant work on the "Chronicle" has attracted much attention

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,187,617.90
Capital actually paid up in cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1899	27,656,613.03

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier, William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, July 1, 1899,	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital,	1,000,000
Reserve Fund,	265,215
Contingent Fund,	442,763

E. B. POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:
GEORGE W. BEAVER ROBERT WATT THOMAS MAGEE DANIEL E. MARTIN
GEORGE C. BOARDMAN W. C. B. DE FREMERY ALBERT MILLER
GEO. TASHEIRA E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO
WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

Mutual Savings Bank of San Francisco

33 POST STREET, below Kearny

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE BLDG.

Guaranteed Capital - $1,000,000 — Paid-up Capital - - - $300,000

JAMES D. PHELAN, President — S. G. MURPHY, Vice President
GEO. A. STORY, Cashier — JOHN A. HOOPER, Vice-President
C. B. HOBSON, Assistant Cashier

"Rate of interest on loans secured by improved San Francisco real estate six per cent."

Interest paid on Deposits. — Loans on approved securities.

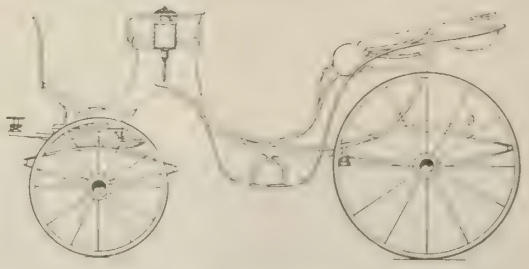
Deposits may be sent by postal order, Wells, Fargo & Co., or Exchange on City Banks. When opening accounts send signature.

OCEANIC Steamship Company

The S. S. Australia
Sails for Honolulu Wedn'sday, Sept 20 at 2 p.m.
The S. S. ALAMEDA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, Sept 6, at 10 p.m.
Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.
FREIGHT OFFICE - 327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A. N. Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S. Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart, H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y., New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.

California Optical Co. Scientific Manufacturing & Opticians — Strictly Reliable

You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., — Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, September 2, 1899

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - - -	10	Three Months, - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

WE NOW HAVE the testimony of two reverend eye-witnesses to the conduct of affairs in the Philippines. Unfortunately they do not agree. Their statements are diametrically opposed, showing that even learned and veracious clergymen are not any more reliable authority upon mundane subjects than the average layman, and that it is advisable for them to confine their editorial opinions to spiritual matters. The Reverend Mr. MacQueen, who is vouched for by the Examiner as "a man of high character, an experienced observer and an accomplished writer," says that he was on the firing line for six months and that so far as he was able to observe, the American plans for the pacification of the islands have been wrecked so completely that it will take an immense expenditure of blood and treasure to make them a reality. He also declares that General Otis is incompetent. Reverend Father McKinnon, who had more than six months experience in the islands and whose bravery on the firing line is a matter of history, asserts that General Otis has been misrepresented, and that the American forces are prosecuting their work intelligently but under adverse circumstances. So now you can take your choice or go over and satisfy yourself as to the true state of affairs by spending a little time on the firing line. But while conflicting reports may obscure the situation, there has never been any doubt in the public mind as to what would have occurred if President McKinley had given Admiral Dewey the proper authority immediately after the sinking of the Spanish fleet. The Admiral has said that the Filipinos are capable of self-government, and that the only way to stop the insurrection and to insure prosperity was to concede it to them. He always opposed violence to them and favored autonomy, feeling certain that annexation would follow as a matter of course. Admiral Dewey was familiar with the situation at the beginning and had the confidence and respect of the Filipinos. He knew a way out of the embarrassment and if President McKinley had kept his bungling hands out of it, he would have pursued it to a happy termination. Dewey stands for right and the American constitution.

THE CITIZENS' COMMITTEE that had charge of the reception to the Californian volunteers deserves great credit for having lured many people with money to burn to this city, and also for having supplied much interesting entertainment on land and on water. It was unfortunate, however, that the dénouement was not up to the expectations of the populace; that the finale should have been in the nature of a fizzle. Everybody was led to believe that the curtain would fall upon a grand spectacular climax, a nocturnal pageant of unrivaled magnificence, a fitting wind-up to a series of imposing demonstrations in honor of our valiant fighters of the gallant and irresistible First. It was to be something unprecedented in the glittering annals of pageantry; something that you would like to remember for the purpose of electrifying your grandchildren with descriptions thereof. So dazzling and fulsome were the promises of the Executive committee that you were tempted to rush through your dinner, struggle into town, elbowing your way through the surging multitude, climb up a pole and cling there with the simulated composure of one of your arboreal ancestors, and wait for the passing show. Perhaps in the intensity of your enthusiasm you were tempted to purchase an elevated seat on a temporary platform erected by sordid speculators, at a price which you would have hesitated to pay to hear the divine Patti sing in the days when she had a voice. And with a placid indifference to the wear and tear of your patience you waited in the fond hope of witnessing something that would compensate you for the various sacrifices that you had made. When the agony was over you either tried to persuade yourself that it was a superb spectacle, or else you felt like the man that had been doing business with the purveyor of gold bricks. But now you may solace yourself with the reflection of how dreadfully dull it might have been if Chief Lees and the patrol wagons had not contributed to the gayety of the occasion, or if a few more parlors of the native biped had attenuated the long line of picturesque civilians. From the standpoint of the altogether—spectators, paraders, illumination and fireworks—it was an astonishing spectacle, but perish the thought of what it might have been without the bands and Shafter!

CHICAGO SOCIETY is again shocked. It is not a nymph fountain this time, says one writer, but a book written by a young society girl—Miss Margaret Potter—which makes Amelie Rives' creations appear like children's school books. This is only to be expected, for of all the unspeakably bad books that have made their way into print the worst have been the work of women—young women—and, moreover, presumably well-bred women. Miss Potter, who produced "The Social Lion," is in the social swim of Chicago, and perhaps she knows what she is about when she, in the language of the Times-Herald, "makes every woman either bad or stupid and every man thoroughly disreputable. There is no redeeming character in the jumbling plot, which is laid in Chicago and represents supposed scenes in the town's high society. This stripling in the ranks of would-be writers blasphemes and swears through the mouths of her creations until even a calloused worldling might stand aghast that in any youthful brain such frightful thoughts have come." Our ears have not yet ceased tingling from the recent tirade of Lilian Bell, also of the windy city, who complained loudly that all our art and literature were emasculated lest the "young person" might suffer from contact with anything more dangerous than "Little Prudy" or a child's picture book. Now what has she to say? As Miss Palmer is just out of the school-room, and is reported to have published her novel unknown to, or at least without consulting her parents, and out of her own pin money, one has to wonder somewhat at the advanced ideas promulgated at the seat of learning to which the young ladies of Chicago repair for finishing touches. A glimpse into her plot informs us that "an abandoned woman and a noted author are the parents of the heroine of the story. She is educated in a convent until her eighteenth year, and then breaks out in Chicago society by the father, who, however, introduces her as his niece. 'Who was Joan Howard?' inquired society. 'What was Joan Howard?' 'Why was Joan Howard? 'Stagmar's niece,' said society calmly, and then half of society, the trousered half, blinked discreetly, and the other half, who have caught the reputation of being fair, smiled sweetly and waited for a chilly afternoon, some bits of embroidery and hot chocolate." In the matter of style it is evident that the young lady has been well steeped in Helen Gardiner's manner and enamored of her material. The book ought to make interesting reading for the parents of other débutantes who have been straining their every nerve to enter the Potter set, and may open the eyes of some who have heretofore been highly flattered that their young daughters have been honored by private seances with the youthful authoress. As to the Potter connections, the best thing they can do is to take immediate action toward suppressing "The Social Lion." By the way, it was an elder daughter of this same family who bounced into notoriety some years ago in tights, through the medium of Henderson's or Kiralfy's ballets. This was in the days of old, before golf and bicycling had taken the feminine world captive. Society had not yet undertaken to elevate the profession of acting and going on the stage, even in full feminine costume, was a more than questionable proceeding. There was some kind of an escapade which involved a susceptible lad engaged in delivering newspapers or telegraph messages, the outcome of which was that the foolish boy, for he was nothing more, was landed in the penitentiary by the aid of old Potter's dollars. What became of the daughter is now forgotten, but presumably the same potent means were instrumental in securing for her a brilliant social alliance.

ANY DOUBT there has been as to the utter subservience of William McKinley, President of the United States to monopolistic influence should be removed by his conduct toward the commercial cable company in the matter of the proposition to land a wire on the island of Cuba connecting with this country. The commercial cable company has done much toward rescuing the people of the United States from the extortions practiced by the Western Union company. As a result of the competition supplied by Messers Mackay and Bennett, the Western Union bandits were compelled to cut their cable rates seventy-five per cent, and it is now the purpose of the commercial company to introduce a competition in the cable business between this country and Cuba, but the pull of the Western Union company at Washington is so strong that all efforts to disturb its monopoly have been in vain. The agents of the monopoly set up the ridiculous plea that the company holds a monopolistic grant from Spain, and under that alleged grant and with the acquiescence of the distinguished friend of Mark Hanna, the Western Union charges five dollars for a ten-word message to Cuba, while the commercial cable company stands ready to supply the same service for one dollar. Eminent attorneys skilled in the practice of international law have informed the president that the contention of the Western Union is preposterous; that if it were tenable the United States would be unable to correct any of the abuses of government

"THE HUB"
CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
132 KEARNY ST., Corner Sutter
EXCLUSIVE
HIGH-GRADE
CLOTHIERS
Fall Ideas Right and Ready
COME TRY SOME ON

inflicted by Spain upon the island, but Mr. McKinley declines to interfere with the monopoly.

BOOKS WHILE YOU WAIT is the title of an article in a recent number of the New York Sun, the immediate provocation being Will Clemens' "Ken of Kipling" which the Putnams so kindly included in their alleged pirated edition of that author's works. The sermon is preached against that class of so-called literature made up of biographies of people especially prominent for the moment and books of travel or description which appear almost over night as soon as general attention is called in the direction of any spot on the earth's surface. There are more biographies of Dewey in existence now than one could read in a lifetime and it is only necessary to mention the floods of Klondike literature and the guides to Cuba, Hawaii and the Philippines which have been issued within the last few years. Will Clemens is credited with the ability to produce a book on any subject at ten days' notice. To the uninitiated, it would seem that these "authors" must be possessed of enormous erudition or what is next to it, a phenomenal capacity for research. In reality, the labor is almost entirely mechanical and is little more than "licking into shape" and writing the necessary connecting paragraphs. When Will Clemens was a resident of San Francisco, he was the proprietor of a "clipping bureau" where clippings from all sources were collected and classified with authentic biographical notes and apocryphal anecdotes, interviews and opinions, genuine or invented, geographical and historical sketches, natural phenomena and habits and habitat of fauna and flora. Every item that finds its way into print is preserved, classified and labeled and when the time is ripe for a book on any subject, there you are, as fast as printer and pressman can make machinery fly. When the public thinks it wants information on any subject the first book at hand is bought up. That the contents may be flatly contradictory and the style as uneven as to suggest a ride over a cobblestone road is of course not discovered until after the thing is paid for and by the time a really reliable work is put on the market the compilations of clippings have practically covered the "popular" field. A few years ago there was a suit instituted in this city for damages—quite an appreciable sum being asked for—in compensation for the loss of the manuscript of a book or play. The complaint, as usual, set forth in legal phraseology the irreparable injury that had been inflicted, inasmuch as no copy of the work had been kept, etc. etc., and the "manuscript" developed itself into a complete file of the clippings of the odorous Hill–Sharon suit. The whole process is but little of an improvement on the ancient schoolboy dodge of cribbing for a composition and without the boy's obvious excuse.

THE ENGRAVING OF COOPER & CO., the Art Stationers, is not only superior to that of other houses, but is less in cost. Compare their figures —as for the rest, no charge if not satisfactory. Other houses also charge fifty per cent more for stamping note-papers and with inferior workmanship.

"IF" said one of the witnesses against Dreyfus, testifying at the Rennes court-martial, "all of the officers having mistresses were driven out of the army there would scarcely remain an officer on the General Staff." And he would not have wandered far from the truth if he had added that, if all the mistresses of the officers of the General Staff were driven out of France years ago, the Dreyfus affair might never have happened. To those women that occupy the attention of the dandies of the French army in their lighter moments may be traced much of the intrigue and plotting that have led to the present disgraceful condition of affairs. The looseness of French morals is responsible for the degradation of the army, and of the weakness of the republic. The man without a mistress is a rara avis in the army or in diplomatic circles, and the women constitute a set in which affairs of state are discussed in the same breath with the latest fashions and scandals. The men are influenced by the jealousies of the women and many an important official act had its origin in a conference of feminine conspirators. The paramours of French officials are involved in the Dreyfus case, and have made their subtle influence felt from the beginning. It is now understood in France that the cabinet headed by M. Waldeck–Rousseau is destined to have but a brief and precarious existence, for it is believed that it will be upset by the Chamber upon the re-assembling of that body. There has been plotting to that end by the mistresses of the army officers working in harmony with those of the Deputies. Hence it is that the generals who have testified at Rennes comported themselves in a way that showed that they have no fear of disciplinary measures. And for the same reason the officers of the court-martial have permitted the case to be conducted in flagrant violation of all rules. They expect to see President Loubet forced to resign by a refusal to accept any ministry recommended by him, and in that way have the government put into the hands of the enemies of Dreyfus. Premier Waldeck–Rousseau and the bold General de Gallifet are today trying to secure a fair trial for the prisoner, and they are opposed by the entire French army, a majority of the Chamber of Deputies and a considerable portion of the French people. In the circumstances it is reasonable to assume, in the vernacular of the day that they "are up against it."

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

MRS. S. R. HALL, 10 Kearny street. Our elegant new fall "dress hats" displayed this week.

WHY SHE WEPT

SWEETLY you kiss, my Lais, dear!
But, while you kiss, I feel a tear
Bitter as those when lovers part
In mystery, from your eyelid start;
Sadly you lean your head to mine,
And round my neck in silence twine,
Your hair along my bosom spread,
All humid with the tears you shed!
Have I not kissed those lids of snow?
Yet still, my love, like founts they flow,
Bathing our cheeks, whene'er they meet—
Why is it thus? do tell me, sweet!
Ah! Lais, are my bodings right?
Am I to lose you? is tonight
Our last—go, false to heaven and me
Your very tears are treachery.—Tom Moore.

The Saunterer

As a free-and-easy watering place Santa Cruz has no rivals. Some years ago I heard a charming young woman on the Sea Beach hotel piazza remark that "everything goes on the beach," and I have often felt since that she knew what she was talking about. Even the representatives of the ton seem to throw off all restraint when disporting themselves at this popular seaside resort, and everybody appears to have a languid contempt for the conventionalities within sound of the breakers. An easy indifference seems to come in with the tide and communicate its influence to the loungers in the tents. Hence we frequently hear of their doing strange things. One of the latest freak escapades occurred last week, and of course the perpetrator was a woman—a buxom dame that certainly tipped the scales at not less than two hundred pounds. She disrobed in a tent on the sands instead of seeking the seclusion of one of the compartments of the bathhouse, and donned, instead of a regulation bathing suit, a Mother Hubbard gown and nothing more. The spectacle that she presented upon emerging from the tent was most amusing, and she naturally attracted a great deal of attention. Although the gown completely enveloped her well-rounded form, leaving no flesh tints to view except those of her "tosie-wosies," it was the consensus of opinion that the most décolleté Newport bathing suit would have been an infinitely less immodest medium of revelation. Into the surf she trudged, but only to cling to the rope and indulge in ludicrous pantomime. Presently an unexpected breaker bowled her over, and momentarily served the Mother Hubbard in the way that the wind sometimes does an umbrella. The affair caused a sensation in Santa Cruz and was given a half column in one of the papers.

———

At that other watering place on the other side of the continent—the world famous Newport—they are enjoying a sensation more productive of gossip than was the woman in the Mother Hubbard at Santa Cruz. The sensation is purely social. It is the result of the unexpected influence wielded over society by Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt, the father-in-law of "Our" Birdie Fair that was. It appears that an American court has been established at Newport and that Willie K. occupies a position similar to that of the Prince of Wales in the social realm of London. His attentions, smiles or frowns make or unmake the social fortune of a feminine member of the court or of an aspirant to it; and the raiment that he wears is copied by the young men that make obeisance before his throne. It has been predicted that in New York, as in London, ambitious hosts or hostesses and match-making mammas with eligible daughters will make up parties including women whom the prince may be known to like and will leave out those whom he is thought to dislike, in order to insure the success of their functions. And already women are braving the sly innuendoes of a sensational press by having their names associated with that of the American Prince. I suppose that it will not be long before the spirit of emulation will pervade Blingum and that a court will be established for the accommodation of our Californian Prince.

———

The only saying that is never received with the chorus "Chestnut:"

"Come and take something."

———

Mrs. Braddon once wrote a novel in which she made one of her characters, a millionaire, regret that with all his money he could not hire somebody to get up in the morning for him. I have no doubt Walter Hobart sometimes feels that way. Mr. Hobart is a very ill man, and his illness came upon him just when he was about to distinguish himself by riding in the polo races at Del Monte. All the money in the world could not ward off from him that attack of typhoid. Somewhat over a year ago, Mr. Hobart had an attack of appendicitis and it was thought that he would die, but an operation was successful and the young millionaire recovered.

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco.

JOHN CAFFREY, Pacific Coast Representative.

The interest that the public takes in members of the dramatic profession was never more clearly shown than on last Saturday morning, when the Santa Rosa sailed for Southern California with a large proportion of the Frawley company on board. Of course Harry Campbell, as secretary of Mr. Friedlander's amusement enterprises, was down at the wharf; also Jimmie Hamilton, the actor's friend, who is never found missing on such occasions. And Frank Mathieu's pretty little wife was there, with one of the children, to bid her husband au revoir and wish him bon voyage. But there were a great many others who made the journey to the Broadway wharf for no other reason, probably, than that they had heard of the purposed embarkation of Mr. Timothy Daniel Frawley with members of his company at that particular time and place. Modishly gowned women stood around in groups and said. "There is Frawley" and "That's Frank Mathieu" and figured out who were the others, which was not so easy since all actors do not look quite the same off as they do on the stage The wharf had the air of a festive function.

I hear that Timothy Daniel was very sick the first day out but as the beautiful and statuesque Miss Van Buren held his head for him nearly all the time, no doubt he did not mind the mal de mer so much as if he had been compelled to suffer alone. The critics all remarked during the Frawleys' stay in town that Miss Van Buren's chief beauty was not her large, liquid eyes or her fine figure but the sweet womanliness that was so apparent in her manner on the stage. Therefore I could fancy her ministrations would be most soothing. Those on the Santa Rosa who were not familiar with the Frawley lisp and the Frawley nose were soon made aware of the actor-manager's identity by Mrs. Bates, Blanche's mamma, who was also a passenger. Mrs. Bates calls Frawley "Tim."

Those who believe in kismet will say that fate's workings had something to do in the formation of the cast of characters for the forthcoming production of Israel Zangwill's "Children of the Ghetto" under the management of Liebler & Co., for among the dramatis personæ may be found the names of Blanche Bates and Frank Worthing. There are other familiar names in the cast, Rosabel Morrison, William Morris and Wilton Lackaye, but around these nobody will try to weave a romance. However, everybody knew that Frank Worthing admired Blanche Bates and during the Frawleys' engagement here of two seasons back, the former's devoted attitude toward the beautiful Blanche was the talk of the theatre-going part of our town. In Oakland, where the Frawleys played a short engagement at the Macdonough, Mr. Worthing used to follow Miss Bates about as if he were on a chain. His heroine-worship was noticeable in his face and he took no pains to conceal his feelings. Audiences at the Columbia used to enjoy seeing the two appear in such plays as "The Wife," "A Social Highwayman" and "Sue," where Worthing played opposites to Miss Bates. And when Worthing joined another company for the succeeding season, the new Frawleys never seemed so interesting. It was said that the reason Worthing would not come out here again was that he had given up all hopes of winning the prize he longed for. The fact that he has agreed to appear in "Children of the Ghetto" as David Brandon, with Blanche Bates in the role of the young Jewess, Hannah Jacobs, leads one to the conclusion that hope is not yet dead in his breast, and that he is going to make another effort to meet with favor from Miss Bates.

Most astonishing are the vagaries of a drunken man, and they depend largely upon the particular brand or combination of brands of liquor that he has indulged in. I have heard it said that an expert can tell from the character of an hallucination what a man has been drinking, and I would therefore like to have an analysis of the contents of the flowing bowl which was responsible for the delusion of a certain drummer one night recently. This individual, who travels for a large shoe house when he is not engaged in lighter pursuits in the tenderloin, was discovered under somewhat peculiar circumstances. The discovery was made by the landlady of a fashionable boarding house, who was aroused at a late hour of the night by loud snores. Entering a hallway in which there was a small table and a chair against a wall she noticed that upon them were various articles of wearing apparel belonging to a man. A search for the author of the snores resulted in the finding of the drummer asleep in a small alcove leading from the hallway to one of the rooms. Upon being awakened he was very indignant and it was with considerable difficulty that he was made sensible of the fact that he was neither in his room nor in his own house.

As a regiment the First California was not popular with the other volunteers in Manila, but the members of the regiment were not responsible for the prejudice aroused against their organization. I have been told that a feeling of antipathy was provoked by the fulsome and exaggerated praises of the regiment which appeared in the San Francisco papers. The Californians were given unmerited credit for the part that they took in the early engagements in the Philippines. They were no more heroic than were the volunteer representatives of other states, and they achieved no greater glory, but the correspondents of the San Francisco dailies lauded their bravery in most extravagant terms, and made it appear as though the Californians were the only genuine fire eaters in the islands. As a consequence the boys from California were guyed most unmercifully. It frequently happened that a coterie of Californians was greeted with the sneering yell: "Who captured Manila?" which would be answered in the same breath with: "Why, the Californians." And again they would hear "Who knocked out the Spanish fleet?" answered in the same way.

And they all got grandly, gloriously drunk
On the night of the grand parade.

The members of the Filipino band which was brought from Manila to swell the amusement program at the Mechanics's fair were among those who enjoyed themselves on Saturday night. They had been dining at a restaurant near the Pavilion and were so well dined and wined, particularly the latter, that they were all in a very joyous mood when they came to the black coffee. They refused to return home and to bed immediately, as their manager advised them to do, and insisted upon visiting a friend of theirs in the Quartier

Engraved . . . ✷
Wedding Announcements
and Invitations . . . ✷
ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

Latin. Therefore they moved along Market street, pursuant to this desire, trailing their instruments after them, and were naturally the observed of all observers, even diverting interest from the city hall tower and the illuminated ferry building. Our Filipino visitors evidently believe that when a good time is on it is their duty to be in it.

The newspaper honors of last week—and it was a week when newspaper people made and lost reputations between days—fell easily to Mabel Craft, who has been the Chronicle's brightest star for the last four years. Miss Craft has contributed to the Chronicle, in her time, articles on all sorts of subjects and has had much praise for her immense energy, for her cleverness as a searcher after facts and for the tense, nervous, clean-cut English in which she has told all that her quick eye has seen. There are many who have classed Miss Craft as first of local descriptive writers. Considering her graphic presentations of what she witnessed in Hawaii and in Mexico and in a dozen other places, I have been inclined to agree with Miss Craft's admirers and to rank her with the descriptive writers of the coast, but after her notable achievements of last week I will put her even higher than that; I will give her all the credit and all the glory that should go to a newspaper woman who has fairly and squarely outdone all the newspaper men and newspaper women with whom she has been in competition in one of the fiercest struggles for first place that local newspaperdom has ever witnessed. From Wednesday afternoon, when the Sherman was sighted, to late Sunday morning, when a remarkable night spectacle was closing Volunteer week, Miss Craft was at the head of the Chronicle's corps of writers. From day to day she gave a series of pictures of the biggest and most thrilling things that ever happened in San Francisco; of the arrival of the Sherman off the harbor, of the naval parade, of the home-coming of the Californians and the wild demonstration that marked it, and finally, of the procession on Saturday night. For all that is worth while in newspaper work, look at the introductory articles about the soldiers in the Chronicle from Thursday to Sunday. Miss Craft wrote them all and the quality of them is such as to end all discussion as to who is the best all around newspaper writer in San Francisco.

The most remarkable feature, in my opinion, of Miss Craft's performances, was her handling of a whole staff of reporters. It is something new in journalism for a woman to direct. Heretofore the feminine journalist has been expected to do nothing but write and she has been detailed to report events, but nobody ever supposed that she could take charge of a corps of reporters and assign to each some particular duty. That is the sort of work that requires peculiar executive ability and judgment, which come only after long and varied experience. A capacity for such work qualifies a person for the city or managing editorship of a daily. The question suggests itself as to whether, if women continue to make such rapid strides in the field of journalism, may they not be found in the near future occupying the principal chairs in the offices of the great dailies. And if they were I wonder what sort of a staff they would select. Would their own sex have the preference or would they bar skirts entirely?

"Opening" our display of elegant "dress hats" always the finest, Monday, September fourth and following days, Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny St.

Dave Jordan's first announcement upon his return to Palo Alto after a two months' trip to the head of King's river was that a Yale football man would be at Stanford this season.

"He was full-back," said Jordan, "on the Yale team and was catcher for the baseball nine.'

David Starr Jordan is, of course, highly elated over this notable acquisition of brawn and muscle, feeling as he surely does that they will offset whatever prestige may come to Berkeley with its new president and the reorganization of its faculty. The spirit of rivalry between the two Californian universities is as intense today as it was when Berkeley stole the Stanford ax. The learned gentlemen engaged in fostering higher education will never permit that rivalry to lag even though it becomes necessary to import the entire athletic output of Yale, Harvard and Cornell.

On a back shelf is Latin—
Forgotten now is Greek!
Those tongues we ne'er shall chat in,
Of them no more we'll speak.
Let U. C. wallow in classics
With Benjamin, their President;
The "Full-back's" the boy
That gives us great joy—
Just hearken to our merriment!

Now that Honolulu is an American city, social matters in the Hawaiian metropolis become of greater interest to those living in the United States. A new engagement announced is that of Miss Adele Widdifield and Lieutenant John Howell, Sixth Artillery, U. S. A. While Miss Widdifield's home is in the islands, she has often visited San Francisco and consequently has many friends here who will wish her happiness.

Even a newspaper sometimes makes a bad bargain. For illustration take the case of the Call. The souvenir edition of Thursday of last week containing

IS YOUR HAIR FALLING OUT?

Or is your scalp in a bad condition. If so then you have use for Lederer's QUINTONICA. It makes the hair grow and keeps the head in healthy condition. 35 cents per bottle.

123 Stockton St.

Utica Cleansing Compound
Compound Paste

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

Try it TIACU TRADE MARK
For household use and the results will amaz you—very economical.

—ALL GROCERS—

LASH'S BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

beautiful half-tones and interesting reading matter concerning the California regiment was in great demand and sold like the proverbial hot cakes, but a rank outsider reaped a goodly share of the harvest. I refer to the irrepressible "Fatty" Blodes. "Fatty" knows a good thing when he sees it. When he saw Thursday's Call he hied himself to the business office and closed a deal whereby he secured the exclusive right to all papers of that day's issue that had not been sold and all the papers of any supplementary issue of that edition. Then "Fatty" erected booths on the street and sold souvenir papers in wrappers. He sold all that were left and Monday the Call's presses were started again to meet the demand. The enterprising speculator cleaned up several hundred dollars through the deal. The Examiner had a little hard luck with its special edition which was to have been issued the same morning the Call's came out. It was to have been a twenty-two page paper and it was so numbered, but the first eight pages were missing. A broken-down press was responsible. While on the subject of special editions I hope I shall be pardoned for indulging in a little self-congratulation over the success of TOWN TALK'S handsome Bohemian club number. It was the hit of the season and in daily newspaper circles it was agreed that it was far ahead of anything that had ever before been attempted by a local weekly.

"I have signed the pledge," said Cholly Dude, as he laid his stick and hat down on the divan.

As he pressed warm kisses upon Loretta's lips he murmured:

"I am in a sea of love. Your kisses intoxicate me."

She hastily disengaged herself from his embrace.

"Leave me," she cried. "I am not the one to wean you from your allegiance. And you are now a prohibitionist!"

A letter from a friend in London informs me that Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Breuer are at present living in Chelsea—"the place where old Carlyle used to growl" and will pass the winter there. The Breuers left San Francisco last February for Paris and after a five months' gambol in the gay capital they crossed the channel and fell in love with Chelsea. Mr. Breuer is hard at work painting pictures for the spring exhibitions and his artist friends in London predict all kinds of success for him. I am glad to hear that the future looks roseate for Breuer since it was really TOWN TALK that discovered him. At the last Bohemian club art exhibition I drew attention to the excellence of his large canvas, a landscape, which the critics of the dailies had utterly ignored. Acting on TOWN TALK'S suggestion the judges awarded the prize to Mr. Breuer and his picture sold at once for five hundred dollars. The week following the exhibition he received orders for five pictures.

Will H. Keith, who has been sojourning in California for some months, will leave tomorrow for the east en route to Europe. Mrs. Keith and Miss Eliza D. Keith are at the Hotel Berkshire for the winter.

The popular Dry Goods store of J. J. O'Brien & Co. has always been conspicuous for the completeness of its Silk and Velvet stock. At present they are displaying a magnificent collection of rich Black Silks and Satins, including the new and popular "Cablecord" Taffeta, the durability of every piece being guaranteed by this old reliable firm.

You never have a head in the morning from drinking Jesse Moore "A. A." Whisky.

I am not the only one, it appears, who occasionally commits such a slip of the pen as to announce the engagement of a lady who is already blessed with a husband. The Examiner, on Monday, in elaborating a rumor voiced in the Sunday morning Bulletin that J. B. Stetson is about to enter the matrimonial state for the second time, his choice being a monied widow, Mrs. J. S. Doe, made an amusing blunder. The widow who is reported as affianced to Mr. Stetson was said by the Examiner to have been a Miss Lulu Kennedy before her marriage. Now I happened to know that Miss Kennedy married Loring B. Doe, a nephew of the widow's late husband, and was therefore not surprised to find the Examiner apologizing in humble terms and in fine type, on Wednesday, for its error. Mrs. Loring Doe, with her two children, a beautiful boy and girl, is living with her mother at the latter's home in Pine street. She is a trifle beyond thirty years of age but is still as handsome as in the days when dashing Lulu Kennedy was wooed by more than one young man about town who sighed for the gift of her heart and hand.

The lady in the case is, in reality, the widow of the late J. S. Doe who, though part owner, with his two brothers, of the St. Nicholas hotel and much valuable real estate, beside having a long bank account, was never known to be very lavish in his expenditures. Since his death his widow has shown that she understands the art of spending money freely and she lives in luxurious style in an elegantly furnished residence at 2489 Jackson street. As this paragraph goes to press, no confirmation of the rumor of the engagement has been received, but it is generally supposed to be founded on fact.

I can imagine what a commotion was caused in the Stetson ménage when the report was put into circulation that Papa Stetson had decided to take unto himself a bride. I can even fancy this move of the aged capitalist being received with as much wordy opposition as was the promulgation of Lady Randolph Churchill's engagement to young Cornwallis-West. The latter, by the way, is in a state of abeyance, the betrothed couple agreeing to a year's trial of affection. I am wondering if Mr. Stetson's trip abroad, just terminated, and in which he had the companionship of his son Harry, was taken with a view to seeing what foreign travel could do to efface a fair one's image from the heart of the aged capitalist. Mrs. Chauncey Winslow (Sallie Stetson) has managed household matters for her father for some years, and she resides with her husband at the family mansion, corner of Clay street and Van Ness avenue. Though Mrs. Winslow is noted for her good nature, it remains to be seen whether she will enjoy being ousted from her position by a stepmother of about her own age.

It is only by making a man understand that you are not in love with him that he begins to understand that he is in love with you.

MEDICATED STEAM BATHS
AT HOME
Call and see
The Thermal Bath Cabinet
Baldwin Pharmacy 119-121 Ellis Street

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bourguignon of San Jose have been spending the week in town. A great many San Joseans came up for the festivities in honor of the returned volunteers. Among them were Senator and Mrs. Morehouse and the Misses Morehouse. Manager S. H. Friedlander left this week for Portland, Spokane and the east, on a business and pleasure trip combined.

General W. H. L. Barnes was the author of this definition of the New Woman: One who has not forgotten that she is a lady and has not yet learned to be a gentleman.

The news that has just reached San Francisco of the marriage of Miss Helen Thornton and Mr. Schacher, a German who resides in Paris, is a source of regret for one reason, that local society will have no opportunity to offer its good wishes to the bride and bridegroom in person. And while I have no doubt that Mr. Schacher is all that one could wish for as a husband being young, wealthy and cultured, I am sorry that Miss Thornton did not choose for her husband an American, since she is so purely American herself, with as much to boast of in her lineage as has Miss Julia Grant. On her mother's side the bride is of revolutionary ancestry, her grandmother, Mrs. D. D. Colton, being one of the charter members of Sequoia Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. On her father's side her blood is of the very bluest that California can claim. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Crittenden Thornton, and everybody knows that the Thorntons and their connections—the Judges, Thompsons and Huies—are counted among the representative southern families who constituted the swim of San Francisco in early days.

I remember Helen Thornton when she was a child. She was brought up as few American children are, with the simplicity of the English method of training. Her mother made herself her daughter's companion as well as guardian and watched over her recreations and studies. She was taken abroad for the continuation of her education, Mrs. Thornton believing that the continental system is less trying to the growing mind, and also more thorough, than the methods in vogue here. Mr. Schacher has, therefore, obtained in his American bride not only a very attractive and accomplished young woman, but one who preserves with her inborn independence of character a most charming and unaffected manner.

The daughters of Mrs. Thornton and her sister, Mrs. Henry McLean Martin, made their débuts in society about the same time. Both Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Thornton gave several functions in honor of the débutantes. It seemed a pity that their mother's old home no longer remained in possession of the family, for it would have been such a delightful place in which to have held the functions. When Mrs. Colton lived in the big white house at the northeast corner of California and Taylor streets, now owned by C. P. Huntington who obtained it through the famous lawsuit, the place had a homelike air foreign to most of the Nob hill residences. Mrs. Colton was always very hospitable, a characteristic that has been inherited by both of her daughters.

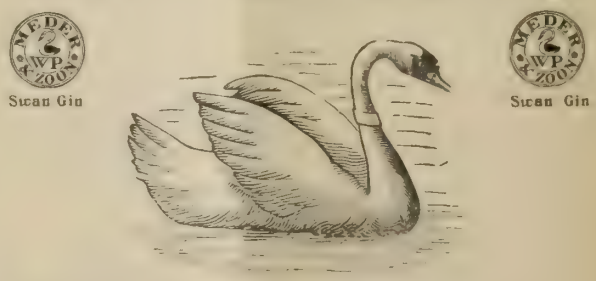
When a newspaper loses its prestige and patronage, it betrays evidence of decay by snarling raucously at its prosperous rivals. One of San Francisco's degenerate weeklies has been exposing its unhappy condition by calling attention to flaws in my social gossip. I am not sufficiently reliable to please the editor of my tottering contemporary, and yet it pains him to think that people should be deluded to such an extent as to prefer TOWN TALK to a journal which was established as far back as 1856, and which is edited in the style of that era. The poor fellow ought to be content that his paper still lives. I have often marveled that its early reputation acquired in the remote period when it was well edited by its founder should enable it to survive to this late day. Incidentally I desire to assure the proprietor of my envious contemporary that while my social gossip may not always be as reliable as holy writ, I have some in stock, upon the accuracy of which there is no person more competent to pass than himself.

Young Andrew Donahue Martin, who has just been announced as the bridegroom elect of Miss Genevieve Goad, is less of a gilded youth than are either of his two brothers; that is, he has never been known to go to extremes in his pleasures. Peter Martin's amusements are of a convivial order, while Walter, if rumor speaks true, prefers woman and song to wine. Since the engagement of Peter Martin and Miss McKenna was broken off, the former has seemed to be impervious to feminine wiles, at least so far as witchery with matrimonial intent is concerned. But Andrew fell in love in regulation fashion and I understand that his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Martin, is highly pleased at her son's choice of a bride.

Miss Genevieve Goad is one of the most beautiful girls in the swim, and her beauty is of the refined, aristocratic order. Ever since her marriage to Mr. C. A. Williams of Johannesburg was prevented, on the eve of the wedding day, by the discovery that the man was passing under an assumed name, his real cognomen being White, and that he was an embezzler and wife-beater, Miss Goad has resided quietly in Sausalito with her sister, Mrs. C. K. McIntosh. The alliance with Andrew Martin will be one of social equality, and as both the prospective bride and bridegroom possess youth and wealth, there is no question but that the affair is a pure love match.

The fact that this engagement is so pleasing to Andrew Martin's mamma goes to show, more than could anything else, how prejudice in the matter of religion is dying out. A few years ago there was the

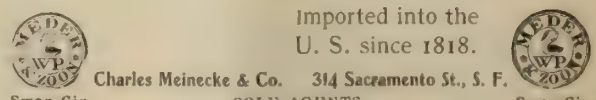
Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street. Our elegant new fall "dress hats" displayed this week.



The only Genuine

SWAN GIN

Imported into the U. S. since 1818.



Charles Meinecke & Co. 314 Sacramento St., S. F.

SOLE AGENTS

greatest to-do when a Catholic woman married a Protestant man, and vice versa, but nowadays such a trifle does not apparently cut any figure in tying the matrimonial knot. When Birdie Fair married Willie K. Vanderbilt Jr. some of the papers made a point of saying that Willie K. had agreed to be converted to his bride's faith, but nothing corroborative of the rumor has since taken place. It is said that Willie K. went to church with his bride one Sunday in Newport, but this scarcely gives grounds for a substantiated statement that he had abjured his own religion and taken that of his wife. Lots of Protestants take pleasure in attending Catholic churches, and I have known many Catholics who would as soon listen to a Unitarian clergyman's sermon, if the speaker were brilliant, as to a discourse by one of their own priests. Nevertheless, to listen with interest to a clever sermon does not necessarily imply that the auditor is going to change his creed because he admires the clerical speaker and his views.

The Los Angeles Capital tells a story about R. Barrett Fithian, who sailed for the South Seas last week on his new yacht, the Rover, and Peter Martin. The story refers to a bet made by Mr. Fithian with Mr. Martin over a proposed pony race. Part of this story was given, in garbled form, in one of the San Francisco dailies. As the Capital tells it: "Peter got the best of Fithian in a novel way, and the sea voyage is said to be Fithian's excuse for yielding up so easily to Martin. The story is that after a dispute over the running qualities of Fithian's well known pony Finesse, a wager of five hundred dollars was made that Martin could or couldn't find a pony to beat Finesse. Martin scoured the country for an animal that could give Finesse a brush, but could find nothing, even though Walter Hobart gave him the pick of his string. But Hobart came to the rescue with a scheme. This was to lease Colonel D. M. Burns' Midlove, a very fast three-year-old filly, undersized, but a splendid runner. When Fithian heard that scheme he simply laid down and asked Martin to take the five hundred without going through the formality of racing. The joke of all this is that while ordinarily Midlove could easily beat Finesse, just now she is in no condition to race. So Peter won on a bluff."

"We can never elevate the stage in this city," said Mr. Friedlander the other day.

"Why not?," asked Phil Hastings

"There are no roof gardens."

I see they are enjoying a county-seat war over in Contra Costa, and the town of Concord, true to its history, is in the thick of the fight. Years ago the settlement at Pacheco promised to become a thriving burg, but being slanted on low lands between two deep creeks, successive winter floods proved discouraging and when inducements were offered for wholesale removals a large proportion of the inhabitants took advantage of the offer and betook themselves and their belongings to the new locality a few miles distant. The natural rivalry between the new and the old town was speedily lost sight of in the face of a new diversion. For some reason long since forgotten the chosen site of the new settlement had been known by the unbeautiful appellation of Drunken Indian. This, of course, was out of the question as a town title, and after the usual amount of wrangling it was officially baptized Todos Santos. This by no means put an end to squabbling, many of the inhabitants frankly declaring that they would rather date their letters and transact their business at Drunken Indian than at Todos Santos. The fun grew fast and furious, for, of course, each side had a paper, until finally one of the Martinez journals in derision begun to refer to the place as Concord. Curiously enough, that settled the trouble, for all sides adopted the new name. Concord was put into universal use and it appeared upon newspapers, letters, etc. The postoffice was named Concord, and Concord it was printed upon county maps, though the official designation was for years afterward, and, for aught I know to the contrary, may be to this day Todos Santos. Contra Costa county, and incidentally the state of California, had a narrow escape from an absurdly ridiculous bit of nomenclature. For reasons too well known to need recapitulation, Diablo was settled upon as the appropriate title for the well known peak, but some members of the body appointed to act as sponsors insisted that "San" should be prefixed and stoutly maintained that the syllable was an integral part of all Spanish names.

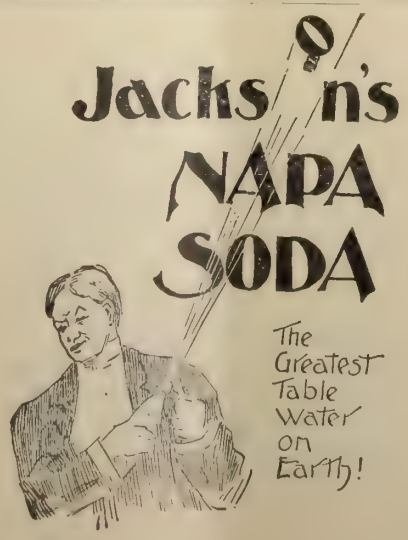
"Jones always said he would live according to his convictions."

"Well, does he?"

"Yes, he is in San Quentin now."

It strikes me that the Bohemian club is unfortunate in having lately given undue prominence to the commercial element in the board of managers. Why a clerk in a plumbing shop, who has not the slightest suggestion of bohemian tone to his character, and who possesses none of the qualifications that were essential to eligibility to membership under the original constitution of the club, should be elected to the office of president, I am at a loss to understand. I have an idea that Mr. Stow can distinguish between a bar-room gas fixture and one that is suitable for the ornamentation of a swell dining-room and that he has sufficient knowledge of the plumbing business to be able to pass upon the merits of a lead pipe cinch, but surely the sort of technical training which fits him for the earning of his salary does not qualify him for the presidency of the Bohemian club. Mr. Stow is a very nice gentleman and a fairly good school director, but could he preside over a club jinks in a way that would impress visitors of literary and artistic tastes with the idea that there was something more in Bohemia than the pictures on the wall which are so eloquent of the spirit that should pervade the place?

A delightful hot drink may be made with the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky and the usual hot water, sugar and a little lemon skin.



Mr. Andrew J. Clunie, the insurance commissioner, and his attorney, Mr. Eugene F. Bert, have returned from the east. They visited several large cities in the east on business pertaining to the office of insurance commissioner, and after it was transacted, Mr. Bert, who is one of the officers of the California Baseball League, spent some time in the study of the national game as it is conducted under the National League. He declares that the work of the eastern teams only served to heighten his admiration of the playing qualities of the ball players of California. Apropos of Clunie's return from the east I am reminded of the story published in one of the New York dailies concerning the energetic young commissioner when he made his first trip there to instruct the insurance autocrats as to their duties under the laws of this state. Andy is well-known in this neck-of-the-woods as a pugnacious fellow always prepared to meet some sort of resistance and to overcome it, and there was nothing that pleased him more than the opportunity to "call down" one of those pompous magnates. The story is that when he was admitted to the executive office of one of the great life insurance companies, he looked around apparently bewildered at the magnificence of the appointments. The insurance officials smiled at one another. They thought that the man from out the west was awed by what he saw, and they were preparing to give him a frigid reception, but when he smiled blandly and asked, "Is this the place where the man is who thinks he's next to God?" their manner softened perceptibly.

At a Montgomery street hotel is sojourning a feminine member of the Filipino swim, who evidently possesses loads of "dough" as she is accompanied by a retinue of servants. The Filipino lady's unconventional manners afford not a little subject for discussion among the other guests of the hostelry. As an instance of the foreign visitor's independent attitude may be adduced an incident that occurred one evening last week. The Philippine islander came down to dinner wearing an expensive silk waist and a dark skirt. Some untoward happening caused the skirt to spring from its fastenings and down it slipped. However, the Filipino lady was equal to the emergency and hastily pulling up the breadths of the sliding garment, she gained the door. She made one rush at the elevator, dislodged the boy from his position and started the machine herself. In barely a second's time she had reached the floor where her apartments are located and the lookers-on had time to draw breath.

Some months ago when Jennie Webber brought suit against Colonel William J. Sutherland for twenty thousand dollars damages for breach of promise of marriage, I made the incident the theme of a brief homily on the indifference of the Bar association to the reprehensible practices of certain attorneys who are ever ready to espouse the cause of the brazen blackmailer. Incidentally I predicted that the suit against Colonel Sutherland would never be prosecuted. My prediction has come true. The case was dismissed last Wednesday on motion of Mrs. Webber's attorney who represented to the court that his client had lied to him. Now I do not know whether Colonel Sutherland ever engaged in amorous dalliance with Mrs. Webber, and I do not care whether he did or not. But even though he did it is no reason why he should be made the victim of a blackmailing suit, such as I believe the one that was dismissed to have been, and I think that attorneys whose cupidity, and inability to make an honest living prompt them to facilitate blackmail, should be punished. Moreover I think that a Bar association that tolerates such practitioners is as contemptible as the individual that disgraces the legal profession. Perhaps Timothy J. Crowley, the attorney who appeared in court and pleaded that his client had lied to him, told the truth. Perhaps Timothy, though he is not a novice at the bar, is one of those gullible attorneys who being of a chivalrous and confiding nature, are easily persuaded to espouse the cause of dashing widows. It would be much easier for me to believe all that about Timothy if he were not an associate of that experienced advocate, the cumbersome Kowalsky, who has had vast experience with the downtrodden female and her questionable offspring. And by the way I have a faint recollection of the colonel's being connected with the Sutherland case in its incipiency. Am I wrong and if not where was he at the wind-up?

The dismissal of the suit without protest from Colonel Sutherland was unfortunate. Such a proceeding, coupled with the circumstance of the disappearance of the woman and her husband, warrants in a measure the suspicion that after all he did submit to the blackmailing process. Having been sued and charged with having trifled with a woman's affections he should have demanded a trial and obtained a decree of vindication. Tim Crowley's statement that the woman lied to him and that the suit should never have been filed is hardly a certificate of exculpation. The case would have ended precisely in that way if Colonel Sutherland had paid the woman and her attorneys money to withdraw the suit. But the public is not much interested in Colonel Sutherland and his affairs. It is the principle involved, and with that principle the Bar association should concern itself. There is a cer-

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

Self respect is on good terms with

The Old Government Whisky

Suit your taste—100% proof, bottled in bond; or 90% proof, Special Reserve, bottled at Distillery.

A wholesome stimulant—a nerve tonic.

tain character of litigation that decent attorneys will not undertake to prosecute unless they have made a most searching investigation and ascertained whether an action at law is justified. There should be some way of dealing with attorneys who file their suits first and investigate later on.

The leading representative of Los Angeles in this city during the reception festivities was Felix J. Zeehandelaar, and I learn from his card that he is now secretary of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association of the southern burg. He appears to be on the top wave of prosperity once more. All old newspaper men remember Zeehandelaar—the little man from Holland who used to do the court detail for the Examiner in the days when Willie Hearst was a student at Harvard, perfecting himself in the study of journalism. He is best remembered as the hero of the habeas corpus proceedings which resulted in the handing down of a decision by the Supreme court to the effect that a reporter could not be compelled to testify concerning information that had been given him. The rule of that case made communications to reporters "privileged" and placed them in the same category with lawyers and priests. When I think of Zeehandelaar I cannot help recalling an episode of a session of the legislature many years ago.

"Zeek," as he was called, was then involved matrimonially and the lady in the case was always in the imperative mood. One night when "Zeek" was out late with the boys he was fearful of the inevitable encounter with his spouse. The late Ross Jackson gave him some advice at the Golden Eagle bar.

"Go upstairs," he said, "like a man with a kick coming to him. Take a club and bang at the door. If she doesn't open it promptly kick in a panel and when you get into the room make a good stiff bluff as though you were looking for trouble and was going to be dangerously disappointed if you didn't get it. That's the way to soften the indurated heart of an Amazon."

Zeehandelaar received the advice favorably and started upstairs like a roaring bull. A few minutes later he walked into the saloon looking like a man that had been in a railroad wreck.

"What's the matter?" asked Jackson.

"I followed your advice," was the reply.

"Well?"

"Well—here I am."

I believe Mr. Zeehandelaar is now enjoying single blessedness.

The reconciliation of James W. Daniell and his wife occasioned no surprise among people who knew Mrs. Daniell as a most capricious and whimsical woman. Although she appeared, some months ago, to be intent upon separating from the Englishman forever, it seemed as though he exercised over her a sort of Svengali spell and that to make it effective it was only necessary for him to get her within the proper range. During his absence from the state she appeared to have recovered all her old time lightness of spirit, and to be as fond of gayety as ever. During her stay at the Hotel Rafael she was in a most buoyant mood, and just as Daniell appeared on the scene the gossips were beginning to talk of the great satisfaction she seemed to derive from the company of a certain frisky gas company official. Although it is said she contemplated divorce proceedings, I do not think she entertained any thought of an alliance with the gas man, for he is already married. But, judging from his predilection for tenderloin pastimes, the marriage contract subjects him to no irksome restraint. En passant, I have often thought that Mrs. Daniell has derived so much pleasure from her social successes since she was left a widow by Bob Hastings, that she has probably often congratulated herself upon the failure of the Deity to grant her fervent prayer delivered at the grave of the man whose money enabled her to take a trip to foreign parts in search of a husband. What a charming picture she presented that day as she raised both hands, and addressed the skies:

"Oh, God! Take me too," she pleaded.

But He didn't.

Mrs. John Pettee, president of the Vigilant society, is after the scalps of the officers of the Eureka society. Both of those organizations are popularly supposed to be engaged in the prosecution of humane work. They collect money from the charitably inclined, and for the purpose of relieving suffering humanity, protecting children and punishing cruel parents. That their energies do not always subserve good purposes, I have no doubt, for I have never known of a humane society that was not at times inhuman. The history of such organizations bears abundance of proof of the fact that the officers of humane societies frequently abuse the powers that are reposed in them They are frequently as hypocritical as the officers of the societies for the suppression of vice, of the stripe of Comstock of New York and the scoundrel Bennett of this city. But, concerning the Eureka society I have no information except of a hearsay character. I have read a letter written by Mrs. John Petee to a police judge, in which she states that Mr. E. L. Wadham of that society is not beyond reproach and charges that its funds have been misused; also, that children under its care are ill-treated and denied proper nourishment, and that it is conducted in connection with an attorney's office for the purpose of extorting money from the unwary. These are serious charges and I hope that they will be investigated.

A HINT TO STYLISH MEN

THE tailor-made overcoat is a luxury of the past. It has gradually dawned upon the well-dressed men about town that there is something lacking in the "made-to-order" garment. It has not that finish and style which are found in the coats from the high grade factories of the east, such as have been brought out by Charles Keilus of the "Hub." Mr. Keilus personally selects his own stock, and that his judgment is good is evident from the fact that he has the bulk of the patronage of stylish men. There are more of his garments worn at Blingum and San Rafael than of all the other houses and tailors combined.

AN INTERNATIONAL REPUTATION

IT IS A singular fact that higher prices are paid for the wines produced at the Livermore vineyard by Chauché & Bon, in London, than are paid for the French wines of the same grade. I refer to the price paid by the importers who in addition must pay the freight charges which of course are much higher on the California products. Chauché & Bon's wines have an international reputation.

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY

12 years old
before being bottled

Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers

412 Front St., S. F.

Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

An excellent remedy for insomnia will be found in the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky taken at bed-time. Your druggist has it.

World of Law

"I'm opposed to trusts," vehemently declared Judge Coffey the other day. "My stenographer has presented his thirty-second semi-annual resignation, simply because I won't guarantee him a larger salary than I'm getting for being judge. I can't stand it any longer. I've been successful hitherto in cajoling Sam into returning to harness, but this time I think I'll let him stay out. The court will get along without a reporter for the one year that is left."

It is quite true. Sam Sumner has resigned again. The clever stenographer who has served the probate judge for sixteen long years, has succeeded, after many trials, in severing his connection with Department 9. The man who "took down" Grove Johnson for three whole days at the close of the trial of the Martin will case is now secretary and treasurer of the Knockers' Annex of the San Francisco Press club. Day and night the genial Samuel may be seen lolling in a great armchair, hands in pocket and feet cocked up, listening to the chit-chat with a sardonic smile. Sam is no great talker, but he has an infallible memory for dates, and he spends hours listening for a chance to catch someone tripping in this most important branch of a story. Sam has a hitch-and-kick order of declamation which is not unlike that made use of by Oscar A. Tolle. This has caused his reading of his own notes to be not so rhythmical and clear as the sonorous utterances of his learned judge. Moreover, Sam has a mechanical habit of faithfully reporting everything he hears, whether it should form part of the record or not. Consequently, a scene like the following has occurred more than once in Judge Coffey's courtroom:

Judge Coffey: "Sam, read that last question."

Sam copies down before reading: "Sam, read, etc.," then reads question.

He is interrupted by the court saying:

"Sam, read more slowly and more distinctly."

Down this goes into Sam's notes with a "ha! ha!" or two from lawyers present. Then, after repeated backings and fillings Sam is requested to begin at the question again and read right on. He does, as follows:

"Mr. Heggerty—Did you ever at any time live with the deceased as his wife? Mr. Lloyd—I object to the question as being irrelevant and immaterial. The Court—Sam, read that last question. Question read. The Court—Now, Sam, read more slowly and more distinctly. Mr. Heggerty—Ha! ha! ha! The Court—That will do, Sam, now read that all over again, beginning at the question. Question read."

Despite his eccentricities, however, Sam is a good fellow and an excellent reporter. He has amassed some property, they say, which may or may not account for his independence of spirit. Certain it is, however, that Judge Coffey has often said that he had more trouble dodging Sam Sumner's resignations than he had evading newspaper reporters who wanted to learn his address. Fateful little billets-doux would be shoved under his chambers' door at all times of day and night, dropped into his letter box and pressed between the leaves of his note-book. The judge knew the contents before opening:

"Sam has resigned again," he would say.

And the next day would see the faithful Sam back at his post. This time, however, the situation looks more serious.

Judge Coffey, by the way, had a merry little inning the other day when the various attorneys employed by Mrs. Bell since the death of her millionaire husband six years ago were asked to present their demands against the estate. Previous to this performance an account had been filed by Mrs. Bell, setting forth that no income, revenue, profits, proceeds or anything else had been derived from the estate since the filing of the last account and a very bankrupt state of affairs was revealed. Consequently it was very amusing to see all the attorneys virtuously waive any and all claims against the estate for past services rendered.

Mr. Fisher Ames said that nothing was further from his thoughts than to demand compensation for legal services. "Apart from any private arrangement I may have with Mrs. Bell herself," he said, "I have absolutely no claim to present." Mr. Porter Ashe gallantly declared that he would waive his claim. "The estate owes me nix—I mean nothing," said Mr Ashe. "I want no pay." As he said these words Ashe looked so bewitchingly at the judge that his honor was quite overcome and was heard to say something about Mrs. Bell knowing enough to employ good looking attorneys; whereat Mr Ashe sat down, blushing, confused, happy. Mr. Lucius L. Solomons had not the heart to come down to court and openly renounce a fee, so he sent a proxy, who did the business all right. Then someone did it for Mr. Soto. Then Mr. Blakeman, who having only just succeeded to the juiceless plum had earned no fee, enrolled himself on the list of martyrs by a similar act of renunciation. It was then Judge Coffey's turn. His Honor rose to the occasion. He measured all the smiling attorneys with a quizzical look and said in his blandest tones:

"I never heard of such self-denial in my life, gentlemen. Really your conduct reminds me of the abnegation of James II."

The attorneys smiled again, well pleased.

"Yes," mused His Honor. "Curious thing, that abnegation of James II. He did it because he couldn't help it."

I am sorry to say that my friend Judge George H. Bahrs is a very sick man. He is a chronic sufferer from stomach trouble, and no one looking at the tall, straight, figure, the pink and white complexion and the clear eye would dream that there is not a day when His Honor can sit in comfort on the bench. Hence his intermittent fits of irritability, caused by attorneys who will drag their cases out by refusing to keep to the points at issue. About six months ago someone advised the judge to depart from his usual habits of abstinence and try a high-ball or two before meals. He did this and improved wonderfully. I saw a letter, however, from the Georgetown hotel the other day in which the judge complained bitterly of his state of health He said he was trying all he knew to get well by the twenty-fifth, but that it was hard work. At present it would be a physical impossibility for His Honor to sit through a day's session.

If anything causes the Supreme court to reverse itself and grant a rehearing of the Hoff murder case it will be a perusal of the petition filed in the case by District Attorney Murphy. With all the honors of the inevitable reversal of the case against Mrs Botkin before his eyes, the ex-judge went to work with a will and the result is a masterpiece. It simply closes out every avenue of reply except the curt refusal contained in the words "rehearing denied." Judge Murphy points out with the utmost clarity that not only in the instruction upon the question of motive, but also in that upon circumstantial evidence which was the Supreme court's pretext for reversing the case, Judge Carroll Cook simply and obediently followed the law as it stood unchallenged for years and years. From the Cronin case to the Durrant case those identical words which the court with the last say now finds so objectionable were used in every criminal trial where the evidence was of a circumstantial character. Judge Henshaw approved of the charge as it stood in the case against Durrant, the opinion in which case he wrote; yet Judge Henshaw's name appears in the list of those justices concurring in the decision of Judge Temple reversing the judgment against Hoff. The petition will do little good, probably. The Supreme court likes not to stultify itself and having acted hastily will probably "stick to it." If that is so, it simply means that the murderess of Mrs. Dunning must enjoy the sweet air of liberty instead of being hanged for her dastardly crime.

Since the fiasco in the Keenan murder case Judge Frank Dunne has concluded to make a clean sweep of his jury panel. He has fired the whole bunch and has gathered unto himself a fresh fold. I wonder will it do any good? I hear of shadows hovering around the court room still, shadows that occasionally take substance and are known to the District Attorney. He, poor man, watches all he can, but his eyes are only in the front of his head, and he must eat and sleep occasionally. A bas the jury system of San Francisco!

—o—

John F. Turner, the real estate swindler, has been called for at last by the man he robbed and drove half crazy. Years ago George Knight said: "Look out for Frenna, Turner. He will kill you one day as sure as you're born." Turner knew that and was afraid; but he had to go about and kept a wary eye open. Not wary enough for Frenna, J. P., who went after him and got him. Strange thing! Robber, swindler though he was, he is dead now and is entitled to the grave respect awarded those that have passed away; yet, without that, there is not a man found in this community to say a single kindly word of him. What wonder, then, if Frenna's trial should turn out nothing but a hollow sham! For convicted he never will be.

—o—

Oscar A. Tolle, the genial clerk of Department 12, announces that he has the following articles for sale cheap. One full dress suit; one brick (not of gold); one stolen flag (stars and stripes); one bite of a dog. THE COURT REPORTER.

SAILS FROM AFAR.

SING me a song of the homeward bound!
I am weary of parting sighs.
Give me the joy of a greeting sound,
Hush forever these sad good-byes!

Tell me the winds and waves are on guard,—
Are faithfully bearing my way!
Tell me the stars keep sure watch and ward,—
That my own is coming today!

Only a few, fleetest years at best
Can I face love's heavenly eyes,
Longer to wait is cruel unrest,
Sails from afar arise—arise!

JULIETTE ESTELLE MATHIS.

Major and Minor

Musical criticism is an art which has so degenerated of late that both musicians and public seem to hail with delight a just and truthful account of the happenings in musical circles. In view of the fact that there are many wrong impressions afloat as to the true importance of musical criticism, it may not be amiss to give a rough outline of that which embodies the duties of a critic and the relation that exists between the critic and the public. Before going into any details let us ask what is musical criticism and what is necessary to pass intelligently upon current events in music. The critic, if he is to be conscientious and able, must cast all personal grievances aside, be never influenced by dislike or friendship for a certain person, and be careful to separate the man from the critic. When you are in private life you may give vent to your sentiments against certain people to your heart's content, but when you sit at your desk passing a serious opinion as to the artistic effort of a musician you must cast aside your petty grievances and do your duty as a critic only. This is the most difficult phase of criticism, but also the one which will give you a reputation for justice and fairness—a reputation which gives you a standing in the community. In order to retain this reputation you must stand firmly upon the plank which raises you to your distinguished position, and act so that the dignity and seriousness of your task is never marred. The dignity of a critic remains only then intact when he does not permit anyone—whom he at one time or another is obliged to criticise—to influence him in his work. He must reject all demands that tend to make him flexible to the desires of the performers, and this firmness he must retain even against his best friends. As soon as a critic shows that he may be moved by flattery or threats, his plank begins to bend, until it finally breaks beneath the weight.

¶ ¶

The wrong impression prevails that the critic's duty is to educate the public. This is essentially wrong. The critic is, as it were, the mouthpiece of the public. In order to correspond with this position he must possess sufficient discrimination to gauge his audience. He must know the class of people who assemble; he must be able to segregate those who know from those who do not know. He must separate the friends of the performers from those disinterested in the person of the artist. And then, when he has made his division, he must be capable of extracting the opinion of the intellectual portion of the audience and comparing it with his own. And now comes the most difficult portion of forming his opinion for the public. He must be able to discover which opinion is the correct one, his own or that of the audience. Of course in nine cases out of ten his own opinion will correspond with that of the audience – provided he is an able critic. But should he be convinced that his own opinion is incorrect, he must have the manliness to confess his error and publish the opinion of the audience. And just in this particular instance most of the critics fail in their duty by thinking that their opinion is superior to that of the audience at all times. Inasmuch as the public has not been raised in an insane asylum, this supposition is totally idiotic. Sometimes, however, the public picks out its favorites, and in their desire to exhibit their appreciation of the talent of these fortunate ones, they involuntarily neglect others who are also entitled to applause. In such a case it is a critic's duty to call attention to the fact that it is unfair to surround a few select ones with all the glory and leave others equally able in the shade. If a critic is capable he will never fail to obtain the necessary result, and the public will be but too glad to make amends. Be it understood that the public is preeminently the critic, that when the audience gives an ovation to a musician, this man or woman is an artist. There cannot be any denial of this statement Any critic who is so presumptuous as to dispute the intelligence of an audience is not fit to be a public factor.

¶ ¶

Nevertheless, if the critic is not destined to instruct the public, what is his duty? First of all his duty is to inform (not instruct) that portion of the public which had not an opportunity to go to the theatre or concert as to the nature of the performance. Then it is a critic's task to let the artists know what impression they made upon the public, wherein they pleased and wherein they should improve. In most cases the artists who are adversely criticised dub the critic an ignoramus behind his back and flatter him to his face. These are the hypocrites of the profession and should be thoroughly censured. Many artists, mostly musicians, think themselves the best in the world and if anyone dares to make a statement to the contrary he is cried down as one who does not know anything. The latter class are fools and should be ignored. Now you will see what a difficult task it is to be a critic. However when a critic barricades himself behind a bulwark of public opinion, forms his ideas according to that of the intellectual portion of an audience, he is invulnerable and the censure of a thousand artists saturated with their own conceit is of no avail. Then again a critic is subjected to luminously humorous articles flowing from the pen of writers either desirous of giving vent to petty jealousies or being anxious for free advertising. One of those latter cases happened to me last week, when a writer on a weekly paper made the amusing announcement that I did not know anything about music because I said Miss Lichter sings well and Mr. Schuster gave a creditable performance of a certain role. Here is a man who gauges the musical knowledge of a writer by the opinion he advances of the work of two people who perform their duties conscientiously, are earnest in their work and do not make any pretensions except as to the fact that they know their business. Artists who are as industrious and positive on the stage as William Schuster and Anna Lichter are entitled to a word of praise from time to time and I would not withdraw a word of that which I have said about them notwithstanding the entertaining remarks of the musico-dramatic critic of that weekly.

Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street. Our elegant new fall "dress hats" displayed this week.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

TEACHES: Tone Production
Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone production

Lessons in Classes
First term begins Aug. 15 and closes Dec. 15
Second term begins Jan. 15 and closes May 15
Terms $6.00 a month

Studio: Y. M. C. A Bldg.

Reception Hours
3:30 to 4:30

The other day I had the pleasure of listening to Harry Samuels, who, together with Miss Meta Asher, will give a grand concert at Sherman-Clay hall next Thursday evening. The essential point by which to judge the talent of an artist is temperament. Mr. Samuels possesses this characteristic in a large degree, and thanks to this temperament he is able to execute his various selections with a vigor and taste that is as instructive as it is delightful. His technic is fluent and he plays harmonies with a clarity and ease that is nothing short of astonishing. All technical difficulties, no matter how intricate, are overcome with gracefulness. This facility to make difficult passages appear easy is one of the earmarks of the genius. Nevertheless, it is not Mr. Samuels' talent alone that should attract our music lovers, but the fact that he is a San Franciscan, who, after years of study abroad, has achieved gratifying success and is now coming back to his native city justly demanding a hearing from all those who bade him God-speed at the time of his departure. Home talent is beginning to be appreciated nowadays and justly so. While I have as yet had no opportunity to hear Miss Asher I dare say that the reports of those competent to judge regarding her efficiency are based upon substantial facts. This young woman, too, returns after tedious study and is also entitled to a hearing to which every diligent and talented student and artist is entitled from his or her fellow citizens.

¶ ¶

Mrs. Oscar Mansfeldt, assisted by John Marquardt and Louis von der Mehden Jr., will give a piano recital at Sherman-Clay hall on Friday evening, September fifteenth. The program is very interesting, inasmuch as it contains several compositions which have never been heard here before. It includes these numbers: Trio, C minor, op. 10, piano, violin and cello (Chovan); (a) Nocturne, C minor, op. 48, No. 1 and (b) Ballade, C minor, op. 23 (Chopin); (a) Third Mazurka, B minor, op. 66 (Saint-Saens), (a) Ballade, B minor (Liszt); (a) Barcarolle, F minor, op. 30 (Rubinstein); (b) Polonaise, A flat, op. 53 (Chopin).

¶ ¶

I am in receipt of a valuable violin solo composed by Giulio Minetti and dedicated to Mr. Meredith Sawyer. The piece is difficult and requires considerable technical dexterity, but any good violin player who has had conscientious instruction should be able to play it after some practice. It is an expressive composition and must be executed with considerable taste in order to obtain the sentiment which the composer has introduced. It is the work of a thorough musician and will no doubt be successful. It was so well received when Mr. Minetti played it at Mills seminary last year that he was induced to publish it. The beauty of the piece will certainly be recognized without delay.

¶ ¶

The Von Meyerinck School of Music, inspired by that enterprise and energy which characterizes all its movements, is preparing for a recital which is to include the works of local composers. This is the right spirit and it is to be hoped that it will spread. Our local composers should be more to us than others and in order to gain a reputation as a musical city we must first prove that we can show local composers of merit. It is not by any means the attendance at concerts that stamps a community as being musical, but it is the quality of the work accomplished in our midst by which to gauge our musical value.

¶ ¶

The friends of Frank Coffin are diligently preparing for a farewell concert to be given this popular and gifted tenor ere his departure for Europe, where he intends to complete his studies. No doubt this concert will prove a great success for Mr. Coffin's friends are numerous here. Robert Bien will also leave for Europe and being the possessor of a fine baritone and a host of admirers he will take along the good wishes of many friends He will take part in the concert to be given in honor of Mr. Coffin.

¶ ¶

Oscar Weil, whose activity as a composer and teacher was and is productive of much good, has returned to this city after an absence of several months necessitated by ill health. Much to the satisfaction of his friends his health is now perfectly restored and he is able to resume his work which is of much value to the music world.

¶ ¶

It will be of interest to the musicians hereabouts to hear that S. H. Friedlander has gone east to arrange for a series of musical attractions for next season. If we may depend upon preliminary appearances the next season will be a very prosperous one.

"Opening" first grand display of real French Pattern hats, Monday, September fourth, Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street.

On Tuesday evening, September twelfth, Denis O'Sullivan will bid farewell to his many admirers in this city by means of a song recital. He has selected a ballad concert for this occasion and the program will include German and Italian compositions from the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, more recent classics like Löwe, Berlioz, Schumann and Brahms, some of the modern composers, and a number of old English, Scotch and Irish airs.

¶ ¶

Miss Slinkey, who possesses a good reputation as a vocal teacher and whose efficiency was admired in San Francisco before she went to Milan to continue her studies, is preparing a concert to take place within a few weeks. From all appearances it will prove a very artistic and refined affair.

¶ ¶

One of Oakland's clubs which combines refinement with educational tendencies is the Ebell society. The erroneous impression is usually abroad that society clubs are instituted for pleasure only. This does not apply to the Ebell society which gives occasional musical and literary recitals that are instructive in the highest degree. One of the latest features of that club was an afternoon devoted to local composers. This is decidedly a praiseworthy idea and should be imitated without delay by all clubs in this city. We have some very able local composers here whose works are worthy of attention and

HARMONY CLASS

Dr. H. J. Stewart is now forming a class for the study of Harmony (elementary grade.)
For terms, apply at the Studio, 1406 Van Ness Avenue.

LOUIS CRÉPAUX.
(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

Teaches Tone Production / Tone Reflection

The technic of articulation in its relation to tone reflection.

Studio: Y. M. C. A. Building. RECEPTION HOURS 3:30 TO 4:30

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, Vocalist, 1109 Post street.
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist, Oroville, Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

WATER——LIGHT

Water works and electric light plants for country clubs and residences. Contracts taken for complete installations, and all work fully guaranteed. Only the best class of work solicited. No steam, heat, or danger.

HERCULES GAS ENGINE WORKS, [Inc.]
305 Market St., S. F.

J. PORCHER
Hats and Caps of all kinds to Order
1109 MARKET ST.
ODD FELLOWS BUILDING
SAN FRANCISCO

FULTON
LIVERY STABLE & RIDING ACADEMY
236 Third St., Bet. Howard and Folsom R. E. COLE, Prop.
Particular attention paid to Boarding Horses, Phaetons; Carriages and Saddle Horses to let at all Hours Telephone 5619 these compositions should not be restricted to the club room only, but the critics should discuss them in their various departments. Thus only can we advance our musical interests hereabouts. At the last recital of the Ebell society Miss Florence Sharon sang compositions by P. C. Allen and W. J. McCoy, W. E. Lienunt played a violin solo by McCoy and Robert C. Newell rendered piano solos by Adolph Cheek.

¶ ¶

The next musical season will without a doubt be the best ever known in America. From Chicago Mrs. Florence French writes: "Unless the present plans for next season vanish like castles in the air, the months between September, 1899, and june, 1900, will see such a season of music of all descriptions as Chicago never yet knew." Wolfsohn has the following artists under his direction: Marie Engle, Marie Brema, Sara Anderson, Charlotte Maconda, Clementine de Vere, Mrs. Katherine Fisk, Madame Schumann-Heink, Signor Campanari, Watkin-Mills, Evan Williams, Gerilym Miles, Julian Walker. Among the instrumentalists will be: Edward A. McDowell, David Mannes, Adele Aus der Ohe, Ethelbert Nevin, Franz Wilczek and Leo Schulz. Among Charles L. Young's prominent artists is Signor Alberti, who, together with Helene Noldi, has begun a grand opera season in Mexico I wonder if Alberti will decide to come to California? It appears that all operatic companies that visit Mexico call on California also.

¶ ¶

An editorial paragraph in the Musical Courier of last week reads as follows: "So the San Francisco operatic tour has been definitely abandoned by Mr. Grau! The reason is simply that no guarantee fund was forthcoming. Hence the change of plans. Was ist los with the Golden State?" The trouble is that Mr. Grau does not enjoy the confidence of the Californians, that we are about getting tired of being promised gilt-edged operatic combinations only to receive second rate artists, that the people here will no more consent to give guarantee funds unless they can get guarantee contracts in return. Promises will not satisfy us any more. We expected De Reskze and we could not have him, despite the fact that five and ten dollar rates were asked. Not satisfied with wanting extravagant prices Mr. Grau was unwilling to pay a reasonable rental sum to the proprietor of our one opera house. Oh, no, we may not have "Olle" Lehman and De Reszke twins out here, but our fleecing days are over. ALFRED METZGER.

¶ ¶

The program at the organ recital by Dr. H. J. Stewart at Trinity church tomorrow afternoon, will be: Toccata and Fugue in C (with pedal solo), Bach; Minuet, B minor, Calkin; Verset de Procession, Dubois; Military March, Schubert.

SIX CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERTS
—BY—
THE MINETTI QUARTET
Four Matinees Two Evenings
AT SHERMAN-CLAY HALL
During the months of October, November, December, 1899
January, February, March, 1900
Season Tickets, including reserved seat, $3.00
Engagements for Concerts, and public and private recitals accepted
Address the Minetti Quartet, care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

MUSICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

EDWARD XAVIER RÖLKER . -
Formerly Director of Vocal Department
Scharwenka Conservatory, New York City.
Specialist in the Development of the Voice
* * * HOME STUDIO:
RECEPTION HOURS, 12 TO 2 912 SUTTER STREET

RHYS THOMAS . . .
Solo Tenor and Director St. Dominic's Choir
Solo Tenor Temple Emanu-El.
Director McNeill Glee Club, Sacramento,
Studio for Voice Culture, Operatic Repertoire,
Oratorio, Etc. Pure Italian Method.
Engagements accepted for Concerts
Oratorios, At Homes, Etc.
Terms Moderate
Studio, Byron Mauzy's Piano Rooms, 308 Post St.

Von Meyerinck School of Music
Under direction of For Voice Culture, Piano and Organ
Mrs. Anna von Meyerinck, Assisted by MISS CECILIA M. DECKER
Alto Soloist Central M. E. Church.
Operatic and Dramatic Department in charge of Mrs Mary Fairweather
Piano Department in charge of Mr. Arthur Fickenscher
Assisted by Mrs. Fanny E. Buckland, (Virgil Practice Clavier Method) and Miss Estelle Davidson (Synthetic Method)
Languages: MR. L. D. VENTURA, B. E. (French and Italian)
MISS ELSA PRIBER, (German.)
Organ Department in charge of Mr. Roscoe Warren Lucy.
Instructions in Physical Culture, Chorus and Sight Singing. Ensemble Playing, etc., etc. Advantages Unsurpassed Full particulars and terms upon application. 841 Fulton St., Bet. Webster and Fillmore,
Telephone West 223 San Francisco, Cal.

DR. H. J. STEWART....
Organist of Trinity Church, and
Synagogue Beth Israel . . .
has removed his
MUSIC STUDIO
to 1406 VAN NESS Avenue
Between Bush and Pine
Singing, Piano, Organ and Harmony Lessons
Special preparation for Vocalists desiring Church appointments

San Francisco
Conservatory of Music
E. S. BONELLI, Director 130 Powell Street
Piano and Harmony exclusively by Prof. Bonelli.
Violin, Mandolin, Vocal, Guitar, Banjo, Elocution
and Physical Culture taught by the most competent teachers.
Choral work under the direction of ALFRED J KELLEHER
A thorough course for teaching. Terms moderate. Apply at Conservatory

MR. FRANCIS STUART
. . . Teacher of Singing
1615 Jackson St., near Polk

SATISFACTORY TO THE EYE AND EAR
BYRON MAUZY PIANOS
308-314 POST ST.
Sheet Music, Books, etc. Telephone Main 5261

For a quick and thorough STUDY OF HARMONY use
BOSWORTH'S COMPLETE HARMONIC CYCLE
It shows at a glance the proper combination of the various chords and their modulation, and solves every harmonic problem. The author has in his possession letters from Ysaye, Rosenthal, Sauer, Lachaume, Sousa, Kneisel and a host of others, in which these eminent authorities endorse the CYCLE enthusiastically. As a contribution to musical science it is unrivalled.
PRICE $3.00
At music stores or by mail. Descriptive circulars sent upon application.
HENRY M. BOSWORTH,
28 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Major and Minor

WILLIAM PIUTTI gave a pianoforte recital before the California club last Saturday afternoon which was well attended considering the excitement attending the arrival of the California boys, the audience being a refined and most appreciative one. Much enthusiasm was shown with each number, the program including Sonata, G major (Schumann); Polonaise, A flat major, Etudes, Nos. 5, 12, 1, 3, Preludes, Nos. 17, 15, Funeral March, Nocturne, B major (Chopin); Love Dream and Faust Valse (Liszt). Mr. Piutti ranks as one of our leading artists and in Europe was endorsed by the highest authorities in the world of music. He is particularly happy in his rendition of Chopin's works possessing deep poetical feeling, and there is character in every note he plays. In his brilliant work the low ceiling and carpeted floor detracted somewhat from his power, but he never played before an audience which was more attentive to his artistic work, several musicians being present. Mr. and Mrs. Piutti have opened a music school at 2332 Dwight Way, Berkeley, which will doubtless become a pride to the state, for the faculty will be first-class in every respect, representing Gertrude Piutti, piano, harmony; William Piutti, piano, composition; Madame Jenny Twichell Kempton, voice culture; S. Fachutar, mandolin; Wallace A. Sabin, organ, choral work; Pietro Marino, violin. The departments of elocution and flute have not yet been decided upon.

Miss Marie Weldon has returned after a trip of several weeks visiting friends in numerous places. Mr. Rhys Thomas has been to Mount Shasta among other points of interest and has returned to his class. Mr. Thomas expresses himself as delighted with the progress of his choir at St. Dominic's church.

A very delightful evening was enjoyed last week in the studio of Samuel Adelstein, the guests, about thirty in number, receiving a hearty welcome, plenty of good music and dainty refreshments, Mr. Adelstein's sister making a charming hostess. The program included mandolin solos by Mr. Adelstein, piano numbers by Miss Theresa Ehrman, songs by Mrs. Eva Tenney and Mr. Georges. Miss Jennie Wilshire played a mandolin solo with Mr. Adelstein, Miss Fannie Danforth being the accompanist.

MAY FRANCES FRANCIS.

Mrs. Alice Bacon Washington will receive pupils for piano instruction at her residence, 1150 O'Farrell Street between Franklin and Gough, after September first. Present address, Mill Valley. 3t

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

VOCAL

David Manlloyd

TENOR SOLO of St. Mary's Cathedral Voice Culture and the Art of Singing First-class Engagements only accepted. Studio, 965 Golden Gate ave.

MR. J. F. VEACO

TENOR SOLOIST Grace Church, California Street. Voice Culture. Studio: 1012 Sacramento St. near Powell Reception hours 12 to 2.

MISS CAROLINE SHINDLER

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Studio and Residence 341 San Jose Ave. Telephone Red 2836

MRS. JESSIE DEAN MOORE

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Residence, 1622 Fell Street, near Central avenue

MRS. J. M. PIERCE

SOPRANO of First Unitarian Church, Berkeley. Vocal Teacher. Residence, 2525 Ridge Road, Berkeley. In City Wednesday and Saturday. Oakand, Thursday. City Address, 735 Market Street.

MISS ELEANORA CONNELL

SOPRANO. Teacher of Singing, has resumed teaching at her residence 1469 Sacramento treet. Reception hours 12 to 2 daily.

JOSEPH ROECKEL

POSE OF VOICE, gesture, repertoire. 130 Powell St. and 1060 Fulton St.

D. S. DAVIS

CANTOR of Taylor Street Synagogue. Voice Culture in all its branches. Telephone East 952. 1101 Geary Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING has resumed teaching. Mondays and Thursdays at Mills College. Reception hours at 1424 Washington Street, 1:30 to 2 P. M. Tuesdays and Fridays.

MRS. FRANCES MOELLER

TEACHER of Vocal Culture and Director of Ladies' Choral Society. Address, 1218 Tenth Street, Sacramento. Telephone, Red 261.

MISS E. V. McCLOSKEY

TEACHER OF SINGING. Contralto Soloist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and the Taylor treet Synagogue. Residence, 857 Hayes St. Telephone Geary 494

MRS. ADELAIDE SMITH BRIDGE
MISS EDITH ELMA SMITH

PUPILS of Madame de la Grange Paris, and Frau Emelie Kaula, Munich. Vocal studio, 427 Ellis street.

J. W. McKENZIE

VOCAL INSTRUCTOR. Private or Class Tuition. McKenzie Musical Society meets every Tuesday evening at 524 Eddy Street.

VOCAL

LOUIS CREPAUX

PROFESSOR of Singing and Perfecting the Voice. Y. M. C. A. Building Ellis and Mason Reception hours 3:30 to 4:30. Saturday excepted.

MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL

VOCAL TECHNIQUE, San Francisco Conservatory of Music, 130 Powell Street.

MRS. EVA TENNEY

SOPRANO SOLOIST. Teacher of Singing. Soprano at Plymouth Church and Bush St. Synagogue. Studio, 1199 Bush Street. Telephone Sutter 226. Reception Day, Wednesday.

MADEMOISELLE TOUAILLON

SINGING and Piano. Studio: 1910 Steiner Street.

PIANO

MRS. MARY CHENEY CLARK

PUPIL of the New England Conservatory of Boston. Piano, Organ and Voice. Communication by Mail or Telephone West 575. Lessons at pupil's home or at 2218 Webster Street.

MISS ELLA LAWRIE

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Classes for children a specialty. Address, 404 CENTRAL AVE. Telephone, GEARY 676.

MRS. H. EHRMAN

TEACHER OF PIANO. Leschetizky method. Children a Specialty. 1231 BUSH STREET.

HELEN M. ANDERSON, A. C. M.

TEACHER OF PIANO. Refers to Mr. Louis Lisser, Dr. Wm. Mason and Albert Ross Parsons. Synthetic Method and "Touch and Technic" a special course for teachers. 31 Guerrero St.

MISS ELEANORE JOSEPH

PIANIST. Graduate of the Stuttgart Conservatory, Germany. Teacher of advanced classes in The Pacific Coast Conservatory of Music. Address Studio 807 Sutter St. 'Phone Larkin 651

MADAME M. LADA

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE. Office Hours from 1 to 3 P. M. 1115 Post Street

SANTIAGO ARRILLAGA

TEACHER OF PIANO. 2315 Jackson Street.

EMIL STEINEGGER

TEACHER OF PIANO. Tuesdays and Fridays. 1 to 5 P. M. Office: 618 Fell St., San Francisco

IDA B. DISERENS

TEACHER OF PIANO-FORTE and Harmony. 2017 Howard Street.

MISS CLAIRE M. COLE

TEACHER OF PIANO. Pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy. Pianist of the Corona Club. Concert engagements accepted. Reception Hours from 9 a m to 1:30 p. m. Thursday excepted. Address, 1317 Hyde Street. Tel. Larkin 281.

MR. ROBERT TOLMIE

PIANIST. Studio, 1234 Bush Street.

ORGAN

WALLACE A. SABIN, F. R. C. O.

ORGANIST and Choir Master of St. Luke's Church. Organist of Temple Emanu-El. Teacher of Organ, Piano and Harmony. 1614 Larkin Street, S. F.

JAMES HAMILTON HOWE, MUS. B.

PIANOFORTE, ORATORIO and HARMONY. Candidates for entrance to Mr. Howe's classes or to his Oratorio or Philharmonic Societies. Studio, Y. M. C. A. Building, 11 a. m. to 4 p. m Telephone Bush 17.

VIOLIN

ARMAND SOLOMON

CONCERT VIOLINIST and Teacher. Home Studio 903 Geary street corner Larkin Reception Hours 1 to 6 daily

EDWARD LADA

TEACHER OF VIOLIN. Studio, 1115 Post St Leader Alcazar Theatre Orchestra.

MISCELLANEOUS

William Piutti

PIUTTI MUSIC SCHOOL. 2331 Dwight Way, Berkeley, California. Write for Circulars to Wm. Piutti, San Francisco office 501 Geary St. Phone Brown 407

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

WHISTLING SOLOIST and Teacher of Artistic Whistling. Applications for lessons and engagements for concerts and receptions. Studio, 731 Geary st. Whistling Exercises newly published.

SAMUEL ADELSTEIN

TEACHER of Mandolin, Lute and Guitar. Italian Method. Music Studio, 1017 Post Street.

CHAS. MAYER, JR.

TEACHER OF ZITHER. Studio, Room 41, 22½ Geary Street. Reception Hours, 1:30 to 3 P. M.

LOUIS VON DER MEHDEN JR.

VIOLONCELLO, Harmony and Ensemble Playing. Pupil of Royal Conservatory of Music Leipzig, of Klengel and Dr. S. Jadassohn. Residence: R. 23, Kohler & Chase Bldg.

SIG. FACHUTAR

MANDOLIN, LUTE AND GUITAR SCHOOL Studio, 409 Post Street. Hours, from 10 to 5. Will accept engagements for concerts.

BRANDT'S CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

MRS. NOAH BRANDT—Piano. MR. NOAH BRANDT—Violin, Harmony and Ensemble. 1631 Broadway. 'Phone Hyde 2908

CHANT OF THE PARCAE

From Iphigenia in Tauris

THE CHIDREN of men
Should fear the immortals;
They hold their dominion
In hands never dying,
Nor do they refrain
From using their might.

Whom the gods favor
They doubly should fear them!
On cliffs and on clouds
Their seats are prepared
At the gods' golden tables.

But should there arise
The voice of contention
The guests are cast out
Into nethermost darkness
Reviled and disgraced.
In gloom and in fetters
Forgotten they wait
For a judgment impartial.

But in vain, for the gods
Still sit at their feasting
Their tables of gold.
Or perchance they are striding
From mountain to mountain,
While from the abyss
Steams the breath of the Titans,
Arising like smoke
When the victims are offered
And the smell of the sacrifice
Pleases the gods.

Their eyes which bring blessings
They turn from the kindred
Of those they once favored,
Their glances avoid them
Lest they should encounter
Looks full of entreaty
And eloquent anguish.

So sang the grim Fates,
While children and kindred
Their heads nodded sadly
And thought, "They are listening,
Our forefathers, banished
To nethermost darkness."—GOETHE.

Translated by Irene Connell.

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "The New Dominion" — repeating last season's success.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "Paul Jones"—the naval hero has caught on.

TIVOLI. "La Giaconda" and "Rigoletto"—both well sung and acted.

ALCAZAR. "Ingomar"—Miss Roberts is a charming Parthenia.

ORPHEUM. Bouquets for Felix Morris and the child dancers.

After listening to GRAND OPERA and drama it is quite a relaxation to revel in the merry melodies of a light comic opera, especially when they contain that merry ring which Planquette understands so well how to make effective. It is therefore not surprising that the Grand opera house is well patronized by music lovers, inasmuch as merry melody coupled with humorous dialogue has a beneficial influence over the risibles. Planquette's Paul Jones reminds one much of The Chimes of Normandy in music as well as libretto. Not because of a similarity of plot but owing to the excessively romantic character of both these plays. An inspiring rhythm runs throughout the work which keeps the audience constantly in a good humor, and melodious solos, captivating duets and impressive choruses—which at times approach even grand opera dimensions—contribute toward the success of this clever piece of composition. Not less effective are the occasional fancy dances executed with that unrivaled dexterity for which the Grand's chorus is so well known. Stage manager Jones has ample opportunity to display his ingenuity in the elaborate and realistic stage settings. In Bessie Fairbairn the company has gained an acquisition whose value can only be fully appreciated when it is known that she is one of the finest mimics and most vivacious comediennes ever seen in San Francisco. But seldom do we appreciate the comedy element in feminine roles, as it is but seldom invoked with the refinement necessary to make it agreeable to the average auditor; but Miss Fairbairn is so polished in her line of work that it becomes a sincere delight to follow her on the stage. Wolff, besides being able to indulge his horse play frequently—wherein really lies the strength of his comedy talent—is given an opportunity to render some topical songs which please the audience so much that the encores often exceed the half dozen mark. Persse pleases in the title role and an opportunity is given him to support his good tenor voice with dramatic action. Persse is certainly an acting tenor with a finesse which is rarely found on the comic opera stage. Of course Miss Mason is still a favorite. Her captivating manners are ever eliciting great applause and her clear soprano is particularly adapted to the rippling notes of a merry couplet. Goff, whose resonant baritone will some day be heard in one of our leading grand opera companies, contributes considerably toward the artistic success of the performance and Wooley does not lose any opportunity to give full sway to the healthy humor which characterizes all his work. Next week the management will revive El Capitan, which has already had two successful runs. In order to add to the many charms of the opera special attractiveness in new dances have been arranged. Mr. Jones is particularly clever in the creation of picturesque terpsichorean figures and some pleasant novelties may surely be expected. Of course neat songs will be interpolated and the ever popular team, Woolf and Wooley, will be given an opportunity to open their coffers of fun and let merriment rule supreme. The inspiring Sousa marches will be accentuated with the vigorous singing of the chorus.

Orpheum THERE IS this difference in the dancing of Hazel Callahan and Arnold Grazer; the former is self-confident and even forward, while the latter is modest and unaffected. It is always thus, the writer has noticed, among stage children when boys and girls are opposed to each other. Boys go at their work with a determination to get through with it, and to do their best while they are at it, while girls are always looking out for applause and very frequently forget to go through their parts properly while musing on what the audience is thinking of them. Hazel Callahan is a clever child and she capers about in an agile manner with a grace that all juveniles possess. But Arnold Grazer throws himself into the spirit of his work. He is a poet and his poem is his dance. The new mirror effect, a mirror that at times is a window and reveals the figures on the other side, again becoming a non-transparent medium for reflecting objects, is original and striking. The children have been overwhelmed with flowers and plaudits every night, and will remain for another week. There will be other children on next week's bill, no other than the dear little Hungarian Boys Military Band.

"Opening" of Elegant Parisian Hats, Monday, September fourth and following days. Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street.

After two years' absence, the people of San Francisco will be ready to welcome back the clever little musicians whose martial music packed the Orpheum nightly during their last engagement. The band has been augmented in numbers and band master Selilzonyi has missed no opportunity to add to the already large repertory of the organization. Two years' constant study and practice has improved even the wonderful skill of these tiny warrior musicians. Nearly every one of the attractions, both the new ones and those retained from last week, would on ordinary occasions be entitled to the position of honor at the head of the bill. Charley Case, "the man who talks about his father," has filled the Orpheum before and even if the boys' band and Felix Morris were not here, he would do so again. Stinson and Merton, two of the cleverest comedy sketch artists in the country, will present an original comedietta and Montrell the juggler will perform some of the tricks with which he has been puzzling the world. Felix Morris begins his second week and will play "Behind the Scenes" a dainty comedietta, full of human interest. The talented comedian will, in the new presentations, assume the part of a Frenchman.

Tivoli THE fifth successful week of grand opera at the Tivoli brought out La Gioconda and Rigoletto. Perhaps few non-musicians are aware of the fact that A. Ponchielli, the composer of Gioconda, is the teacher of Puccini, Leoncavallo and Mascagni and that in this work is contained the essence of the creator of the modern Italian class of composition. In Gioconda we have the work of the master, while in La Boheme, Pagliacci and Cavalleria we hear the work of the pupils. There cannot be any question as to the brilliant character of the music in this opera. The plot, however, is deficient - unrealistic and too fanciful. The action drags and were it not for the passionate vein that runs through the score, the libretto would serve as a good remedy for insomnia. Next to Nedda Miss Lichter showed to her best advantage as Gioconda, in which part she succeeds in grasping the spirit of the poor ballad singer and meets all the vocal requirements of her role. The writer has always contended that Miss Lichter is a conscientious singer who attends to her work with the care and accuracy of a capable vocalist. She, unlike many other artists, does not make any great pretensions but attends to her work quietly and surely. Vocalists upon whom managers may depend are rare, and never during Miss Lichter's engagement has the management been put to any inconvenience on her account. When one begins to pick flaws and seek material for adverse criticism it may be found in the greatest artists and Miss Lichter, too, has her faults. But it is not within the province of a critic to abuse an artist who is conscientious and faithfully attends to the work assigned to her. It is faithfulness and modesty in an artist, with good taste and a fine musical education, which make her preferable to a famous singer upon whom no one may depend. Miss Lichter's Gioconda is by all means an excellent portrayal. Another role which was essayed creditably was La Cicca by Miss Linck. Here is another artist whose conscientious work is delightful to witness. There are few operatic singers today whose dramatic temperament equals that of Miss Linck. What is the good of having a dramatic voice if you cannot back it up with dramatic action? No one can imagine what a relief it is for a critic to meet a singer who is willing to concede ability and good quality to her co-workers. Both Miss Lichter and Miss Linck are of that type of artists, and they should be respected for it, for thereby they show their genuine artistic instinct. The Tivoli management seems to be particularly fortunate this year with its artists for Mertens, too, is not of the usual type of singers—he is generous. Twice has he stepped in to help out the management when Salassa became conveniently indisposed. Twice was he obliged to study the English score of operas at a few hours' notice and although not obliged to accede to the wishes of the manager, he gladly and generously volunteered to pull the Tivoli from a predicament into which Salassa's overbearing conduct had brought it. An artist who does this is a gentleman and his value to manager and public is equally great. Mr. Mertens had never sung Barnaba in English before and Salassa's spasmodic illness necessitated the substitution of Mertens, who studied the English score within two hours Monday afternoon. In the evening he went through the part with an ease and readiness that gave the impression that he had really been selected to sing the role instead of Salassa. Avedano made good use of his tenor as Enzo. In Rigoletto Berthald carried away the honors. He is always heart and soul in his role and the waltz song was rendered with a color and execution that made it very dainty—the mimicry that accompanied its recital was a study in itself. No wonder he received an ovation Miss Prossnitz was not in her element in the role of Gilda. She is a dramatic soprano and should never attempt colorature roles. She would have been far better as La Gioconda. The quartet in the last act was delightful. Mertens did some excellent work in the title role, more in the vocal than dramatic part. This afternoon and tomorrow evening Rigoletto will be given and this evening the last performance of Gioconda will take place. Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings Carmen will be presented with Miss Linck in the leading role and Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings and Saturday matinee Romeo and Juliet will be heard with Berthald as Romeo.

There are lots of 'A. A.' brands of whisky, but only one Jesse Moore "A A."

Columbia THE WHOLE ACTION of The New Dominion clusters around Baron von Hohenstaufen. As a rule plays made to order for certain stars are odious but the character of Baron von Hohenstaufen is painted so realistically and such nobility of soul permeates his various actions that the baron endears himself to the auditor and creates a keen interest which does not abate until the curtain drops upon the last act. In fact the baron becomes the whole play—a play strong in purpose and moral in its intentions—a play that will always entertain and elate the general public because it is surrounded with an atmosphere of refinement and aristocratic dignity which exercises an influence over the mind of man. To embellish a character like that of the German baron with the necessary execution an artist is required who can not only adapt himself to the part, but who must have studied the original in order to make an impression. There are but few actors who could obtain the results from this role that Mr. Clement is able to extract therefrom; he evidently has devoted much study to this role for besides making use of a correct dialect he handles his German with the readiness of a native. Anyone delighting in a real study should not miss seeing Mr. Clement's Baron von Hohenstaufen as it is about the most accurate exposition of a character that the writer has heard for some time. Next week Mr. Clement will present The Bells, one of Henry Irving's masterpieces. Having gained distinction in the role of Mathias wherever he has interpreted it and being a character impersonator of great merit, a valuable performance may be expected.

Alcazar Ingomar was given in this city not so very long ago with Nance O'Neil as Parthenia, and perhaps the memory of the former interpreter detracts somewhat from the interest the audience takes in Florence Roberts' impersonation Still, the latter makes the usual beautiful picture of herself and says her lines in a manner that brings out well the charming innocence of the character. The support is excellent. The new stock company comes in next week and will present every evening, with matinees on Saturday and Sunday, that clever comedy by Madeline Lucette Ryley, Chrisiopher Jr. This play was first given in San Francisco by John Drew and Maude Adams and was later presented by the Frawleys. It is brightly written and replete with interesting situations. Miss Gertrude Foster will return to the company next week and will receive a hearty welcome, for she gained many friends here during her long engagement as leading woman at this theatre some seasons ago. Miss Helen Henry, formerly soubrette of the Morosco stock company, will also be of the new Alcazar organization. Eugene Ormonde from the Empire stock company, New York, will be the new leading man. The Wages of Sin will succeed Christopher Jr.

The management of the Grand made a wise move in selecting Harry H. Campbell as its treasurer. Although but a comparatively short time in San Francisco Mr. Campbell has demonstrated that he is thoroughly versed in professional work regarding the management of various attractions, be the same of a musical or dramatic character. He is a conscientious worker, polite and accommodating in his transactions with the public and may be depended upon by those who have any business relations with him. The ticket office of a theatre requires a man who has a great deal of patience, has the ability to make friends and always finds time to have a pleasant word of explanation for those who file complaints. Mr. Campbell has repeatedly proved that he is just the man for such a position and Mr. Morosco will soon realize the wisdom of his action in securing Mr. Campbell for the Grand

JUDGE GRACE WILL PRESIDE

Judge John Grace, admitted to be the greatest coursing judge in America, will be seen in the saddle at the Union coursing park this week and will act as judge until further notice. He will be ably assisted by his son, Jim Grace, who will preside at the slips. The program at the park this week will be a ninety-six dog stake. $1,040 will be disbursed in prize money. Handy and Smith's Ida has a soft place on the card and looks like a winner at first sight.

HE PASSED HIS EXAMINATION

The dean of the law college was a veteran practitioner who believed that next in importance to a knowledge of the code and of common law practice, was the ability to promote litigation.

"If a woman came to you with a breach of promise suit what is the first question you would ask?," queried the Dean.

"How much money has the defendant got?," was young Blackstone's reply.

"But supposing there was no defendant," said the Dean. "Supposing she just wanted to be a plaintiff for speculative purposes."

"Well, then I d ask her who was the richest single man among her acquaintance and I d tell her just what sort of evidence was needed"

The dean congratulated young Blackstone and told him that there was a bright future before him

—The Law Clerk.

One of the most unique and entertaining programs ever given by the California Camera club was the "Evening in Childhood's Realm," on Tuesday last at Metropolitan hall. Pictures were shown dealing with child life and were of all classes of subjects from sacred scenes to those taken from modern every day happenings with children as the actors. During the intermission Romberg's toy symphony was given, directed by Miss Marie Louise Heppner with Miss Edith Ladd at the piano. Those at the instruments fulfilled their parts to everybody's satisfaction and Miss Heppner came in for no end of praise for the manner in which she wielded the baton. Little Hazel Callahan was to have appeared during the second intermission but she failed to arrive, much to the audience's disappointment. The Camera club's evenings are always well attended, the hall never failing to be packed to the doors whenever an invitational entertainment is under way, and there is usually a good attendance—if not so crowded an auditorium—upon evenings when an admission fee is charged.

Rose Hartwick Thorpe, author of many books and poems but best known as the writer of Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight, will be the guest of honor at a reception to be given by the Pacific Coast Women's Press association next Tuesday evening at Golden Gate hall. Mayor Phelan will deliver an address of welcome and there will be music, recitations and refreshments. On Tuesday and Wednesday at Golden Gate hall the association will hold its ninth annual convention, with the president, Mrs Abbie E. Krebs, in the chair. Papers will be read by Miss Skidmore, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. North, Mrs. Bretherick, Mrs. Sexton, Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Smith of San Jose and others and there will be songs and instrumental selections.

FALL MILLINERY

Mrs. S. R. Hall, of the Baldwin millinery, has sent out cards announcing her fall opening of French pattern hats and the latest styles in European and eastern millinery. Mrs. Hall's opening will be the first in this city and her styles are of the very newest. The opening day will be next Monday, and will continue through succeeding days, 10 Kearny street.

The first rehearsal of the second season of the Ladies Musical club of San Francisco will take place on Monday afternoon at three o'clock, Druid's hall, 413 Sutter street. There are still several vacancies in the membership list to be filled and all interested in choral work are invited to be present. Mrs. Frank J. Thayer is president of the club; Mrs. F. B. Carpenter, the secretary. D. P. Hughes is the director. The first rehearsal promises to be very interesting.

And in that hush profound and still
A woman's voice, loud-pitched and shrill
Was plainly heard to utter
In tones adapted to the roar
Of music that had gone before:
"Why, we fry ours in butter."

That was in Boston, many years ago. Last week, at the Grand opera house, a woman's voice was plainly heard to utter: "Oh, dear, I'd give anything for a nice plate of oysters."

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory
40 ELLIS St., Rooms 1 and 2
SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00
Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

Jimmy Hamilton has another bum mot. Here it is:

Judge Conlan: Slattery, you've been before me thirty times.

Michael Slattery (a veteran bon vivant): Well, judge, I can't help it if they won't promote you.

To Chicago in 3½ Days
To New York in 4½ Days
VIA
Chicago Union Pacific
AND
Northwestern Line
Through Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Buffet-Library Cars with Barber daily . . .
All Meals Served a la Carte in Dining Cars
For full information address
R. R. Ritchie, General Agent
PACIFIC COAST
No. 2 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco
PALACE HOTEL

ESTABLISHED 1863

GOLD PEBBLE SPECTACLES EYE GLASSES OPERA FIELD AND MARINE GLASSES
COMPLICATED CASES OF DEFECTIVE VISION DIAGNOSED FREE OF CHARGE
824 MARKET STREET, PHELAN BUILDING, Near Fourth

"PIONEER LIMITED"
BETWEEN
St. Paul and Chicago

Finest and most complete train on Earth
C. L. CANFIELD, General Agent,
636 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

Love Endureth After Death

Perhaps you will LAUGH AT HER: perhaps you will say that Henrietta was too good. No doubt the world will shrug its shoulders and say that virtue is out of date. Again, the world may not believe. But the story is a true one.

I do not know how they became acquainted. Possibly Henrietta went to the artist to take lessons in drawing. She had artistic talent and I believe Lefranc did take pupils once upon a time.

Lefranc always wore a sad look on his face. He was a noble looking man, tall and broad-shouldered, and when he smiled—upon very rare occasions—every woman was his slave. But Lefranc did not care for women. He painted their portraits because that was his profession, but all the adoration was on their side.

Lefranc was evidently tormented by some secret sorrow that made his handsome face always wear that sad expression. But is there one person in the world who can honestly say he or she is happy? After the thoughtless years of childhood have passed, are any of us happy?

Some say that the only true happiness is to be found in love, that love which consists of sinking one's identity into that of the loved one and living for the beloved object alone.

Love means nothing to a man. To a woman—I speak of a woman, not the modern product that has rightly been termed a vampire—love is the greater part of her life. Woman's love is self-sacrificing. When a man loves, he craves possession; it is sufficient for a woman to know that she is loved.

Like Viola, she can let concealment prey upon her damask cheek, and never tell her love. But in her heart, when something tells her she is beloved, there is a light, glad feeling that cannot be expressed in words.

And so Henrietta fell in love with Lefranc. First, his sad face drew her sympathy—and sympathy in this instance gave birth to love.

Lefranc was many years older than Henrietta. However, love laughs at birthdays How it came about only God can tell, but Henrietta soon came to know that the artist loved her.

The knowledge was hers for some months before mutual confession came. It was drawn forth in a commonplace way but for Henrietta the avowal was enough. Lefranc had said he loved her. She was ready at once to fall into his arms, but——

"Wait," said Lefranc, "I am not free."

When he had finished his story, Henrietta understood why his face was always so sad.

Lefranc was married and his wife was in an insane asylum.

Divorce was impossible. Marriage with Henrietta was impossible. Happiness must remain a relative term for them both.

Unless ——

Well, as I said before, perhaps Henrietta was too good. Besides, Lefranc did not ask the sacrifice. He was, perhaps, also too good.

They might have been happy but, as virtue was to both of them not merely a definition in the dictionary, they could not overstep the boundary.

For fifteen years they lived and loved, loved without realization, and ate their hearts out in hopeless silence.

At least the silence was hopeless to Lefranc. Henrietta, with a woman's elasticity of vision, sometimes said to herself:

"Perhaps she will die."

But Lefranc's wife did not die. She is living yet, healthy as far as physical condition goes, but a mental nonentity.

I read of Lefranc's death the other day and I went to the funeral. Henrietta was among the mourners. Once I caught a glimpse of her face; its expression was that of deathless grief.

I went to see her a few days later. I had known Lefranc, and Henrietta had been my friend before the artist's advent into San Francisco.

She wept when she mentioned his name.

"It killed him," she said. "Our love killed him. To know that I loved him and he loved me, yet I could never be his. My God! why do I live!"

"You should not have let a scruple part you," I said, for my knowledge and experience of life have broadened my moral perception "You should have made him happy."

She turned from me with a look of horror.

But was I not right? THE MORALIST.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last fifteen years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo. O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

AMUSEMENTS

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATER

Sunday night, last time, "THE NEW DOMINION"

Beginning Next Monday, Third week of MR. CLAY CLEMENT, in the psychological romance.

"THE BELLS"

Special production. Realistic effects. Great vision scene.

Grand Opera House Morosco Amusement Co., Inc Lessees. Telephone, Main 532

* * *

greatest comic opera,

Last two nights of Planquette's successful patriotic comic opera,

"PAUL JONES"

Week of Monday, September 4th.

Commencing with matinee in honor of Labor Day, by request of our returned heroes. Gorgeous surpassing revival of

"EL CAPITAN"

Our Prices—Orchestra floor, 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

Matinee Saturday. Best reserved seat in the theatre, 25 cents

☞ Branch Ticket Office just inside main entrance of Emporium.

Alcazar FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor MARK THALL, Manager

* * 'Phone Main 254

Week of September 4th,

Matinees Saturday and Sunday, 2 p. m.

Opening of the new stock season when will be presented the New York and London success,

"CHRISTOPHER JR."

Seats now selling for all performances.

Grand Concert . . . . .

* * * Under the direction of HENRY HEYMAN

First appearance after several years absence in Europe of

MISS META ASHER, Pianiste

First and ONLY appearance after several years absence in Europe of

HARRY SAMUELS, Violinist

Sherman, Clay & Co. Hall .·. Thursday Evening, Sept. 7, 1899

AT EIGHT O'CLOCK SHARP

Reserved Seats - One Dollar each

On sale at Sherman, Clay & Co's., Music Store, cor. Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Orpheum O'Farrell between Stockton and Powell Streets.

Week Commencing Sunday Matinee, September 3d.

Hungarian Boys Military Band. Charley Case. Stinson and Merton. Montrell. FELIX MORRIS and COMPANY. Mouliere Sisters. Arnold Grazer and La Petite Hazel. Apollo and the biograph.

Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c

Regular Matinees Wednesday. Saturday and Sunday.

Tivoli Opera House ERNESTINE KRELING, Prop. and Mgr.

* * *

Grand Opera Season

"GIOCONDA" tonight. "RIGOLETTO" Sunday night.

.....Next week.....

"CARMEN"

Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday Nights.

"ROMEO AND JULIET"

Tuesday, Thursday, Sunday Nights and Saturday Matinee,

Popular Prices, 25 and 50 cents. Telephone for Seats, Bush 9.

THE MORNING AFTER

IN VAIN I trusted that the flowing bowl
Would banish sorrow and enlarge the soul.
To the late revel, and protracted feast,
Wild dreams succeeded, and disorder'd rest;
And as, at dawn of morn, fair Reason's light
Broke through the fumes and phantoms of the night,
What had been said, I ask'd my soul, what done?
How flow'd our mirth, and whence the source begun?
Perhaps the jest that charm'd the sprightly crowd,
And made the jovial table laugh so loud,
To some false notion ow'd its poor pretense,
To an ambiguous word's perverted sense,
To a wild sonnet, or a wanton air,
Offence and torture to the sober ear.
Perhaps, alas! the pleasing stream was brought
From this man's error, from another's fault;
From topics, which good-nature would forget,
And prudence mention with the last regret.
Add yet unnumber'd ills, that lie unseen
In the pernicious draught; the word obscene,
Or harsh, which, once elanc'd, must ever fly
Irrevocable; the too prompt reply,
Seed of severe distrust and fierce debate;
What we should shun, and what we ought to hate.
Add too the blood impoverish'd, and the course
Of health suppress'd, by wine's continual force.
Unhappy man! whom sorrow thus and rage
To different ills alternately engage;
Who drinks, alas! but to forget; nor sees
That melancholy sloth, severe disease,
Memory confus'd, and interrupted thought,
Death's harbingers, lie latent in the draught;
And in the flowers that wreath the sparkling bowl,
Fell adders hiss, and poisonous serpents roll.—PRIOR.

A Trick of Fortune

IT WAS THE AFTERNOON OF THE symphony concert and Miss Randolph was standing on the corner of the avenue waiting for the cable car. It had rained during the forenoon and shining little pools lay in the hollows of the asphalt, and the shady concrete walks on the opposite side had not dried.

Miss Randolph was a trifle late so she buttoned one of her white gloves while she waited. She was one of those women it is the fashion to call well groomed, and she certainly was neat from the tip of her neat walking boot to the shining coil beneath her plumed hat. Under her tailor suit of dark blue there was a rustle of silk, her little umbrella was tightly strapped and she wore a bouquet of violets. Virginia Randolph took herself very seriously and her toilet was as much a matter of conscience with her as her music and her religion. She believed in herself and all belonging to her.

The corner of the granite curbstone was already occupied by an Object. It was too limp and powerless to hold itself together and be what God intended it for, namely, a man. He sat on the curb, his head in his hands and his feet in the gutter. A policeman crossed over, shook him and pulled him to his feet, while Miss Randolph pulled her skirts aside and passed on to take the approaching car. She had recognized him.

"That wretch of a Jack Haywood," murmured she. "I wonder if papa knows he is hanging around."

Miss Randolph judged according to her light, but that light was exceeding great darkness.

Samuel Randolph and John Haywood had been school-mates in the south and had each come to California to retrieve a ruined fortune. Haywood was a widower with one child. Stricken with a sudden and fatal illness he called Samuel Randolph to his bedside and confided to his care the boy, at the same time giving him a deed to all he possessed. He had confidence in his friend and his time on earth was too short for complicated arrangements. He died, satisfied that he had done the best he could. For many years Jack Haywood lived in Randolph's family, the companion of Virginia, his junior by seven years. Later he was sent away to school.

In some unaccountable manner his patrimony dwindled as the Randolph fortune grew. It was Pharaoh's lean kine feeding on the fat ones. Randolph had deeds to the property, and could dispose of it as he willed. Young John had no relatives within thousands of miles, and there was no guardianship account to settle. It was a matter entirely of conscience and honor and Randolph was not equal to it. But the world did not know and in fact never inquires too closely into the doings of a successful man.

As time wore on he grew to hate the lad he had wronged, and could not bear to have him in his sight. He was sent away to school and not even allowed to pass his vacations in the Randolph home. It was said and truly, that he was growing up to be a wild, ungovernable youth. Randolph, who sought some justification for his dishonesty, secretly rejoiced at these rumors and took care that the boy was not reclaimed.

When he was twenty-one he was called before his guardian, given a few hundred dollars, all that remained of his patrimony, and dismissed with some stereotyped words of advice, a misfit education, and a fine equipment of bad habits. With this preparation for life, he went to the dogs as fast as possible and soon disappeared from sight. So ended Samuel Randolph's stewardship. And all this was unknown to Virginia as she drew her skirts away from John Haywood at the corner of the avenue.

At dusk that afternoon Miss Randolph was returning from the concert. A few blocks from her home a noise in the street attracted her attention. She turned involuntarily and through the car window she saw the police patrol wagon with a man huddled down in one corner of it, and an officer holding on to him so that he should not fall out.

It was Jack Haywood.

When Miss Randolph sat down to dinner that evening she told the tale to her father with an intonation of disgust. The banker listened and blessed his good fortune that the fellow had not come into the house and made a scene. The same evening he went to the station, paid the attendants to have the matter kept out of the papers, and gave them enough to pay the fine and have the case dismissed. He then had arrangements completed to ship the young man away on a sailing vessel around the Horn, hoping that he would be sure to fall overboard or break his neck. These various doings were considered as very charitable on the part of the banker to his former ward, and were quoted afterward as actions greatly to the credit of his good heart and generous disposition.

He had some twinges of conscience, it is true, but they were unknown to the public, and to quiet them he gave a generous donation to his church the following Easter.

IRENE CONNELL.

SHOES MADE TO ORDER

Hand Sewed, $5.50 Repairing Done Nicely

Machine Sewed, $3.50

Orders for New Shoes and Repairing attended to.
Ready-Made Shoes Sold Cheap.

Telephone Polk 18 T. UYEHARA, 807 LARKIN ST.

The Laxative Liver Lozenge

PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable.

PRICE 25 CENTS

CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, - 139 Powell St
W. W. STOCKER.

Dr. CARL DEHMEL
(formerly of Berlin)
Surgeon Chiropodist and Masseur . . .
Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe Nails a Specialty
CONSULTATION FREE

EMPORIUM and GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR
On Mezzanine Floor near Post Office
Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.
Saturdays 9 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Just the thing to take camping, a bottle of Chapin and Gore's old Reserve Bourbon.

World of Letters

I AM IN RECEIPT of a little pamphlet from W. C. Morrow announcing that he is about to open a school for practical instruction in the art of writing. Mr. Morrow is himself a master of English, as all Californians know, nor is his reputation as a writer confined to his own state. Of course no school can create genius and no teaching can transmute the lead of stupidity into the gold of cleverness, but an instructor like Mr. Morrow can do much for those who fall short from lack of early training or judicious criticism. Pope said very truly, "True ease in writing comes from art, not chance, and art—in other words, technic—is a quality which may be improved by study and practice." Lucidity and ease of expression are not always what Dogberry supposed reading and writing to be, gifts of nature; the masters of style are those who round and polish their periods Chaucer is said to have expended infinite care upon his rhymes; we know Tennyson did the same. Flaubert and his pupil, Maupassant, attained excellence by the most painstaking methods and Theophile Gautier tells us that Balzac, who is supposed to have dashed off his novels in a fine frenzy, wrote and rewrote, and often completely altered passages that had cost him the work of a whole night. By reason of numerous corrections and alterations his manuscript was the despair of compositors. When such masters of style did not disdain to labor at the oar, why should ordinary writers refuse to take pains and listen to criticism? There is a commercial side to the matter, also. Lack of opportunity is as fatal as lack of capacity. The inexperienced writer does not know where his work is wanted and is often discouraged while finding a market. Mr. Morrow's long experience as a journalist and his practical knowledge of the field of writing may be of service to many a young litterateur, and save him from discouragement and delay. These considerations impel me to think favorably of Mr. Morrow's projected school, which, though a new idea here, is no novelty in the east where schools of journalism are common.

However, while it must be of benefit to anybody to know how to write, the fact remains that real writers are born, not made. You connot pry the news sense into a mind that is born without it; the heaviest crow-bar would be powerless to effect such a result. And while I have seen quite mediocre men and women succeed financially in the worlds of journalism and letters, to the one who knows their work lacks the soul. The man who has it in him, and who is born with the writing sense, will write good stuff whether he gets good pay for it or not. He can easily pick up such knowledge as how to make crosses for periods, and rings around dates and abbreviations that are to be printed in full, but the knowledge of what to write can not be acquired. Still it is as well to have these schools of journalism, so that the technic at least of writing may be learned. It will save readers of manuscript in publishing houses, and copy-readers in newspaper offices, much time and patience.

In order to be in the literary fashion of the times one must shy a stone at Kipling. The Putnams inaugurated the ball and everyone else must dance to their piping. Elbert Hubbart of the Roycroft Shop is the latest to have his fling, which might have come with a better grace from him, as well as from the rest, if only they had discovered or at least let us know they had discovered, how little worth while any work of Kipling's is before he began suit against them, one and all, for piracy and infringement. The whole business forcibly reminds one of the quarrel between two frontier neighbors, one of whom had borrowed a cooking utensil from the other and returned it in a damaged condition. After much wordy warfare the gist of the defense was practically: "It was cracked when I borrowed it; it was whole when I returned it. Well, I never had your old pot, anyhow." Kipling, it is now asserted, is utterly incompetent to write about life in the Orient. Since that From Sea to Sea has been republished every section of our country has its little advocate to declare itself libeled. Bailey Millard, years ago, took up the cudgel for San Francisco. In Captains Courageous Kipling proved that he knew nothing about the sea or about fishing on the Grand Banks. Elsewhere he displayed ignorance of locomotive engineering. And poetry! who now dares say he ever wrote a poem? "A poet must think he is the voice of humanity. He sings and sings, and it turns out afterwards that he was the true spirit of Pike county. A man who schedules himself as the poet of Anglo-Saxondom is a litterateur. He is a class poet." Now, really, has Kipling done any of the scheduling, or have the "literary authorities" simply tumbled over themselves and each other in their hurry to be first to greet the king? "There is harsh substratum in the man that genius cannot atone for. It ruins his poetry." As to the thumbs being turned down, the old nursery game used to allow another variation. Thus far we have only got as far as thumbs wiggle-waggle. Predictions and prophecies are kittle-cattle. How many books have been hailed within the past decade as the "greatest" etc., the names of which are now forgotten? The simple explanation of this matter of Kipling worship lies in reaction from over-estimation. People who swallow without rumination the opinions of the self-appointed literary dictators have praised indiscriminately everything that Kipling did and his work has been by no means all first class. These people will now condemn in the same wholesale style, because "Simon says 'thumbs down.' "—THE BOOKWORM.

A tonic is something that restores strength and vigor to the entire system. Ripans Tabules are a tonic in the sense that they correct digestive disorders and help in the proper assimilation of food. When the organs of the stomach are in perfect working order the whole system is benefited. A society woman of New York City suffered from an attack of bronchitis each year as winter approached, and was often unable to go out of doors for days. When the last attack came on she took a Ripans Tabule each evening and was greatly benefited, having less soreness in her throat and very little tendency to cough. As a result, she had better general health that season than for years. The Tabules, she states, acted in her case as a tonic and imparted renewed strength to her system. If she omitted to take one at night, she would notice that she was not so well the next day.

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE AT PRIVATE SALE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES.

In the Matter of the Estate of MABEL RUTH LOCKWOOD CRAMER, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of Los Angeles duly given and made on the 8th day of August A. D. 1899, in the above entitled proceeding, the undersigned, the administrator of the said estate, will sell at private sale to the highest bidder for cash, Gold Coin of the United States and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, 10 per cent of the purchase price to be made at time of sale, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court on or after the 6th day of September A. D. 1899, all the right, title and interest and estate of the above name decedent at the time of her death and all the right, title and interest that the estate has by operation of law or otherwise acquired other than or in addition to that of the said Mabel Ruth Lockwood Cramer, deceased, at the time of her death, and commonly described as an undivided one-fifth (1-5) interest in and to all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California and more particularly described as follows: Commencing at a point on the northerly line of Elliott Park One Hundred and thirty-two (132) feet westerly from Steiner Street and running thence westerly along said line of Elliot Park twenty-two (22) feet, thence at right angles northerly seventy (70) feet: thence at right angles easterly twenty-two (22) feet: thence at right angles southerly seventy (70) feet to the point of commencement, with improvements thereon consisting of a cottage of six rooms: Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining.

Bids or offers must be in writing and will be received at the offices of Lent and Humphrey, Attorneys at law, Rooms 54 and 55 Crocker Building, at the junction of Market and Post Streets, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California or may be delivered to the administrator personally or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of said court at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of said sale.

RICHARD LOUIS CRAMER,
Administrator of the estate of
Mabel Ruth Lockwood Cramer.

RICHARD J. DILLON
Attorney for the Administrator,
54-55 Crocker Building, San Francisco, Cal.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of MARY LEONARD, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Executrix and Executor respectively of the last will and testament of MARY LEONARD, deceased, to the creditors, of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within Four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said executrix and executor or either thereof at the law offices of LENT AND HUMPHREY at rooms 54 and 55 in the Crocker Building in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

MARY LEONARD and LEON ROOS,
Executrix and Executor respectively of the estate of Mary Leonard, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, August 12, 1899.

LENT & HUMPHREY,
54-55 Crocker Building.

LEE D. CRAIG .....
NOTARY PUBLIC AND COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS
316 MONTGOMERY STREET, Bet. Pine and California
San Francisco, Cal

HOTELS

OCCIDENTAL HOTEL

A quiet home, centrally located, for those who appreciate comfort and attention.

Wm. B. Hooper, Manager — San Francisco

HOTEL BELLA VISTA

.....1001 Pine Street

The Pioneer, First-class Family Hotel
OF SAN FRANCISCO
MRS. M. W. DENVER

HOTEL SAVOY

Cor. Post and Powell Sts.
OPPOSITE UNION SQUARE

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL MODERN IN ALL ITS APPLIANCES MOST CONVENIENT AND PLEASANTLY LOCATED IN THE CITY.

MRS. A. HESTHAL, Proprietor

Pacific Carriage Co.
OLIVER HINKLEY
SUPERINTENDENT

General Business Office, 48 EIGHTH ST.
STANDS:
General Stand, - - 200 Sutter Street
California Hotel N. W. cor. Sutter and Kearny 48 Eighth Street
TELEPHONE MAIN 1950 Four-in-Hand Wagonettes for Parties

Recreation Park
Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets
BASE-BALL
EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY
Oakland vs. San Francisco
September 2nd and 3rd

Professional Cards

DR. F. KEMP VAN EE
DENTIST. Has removed his office to 1029½ Market Street between Sixth and Seventh.
Office Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

DR J. E. SAND
DENTIST.
Office, 406 Sutter St., San Francisco.

DR. THOMAS L. HILL
DENTIST. Office, Odd Fellows Building, S W. corner Seventh and Market streets. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation hours 4 to 5.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER
DENTIST. Phelan Bldg., 806 Market St. Specialty: Painless Extracting with "Colton Gas."

BUSH AND SON
DENTISTS. Crown and Bridge Work a specialty. Teeth without plates. All kinds of Dentistry. Reasonable prices. Office, 206 Kearny St., S. F. Rooms 310-308-309. Phone Red 1226.

DR. WM. F. EGAN
VETERINARY SURGEON. Veterinary Infirmary, Residence and Office, 1117 Golden Gate avenue. Telephone, 4118, San Francisco. Branch offices 1525 California Street, Telephone 66. 1529 Howard Street. Telephone 3125

Educational Cards

FRANCIS STUART
TEACHER OF SINGING, 1615 Jackson street near Polk street.

MRS. ADA CLARK
HAS REOPENED her Dancing Academy at 211 Sutter Street, both Evening and Juvenile The Walk and Carriage of the Body a Specialty

CYRUS BROWNLEE NEWTON
MASTER OF ELOCUTION and the art of true expression. Studio: The Emerson, 807 Sutter Street. Telephone. Larkin 651. Reception Hours from 9 A. M. to 12 M.

Try Kelly's Corn Cure, 25 cents, 102 Eddy Street

LOUIS CREPAUX
(Member Paris Grand Opera)
HAS his Vocal Studio Y. M. C. A. Building. Reception Hours 3:30 to 4:30 P. M.

Miscellaneous Cards

DECKELMAN BROS.
RAZORS ground and honed. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. Honing 25 cents. Deckelman Bros. Barber's Supply House, 106 Ellis Street.

THOMAS MORTON
Wholesale and retail dealer in Coal and Wood 670 and 672 Geary Street and corner Sutter and Laguna Sts, San Francisco. Telephone East 152

TOWN TALK does
Job Printing of all kinds

San Francisco to Chicago.

The most comfortable way across the continent.

Every day in the year Pullman Palace and Pullman Upholstered Tourist Cars leave Oakland Mole for Chicago and the East. Take Market street Ferry at 5:30 P. M.

Close connection in Union Stations at Junction Points.

Dining rooms are managed by Mr. Fred Harvey, and are perfect in every detail, serving meals at regular hours and reasonable rates.

No other line offers so many inducements as the Santa Fe Route.

SAN FRANCISCO TICKET OFFICE, 628 Market St.. Telephone Main 1531.
OAKLAND OFFICE, 1118 Broadway.
SACRAMENTO OFFICE, 201 J Street.
SAN JOSE OFFICE, 7 W. Santa Clara Street.

Lake Tahoe

The Most Picturesque Mountain Lake on the Continent

Its Attractive Resorts

Tahoe City	Tallac
McKinney's	Lakeside House
Rubicon Park	Glenbrook
Emerald Bay	Deer Park Inn

Glen Alpine Springs

Afford fine hotels, home comforts and all modern conveniences at reasonable rates.

Endless opportunity for outdoor recreation, such as boating, bathing, steamer excursions around the lake, mountain climbing, sight seeing, hunting and fishing

The atmosphere is pure, dry and health giving. Absolutely no malaria and no insect pests. Nights cool and delightful. Holders of Ogden Route tickets with sufficient limit may be granted a stop-over at Truckee to visit the lake. Side trip including trip around the lake, $6.00.

ALL AGENTS OF THE

Southern Pacific Company

are supplied with handsomely illustrated folders, for free distribution, giving full and complete information. Ask or send for one.

S. A. WHITE H. C. PORTER
PORTER & WHITE
Successors to W. H. PORTER
Undertakers & Embalmers
LADY ATTENDANTS
122 EDDY STREET
Telephone South 226 SAN FRANCISCO

A Superb Train...

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

Union Pacific

San Francisco to Chicago without Change
Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, with Barber Shop
Double Drawing-Room Sleepers
Pullman Tourist Sleepers
Dining Cars (a la carte)
Free Reclining Chair Cars.

Only 3½ Days to Chicago!

Leaves San Francisco Daily at 6 p. m.

D. W. HITCHCOCK, General Agent
No. 1 Montgomery St., S. F.

BONESTELL & CO.

DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF

PAPER

Fine coated papers, in all tints for half-tone work, a specialty

401-403 Sansome St.
SAN FRANCISCO

St. Lawrence

Livery and Sale Stables

423 Post Street,

W. E. BRIDGE, Proprietor

Telephone No. 1323 San Francisco

UNITED STATES LAUNDRY

Office, 1004 Market Street

TELEPHONE, SOUTH—420

TELEPHONE MAIN 240

George D. Graham
MANUFACTURER OF
Printing and Lithographic INKS
Printers' Rollers and Composition
Bronze Powders and Lithographic Materials
529 COMMERCIAL ST.
Member Manufacturers' and Producers' Association of California - SAN FRANCISCO

BUCHANAN BROS.

Dealers in Feathers, Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all Kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.

609 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

GEORGE GOODMAN
Patentee and Manufacturer
. . of . .
Artificial Stone
IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
Schillinger's Patent Sidewalk and Gardenwalk a specialty
Office, 307 Montgomery Street
Nevada Block S. F.

UNITED STATES BREWERY

311-313 FULTON STREET

CELEBRATED Steam Beer

ELK LAGER BEER

FIRST-CLASS RESORTS

EDWIN E. PARKER BENJ. L. TARBOX

The Reception

206 SUTTER ST., San Francisco.

Private Rooms for Ladies Music Room at
Oysters in Every Style. Disposal of Patrons
TELEPHONE MAIN 1231.

A No. 1 TAMALES at No. 1 Stockton

JAS. P. DUNNE & CO. . .
No. 1 Stockton St.
ALSO
Market and Eddy Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO

CAFE ROYAL . . .
Fourth and Market Sts.
Overcoats and Valises Checked Free
TRY OUR SPECIAL BREW Only 5c a Glass

FRANK CARR
THE MANHATTAN . . .
25 Geary Street, S. F.
Ladies' Cafe and Wine Rooms
25 Brook Place
Telephone Main 5611

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy
1051 Market St. bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.
The largest of its kind in the world
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free. A valuable book for men.

W. SCHEPPLER

DEALER in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry at 1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Town Talk gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales

Summer Grocery Dainties

That have become such a necessary adjunct to a pleasant season in the country are made a special feature of our stock in summer time.

RATHJEN BROS.

21 STOCKTON ST
TEL MAIN 5522.

3253 FILLMORE ST.
TEL. WEST 152

GERMEA

THE KING OF BREAKFAST FOODS

EDUCATIONAL

SELBORNE SCHOOL... FOR BOYS

....SAN RAFAEL....

* * The school will reopen on August 29th in the fine new buildings, heated by steam and lighted with electricity.

For catalogue apply to the Principal.

REV. CHARLES HITCHCOCK.
SAN RAFAEL

"TOWN TALK"

Moise's

ARTISTIC RAISED LETTER SIGNS

MOISE'S EASY SHINE. ❁ MATCHLESS METAL POLISH.

A. D. Cheshire, President and Manager — Blair T. Scott, Vice President — W. O. MacDougall, Secretary

California Undertaking Co.

PRIVATE RESIDENCE PARLORS

405 Powell Street Cor. Post

Embalming a Specialty
Open Day and Night — Telephone Main 971

In all cases of physical and mental exhaustion the use of a little Jesse Moore Whisky will be found invaluable as a stimulant.

Summer Resorts

GLENBROOK . . . Lake County, California . .

Beautifully located, nearly three thousand feet above the sea. Home comforts, home cooking and in fact an ideal resort for a summer outing. Main hotel and cottages are now lighted with Acetyline gas throughout.

REMEMBER If you want to hunt, If you want to fish, If you want to recuperate, If you want the best of recreation, If you want pure air and sunshine, If you want to enjoy an exhilarating climate—You will find all at Glenbrook.

Postoffice (money order) and telephone connections everywhere. For rates, pamphlets, etc., Address O. W. R. TREDWAY, Proprietor.

Skagg's Hot Springs, Sonoma County

Only 4½ Hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles Staging.

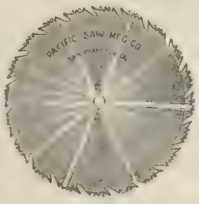
Waters noted for medicinal virtues, best natural bath in the State; swimming and boating; grand mountain scenery; good trout streams at door; photographer's room, telephone, telegraph, daily mail and express.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE

Morning and afternoon stages; round trip from San Francisco only $5.50. Take Tiburon Ferry at 7:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. Terms $2 a day or $12 a week. References any guest of the past four years. Patronage constantly increasing—last year unprecedented. J. F. MULGREW, Proprietor.

PACIFIC SAW MANUFACTURING CO.

17 AND 19 FREMONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO



Manufacturers of the Hatch Pruning Saw with Adjustable and Detachable Blade

— — PRICE, $3.00 —

Saws of every description made to order.
Planing and Currier Knives, Lace Leather, Emery Wheels, Saw Mandrels,
Agents for C. B. Paul's Files.

Beautiful Homes

—IN—

Larkspur

Marin County, California. 45 Minutes from San Francisco

VIA SAUSALITO AND N. P. C. R. R.

VILLA LOTS AND ACREAGE

Easy Terms, Installment Payments

LARKSPUR

Is an ideal suburban town, beautifully situated near the base of Mt. Tamalpais, completely sheltered from ocean winds and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems, and surrounded by forest grandeurs. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially. Eminent physicians pronounce

LARKSPUR

A great sanatorium. Many attractions are offered—such as boating, sea bathing, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks and drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas, delightful environments. Secure a home now while you can get choice of locations. Money paid for rent is gone forever.

American Land and Trust Company

OFFICES:

Larkspur, Cal., and 132 Market Street, S. F.

Mont Rouge Vineyard

Livermore Valley California

CHAUCHÉ & BON, PROPRIETORS

Office and Depot, 17 First St.

Telephone Main 1514 SAN FRANCISCO.

NEVADA RESTAURANT

N. P. LOUPY, Proprietor

Private Rooms for Parties. Large hall for Banquets, Weddings, etc

126, 128, 130 GEARY ST., San Francisco

TELEPHONE, MAIN 1179

DO YOU KNOW

A GOOD THING WHEN YOU SEE IT

Send for Sample Copy of the

OAKLAND TRIBUNE

and see the best advertising medium outside of San Francisco

Rates on application. 413-417 EIGHTH ST., Oakland

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER

Is the only mineral water from Napa County that will positively cure Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion.

ÆTNA WATER . . .

Is endorsed by leading physicians TO CURE, not temporarily but PERMANENTLY, these diseases. It is also a valuable remedy for all Kidney diseases.

ÆTNA MINERAL WATER is not a Soda, it is a Mineral Water superior to any in the world.

LINN & KLEE,

Telephone Main 1729 Sole Agents for the United States

Office and Warerooms, 619 MONTGOMERY STREET,

San Francisco

NEW FALL STYLES

$3, $4, $5, $6 and $7

Lücke's

FINE SHOES

830-832-834 MARKET STREET, S. F.

'Phone, Main 1659

Town Talk does Job Printing

ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS AT

AFTER THE THEATRE

Where you will be served with a good supper, sparkling wines and delightful music, all at a reasonable price.

PACIFIC TOWN TALK

LITERATURE · SOCIETY · MUSIC · STAGE · POLITICS

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY

This Paper not to be taken from the Library.

San Francisco, September 9, 1899 Vol. 5—No. 367 Price, 10 Cents

E. O. McCORMICK

Passenger Traffic Manager Southern Pacific Company.

USE

Adams' TUTTI... FRUTTI Pepsin Chewing Gum

FOR INDIGESTION

FINANCIAL

....THE....

German Savings and Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,187,617.90
Capital actually paid up in cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1899	27,656,513.03

OFFICERS—President, B. Adolph Becker; 1st Vice-President, Daniel Meyer; 2d Vice-President, H. Horstmann; Cashier, A. H. R. Schmidt; Assistant Cashier, William Herrmann; Secretary, George Tourny; Assistant Secretary, A. H. Muller; Attorney, W. S. Goodfellow.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS—B. Adolph Becker, Daniel Meyer, H. Horstmann, Ign. Steinhart, E. Rohte, H. Emil Russ, D. N. Walter, N. Ohlandt and John Lloyd.

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION

532 CALIFORNIA STREET

Deposits, July 1, 1899,	$24,920,895
Paid Up Capital,	1,000,000
Reserve Fund,	205,215
Contingent Fund,	442,763

E. B. POND, President — W. C. B. de FREMERY, Vice-President
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier — R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

GEORGE W. BEAVER, ROBERT WATT, THOMAS MAGEE, DANIEL E. MARTIN, GEORGE C. BOARDMAN, W. C. B. DE FREMERY, ALBERT MILLER, GEO. TASHEIRA, E. B. POND

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits. Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co's Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

Continental Building and Loan Association

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital Over	8,500,000.00
Paid in Capital	1,310,000.00
Profit and Reserve Fund	175,000.00
Monthly Income, over	100,000.00

Dividend Declared June 30th, 1899.

Ordinary Deposits	6 per cent per annum
One Year Term Deposits	7 " " " "
Class "F" stock	10 " " " "
Class "A" stock	14 " " " "

Home Office, 222 SANSOME STREET, SAN FRANCISCO
WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

Mutual Savings Bank of San Francisco

33 POST STREET, below Kearny

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE BLDG.

Guaranteed Capital - $1,000,000 — Paid-up Capital - - - $300,000

JAMES D. PHELAN, President — S. G. MURPHY, Vice President
GEO. A. STORY, Cashier — JOHN A. HOOPER, Vice-President
C. B. HOBSON, Assistant Cashier

"Rate of interest on loans secured by improved San Francisco real estate six per cent."

Interest paid on Deposits. ∴ Loans on approved securities.

Deposits may be sent by postal order, Wells, Fargo & Co., or Exchange on City Banks. When opening accounts send signature.

OCEANIC Steamship Company

The S. S. Australia

Sails for Honolulu Wedn'sday, Sept 20, at 2 p.m.

The S. S. ALAMEDA sails via Honolulu and Auckland for Sydney Wed'sday, Sept 6, at 10 p.m.

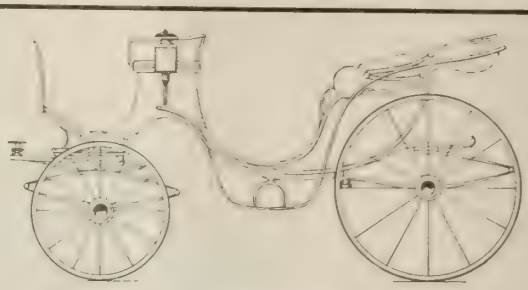
Favorite Line Round the World, via Hawaii, Samoa, New Zealand, Australia, India, Suez, England, etc. $610 first class.

J. D. SPRECKELS & BROS. CO., Agents

114 Montgomery Street, S. F.

FREIGHT OFFICE—327 Market Street — PIER 7, Foot Pacific St.



VICTORIA

O. F. WILLEY & CO., Established 1855.

CARRIAGE BUILDERS AND DEALERS

317 MONTGOMERY ST., (Nevada Block.)

Agency for Brewster & Co., of Broome St., New York; Michigan Buggy Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. S. Caffrey Co., Camden, New Jersey; A. N. Parry & Co. Amesbury, Mass.; W. S Frazier & Co., Chicago Road Cart, H. H. Babcock Buggy Co., Watertown, N. Y.; New Haven Carriage Co., New Haven Conn.

The Call

Is the only San Francisco Daily which has dared to take an outspoken stand for public morals.

The only paper making a fight against the corrupting influences of the race tracks and gambling dens which are a blot on the reputation of the City and State. The "sure thing" races are NOT ADVERTISED in its columns. Do you not prefer such a paper in your homes

THE SUNDAY CALL contains a choice selection of literature and special features. Its pages for women are filled with the latest Society and Fashion notes.

Delivered by carrier, 65c per month.
Weekly CALL, $1.00 per year.

W. S. LEAKE, MANAGER.

You can depend upon the correct style, right quality and price of our field and marine glasses lorgnettes, gold spectacles and eyeglasses. They can be purchased with the same safety that has established our name for good optical work. Our stock consists of the latest designs of famous European makers—we import direct from them.

CALIFORNIA OPTICAL CO.

317-319 KEARNY ST., Bet. Bush and Pine

TOWN TALK

San Francisco, September 9, 1899

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

Theo. F. Bonnet, - - - Editor

40 Ellis Street, Third Floor Telephone Main 5725

SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year, in advance, - -	$3 00	Six Months, - - -	$1 50
Single Copies, - -	10	Three Months, - - -	75

Foreign subscriptions, (countries in postal union) $4 00 per year.

Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application.

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N.Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington. D. C.; 218 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL SAN FRANCISCO

CAUTION

Pay no money to persons representing themselves to be connected with TOWN TALK unless a written authority to receipt for the same is shown and accept no receipt unless it be on our printed blanks.

OUR OPINION

THAT THE CHIEF of San Francisco's police department is either a fool or a knave there can be no doubt. To being one or the other he would have to plead guilty were he called upon by the commissoners for an explanation of his conduct. Two of the commissioners—the two that control the department—are executive officers of large financial institutions. They must be presumed to be men of intelligence, and it is incredible that they are not cognizant of the existing state of affairs. The recent arrest and escape of a dangerous criminal who hobnobbed with detectives for months, and secured their co-operation in various enterprises, are only minor instances of the incompetency or worse that characterizes the conduct of police affairs. They have seen Chief Lees suddenly assume an aggressive and menacing attitude toward certain law-breakers and as suddenly withdraw all attention from them. Do they not suppose there was some inducement for his quiescence in criminal transactions? Or, have they given him carte blanche to exercise discrimination in the matter of enforcing the law? It would surely be unjust to harbor the suspicion that men of integrity, such as Mr. Tobin of the Hibernia bank and Mr. Alvord of the Bank of California undoubtedly are, have agreed that Chief Lees should protect the rich lottery companies that do more business in San Francisco that they do in half a dozen of the largest cities in the union combined. Yet such a suspicion is warranted. Chief Lees does protect them, for the purveyor of bogus lottery tickets is prohibited from promoting the traffic in the fictitious article while the vendors of genuine tickets are permitted to invade every home and office in the city. Moreover the agents of lottery companies boldly engage apartments for the transaction of their business and advertise their location, in flagrant violation of the law. We have the authority of a public official for the statement that thousands of dollars are spent in this city every month by the lottery companies for protection, and only a few weeks ago it was common rumor on the street that the agent of an eastern company that lately invaded this city was "shaken down" before he was permitted to compete with his old established rivals. Is it possible that the police commissioners have never given this subject a thought or that Chief Lees has never concerned himself about the matter?

THE EAST appears to have come to the conclusion that the day of women in newspaperdom has come to an end. The fad has run its course and hereafter instead of exploiting themselves on front pages, they will either drop out entirely or work on the same footing as men, taking their assignments as a matter of course and letting their work go in unsigned. Now that the fashion is dying out it is difficult to see wherein its supposed attraction lay. Sensible women did not need the Nellie Blys of the Sunday editions to tell them that no woman can dress conspicuously and parade the streets at unseemly hours without attracting the sort of attention she seeks. Nor can she invade the private offices of business men with whom she has no business to transact and prolong her call, oblivious to hints that she is unwelcome, without subjecting herself to insult. This is a give-and-take world and men are hardly expected to show greater respect for a woman than she shows for herself. At first there seemed to be some novelty in getting a woman's opinion of a prize fight, or a boat race, or some other occurrence in which women are not generally interested, and then there was the adventurous stage when "lady" reporters were sent aloft on telegraph poles to rescue lost cats or down into the hold of sunken vessels in diving costume. They rode to fires on the engine and were kidnaped by bandits or shanghaied by shipping masters. They crawled through sewers and made balloon ascensions, and wrote it all out with much expenditure of adjectives and exclamation points, and it was all so "bright", "breezy," "novel" and "taking": but after all are a woman's sensations any different, or better worth being recorded than a boy's or a man's, in unwonted surroundings? Why would not a bookkeeper or a clerk or a schoolmaster have answered every purpose? And when it comes to seeking situations in canneries and shirt factories in order to "expose" the manner in which they are conducted, the only result accomplished has been to make conditions harder for those whose applications are honestly made. If the idea were to cater to the supposed curiosity of women readers they would have found more amusement in a recital of the experiences of a "mere male man" who had tried his hand at the purely feminine occupations of millinery, dressmaking or child-nursing. As to men, they probably had very little, if any, of the stuff. They are not as a rule given to encouraging the other sex in making excursions along the coast of Bohemia, and when they are bent on "feeding the animal" they much prefer to be unhampered by petticoats. The women who were willing to let themselves down to the level that some of these writers did, lost much in dignity and character. Their work was but for the day, slangy, flippant and lacking in both matter and manner—even the best of it is long since forgotten. For the business woman who can do her work as a matter of course and do it well there is always a place, but she who has heretofore had the band called out to celebrate her mediocre performances is now a back number.

LONDON SOCIETY is aghast at the marriage of Miss Florence Jewell to a Matabele chief. The numerous examples of unhappy and unholy alliances of this kind did not deter Miss Jewell from throwing herself away. It is incomprehensible that a well-reared and supposedly refined young woman could unite herself to a greasy South African savage. Even when European women marry men of more civilized nations such as Turks, Persians and Hindoos, the wide differences in manners and religion and the meaning and philosophy of life form insuperable barriers to happiness, and the wife almost invariably realizes the fatal mistake she has made. In our own country white women of the lower class frequently marry Chinamen, but it is probable that they have very little to sacrifice in so doing. Romantic girls have occasionally wedded Indians and in nearly all cases have repented of their bargains. But none of these instances awaken the disgust which the marriage of Miss Jewell does. Her husband will probably treat her as a beast of burden, for such is the only ideal of womankind possessed by the gentle savage, and Florence Jewell will find that she is no Parthenia, nor is her negro conquest an Ingomar. Ethnologists usually concede that the progeny of mixed races possess the virtues of neither and the vices of both. It is a fact that in countries where such mixtures are found their representatives are a despised class spurned by the higher and reproached by the lower of the races to which they owe their origin. The Eurasian of India occupies a place in society analogous to that of the mulatto in our southern states; he is refused and repudiated by his paler relatives and forced into assimilation with his darker, whether he will or not.

A SERVANT GIRL STRIKE is on in Chicago and the daily press informs us that men are rapidly filling the places left vacant in the ranks of household service. There is no reason why the idea should give one cold shivers. In the orient men perform all branches of domestic labor, including washing, sweeping and cooking. Most of the occupations require endurance and physical strength and are by no means unfitted to men. In fact, men servants are in most instances superior to women in nearly every capacity. When well trained and experienced they are neater, handier, better tempered and more obliging, and added to these good qualities they possess greater physical strength. If we leave out of the argument the care of children and personal service on the ladies of a household they should be able to perform well all kinds of domestic work. And the man servant is seldom the cause of those little jealousies that so often produce domestic ruptures. When there is no maid servant in the house the suspicious mistress will have less cause for anxiety, but when she finds a stray hair on her husband's coat she will have to exercise greater ingenuity than formerly in accounting for its presence. The Chicago strike may have a tendency to revolutionize domestic affairs, for in the family broils of the future the husband instead of the wife may be the one that does the grumbling over the personal attractions of the servant.

THE FRIENDS of the new charter are getting anxious over the outcome of the litigation involving the legality of that instrument. Their anxiety is largely due to the apparent confidence of the enemies of the charter who pretend to regard a decree wiping out the will of the people as a foregone conclusion. There are certain wiseacres in town who try to create the impression that they always know what the Supreme court is going to do, but their prognostications have so often gone awry that they are no longer taken seriously. The justices of the Supreme court do not wander into clubs and other places and tell how they are going to decide cases. As there has not yet been an argument on the validity of the charter it seems a little premature to predict that the decision will be adverse to its defenders. The charter is the will of the people expressed at an election and it is not likely that the Supreme court is going to set it aside on account of some minor irregularity in the mode by which it was adopted. The election of freeholders and the election of the charter were conducted in strict conformity with the law as it was interpreted by intelligent lawyers. There was no irregularity such as to prevent the people from fairly and honestly expressing their wishes. It would be most unfortunate if the people of San Francisco, who have for so many years been trying to get rid of the crazy-quilt Consolidation Act with its contradictory and impracticable provisions and its loop-holes for fraud and official chicanery, should be told to try again after having secured a charter which has been pronounced by men learned in the science of municipal government to be one of the most perfect systems that could be devised.

THE GENTLEMEN of the cloth are divided on the question of the fitness of Kipling for Sunday school purposes. There is nothing extraordinary in the circumstance of their division. It is only when the reverend gentlemen of the thousand and one sects shall agree not to disagree that we will gasp with amazement. If they cannot agree upon questions pertaining to God, how less likely are they to be found unanimous upon Kipling. But why should there be so much talk over the action of the First Methodist church of Crawfordsville, Indiana, in throwing out one of Kipling's stories from its Sunday school library? Nobody but a fool would go to a Sunday school library to find such a work as "The Drums of the Fore and Aft." The throwing out of a work possessing as much merit as that has, is not half so surprising as the circumstance of its having strayed into the library. The shelves of Methodist Sunday school libraries were never freighted with books of that character, and no Sunday school teacher should be criticised for hesitating at Kipling. The fact is that Rudyard is altogether too optimistic for Sunday school purposes. He makes his characters do things that are supposed, in every well regulated Sunday school, to lead to eternal damnation, but yet the Kipling creatures have a jolly old time and enjoy life to the fullest extent. It would be wrong to permit the Crawfordsville children to be led astray by the false notions which they would derive from Kipling's yarns.

GEORGE D. COLLINS, a capable young attorney, has rushed into print and to the defense of our Supreme court. When the Supreme court is abused Mr. Collins suffers severe pain. He is a sympathetic young man, is Mr. Collins, and as he has a case in the Supreme court occasionally it does him no harm to be in touch with the learned justices of that lofty tribunal. It is, of course, wrong to abuse the court, and there is no doubt that the brilliant Blackstones of the press frequently criticise it unjustly and senselessly. The law is not sufficiently flexible to suit them, and they therefore interpose demurrers and promptly sustain them in their own court of last resort. But sometimes the justices of the Supreme court are wrong, and they admit their error by overruling themselves and reversing their own orders. That shows that they realize they are not infallible. Mr. Collins contends that it is their duty to see that the forms of law are complied with, and they must not permit a man to go to jail who has not been regularly convicted. Mr. Collins' exposition of the law is very clear and convincing, but to agree in every particular with him one must concede that the science of law is in a measure farcical. He would have us believe that if a man has been convicted of crime upon uncontroverted evidence, and it should subsequently be discovered that owing to a clerical error the indictment failed to charge him with intent to commit the crime, he would be entitled to a new trial. It was upon some such theory that a lawyer once moved that a prisoner be set at liberty because the extradition papers by virtue of which he was escorted back to this country were not in strict conformity with law. He contended that the court should assume that the defendant was still in the country from whence he had been unlawfully extradited. The judge being a man of commonplace capacity found that the assumption was beyond him, and as it was easier for him to take judicial cognizance of the presence of the defendant he ordered the trial to proceed, and the lawyer had the satisfaction of taking an exception. After all it must be admitted that an indictment merely serves to get a man into court where he shall be tried, and to acquaint him with the nature of the charge against him so that he shall be able to make an adequate defense. Failure to charge intent imposes no hardship and in no way curtails his rights, and the Supreme court is straining at a gnat when it reverses a verdict for such a defect. If intent is proved, that should be sufficient.

PRESIDENT McKINLEY in his Pittsburg speech showed how keenly alive he is to the necessity of winning the favor of the volunteer soldier and at the same time vindicating his policy in the Philippines. The President is adept, to use an up to date expression, in "spreading the salve." In his Pittsburg speech he expatiated on the patriotism of our volunteers in Manila, when on the ratification of the treaty of peace it lay within their power to remain in the Philippines or return to their homes. It was at this trying and critical moment that the true spirit of the American volunteer displayed itself in glowing colors. According to the President the American Volunteer might have returned to the pursuits of peace, but he chose to remain on the battlefields, facing danger and confronting death as long as his services were needed in defense of his flag. He declares that such patriotism should be perpetuated in the nation's annals, and the name of each volunteer be inscribed on the nation's roll of honor. How inspiring it all sounds! It is lacking in nothing except the cold truth. The gallant American volunteer was not willing to remain far from the pursuits of peace after the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain. He wanted to come home; he demanded that he be sent home, and he was finally sent home. But nevertheless he was not short on patriotism. He was merely weighted down with disgust at the policy pursued by General Otis under orders from the President. He was willing to fight for the flag, but he objected to being compelled to post peace proclamations while the flag was being spat upon.

You never have a head in the morning from drinking Jesse Moore "A. A." Whisky.

CHANSON DE MUSETTE

I SAW a swallow yesterday,
And as I watched it on the wing
It brought back memories of you
Who loved me once when it was spring.
Pensive before the almanac
Of that bright year with many a sigh
I stood and lived those hours again
When we loved fondly, you and I.

No no, my youth, it is not dead,
Your image ever bright has been,
And if you knocked upon my door,
My heart, Musette, would let you in.
It quivers when I hear your name,
O Muse of Infidelity!
Come back and let us eat again
The blessed bread of gayety.

Those old companions of our love
That stand around our little room.
In hope of your return, dear one
Begin to lay aside their gloom.
Forlorn and desolate no more
They now put on a festive air—
The little bed and the big glass
Wherein you often drank my share.

You'll wear again that dress of white
Which so became you long ago,
And then on Sunday as of yore
A wandering in the woods we'll go.
At evening to the arbor old
With our light wine we shall repair
To dip the pinions of your song
Before it soars upon the air.

Musette, you did me an ill turn—
God will forgive the trick you've played,
And he will not withhold his moon
To light our kisses in the shade.
All Nature you will find as gay
As charming as when first we met
As kindly to our love as then,
As gracious and as smiling yet.

* * * *

And so, one sunny morn, Musette,
The carnival all past and gone,
Winged her way back, the truant bird,
To the old nest whence she had flown.
But when I kissed her, faithless one,
My heart no more beat loud and high,
And she who was no more herself,
Declared I was no longer I.

Adieu, we part, dear one, adieu,
Dead is our love and all is done,
For with that old-time calendar
The moments of our youth have run,
Of those bright days which it contained
Often I rake the ashes o'er,
For only thus can memory find
The key of paradise once more.

[Henri Murger—translated by Irene Connell.]

The Saunterer

Nothing has shown a greater diversity of styles since the beginning of the last half decade than the change in women's figures. Of the once modish hour-glass shape one can of a verity say: Nous avons changé tout cela. And this change in the female form divine is, without a doubt, due to the short corset, though I am told that Charles Dana Gibson considers his celebrated Girl responsible for the revolution in figures. Women's corsets have steadily been growing shorter, until now the minimum seems to have been reached. It has not, however, yet arrived in San Francisco, at least I have seen no indications of its advent in the figures of the feminine promenaders in Kearny street after the matinee. But a friend of mine who has just returned from Paris tells me it is all the rage there.

This new corset is only adapted to be worn by very slender figures. When properly adjusted the wearer appears to be minus an abdomen, but the bust is greatly in evidence. There is no padding worn with this newest arrangement of stay. The corset itself is so built as to force the bust into prominence and whether nature has been liberal to a woman in this respect or the reverse the result is the same. She reveals to the eye a charming figure, with a small and yielding waist with adorable curves above its roundness. The whole effect is due to the new corset and my friend tells me that the Parisian women have gone wild over it and will wear nothing else.

The corset has evidently reached St. Louis, judging by some observations lately made by the Mirror of the Missouri metropolis. Mr. Reedy of that journal was lately moved to some burning remarks anent the shirt waist worn with the low corset. He must have read and reread his dictionary to find words sufficiently lurid to express his sentiments. Among other things he said:

"When a man's wife is away his moral stamina liquifies upon slight provocation. There is no telling what desperate results may not flow from the insistent sensuality of the low corset, as it reveals itself under the shirt waist, naturally seducive as that garment is per se. * * * The new corset scheme is a most uproarious appeal to the desire of the eye. * * * This new fashion figure is decidedly coarse and animalistic, and there is no other expression for it. The luxuriant fleshliness of the style is something that

A delightful hot drink may be made with the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky and the usual hot water, sugar and a little lemon skin.

"THE HUB"
CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
132 KEARNY ST., Corner Sutter
EXCLUSIVE
HIGH-GRADE
CLOTHIERS
Fall Ideas Right and Ready
COME TRY SOME ON

appertains to women in the jungle. It has a certain savagery about its assertion of the divine intent, in women in maternity. * * * The low cut corset is infinitely worse than the old pull-back skirt designed to show the hips, for the precocity of its excessive matronliness is suggestive only of the sensual orient with its child-wives weaving arabesques of sin in the movements of the danse du ventre. The fashion of the low cut corset should be attacked from every pulpit and every editorial chair."

Well, the stout woman has one satisfaction. She can never come under the category scored by Mr. Reedy, for she cannot wear the new corset. It is built for slender women only.

"I have noticed a great improvement in my bookkeeper since his marriage," said the merchant.

"Why, is he steadier?"

"Oh, that was not it, but he used to watch the clock. Now he is not in such a hurry to get home."

The fashionable watering places of the east were given food for gossip some weeks ago by the appearance at each of an old gentleman of distinguished mien accompanied by a young woman who called him "papa" and whom he addressed as "baby." They represented that they were father and daughter, but they were looked upon with suspicion, for there was something in their conduct which suggested a relationship somewhat different from that of parent and child. At one of the smart resorts a famous globe-trotter recognized in the illy yoked couple a pair that he had met on the continent a few years before, and even then "baby" was quite a buxom infant, whose appearance was not well in harmony with the juvenile style of the raiment she affected. I am wondering whether "papa" and "baby" are not at present visiting this city. A pair fitting the description of the couple that provoked gossip in the east recently sought apartments in a Nob hill lodging-house. After arranging all the preliminaries with the landlady, "papa" said that it would be necessary to put a couch for him in his daughter's room.

"You see," he said, "I am devoted to my daughter. She is my pride, my baby, and we cannot bear to be separated even for a night."

The hostess froze.

"I am very sorry," she said, "but I think you can find better accommodations in the flat next door."

"Papa" and "baby" withdrew and almost succeeded in getting a room in the flat, but the landlady there was also wise, and the couple wandered away filled with indignation.

Although I am not in accord with the sentiments of Rev. Father McKinnon in relation to the conduct of the war in the Philippines, my admiration for the chaplain of the First California regiment is not diminished by that circumstance. Every day I hear of some new story of his bravery and gallantry and as his praises are generally sung by the people not of his religious faith they are all the more impressive. I am told that he was always doing hazardous duty, and that his recklessness on the field excited the admiration of all. There was no man in the army that enjoyed the confidence of Admiral Dewey to such an extent as did Father McKinnon, and the Admiral s fondness for him could not have been better demonstrated than it was on a certain occasion when the priest requested the use of a vessel for the purpose of making a trip in an official capacity.

"You can have the Olympia if you want her," said Admiral Dewey.

When the smallpox epidemic was at its worse in Manila there was only one chaplain that visited the sick and that one was Father McKinnon. Twice a day he approached the guard-line around the hospital, divested himself entirely of his clothes and after putting on a large robe passed on and visited each patient. He had kind words for each, and was ever ready to write letters for them or render any little courtesy that was desired. As Douglas White expressed it to me:

"He would do anything but talk religion, and it didn't matter whether a fellow was Protestant, Jew or Catholic.

"When he starts," White added, "have a pool on him."

The magnetism of the man was shown the other night at the military social of San Francisco Lodge of Elks, when he said but a few words and brought everybody to his feet with three rousing cheers and a tiger.

When Mr. James L. Flood returned from his honeymoon trip he was deeply engrossed in his business affairs, and so little in evidence among his friends that some of his acquaintances concluded that the flame of camaraderie had been quenched. It was rumored that he contemplated erecting a palatial residence in New York and entering the sacred portals of the aristocratic set in the far east. I was surprised at the rumor, because I knew there was nothing in the diversions afforded by pink teas and swell balls to appeal to his fancy. It was difficult to believe that he could be induced to devote his time to the empty frivolities and refined dissipations to which the butterflies of fashion in the effete metropolis of the east are addicted. He could find nothing congenial in the company of people whose conversation is limited to topics affecting social functions, domestic scandals and the latest fashions. Although Jim Flood is a business man who attends faithfully to his commercial interests, he knows how to enjoy life, and he can do so without capering nimbly o'er a polished floor, or engaging in the effeminate pastimes of the so-called fashionable set. He is of a bohemian temperament and finds pleasure in association with kindred spirits and, above all, he is a steadfast friend. Jim Flood is a Californian who inherited that rugged nature characteristic of the pioneers, and he has no intention of deserting his birthplace. It is his intention to build a residence in this city. The allurements of giddy Gotham have no more fascination for Mrs. Flood than they have for her husband. She is a charming woman with a disposition in perfect harmony with that of the popular millionaire.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

POMMERY

SEC BRUT

Universally acknowledged by connoisseurs the Highest Grade Champagne

CHAS. GRAEF & CO., Sole Agents New York and San Francisco.

JOHN CAFFREY, Pacific Coast Representative.

San Diego society changed to the Fisher opera house last Monday night, writes my correspondent, when Modjeska and her excellent company presented for the first time on any stage the drama "Marie Antoinette." The piece is based on the life of Marie Antoinette. The actress has lost none of her charm and her reception on Monday night was flattering. Everybody in San Diego loves Modjeska and on the opening night everybody showed it. Miss Formosa Henderson, daughter of Judge Henderson of San Diego, left this week for New York to join the De Wolf Hopper company. As Miss Henderson is attractive and possesses a fine soprano voice her friends are hoping all kinds of success for her. Alice Reynolds, the gifted young pianist, has gone to Ann Arbor to continue her musical studies. Miss Reynolds is the protegé of Mrs. E. H. Fay of Pasadena, widow of the late Reverend Dr. Fay. There has been little in the way of social functions so far this season in San Diego but the winter promises to be unusually gay. Miss Amie Strong and Miss Clara Ingle of San Diego will leave shortly for Europe where they will spend some months. Miss May Landis went east last week to enter Wellesley college. Miss Marie Witte of St. Louis is the guest of the Rudolph Wuestes.

First club man: How is your little affair coming on?
Second club man: It is all off. I waited too long for somesomething to turn up that would change her feelings towards me and—
F. C. M.: Well?
S. C. M.: I was turned down.

In the interest of those who when they attend the theatre desire to enjoy the whole play, it is a pity that some means has not been devised whereby the latecomers may pay the penalty of their tardiness. At every performance there are stragglers who come rustling down the aisles to their reserved seats, swishing their silken skirts and nodding their beplumed and beflowered heads, obstructing the view and distracting the attention of those who are so unfashionable as not to be behind time. By the time seats are adjusted, hats and wraps disposed of and the necessary or unnecessary amount of fidgeting, nestling and chattering gone through with before they are settled, the whole act is spoiled. Long ago, in school days, the opening exercise of each session was a class song, and it was a rule that all who were not seated before the song was announced were to stand quietly at the side of the room just within the doorway and remain there until they could pass to their places without disturbing the class. Some such regulation as this would be an undisguised blessing in places of amusement. A light chain fastened across the entrance to each aisle when the curtain rises would effectually put an end to the procession of tardy arrivals who, even if they care nothing themselves for the performance, should not be permitted to destroy the peace and comfort of others. The opinion appears to be that such a regulation could not be enforced—the "ladies would refuse to patronize houses where they were subjected to indignity," etc.—but the same was said of the high-hat ordinance. It was predicted that "ladies" would refuse to comply and the management would be helpless. As a matter of fact the rule works with unexpected smoothness. Women have discovered that they profit quite as much as men by an unobstructed view of the stage. Moreover, it pays to be courteous.

THE ENGRAVING OF COOPER & CO., the Art Stationers, is not only superior to that of other houses, but is less in cost. Compare their figures—as for the rest, no charge if not satisfactory. Other houses also charge fifty per cent more for stamping note-papers and with inferior workmanship.

The habit of taking a drink whenever occasion makes opportunity was recently the means of saving at least sixty lives. It was a very cold day and the passengers of a railroad train at Rakaia, New Zealand, left their seats to patronize a saloon. While they were absent a collision took place and the cars were splintered to match wood. Of course temperance reformers and prohibitionists will pass over this item just as religious people read no warning when children locked in while parents are away at missionary and prayer meetings are burned to death; while they never fail to see the hand of judgment if misfortune befalls a household whose members are given over to the satanic occupation of "dayncin'."

You can generally recognize the railroad man by his well-groomed appearance, his well-fitting clothes, his invariably courteous manners and his generally wideawake air. The American railroad man is a product peculiar to the country and he has no peers outside the United States. Still the railroad man is not always popular, probably because the American people as a class consider it their duty to express dislike for anything or anybody connected with corporations. When occasionally one meets a railroad man who enjoys popularity you may be sure he is an all-round good fellow. Such a one is E. O. McCormick, formerly of Cincinnati but now of this city. He is so uniformly affable in his conduct toward people that although he has been but a short time in this city, he enjoys the reputation of being the most popular man ever connected with the Southern Pacific company. The railroad reporters of the dailies are all admirers of Mr. McCormick, and when he was passenger traffic manager of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railway—commonly known as "The Big Four"—he was known as the newspaper man's friend.

LASH'S KIDNEY AND LIVER BITTERS
BETTER THAN PILLS.

If you can afford it

DRINK

Jesse Moore Whisky

Utica Cleansing Compound
Compound Paste

First Prize Royal Agricultural Society. 1899
Sidney, N. S. W.

Try it TIACU TRADE MARK
For household use and the results will amaze you - very economical.

——ALL GROCERS——

Our well known store, noted for elegance and style. Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street.

Mr. McCormick's ability as a railroad man is recognized all over the east, and it was this high reputation that induced the Southern Pacific company to engage him at an advanced salary to fill the position of passenger traffic manager for the Southern Pacific company in San Francisco. Mr. McCormick's wife, who came from the east with him, is a charming woman possessing the cordial manner that has made her husband so well liked everywhere. She has great personal magnetism and makes everybody feel at home at once.

"Young Author says the only thing his wife lacks to make her an ideal companion is that she has no creative faculty."

"And yet I thought you told me the Authors have seven children?"

Some of Gavin McNab's friends have been joshing him about the effect of his political leadership upon the sons of Caledondia. They say there never were so many Scotch Democrats in town before, and they predict that all the members of our next board of supervisors will wear kilts. It has been suggested that such well known Highlanders as Angus McLeod, John McLaren, D. R. McNeil, George D. Maxwell and Jasper McDonald be prevailed upon to become members of the city's next legislative body.

I wonder how many of the patriotic enthusiasts who did their best for the returned volunteers last week can carry their minds back to the Centennial celebration of the Fourth of July at the Presidio? We were a smaller community then and knew less of military matters. There were no street cars to land us at the gates of the reservation, but when the program announced a grand sham battle and the bombardment and burning of raft combustibles, we went one and all. The day was unusually warm, but San Francisco, such of it as did not own or could not hire conveyances, tramped the long unpaved road or took short cuts over the hills and through the brush that covered the outside blocks, and sat on the the sand-hills and sweltered. We watched the artillery blazing away and missing its target, until, as one bright youngster remarked:

"It's a good thing the British don't know what bad shots they are or they would come over and capture us all."

We saw troops marching and countermarching, galloping to and fro in obedience to orders we could not hear and would not have been able to comprehend if we did. The one point that was understood and appreciated by the unmilitary spectators was the rapid firing of the gatling gun, and as we trooped homeward, tired, sunburned and disappointed, the general opinion was voiced by a stout and comfortable Hibernian lady:

"Sure an' phwat did we want to coom so far for—just to hear that owld whurligig of a gun?"

Whether it was simply sunburn or wind from the ocean or something in the atmosphere, San Francisco had swelled and blistered lips for weeks afterward.

On August nineteenth J. J. O'Brien & Co. placed on sale one hundred dozen Ladies' Kid Gloves at fifty cents per pair. These gloves which represented "A Manufacturers Job" were marked at fifty per cent below usual cost and were entirely sold out during the ensuing week. The firm now announces to their friends and the public that commencing with this date, September eighth, they will place on sale a similar "Manufacturing Job" numbering two hundred and five dozens of Ladies' Kid Gloves, all sizes, in brown, gray, tan and black colors at fifty cents per pair.

There is probably nothing more embarrassing to a hostess than to have as her guests at a dinner people who do not speak to one another. Such was the recent experience of Mrs. "Tony" Drexel who spends most of her time in London. Among her guests at a dinner, a short time ago, were Mrs. John W. Mackay and Col. and Mrs. Bonynge. Of course if Mrs. Drexel were familiar with social affairs in California such a contretemps would not have happened. She would not have brought together people who are so wide apart socially. But it is so long ago since the Mackays and the Bonynges had their fuss that people in London should not be expected to remember the affair. That memorable encounter in the Nevada bank between Bonynge and the bonanza king is not so easily forgotten in the neighborhood of the scene of the disturbance. I believe that Mr. Mackay went for the ex-Virginia city broker hammer-and-tongs fashion and succeeded in removing considerable cuticle and shedding some of the Englishman's blood. It was in that way that Mr. Mackay resented certain slanders concerning the social condition of his wife prior to his marriage. As Mrs. Mackay's immediate ancestors were people of high station, even though they may have fallen upon financial rocks, and as she was well reared and liberally educated, it was not pleasant for her husband to read even in an obscure paper malicious stories about her alleged struggles for existence. I believe that he satisfied himself as to the authenticity of the stories before trouncing Bonynge. The supposition is that Col. Bonynge was envious of Mrs. Mackay's prominence in the social world.

Gossip Jones—I see that some of the swell men of Blingum are wearing anklets on their ankles now

Cynic Brown—That's not so surprising as it would be if they wore them somewhere else.

Sausalito is not betraying any signs of jealousy or envy over the prestige Belvedere is to enjoy through the latter village's Venetian carnival. Sausalito is too high caste to betray any emotion, whatever happens in or around the bay. Sausalito is never dull; even in the heat of summer it has its functions. I understand that the Hutch was the scene of a very jolly stag dinner on Monday evening with Claude Terry Hamilton as host of the occasion. Tonight Mrs. Avery's home will be given up to private theatricals with Miss Thomas, Miss Reed and Miss Sperry as the managers and principal participants. Miss Edith Findley is back from an extended eastern trip; I hear she will go to Europe soon to remain away some months.

Deutz & Geldermann

Ay, France

GOLD LACK CHAMPAGNE

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,

Sole Agents 314 Sacramento St., S. F.

The excitement of the Press club election is all over and James P. Booth is now formulating a program for a most energetic administration. Mr. Booth has four ex-presidents on the board of directors and he says that with so much wisdom and experience a successful administration should be insured. I have heard it said that the friends of Paul Cowles were hard losers and that they disputed the regularity of the election, but I think that the report must have started in the knockers' annex to which all sensational Press club rumors may be traced. Mr. Cowles was out of town on election day but his interests were not neglected by his friends, as a consequence the contest was very close.

This was said the other day of a prominent Post street piano manufacturer:

"In his business dealings he is just like his pianos—square and upright."

There appears to be a screw loose somewhere in that Potter family of Chicago. Miss Margaret Potter, the author of "The Social Lion," which is nothing more than a farrago of filth, is a relative of Clara Ward who is better known as the Princesse de Chimay and she is the youngest sister of Mrs. "Bert" Daniels, who as Gertrude Potter achieved notoriety by falling in love with a newsboy. Gertrude was a handsome creature when she was still in her teens, and was noted in the smart set of Chicago for her skill as a musician. Her only weakness was her susceptibility to the charms of good looking youths. She contemplated an elopement with the newsboy but her papa put a stop to that affair by causing the arrest of the lad who had the temerity to win the affections of an heiress. Subsequently Miss Gertrude fell in love with another youngster and there was an engagement which was broken off after which she married "Bert" Daniels.

I am told that Dave O'Leary, the gentleman who now occupies the position of Mr. Alice Rix No. 3, gained his first experience in the newspaper world not on his father's paper the Journal of Commerce, but in connection with the Mechanics' Fair Daily. O'Leary used to write the personals for that paper and they used to be far more spicy reading than they are nowadays. Dave himself used to be a notable personage in the eyes of the visitors at the fair, for he used to be seen there every day strolling about, a tall, handsome fellow whom one only had to look at once to admire—if the looker on were of the feminine gender. It is only since his marriage, I believe, that O'Leary has changed his name from Dave to Dion; the latter certainly has a more aristocratic sound when joined to his surname The O'Learys are Irish and all the family are well educated and clever. One of the brothers, who used to be called Pat, now uses the latter part only of his Christian name and is Mr. Rick O'Leary. There are several brothers in the family and one sister.

A recent dispatch posted at Lloyd's Agency announced that "The Twelve Apostles" had gone ashore at Hell's Mouth and was a total wreck—a rather out of the way location for The Twelve Apostles to bring up at!

A writer for a certain periodical devoted to the interests of the gentler sex gives directions for entertaining company in a manner which combines most admirably style and thrift. Listen to her: "If you have roasted chicken on Tuesday night for dinner have company on Wednesday at noon; then you may have chicken croquettes, chicken boudins, or chicken patties as the main luncheon dish. In this way persons of limited means may entertain frequently without adding to the cost of living." And a little further on, after suggesting a menu whose pièce de resistance is a shoulder of mutton, she adds: "The day after you have had this menu you may invite two people to luncheon," going on to explain that they are invited in order to utilize the left overs. Now all this sounds very funny and reminds me of Hamlet's reason for his mother's rather hasty wedding: "Thrift, thrift, Horatio, the funeral baked meats did coldly furnish forth the marriage feast."

Such people would be capable of having a wedding on the day after a funeral to use up the scraps. They would not hesitate to follow the example of those Paris would-bes described by Daudet in one of his clever sketches, who dried their tea leaves so they could make several drawings out of them. It is to be hoped that these thrifty suggestions will not find favor with San Francisco hostesses, for somehow they cause frightful suspicions. How shall I know when my dearest friend asks me to her house for lunch that she does not want me solely to eat up the leavings of her chicken dinner? And must Fido and the cat be put on short rations that I may be entertained on left overs? Really, I believe that I shall be compelled to decline lunch invitations for the future.

If as Dr. Johnson says: "No man is absolutely happy save when he is drunk," a saloon should be apostrophized as the paradise on earth.

The Baron Von Hiller no longer confines his efforts on the golf links to Santa Cruz. He has obtained the entrée to the Burlingame set, and made his appearance there last week. He also spent some time in this city and attracted a great deal of attention in the street, for the Baron, be it known, is no ordinary looking mortal. I saw him rushing along Market street with the speed of a duke on the trail of an heiress, and he presented as picturesque a spectacle as General Shafter on horseback. Such a group of coloring has seldom been seen on the promenade. He wore golf stockings of the most detonating plaid, a red vest and a mauve suit surmounted by a little pale green box-coat. His tiny straw hat was a gem and it was beribboned most gaudily. The ensemble, including the Baron's florid face, was as fetching a bit of scenic display as ever dazzled the audience at an extravaganza. If the Baron does not soon attract the attention of some heiress it will not be due to the tameness of his dress. But I understand that he deprecates the suggestion of his being a flirt, or having a longing for an heiress.

Another new line of beautiful French hats, Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street.

Engraved . . . ✷
Wedding Announcements
and Invitations . . . ✷
ROBERTSON'S
126 Post Street

Charley Dryden, the Examiner's quaint humorist whose funny sketches have been a feature of the Sunday supplement for several months, is going to take a much needed rest. He will journey as far as Chicago where some of his relatives reside, and he expects to spend about six months with them before resuming newspaper work. Such is his present intention but I doubt whether his restless nature will permit him to emulate the gentleman of leisure for such a length of time. Dryden is one of those newspaper men that never content themselves in one town for a long period. When he got tired of newspaper work some years ago, he hired out as a sailor and made a study of life before the mast. Ever since he has taken a deep interest in the old tar and that is why his sketches are so frequently interspersed with references to Bill Barnacle and his co-workers. He first attracted attention as a writer when he was working on a small paper in Tacoma. He wrote up an account of a ball game one day, in biblical style, and the article found its way into the hands of Fremont Older who was employed on the Call. It was so bright that Older made inquiries concerning the author and when Dryden learned that his work had attracted attention in this city, he came hither and soon became famous as a baseball reporter. Last season he was the baseball reporter of the New York Journal and he made the life of Manager Freedman of the New York team burdensome. Freedman barred Dryden from the New York grounds and Dryden now has the satisfaction of knowing that Freedman is the most cordially despised man that was ever connected with baseball affairs in the National League. Jack Corey will probably succeed Dryden as the Examiner's baseball reporter. Corey is one of the star baseball critics of the country.

"I had to get a divorce," said Mrs. Nob Hill, "I could stand Tom's idiosyncrasies no longer."

"Really," said Mrs. Pacific Avenue, as she accepted the cup of tea tendered by the negro page, "yet I always heard Tom Nob Hill was a model of domestic virtue."

"That was just the reason," replied Mrs Nob Hill, "Tom's tastes were too domestic to suit me."

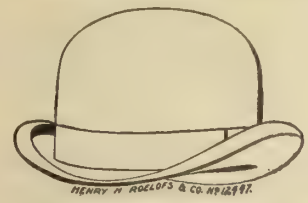
She paused a moment before answering the interrogatory expressed in Mrs. Pacific Avenue's raised eyebrows. Then she said:

"It was impossible to break him of the habit of kissing the maid servants."

I have been assured by Mr. Arthur Barendt, attorney for Colonel Sutherland, that the latter did not compromise the breach-of-promise suit recently instituted against him for blackmailing purposes. The colonel conducted himself in a manner that should meet with the approval of everybody. Instead of being intimidated by the woman he went before the grand jury and produced evidence that caused her indictment on a charge of perjury. That is why she hastily departed from town leaving her attorney, Mr. Tim Crowley, to take care of the case. As the charge of perjury was based on a marriage certificate which showed that when Mrs. Webber swore to the complaint against Colonel Sutherland alleging that she was a single woman, she was married, Mr. Tim Crowley discerned the futility of prosecuting the case. It was called up at the instigation of the defendant and Crowley then pleaded that if Colonel Sutherland had responded to his invitation to visit his office the suit would never have been filed. As Colonel Sutherland referred him at that time to his attorney, I cannot see how Mr. Crowley's plea is in extenuation of his offense in giving assistance to the blackmailer.

It was very amusing to some people in this city who make frequent trips to Paris and who are familiar with the gossip of the cafés to read in the dispatches of Madame Réjane's visit to Rennes, and the explanation thereof. The explanation was that the great actress was studying, with an artistic devotion to realism, new phases of expression and feeling from the exciting scenes that are being enacted at the court-martial. Parisians would regard such an explanation as an exquisite bit of humor, for they know that Madame Réjane was attracted to Rennes by something of greater interest to her than her art. There is a very warm friendship existing between the actress and the eminent and handsome attorney for Dreyfus. As soon as she heard of his illness she rushed to his side. The attorney is a married man, but that circumstance, to use an apt though inelegant expression, "cuts no ice" in France.

An excellent remedy for insomnia will be found in the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky taken at bed-time. Your druggist has it.



J. PORCHER
Hats and Caps
of all kinds
to Order
1109 MARKET ST.
ODD FELLOWS BUILDING
SAN FRANCISCO

CHAPIN & GORE'S
OLD RESERVE BOURBON
AND RYE WHISKY
12 years old
before being bottled
Wreden-Kohlmoos Co.
Importers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers
412 Front St., S. F.
Sole Pacific Coast Agents.

The Laxative Liver Lozenge ✱

PLEASANT
PURGATIVE
PALATABLE

This remedy has been used in the private practice of one of the most eminent professors of medicine in the city of Chicago for over twenty years. It has proved to be the most efficient remedy ever used in all derangements of the Liver, and kindred diseases, such as Constipation, Headache and Dyspepsia. Its action is very mild—no griping pains nor bad taste. It is like taking a candy lozenge. With children it is invaluable.

PRICE 25 CENTS

CALIFORNIA LAXATIVE LIVER LOZENGE CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
WESTERN HOMŒOPATHIC PHARMACY, Agents, · 139 Powell St
W. W. STOCKER.

Dr. CARL DEHMEL
(formerly of Berlin)
Surgeon Chiropodist
and Masseur . . .
Massages and Operations on Ingrowing Toe
Nails a Specialty
CONSULTATION FREE
EMPORIUM and
GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR
On Mezzanine Floor near Post Office
Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.
Saturdays 9 a. m. to 10 p. m.

I wonder how many people who saw "Paul Jones" at the Grand last week remembered the time it was produced at this same house of amusement with Agnes Huntington in the title role? Miss Huntington was practically the leader of the van among ladies of the stage who resigned from public life to marry wealthy private citizens. There may have been others who did this sort of thing but Agnes Huntington's beauty and stellar prestige made her retirement of more prominence to the reading world. She was one of the first of the Bostonians' prima donnas and was a great favorite as long as she remained with that organization. Less dashing than Jessie Bartlett Davis, she possessed a dignity and charm of manner that were her inheritance from a reputable line of ancestors. When Agnes Huntington started out as a star on her own account, appearing in "Paul Jones" and "Captain Thérèse," she did not make a fortune but she won plenty of good press notices and, incidentally, a husband in the person of a rich stockbroker of New York. She was always noted for her beauty of face and figure, her style being on the Helenic order, tall and fair and queenly.

"How strange," said the chic maiden, "when a man is in evening dress he makes conspicuous revelation of his shirt bosom, but when a woman is in evening dress——"

"Fortunately," said Cholly Freshleigh, "the shirt-waist don't go with a woman's evening dress."

Santa Monica, writes my correspondent, has had one of the gayest seasons ever known here, with golf tournaments, tennis, balls, dances and the always attractive surf bathing. Mrs. Addison Smith, Mrs. Abbot Kinney and Mrs. Horace Dudley were the hostesses at a charming fancy dress ball given on Wednesday of last week at the Doria. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jones, representing Johnnie Jones and Sister Sue, captured the prizes. Mrs. Kinney is better known to San Franciscans as Margaret Judge Thornton. She is a most attractive young matron and brings up her children after the peculiar views advanced by their father, the advocate of arboriculture, in his once much talked of book.

On Friday evening Mrs. Ed Tufts of Los Angeles and Miss Bertha Crouch gave a dance at the Casino. Miss Crouch, who used to live in Oakland, is one of the most typically up-to-date girls in society. She has contracted a new engagement since the one announced two seasons back, with young Van Camp as the prospective bridegroom, but as she is notoriously fickle I doubt if her second betrothed will ever lead her to the altar. The usual Saturday night hop at the Hotel Arcadia was largely attended. For Friday evening of this week a "hunt ball" is on the tapis and it is rumored the men will all appear in pink jackets. The polo races are dated for September eighth and ninth. G. L. Waring, the secretary, has done everything to make the affair a success. Next Saturday the great golf tournament given by the Santa Monica golf club will come off.

William Mitchell Bunker, late of the San Francisco Report, is enjoying a most interesting trip around the world, I should judge from the occasional bits of news regarding his progress that are wafted my way. In a late issue of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat appears about two columns of "special correspondence" signed by Mr. Bunkers name and dated from Vladivostock, Siberia.

When Denis O'Sullivan gave his Irish song recital last May, there was something of an outcry that he should have confined himself to the songs of one country. Next Tuesday evening our music lovers will have an opportunity of hearing "Neally" in German, Italian, Scotch and English music together with two or three of those early flowers of music that bloomed at the coming of the troubadours and minnesingers as long ago as the twelfth century. But the Irish is not to be excluded and the inimitable "Widow Machree" and her compatriots will again delight the audience.

The Audobon society fad, which has been steadily growing in strength in the east, has at last reached the coast and it is to be hoped it will gain a foothold here. The Ebell society of Oakland has taken it up and will next week hold a novel exhibition with view to discouraging the destruction of songbirds for the purpose of using their plumage for millinery decoration purposes. The Ebell society is a social power. It has been established twenty-four years, numbers nearly five hundred members, owns its clubhouse and contains on its roll every woman of prominence on the Alameda side of the bay. Mrs. Gleason is the president. The exhibition next week will be of millinery and will naturally interest the fair sex The ladies intend to make the exhibition of historical significance and will show the head covering worn in olden times, bringing the styles up to date. All of the hats and bonnets shown will be minus the feathers objectionable to the Audobon authorities and I am told that in spite of this fact the exhibit will contain some beautful effects in millinery.

This kind of an exhibit, I understand, is not a novelty in New York where the Audobon idea is very popular and where a millinery exhibition in which birdless and featherless hats were shown was recently given. Poems in which the man with a rifle was contrasted with the women with a bird-trimmed hat have been going the rounds for a year or more, without much effect however, I must confess. It is said one woman in New York who had distinguished herself as a leader among the Audobonites appeared one night at a smart reception wearing a gown trimmed from the waist to the hem in tiny green feathers which had been torn from the backs of thousands of rare birds. She caused a sensation by her magnificence, but as a consequence weakened her power as an Audobon leader.

St. Luke's has another new rector, the Reverend D. C. Garrett, and of course he had a large congregation present last Sunday to listen to his initial sermon. He evidently scored a hit with his discourse judging by the comments I have heard since from those who were present. However, the Reverend D. C. Garrett need not flatter himself that he has made a lasting impression upon his parishioners by the success of his first sermon. St. Luke's is a proverbially capricious parish and novelty seems to be the only thing that goes with the regular attendants at this swell sanctuary. When the new rector of St. Luke's remarked in his sermon, "How much there is to do in a parish like this! How diversified the work! Not only in the preparation of sermons and in the holding of services must the minister work, but in what is equally important, yes, often a hundredfold more important, the pastoral and practical ministrations of the rector's life," he spoke truly—and probably better than he knew.

If you want Artistic and Attractive PRINTING TRY

Town Talk Publishing Co.

40 ELLIS STREET

Third Floor

San Francisco, Cal.

Give us a trial and we KNOW you will call again

The mammoth cave of Kentucky and the cave where Tom Sawyer and Becky Thatcher got lost, even that more famous cave still which could not be entered save by repeating the words "Open Sesame," have a powerful rival in a cave at Capitola. Althogh the Californian cave is a small affair I understand that its lack of circumference will not prevent it from figuring in more than one divorce in San Jose. Capitola is now almost deserted but there are still a few of the summer visitors left to talk over the salacious events of the season. It was the liveliest season in the history of that cosy little watering place, and as nearly all the visitors were from San Jose, the majority of the stories of occurrences there were about residents of the garden city. The people of San Jose have always enjoyed the reputation of being very circumspect but I have concluded that if so it is because they exercise great caution except when they are away for the summer. The bracing atmosphere of Capitola has a tendency to impart a spirit of recklessness, and then there always is something romantic about a cave.

Now that Father McKinnon has explained that Colonel Duboce was justified in applying the torch to a church near Manila, I suppose there is no thing to prevent the colonel from accepting the nomination for mayor. Father McKinnon says that the natives used the sacred edifice as a citadel and for self protection it became necessary for the California regiment to consign it to the flames. In order to keep up his reputation for gallantry Colonel Duboce, having risked his life for his country, should now be willing to sacrifice himself on the altar of his party. Of course there is not so much glory in being slaughtered at the polls as there is in braving the dangers of the battlefield, but then the Republican party is badly in need of a man just now and why should the victim not be Colonel Duboce?

Maude Andrews, writing to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, remarks how French and English boys tell their mothers everything, even about their amours. The French mothers, particularly, take it for granted that all boys have wild oats to sow and so they let their sons pour their confidences into jolie maman's ear about this or that soubrette or cafe chantant artist and listen with tender sympathy to tales of Henri or Raoul's expenditures towin a fair one's favor. The French mother even helps out her son when he finds his income insufficient to meet his inamorata's desires.

Such confidences as these would scarcely go in this part of the world. I know more than one good mother in the San Francisco swim who has less idea of how and where their sons spend their time and money than has the man in the moon. If these mothers should take a spin along the tenderloin some time after midnight, or take a look into one of the high-priced restaurants where petits soupers in private rooms are not the exception but the rule, I can fancy what horror they would feel. Les jeunes gens of the local swim are not confiding in their mothers these days. Neither do they give their confidence to their fathers, but the reason of the latter is not because of a fear of paternal censure but because papa may cut them out with the object of their adoration.

Chapin and Gore's Rye Whiskey is a splendid tonic during this hot weather.

It was a sad blow to some of our stalwart democrats that I could name when one of the "Ole Bills" captured William J. Bryan and went off with the free silver prophet to commune with the splendors of Yosemite. "Ole Bill" Foote stole a march on his envious democratic contemporaries when he captured the presidential candidate and piloted him far from the madding crowd. Every politician longs to be on terms of easy familiarity with a presidential possibility, because if the possibility becomes a fact, his ear will be in great demand by the job chasers. Foote struck up a close friendship with Bryan at the last national democratic convention to which the man from Oakland was a delegate and there is probably no man in the state, unless it be Judge William P. Lawlor, for whom Bryan has a higher regard than W. W. Foote. When Bryan visited the state a few years ago, Judge Lawlor was his confidential man and some of the politicians of the inner circles of the democracy were parrot-hued with envy of Wm. P.

Everyday one hears a new story of some amusing incident of Volunteer week. One of the latest to come my way has the irrepressible Adjutant General Seamans for the central figure. Although that resplendent peacock of the Guard has been in the city only a short while, he has managed to establish a reputation as a stickler for military proprieties. He insists that the deference due should never be neglected especially to so eminent a personage as the representative of his Excellency the Governor. On the occasion of the naval parade Seamans intepreted every gun fired as a salute to the gubernatorial party of which he was a conspicuous member on the Markham. As almost every yacht had a gun, and as the commodore of the fleet was saluted according to marine ethics, the gunner aboard the Markham, under orders from Seamans, was kept busy responding. But there was great commotion aboard the Markham when the tug was passing the boat containing Senator Perkins and the legislative committee. Seamans did not know the proper salute to be given, and not one of the governor's staff could enlighten him. They were all very much flurried until finally it was suggested that perhaps the gunner knew. He did and when Adjutant-General Seamans heaved a sigh of relief the other members of the party thought that there was a steam siren aboard.

"The people of San Jose say that they go to Capitola every summer to cool off."

"That's strange."

"Why do you think so?"

"Capitola is the hottest summer resort in the state."

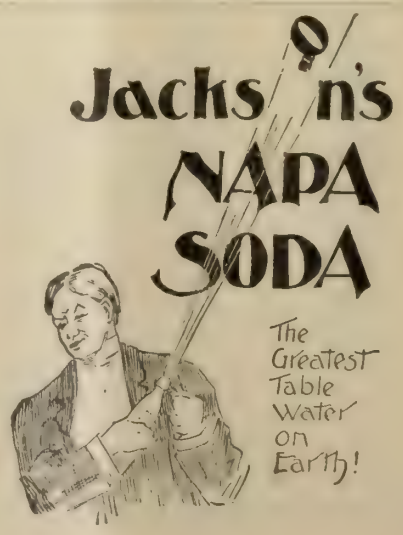
The nomination for sheriff is in great demand in democratic circles this year. I notice in the list of aspirants the names of John J. McDade and Richard I. Whelan, but I am told that the former has no intention of entering. I am surprised at his modesty. I cannot believe that he would decline a nomination. He had the sheriff's plum for only two years, and I don't suppose he made over one hundred thousand dollars during his term although the perquisites were unusually large. Johnnie being a thorough business man didn't overlook a thing, but there is no reason why he should not be permitted to serve the "dear peep" once more, for Mr. Whelan, better known as "glad-hand Dick," had four years of it and why should he have more of the pickings than smiling Johnnie? "Glad-hand" Dick insisted upon being sheriff even when he could not get the nomination and after running independent a few years he was finally put on the ticket, and he won a two years' term, which the Supreme court was good enough to stretch into four. At the end of his term Mr. Whelan felt like a natural-born sheriff, and out of respect to his feelings he ought to be given the job for life. But there are other aspirants such as William Biggy, Ed Rock and Supervisor Deasy. They have many friends and any one of them would make it interesting for a republican opponent.

The word "honor" has obtained a new significance since the generals of the French army began their fight against Dreyfus

---

The marriage of Miss Goad and Andrew Martin will be a quiet affair and will take place on the twenty-sixth of the month. Though the family has not lived for a long time at the spacious Goad residence in California street, corner of Gough, announcement has been made that the wedding will be celebrated there, which is but right and fitting. During Miss Goad's visits to San Francisco from her sister's home in Sausalito she has usually stayed with her brother, W. Frank Goad, at the Palace hotel. She is a young woman of independent views and she is sure to create a sensation in the southern Californian swim, in which section of the state will probably be her future home. The state of Andrew Martin's health precludes his living in any but a mild climate and he has a beautiful country place, bought for him by his indulgent mother, near Santa Barbara, where he entertains with the magnificent munificence of a Monte Cristo.

It is currently reported that Goad pere did not leave so large a fortune to his daughters and son as was first accredited to them by the daily papers. Whether this is true or not, none of the girls will ever have to worry about the wolf's appearance at the door of her domicile for Ella and Aileen both found wealthy mates in Osgood Hooker and C. K. McIntosh, while Genevieve will secure in Andrew Martin a richer husband than is possessed by either of her sisters. It should be no hardship to live in southern California, with occasional trips to the Hawaiian islands, Florida and Italy, and it is likely that more than one society girl is envying the future of Andrew Martin's bride elect.



SAME OLD CHAPPIE.

WHAT is a modern man of fashion?
A man of taste and dissipation;
A busy man without employment;
A happy man, without enjoyment;
Who squanders all his time and treasures
On empty joys and tasteless pleasures;
Visits, attendance and attention,
And courtly arts too low to mention.

In sleep and dress and sport and play
He throws his worthless life away;
Has no opinion of his own,
But takes from leading beaux the tone;
With a disdainful smile or frown
He on the riff-raff crowd looks down;
The world polite his friends and he,
And all the rest are—nobody.

Taught by the great his smiles to sell;
And how to write and how to spell,
The great his oracles he makes,
Copies their vices and mistakes,
Custom pursues, his only rule,
And lives an ape and dies a fool,

CHARLES WESLEY, 1784.

Dramatic World

At the Show this Week

COLUMBIA. "The Bells"—Clay Clement's last week.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "El Capitan"—the delight of the California Volunteers.

TIVOLI. "Carmen" and "Romeo and Juliet"—drawing crowded houses.

ALCAZAR. "Christopher Jr."—the new stock company is a success.

ORPHEUM. Vaudeville—a rousing welcome to the Hungarian boys' military band.

The present visit OF THE Hungarian Boys' military band to San Francisco brings back memories of a very fine bit of press work that was accomplished during their last stay here. It appeared in the Call and was from the pen of A. J. Moore, the present Sunday editor of that journal but who at that time had just resumed, after a trip to the Hawaiian islands, the position of press agent for the late Gustav Walter's amusement enterprises. The Hungarian boys' band was the pride of Mr Walter's heart and he regarded the bringing of the little fellows to San Francisco as his greatest achievement in the amusement field. The Call article described the daily life of the members of the band during their stay in this city and was most interesting in every particular. The return of the tiny Hungarians, after two years' travels, was received by the Orpheum audiences with enormous enthusiasm. They have grown somewhat but otherwise are practically unchanged. With Arnold Grazer and Hazel Callahan in their dance, Felix Morris in a new comedy, and the biograph, the Hungarians share stellar honors this week. For next week the new attractions will be the Bachelor Club quartet in a musical sketch which in twenty minutes tells the story of three hours in a bohemian club; the Crawford sisters, two pretty little girls, who sing, dance and do some clever character work, and White and Harris, comedians.

Grand Opera House THE CALIFORNIA BOYS have shown their appreciation of El Capitan this week by large patronage of the Grand and Hattie Bell Ladd has been an especial favorite with the audiences, sharing plaudits with Wolff. Next week Fatinitza will be put on and the military flavor of that opera will be quite in harmony with the martial spirit now abroad in the city.

Tivoli BOTH Carmen and Romeo and Juliet have been reviewed here so often that a writer is really at a loss to add anything new to the old stock of criticism. One might perhaps dwell on Miss Linck's version of Carmen and in such a case it is rather disagreeable to aver that this energetic artist has not succeeded in giving us a Carmen that could go down into the operatic history of San Francisco. While Miss Linck made a brave attempt in rendering the part to the best of her ability, it is a misfortune that her voice has not sufficient range to execute the passionate undertones which the role demands. In fact, Miss Linck's voice can only be heard to a certain depth; below this it is almost impossible to discern it. It is far wiser for Miss Linck to sing roles which are composed in the middle register and do not extend too far down. Her dramatic execution was somewhat better, but in order to be truthful the writer most confess that Miss Linck's Carmen was not a success. Next week this capable vocalist will sing Ortrud. It is a most ambitious part, but a singer who can sing Amneris in Aida with the skill that Miss Linck displayed in the role is certainly able to give a good rendition of Ortrud. Salassa gave about the best portrayal of Escamillo witnessep in this city. The Torreador song was rendered with an esprit and intensity of feeling that was simply enchanting. The more one hears Salassa the more one is obliged to admire him. Avedano succeeded in giving us an excellent Don Jose in temperament as well as vocal ability. Miss Prossnitz sang the Michaela aria neatly. She introduced in it all the modesty and innocence of the character. Barron Berthald continued his artistic success as Romeo. Somehow his exceedingly well developed artistic instinct aids him in making much out of a comparatively meagre combination. Inasmuch as Romeo and Juliet is musically a shadow of Faust and a repetition of one theme in every act it is difficult for an artist to make an impression on his audience in this role, and yet Mr. Berthald was overwhelmed with applause throughout the week and the finest part of it all is that he is honestly entitled to these ovations. Miss Lichter was a surprise as Juliet. One would not have thought her possessed of that histrionic ability which she displayed in Gounod's opera. Whether Mr. Berthald's dramatic temperament is contagious or whether Miss Lichter is only now beginning to show us what she can accomplish is not so easy to tell, but it is true that her Juliet is so far the best dramatic work she has done in this season. The duet was admirably well sung and supports the assertion that Miss Lichter is an industrious and gifted operatic singer. And now look at next week's bill—Lohengrin and Othello! Here is something to think over. This is assuredly the greatest operatic bill ever given at any stock opera house in the United States. The Tivoli management in presenting these two operas in one week has accomplished an artistic feat which no impresario of a stock company will imitate, especially when one considers the labor, time and worry connected with the preparation of such work. Mr. Berthald will be at the height of his ability in Lohengrin, while Salassa will make the coup d'état of his engagement as Iago, and Avedano will no doubt make a sublime Othello. Ella Prossnitz will sing Elsa in Lohengrin.

IS YOUR HAIR FALLING OUT?

Or is your scalp in a bad condition. If so then you have use for Lederer's QUINTONICA. It makes the hair grow and keeps the head in healthy condition. 35 cents per bottle.

123 Stockton St.

Richard Harlow, whose old Harvard chums call him "Dickie," and who will be remembered in San Francisco for his impersonation of Queen Isabella in 1492, is said to be cutting a wide swath in theatricals in Atlantic city this season, changing his roles week by week. His latest impersonation was the Princess de Grampeneaux in Erminie, the first instance on record when this part has been taken by other than a woman. Harlow is with the Aborn comic opera company in which are such other stars as William T. Carleton, John Hoey, T. K. Murray and Clara Lane. The bright particular constellation of the organization is, however, Eleanor Kent (Mabel Love), who since she left San Francisco has been steadily gaining in favor with eastern audiences. Miss Kent's latest creation, the title role of Erminie, has brought her with one bound to the top of the ladder. And it was a side stroke of fate that gave her the opportunity of making the spring. She had been the prima donna of the Aborn company but the manager had the opportunity offered him of engaging Pauline Hall to sing in the Jakobowski opera and his business acumen decided him to grasp it. Miss Hall had been engaged to open a vaudeville pier at Atlantic city but it was not ready in time so she received her salary without working for it, promising to open the pier when it should be ready. In the meantime Mr. Aborn persuaded her to sing the leading role in Erminie. The day came and so did Pauline Hall but the pier people claimed her and threatened to prevent her appearance. To make a long story short the management came to Miss Kent at five o'clock and at eight-thirty she went on and sang the part, receiving encore after encore and at the end a perfect ovation and curtain calls. The house was crowded to the doors and when the announcement was made of the change not a soul left—in itself a triumph for the San Francisco girl. Miss Kent, one learns, has added three operas to her repertory and last week appeared as Arline in The Bohemian Girl and Michaela in Carmen.

Columbia CLAY CLEMENT in The Bells has been kindly treated by the critical audiences who remember Henry Irving's Mathias in the weird play. Whoever takes the principal role in the play is always sure of being well received. Beginning with Monday the Columbia is to be dark for two weeks and it is decidedly pleasant to learn that Gottlob, Marx & Co. have arranged for the appearance of Madame Modjeska as the opening attraction of the fall-winter season, on the twenty-fifth instant. She will be supported by an unusually fine company, headed by John E. Kellerd and will present among other plays the new work of Marie Antionette.

The new treasurer at the California, when that theatre reopens, will be Robert White, who for so many years occupied this position, successively, with the Columbia and Alcazar theatres. Mr. White is well liked by everybody for his courtesy and sincerity, and it will add greatly to the pleasure of the California's patrons to see Mr. White in the box-office. The new California is said to be "a beauty," all blue and gold in decorations, and with various changes in the seating facilities. Mr. Friedlander is now in the east engaging attractions for the renovated playhouse.

BON MARCHE Clothing Renovatory
40 ELLIS ST., Rooms 1 and 2
SUITS CLEANED AND TAILOR PRESSED, $1.00
Called for and delivered free. L. B. NORDLUND

Alcazar MERRIMENT rules supreme at the Alcazar where Christopher Jr. is presented by the stock company strengthened and enlarged by some excellent artists. The piece is given with all the vim and attention to details which characterizes all Alcazar performances and both Mr. Bryant and Carlyle Moore are entitled to much credit. The latter particularly must be complimented for two of the finest stage settings ever seen on a local stage. A bamboo cottage, especially, is admired nightly. The play contains one of those plots which become more intricate the further the play progresses and finally close to the satisfaction of everyone concerned. Mr. Ormonde, the new leading man, has established himself finely in the good graces of the public and will no doubt become a matinee idol. He is a fine looking man and goes through his part with a natural ease that makes his playing very enjoyable. He is just cut out for the leading roles in society plays. His enunciation is clear and his deportment graceful. In Miss Henry the Alcazar has engaged a useful soubrette. She possesses sufficient vivacity to bring life into the play and is not weakened by the whining enunciation which many soubrettes seem to consider part of their dramatic duties. She possesses a pleasant stage presence and grasps the situations intelligently. Gertrude Foster is as stately as ever and possesses all the qualifications of a leading lady. Inasmuch as she was always a favorite with the Alcazar patrons her promotion to the front ranks is hailed with delight. Christopher Jr. will be followed by The Wages of Sin, a sketch from life. Taking the excellence of the new company into consideration the performance will naturally be a complete success. Too Much Johnson will follow The Wages of Sin at the Alcazar.

Florence Roberts and White Whittlesey have departed for the East. May Keane has been especially engaged to play Barbara Dale in The Wages of Sin. Juliet Crosby will make her re-appearance at the Alcazar in The Wages of Sin. Charley's Aunt will be revived at an early date.

MUSICAL NOTES

At the reception given to the Methodist California Volunteers by the Epworth League Alliance at Grace M. E. church on Tuesday evening, the auditorium was filled by a most enthusiastic audience. C. B. Perkins of the Simpson Memorial M. E. church made a most efficient presiding officer, Robert Husband was the chorister and Miss Mabel Jones, the organist. The program opened with America, sung by the audience amid the waving of flags, while the invited guests marched in to the seats reserved for them. Everybody was full of enthusiasm and the California boys must truly have felt that they were being welcomed home. Reverend John Hannon of Alameda's M. E. church South, a veteran of the Civil war who fought under General Wheeler, delivered the address of welcome and there were solos and quartets, beside another welcoming speech from Charles Jacob, fourth vice-president of the Epworth League Alliance. Responses on behalf of the soldiers were made by Messrs. Matthieson, McCreery and McCoy. One of the most warmly received numbers on the program was a patriotic recitation by Miss Lydia D. Jacob, which received a rousing encore to which the speaker was obliged to reply with another selection.

¶ ¶

Emil Steinegger left for Vienna on August twentieth, and after visiting relatives and friends in Chicago and New York, left the latter city last Saturday for Vienna direct via Hamburg. Mr. Steinegger will study under Leschitizky, the instructor of Paderewski.

PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY

John Haraden Pratt, F. C. M., Piano, 1510 Lombard St.
Cecile von Seiberlich, Vocalist, 1109 Post street.
Charles P. von Oer, Solo Violinist, Oroville, Cal.
Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith, Dramatist, 32 O'Farrell St.
Joseph Greven, Vocal Teacher, Murphy Building, Market St.
Mrs. Olive Reed Cushman, Contralto, 252 W. 42nd Street, New York.

Recreation Park Corner of Eighth and Harrison Streets
BASE-BALL
EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY
Sacramento vs. San Francisco
September 9th and 10th

TO THEA

WHEN 'GAINST the clamor of my love the wave
Of chiding crimson rushes to thy face;
When with insistent throb my pulses race,
And mock the rebel blushes that would brave
And balk me of the bliss for which I crave;
If with bold lips I ravish thee at first,
Perchance thou wilt forgive me for the thirst
That brings thee bliss and binds me as thy slave.

But now, alas! thou hangest like a star,
Most chaste and beautiful, beyond my reach;
I look on thee and long for thee afar;
Bend down, dear love! Ah no! my lips might teach
Thy blood to burn as mine is burning now,
And write the Lesbian legend on thy brow.

LOUIS A. ROBERTSON.

World of Law

My co-worker, the Saunterer, MADE pertinent reference last week to the blackmailing breach-of-promise suit instituted against Colonel Sutherland and took occasion to deprecate the fact that attorneys can be found who are ever ready to aid designing women. I have often wondered why the Bar association has not taken steps to purge the profession of such practitioners. The moral weight of that association should be of some consequence in disbarment proceedings. At present it seems as though the leaders of the bar wink at the questionable practices of their avaricious brethern. Perhaps theirs is a case of residing in a glass house. The indifference of the courts to the reprehensible practices of attorneys reminds me of a story which illustrates the way in which the honor of the profession was protected in England in the days of yore. Two notorious highwaymen who had been associated together in business on a productive heath, and who had amassed considerable wealth, had a falling out one day over a division of the spoils. As a consequence one of the bold Robin Hoods brought suit against his former associate for a dissolution of partnership and the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the assets pending a settlement. The worthy judge disbarred both the attorneys in the case and succeeded in having the litigants hanged. That is the sort of summary justice which is unknown in this country.

That there is an unwritten law in this community which absolves from punishment a person who, appearing to have some cause for revenge, seeks to wreak the same, has again been made manifest by the failure of a jury to convict Miss Evelyn Holt. She was charged with having committed an assault with a deadly weapon on Conrad Fecker, a cold-blooded scoundrel who had treated her in a most cruel and shameless manner. And Fecker, by the way, was the husband of the woman who sued Colonel Sutherland for breach-of-promise of marriage. The district attorney thought that it would be waste of time to prosecute Miss Holt and favored her discharge before trial. But Judge Lawlor very properly insisted upon a trial, for he does not believe in encouraging people who are inclined to ignore the law of the land. Since he has been on the bench it has been his practice to ignore motions to discharge prisoners until after trial, and by so doing he has often prevented the miscarriage of justice. He considers it to be his duty to administer the law and if after a trial there are extenuating circumstances he does not disregard them in passing sentence. I have no doubt but that if Miss Holt had been convicted he would have inflicted very light punishment, for the testimony showed that Fecker's conduct toward the young woman was of a most revolting character. That the jury had confidence in Judge Lawlor's sense of justice was evident from the fact that ten voted for conviction. Those ten evidently desired that the moral effect should be produced knowing that the court would not deal harshly with the defendant.

—o—

An attorney told me a good story the other day about a Police court shyster who was hired by a physician to defend a suit for damages brought by a young married woman who had been his patient. She charged the doctor with having, through lack of skill, subjected her to a most distressing experience. The shyster never had a case of that kind before, and he did not know what law to invoke by way of defense. But he went to work with a will and scrutinized every law book that he could find in the hope of discovering something that could be applied to the case. Finally he ran across the following sentence in a book that dealt with the subject of frauds: "No man shall be held to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another unless the same be contained in writing or a memorandum made at the time of the transaction." That, in his judgment fitted the case like a glove, and he could not understand why the judge and everybody in the court-room smiled when he read it at the trial.

There is a startling rumor in circulation to the effect that if a certain police judge attempts to get re-nominated a most sensational affidavit will be read in the convention by a delegate, charging him with having extorted two thousand dollars from a man who was interested in keeping open a certain small street filled with the haunts of disreputable women. The judge, so the story goes, prompted the arrest of the women, and then negotiated for the dismissal of the cases against them, it being understood that if they were convicted, and the prosecution kept up, the inmates of the houses in the street would be compelled to vacate the premises. Although scandal has always been rife in the police courts, one scarcely expects to hear of a judge being so bold as to promote bribery for his own benefit.

As the Supreme court has granted a rehearing in the matter of the new trial recently ordered in the Hoff case, I am curious to know whether the justices are weakening, or whether they purpose reiterating their ruling regarding instructions that partake of the nature of an argument for the prosecution. District Attorney Murphy is of course desirous of having the court retract what was said about Judge Cook's instructions, for those instructions originated in the Murphy brain, and were recited by him from the bench for many years. I hope the Supreme court will settle the matter in language so plain that there will be no room for doubt in the future. It is undoubtedly wrong for the trial judge to discuss the facts of the case for the purpose of influencing the jury and he should not be permitted to do so by a juggling of words designed to enable him to argue the case without being caught by the court of last resort.

THE COURT REPORTER.

New fall turbans, very stylish and becoming. Mrs. S. R. Hall, 10 Kearny street.

A delightful hot drink may be made with the famous old Jesse Moore Whisky and the usual hot water, sugar and a little lemon skin.

THE Osteopathic Institute
DR. A. C. MOORE President
ALICE T. MOORE Secretary
Chronic Diseases and Deformities Successfully Treated
204 Sutter Street SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco Water Supply

NO OTHER CITY in the world has a better water supply than San Francisco. It is abundant and pure, and at the same time the pressure for fire purposes is of the best and is constantly being improved. In years past it was believed that at some time San Francisco would be compelled, in order to secure an adequate water supply, to bring it from the Sierras. Lake Tahoe was often mentioned in this connection. Any one who has seen Lake Tahoe or the mountain lakes and streams, would naturally be taken with the idea of bringing our water supply from that source—but the purity of our present supply could not be improved, even if we utilized Lake Tahoe as the source. The present supply, derived mainly from cachement reservoirs, the water sheds of which are are owned by the Spring Valley Water Works and therefore kept clear of all pollution, is as pure as can be obtained from any source. Mayor Sutro, an old enemy of the water company, made charges against the purity of this water supply, which were fully investigated by the Board of Health and found untrue. The report of the Board of Health made after a thorough investigation, including analyses of samples of water to be entirely free from any deleterious substance.

On account of the situation of San Francisco—almost surrounded by salt water, and not having in proximity any fresh water lake or stream sufficient for a continuous water supply—the water company has provided reservoirs of great size in the mountains of the peninsula, which store the winter's floods. The capacity of these reservoirs is greater than is possessed by any other water system in the world. The Crystal Springs lake alone forms the largest reservoir in the world, being about eight miles in length. The capacity of these reservoirs is sufficient to hold a four years' supply for San Francisco, so that the city might go through one or two successive dry seasons, which sometimes occur, without running any risk of scarcity or impurity of water.

San Francisco is an exception to the general rule in that its water supply is provided by a private corporation. Other cities owning their own water supply, having paid for the same, have only to provide for the current expenses of the works, and this accounts for lower comparative rates than in most other cities. In San Francisco the rates must not only provide current expenses and taxes, but must besides make to the corporation a return upon its investment. The relations, however, between the company and its consumers are most amicable, there being no controversy or friction, and it may be said that the present rates are equitably adjusted, providing a very small rate for the small householder, and also providing meter rates for manufacturing and other purposes which are in no sense prohibitive.

AUTUMN STYLES.

Elegant simplicity is the marked feature of the imported millinery for the fall-winter season. There is no wonderful riotousness in the matter of color as was the case last year. A hat is in one color, of several shades, but everything from lining to feathers is harmonious. Mrs. S. R. Hall's opening at 10 Kearny street this week revealed some beautiful hats, the latest Parisian models. One in shades of magenta is unlike anything ever seen in this city before. It is a peculiar shape, and is made of velvet, while the only decoration is a long, shaded ostrich plume. A hat of bluet velvet, lined daintily in cream, would be most becoming to a blonde, while a woman in whose hair and eyes bronze tints predominate would find herself best suited with a turban of castor velvet trimmed with the fashionable pheasant feathers. Gray is going to be very popular this winter and black and white combinations also retain the prestige they enjoyed last season.

The Bohemian number of the San Francisco TOWN TALK is a gem.—Dallas (Tex.) Beau Monde.

THE PRODUCE STAKE

The great event of the year in coursing will take place today and tomorrow at the Union Coursing park. The interstate coursing club will hang up the big purse for the "Produce stake." Last year that grand hound For Freedom won the stake and Thornhill was runner-up; this year the pick of the local kennels will again compete for the rich purse and as the owners of the hounds have been rounding their dogs into shape for several weeks the stake has a very open look. Rock Island King's owners think they have a good chance and the dog will no doubt give a good account of himself.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last fifteen years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

AMUSEMENTS

Grand Opera House

Morosco Amusement Co., Inc. Lessees.
Telephone, Main 532

Last two nights of EL CAPITAN.

Week of Monday, September 11th.—
Superb production of Von Suppe's delightful comic opera,

"FATINITZA"

Delightful Scenery, Costumes and Effects, an unrivaled Cast of Characters and Augmented Orchestra and Chorus.

Our Prices—Orchestra floor, 35 and 50 cts; Dress Circle (Reserved), 25 cts; Family Circle (Reserved), 15 cts; Gallery, 10 cts.

Matinee Saturday. Best reserved seat in the theatre, 25 cents
☞ Branch Ticket Office just inside main entrance of Emporium.

Alcazar

FRED BELASCO, Lessee and Proprietor
MARK THALL, Manager

'Phone Main 254

Next week, first time in years at this theatre, of Overton & Maubury's success,

"THE WAGES OF SIN"

Stage mechanism and settings to be a feature.

Matinees Saturday and Sunday at 2 p. m.

In preparation - - - "TOO MUCH JOHNSON"

Alcazar prices—15c, 25c, 35c and 50c.

Orpheum

O'Farrell between Stockton and Powell Streets.

Week Commencing Sunday Matinee, September 10th.

Bachelor Club Quartette; Crawford Sisters; White and Harris; Hungarian Boys Military Band. Charley Case. Montrell; Arnold Grazer and La Petite Hazel; The Biograph.

Reserved Seats, 25c Balcony, 10c Opera Chairs and Box Seats, 50c

Regular Matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

Tivoli Opera House

ERNESTINE KRELING, Prop. and Mgr.

Grand Opera Season

"CARMEN" tonight. "ROMEO AND JULIET" Sunday night.

.....Next week.....

"LOHENGRIN"

Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday Evenings.

"OTHELLO"

Tuesday, Thursday, Sunday Nights and Saturday Matinee.

Popular Prices, 25 and 50 cents. Telephone for Seats, Bush 9.

Music World

Certainly the most impressive PART of the holiday service at the Temple Emanu-El last Tuesday was the musical service. Take away the music from the Hebrew festival service and you will have but a skeleton which is necessary and indispensable, but which remains a skeleton after all. There cannot be conceived a more effective manner of worship than that which is embodied in the quaint strains of oriental music which the Hebrews of today have inherited from their forefathers. It is a sacred inheritance, this typical melody which has passed all musical revolutions undefiled by the hand of man. It is therefore not so much the Rabbi, who expounds the law and explains the importance of the day, who is the central figure on these days, but the Cantor upon whose shoulders rests the great responsibility of furnishing music equal to the solemnity of the occasion and chosen in order to enhance the spirit of prayer. To take a piece of music and arrange it for an orchestra may be accomplished by any good musician without much effort. But to select the traditional melodies of the Jewish church and clothe them in the luxurious habiliments of modern arrangement without destroying their oriental character is a task which can only be accomplished by a master mind. It is not my habit to be lavish in distributing unstinted praise where it is not deserved. A critic who resorts to such means will very soon lose his prestige. On the other hand, it is contemptible of any man to wreak his spite on the profession by censuring everything. Therefore when I claim that Cantor Stark has accomplished a great task and that Temple Emanu-El is indebted to him for the finest and grandest music that is heard today in any house of worship, I am willing to prove and back up every word stated in this column. The sermon can be prepared easily by anyone who possesses a literary brain, but the musical service requires tedious study as well as physical work to bring it to a successful conclusion. The musical service at Temple Emanu-El was in every respect an impressive and artistic one. Cantor Stark seems to have summoned up all his energy and musical knowledge in framing this service, for he did not only arrange all the traditional music for modern rendition, but he added some original pieces which exhibited the genius of their composer in a large degree. The composition of Sen Sheorim shows that Mr. Stark possesses both theoretical and harmonic knowledge. The fugue which runs through this work is a most happy conceit. This fugue together with the adherence to established musical rules—especially in harmony—makes this composition a genuine classic. The main feature of this work is its grandeur and striking ensemble effects. Another original composition of merit is an orchestral piece entitled Song of Devotion. The devotion is clearly noticeable throughout this work in the solemn strains produced by the strings. Mr. Stark paid particular attention to the 'cello, wherein he showed excellent discrimination, for there is no instrument so well adapted to describe devotion than the 'cello, which resembles the human voice more than does any other instrument. But the most impressive portion of the music was the shofar service. Herein Mr. Stark retained the imposing spirit of the occasion. The shofar (ramshorn) is sounded for the purpose of ushering in the New Year and reminding the people of their duties toward themselves and their Creator. The significance of this symbol is introduced in the sounds of the shofar, which are quaint and fascinating and which have not been changed since they were sounded in Palestine. Although Mr. Stark was obliged to represent the ramshorn by the trombone he retained the thrilling quality by creating an echo effect tended to carry the call to a far distance where it was taken up by a chorus of much force and striking harmony. There is hardly any voice better adapted to this class of music than that of Cantor Stark, and when he at times lets his voice out and gives it full sway it exercises an indescribable influence over his attentive listeners. Mr. Stark possesses a voice in a thousand and knows how to use it. The cantor was assisted by W. A. Sabin, the organist, who was always at his place, kept the choir and orchestra neatly together and proved positively that he is the right man in the right place. Mr. Sabin's services as an organist are invaluable and the vigor and esprit which he puts into his solos and accompaniments are a great tribute to his capability as a thorough musician. The choir did some splendid work and sustained its reputation as one of the leading choir organizations on this coast. It consisted of sixteen members of which the following were the soloists: Miss Daisy Cohn, Mrs. J. Kelly, Rhys Thomas and Homer S. Henley. The orchestra consisted of twelve pieces, three violins, viola, 'cello, bass, trombone, cornet, flute, clarinet, oboe and harp.

TOWN TALK gives best reports of Concerts and Musicales.

